Public officials call for continued virtual comment options

BRENNON DIXSON
SMDP Staff Writer

A small bright side to the pandemic has been an uptick in participation at public meetings due to emergency rules that have allowed public comments via phone or other digital submission and some officials are looking for ways to make the changes stick.

Planning Commission Chair Shawn Landres and Councilmember Kevin McKeown are but a few of the local voices who have expressed a desire to continue virtual comments and meetings, and they may soon get their wish.

Landres penned an article in April that detailed the need for continued opportunities for remote and in-person, real-time public comment in meetings. In the months since, state legislators have tried to preserve remote access to public meetings post-pandemic through the passing of Assembly Bill 339 or 361, but the Planning Commission Chair said he believes it's important for locals to hear from city leaders on the matter as well.

"I have heard about a return in person, I have not heard what happens if there's a member of the City Council or the rent board or the Planning Commission or the Landmarks Commission or whatever, who says, 'Hey, I can't participate in-person. I still am unvaccinated for X-Y-Z reason, or I have unvaccinated members of my family and I am not going to sit inside a room for any period of time until. Right now, the city can say to that person, 'Well, I'm really sorry, but you have got to be here." Landres said, noting it is likely that when the pandemic is over, Santa Monica will not be legally required to provide remote public comment infrastructure. "But I believe that we ought to find that money in the

Robots, murals and commissions at Tuesday's Council meeting

City Council is set to meet Tuesday, and while locals are focused on the expected reading of OIR Group's Independent After-Action Report, there are a number of other important topics set to be discussed Tuesday as well.

ZERO EMISSIONS

At the end of April, City Council introduced an ordinance that amended Santa Monica Municipal Code to allow for the citywide operation of remote-controlled delivery devices by operators participating in the Zero Emissions Delivery Zone Pilot Program.

The program was first conceived in 2020, and in light of the success, Council asked staff during its last meeting to return with a revision to the rules that would allow companies to offer the remote vehicle service to any business in town. The discussion came at the request of Councilmembers Gleam Davis and Kristin McCowan.

"I have not heard any complaints," Davis said. "It's not been raised at the Ocean Park association meetings. I did check in with a couple of the businesses that use them. They say they have not gotten any complaints. And in fact, they've only received praise because their delivery fee is so much less than some of the gig providers like DoorDash, the apps, you know, Postmates, that sort of thing. So I've always heard positive responses."

UCLA cook runs from Santa Monica beach to top of Mount Baldy

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

In a never before attempted feat, outdoor enthusiast Jesus Leon took it upon himself to traverse the 78.6 mile distance from the Santa Monica beach to the summit of Mount Baldy and back down.

In this daring sea to summit journey Leon was on his feet for over 21 hours, braved 35 mph winds, and descended the steep mountainside in the dark — all without any assistance.

Leon is a remarkable man in many ways. He beat cancer in his early twenties and then discovered a love for fitness and the outdoors.

When people meet him they often mistake him for a coach or a motivational speaker, as he is always cheering others on or heading a pack of hikers.

"I guess I give off the vibe of being a leader, but I'm actually just a simple cook," said Leon, who works at UCLA.

This campus is where he first discovered his passion for running. With a goal of improving his fitness, Leon set off for a simple 30 minute jog after work one day only to find himself continuing for two and a half hours.

"I remember I felt so energized and alive," said Leon. "Actually, the only reason I stopped running was because I had to use the restroom."

Soon Leon was running marathons, hiking every weekend, and looking for any opportunity to push his limits. The Santa Monica beach to Mount Baldy expedition provided a new type of challenge, requiring both an ultra marathon run and a 10,000ft elevation hike.

"My inspiration wasn't just to be the first one, but it was to test myself to the extreme," said Leon. "When you are feeling down, the best way to make yourself feel better and to get out of that mindset is to make yourself feel accomplished."

RUN: After starting his run in Santa Monica at 12 a.m. Jesus summited Mount Baldy at 7:21 p.m.

After spending a day carb-loading and mapping out his route, Leon began his run at 12:00 a.m. on April 12. In order to protect his strength and stamina, he carefully paced himself to a 9:30 to 10:30 minute mile.

After running 65 miles, or approximately 2.5 marathons, he ditched his road running shoes for a pair of hiking boots and poles.

The trail up the mountain was grueling. Leon remembers struggling with every step. His pace slowed to a 35 minute mile as he was battered by heavy winds and endured 40 degree temperatures.

Finally and triumphantly, Leon reached the peak at 7:21 p.m. But his journey wasn't over yet. He still had to make it down the mountain and the sun was already dipping below the horizon.

"I had to go back down with no headlamp, just a glow in the dark headband and a phone," said Leon. "Going down the Devil's Backbone trail at night with super high winds and exhausted legs, I was scared. If I made one wrong step I could probably slip and fall down to my death."

Spurred by the thought of his friend waiting at the bottom, Leon kept going. Just three miles out from his 78.6 mile finish line he rolled his ankle, but knowing his friend had been waiting for a while he decided to push through the pain and run the last few miles.

"The key that inspired me to keep pushing is that if I know my body is capable of doing something, why stop there? Why not go further?" said Leon. "I want to be proud of doing something incredible, something insane."

Leon was certainly proud of what he accomplished that day, but he is not done pushing himself. Next, he wants to qualify for the Boston marathon by running 26.2 miles in less than three hours. Oh, and he also wants to run a trail of over 100 miles.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (MAY 10)

Not only do you have a clear vision for the good of the group; you have the amazing talent of managing and leading others in a way that's virtually undetectable. You and your friends will help one another without keeping score, though all will be equitably balanced. Nurturing relationships naturally come together. Cancer and Sagittarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 7, 30, 11, 20 and 15.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You've come to the point in an interaction where a softer stance will benefit all. Seek resolution, not conquest. This frees up energy to spend on more important and uplifting things.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). The intensity of emotion you feel can be disproportionate to your actual investment in the relationship, indicating a bit of unresolved historic pain in the mix. It's an opportunity for dealing and healing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Children like to be treated as though they were older, and adults like to embody the liberties of youth. Both will get their wish today, a day that favors closing generational gaps.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). It's counterintuitive, though you'll witness it firsthand and understand the truth of it: Things can be dark in a way that lets the light in. You'll see very clearly and know exactly what needs to be done.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Though you carry yourself everywhere, the conscious awareness of what it's like to be you waxes and wanes within. It's strong today, this unequivocal feeling: Home is where you are welcomed to a place you never left.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). When you do what's good for you, you'll also help someone else. The opposite is also true, so take precautions against working too hard and doing too much. The burnout would not only be your own.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Because everyone is doing the same thing, it seems acceptable to miss the point. You'll step back, only to see how appalling certain "normal" behaviors really are. Ultimately, this clearsightedness will lead to change.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). It's acceptable to make the wrong choice. People do it every day. Holding compassion in your heart for human error allows you to learn quickly. Wrong choices lead to right choices.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). The person who challenges your ideas is helping you broaden and strengthen your mind. The challenger could come in many forms -- gentle, antagonistic, intelligent, thuggish. There's something to learn from all.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). As for the thing that is weighing on you... don't forget that you are part of the equation that gives it a particular kind of gravity. Change your position or drop it. The thing weighs the same, though not to you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You'll suddenly see the answer to a puzzle. It was there all along, of course, mixed in with the other pieces, just waiting for you to pick it out. Once seen, it's so obvious you can never unsee it -- a perfect fit.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). A quiet joy lightens your step now. You are buoyed by your undertakings, honored by your responsibilities, and you feel the full gift of your current position.

budget because the truth is that it enables people to participate, and we need to make sure that we are going to continue to enable people to participate remotely. That's just my view."

Landres acknowledges there should be limits in the law since cities don't want to have a situation where somebody gets elected to office and they're calling in from Paris one week and then Dubai the next. However, like his peers across the state, he wonders what will happen to public servants who legitimately can't return for health reasons.

"Imagine someone who gets elected and then gets a serious medical condition — not one that prevents them from serving their city but it prevents them from being in public," he said. "We need to hear from the city that it is looking out for its elected and appointed officials; that it's saying, 'Yes, for those of you who feel comfortable meeting in person you will meet in person and those of you who for whatever reason, still need to stay on zoom the Governor's Executive Order, allows you to and therefore, you will continue to do so. That is something that we ought to have that conversation about now, and not just, you know, have the staff. Think it through for us and then we just sort of are presented with this yes or no scenario."

Other city officials recognize the importance of being proactive and not reactive. But with AB 339 still in committee, it's hard to predict what will happen within the next six months.

Councilmember Kevin McKeown said Friday he is committed to continuing remote public access but noted his peers will need continued permission from the state to allow remote public access during official meetings.

"I want to take it further than City Hall and official meetings," McKeown added, stating he's actively pursuing continued remote public engagement options in other meeting rooms as well, like the ones in local parks.

"Community groups resuming in-person meetings may want to stay with a hybrid online format," he said, "and I'm advocating for our providing broadband access and suitable video screens to make that possible."

Other possible changes to Council chambers include the installation of plexiglass dividers and socially distanced seating. System testing is also underway in Council Chambers with CityTV and ISD to ensure meetings can be streamed live in-person with Blue Jeans and then with Call In Studio, which officials said would be an entirely new procedure for the city. As a result, training for the clerk staff is being scheduled in advance of a June 8 meeting, which is the first time Council and staff could meet in-person since the start of safer-at-home orders.

Nothing has been finalized yet, according to Constance Farrell, who said Friday, "The City of Santa Monica will continue to facilitate virtual public comment and virtual Board and Commission meetings through the duration of the Governor's executive order."

When residents return to in-person City Council meetings, the City will continue to leverage remote public comment; however there will be a transition period shortly after when there will be the option to provide both safe, in-person public comment and call-in public comment, Farrell added. "Public participation is essential to a strong democracy and public comment at City Council meetings and Santa Monica's Boards and Commissions is part of that. We look forward to sharing safe ways to participate in-person soon and anyone interested in how to provide virtual comment can learn more at https://www.santamonica.gov/process-explainers/how-to-participate-in-a-city-council-meeting."

COUNCIL

Torre and Christine Parra both reasoned that expanding the use of the robotic delivery services before the pilot's conclusion was premature, but Council eventually voted to expand the program despite their pair of no votes. The ordinance is now presented to City Council for adoption.

AD HOC

Council's previous meeting also featured a discussion on the possible consolidation of City commissions, boards and task forces.

City Clerk Denise Anderson-Warren and Council noted how boards and commissions provide valuable opportunities for residents and subject matter experts to examine important issues facing the community and work with staff to bring policy and program recommendations to Council. However, they also require dedicated staff time, which was a resource that was significantly depleted by the restructuring conducted in 2020 to address budget impacts from COVID-19.

After discussing the matter in detail in late April, Mayor Sue Himmelrich and Councilmember Phil Brock have requested that Council form an ad hoc committee of 3 councilmembers who will be tasked with studying and making recommendations concerning the future structure of boards and commissions.

If approved, the committee would consider commission consolidation and reclassification, methods of appointment, council liaisons, and staffing of commissions, according to Tuesday's agenda.

MURAL

One of the final matters pertains to a mural in City Hall, which some believe depicts indigenous people kneeling before Spanish Conquistadors.

At the request of Councilmembers de la Torre, Parra and Brock, City Council could direct staff to address community concerns related to the display of the 1930s Stanton McDonald Wright mural in City Hall.

"Specifically, the request is that Council direct staff as follows: In the short term, the City will install a temporary artistic scrim (light woven or screen material) cover over the mural to begin recontextualizing the mural prior to July 13th, when the public is expected to return for Council meetings in City Hall," the agenda states. "In the long-term, the City will, taking into account prior plans set forth by the Arts Commission and Cultural Affairs, initiate a community engagement and education process around the representations depicted in the mural."

SANTA MONICA PLACE has finalized plans to convert the spaces left vacant by Bloomingdale's and Arclight Cinemas into Santa Monica Workplace, a future office campus. As you can imagine, there is a great deal of online chatter opposing this new configuration. This is not only frustrating, but is a blow to the City of Santa Monica and its future impact on the local economic, retail and entertainment industries. Unfortunately Macerich, the leasing agent for the Mall, is only interested in leasing the space as soon as possible and not taking into account what are our City's needs are for locals and visitors alike. Listed here are a number of points why this conversion should not occur:

Santa Monica Place should take into account destination-type tenants. These will draw people near and far to the Mall. These massive spaces can be subdivided and leased to such tenants as restaurants (but not chain-type eateries similar to The Cheesecake Factory). The restaurants should be ones that draw locals and tourists, such as Max Brenner, Black Tap, Ellen's Stardust Diner, Beauty & Essex, Tao, Alice's Tea Cup, Big Daddy Diner, Kellogg's NYC, and Blue Ribbon Sushi. How about old-fashioned ice cream parlors such as Serendipity, Swensons, Ghiradelli Fountain, and Farrells? Lease out spaces to tenants such as a toy store with play areas, fun mom-and-pop shops, Petals N Wax, Grow Venice, a bookstore with a child's reading section, or even Bright Child (an indoor playground for kids of all ages that used to be located on 4th Street). Think about this: children would play at The Cayton Children's Museum or another similar adventure location in the Mall, and afterwards, as they will be hungry, take them to a fun restaurant. The longer a visitor stays in the Mall, the more apt they are to spend money. The more popular and profitable the tenants, the greater attraction for a future leasee. Additional destination suggestions are virtual reality venues (move The Void from the Promenade into the Mall or there is Dreamspace), indoor miniature golf such as The Putting Edge, an escape room, laser tag, mini bumper cars, or offshoots from Two Bit Circus, Funko Hollywood, or Rage Room. If a movie theatre is still an option, how about Alamo Drafthouse or Cinépolis. Maybe go the route of Food Truck Nights similar to those at First Fridays on Abbot Kinney and Tuesday nights at the Victorian. Add TikTok worthy events or maybe makeup/fashion pop-ups, such as those from the Kardashians/Jenners. Perhaps outdoor movie nights, with all-inclusive parking, popcorn, a drink, and candy while you lounge in comfy chairs or bean bags. Bars can be located outdoors within the mall, or adult-only tenants can include venues from the Promenade's old days such as Chillers and Gotham Hall, or even a speakeasy. There are endless possibilities.

Bring back free 3-hour free parking. Advertise exclusive activities or restaurant perks just for Santa Monica locals. Ideas such as happy hours and bottomless mimosa brunches. Set up outdoor dining throughout the mall with popular music palpable to all demographics. Rotate live bands to play aloud. Pipe in popular music to garner up a little excitement. Reduce the rent to lure new tenants and, if needed, slowly raise it as the economy improves (we are still in a pandemic so give businesses a financial break in the beginning as this could incentivize future tenants to lease spaces at the Mall). Board up the current vacancies with decorative wood planks so it doesn't feel like you're walking in a ghost town. Put together co-op deals between tenants so they can draw business to each other (such as see a movie and then enjoy 2-for-1 drinks at the upcoming Loulou Restaurant with a minimum food purchase). And publicize it everywhere! Let Los Angeles and beyond know that Santa Monica is the "it" place to shop, play, and dine. Bring locals to the Mall and show them how easy the parking is to navigate and to not be afraid of venturing to Downtown Santa Monica. Locals have stayed away and we need to bring them back. Cater to the locals and tourists will follow. Check out L.A. malls and see how they successfully draw in shoppers. Feature inviting aesthetics, greenery, comfortable furniture, and offer concierge amenities to visitors, as well as offering residents local-only perks. Tie-in nearby hotels to offer discounts to the Mall's stores. Show an increased security presence to ensure customers feel safe, day and night, not only in the Mall but the adjoining parking lots. Clean up the homeless problem at the Mall and around the Promenade be a huge asset (but the logistics are for another discussion).

Santa Monica Place is salvageable and though it is easier said than done, please don't lease space to business offices. Don't let Santa Monica Place turn into what was once Westside Pavilion. Establishing office space in these two massive vacancies will deter future shoppers, as well as possible tenants. We need Santa Monica Place to bounce back stronger than ever, sooner rather than later.

A Mother's Day Prayer

By Pastor Eric Shafer

May 9 is Mother's Day this year. And, what a year it has been for mothers! Over the past 14 months, mothers have had to assume the role of home-school teachers in addition to their duties in their homes and workplaces. All the more reason to say special thanks to mothers this year.

Mother's Day has always been a tough day for places of worship. How to honor mothers without putting down women who cannot be mothers, or choose not to be mothers. How to honor mothers when so many mothers, especially this year, are experiencing so much loss and pain. With COVID-19, so many this year are grieving the loss of their mothers. And, there are some for whom their mothers were a disappointment or worse.

I found this prayer, written by the Rev. Joelle Colville-Hanson, a Lutheran pastor from Iowa, helpful:

A Mother's Day Prayer

We pray for Mothers everywhere....

For mothers of young children, that they may nurture and raise their children to be good and faithful people in the world.

For mothers of older children, that they may have the wisdom to know when to help their children hang on to their roots and when to let them spread their wings.

For mothers of grown children, that they may feel satisfaction in a job well done.

On this day, we remember mothers of children in war-torn countries, mothers of children where disaster or famine has struck, and mothers who fear for their children's safety, that they may find food for their children, justice for their families, and peace for their souls.

We also lift up those for whom this day is painful: mothers whose children are missing, mothers whose children have died, mothers who have lost children to miscarriage, mothers who have had abortions, mothers who have lost custody of their children, and mothers whose children have disappointed them.

We pray for those who wish to have children but have none, that they may be filled by God.

We pray, too, for all motherless children, children whose mothers have abused or abandoned them, and for all those whose mothers have recently died.

For all the good experiences of motherhood, we thank and praise you Lord. We lift up to you for healing all the painful experiences of motherhood. Amen.

The Rev. Eric C. Shafer is Senior Pastor at Mt. Olive Lutheran Church in Santa Monica.

Editor's Note: Each month we are asking a clergy member of our local churches or temples to do a column on dealing with COVID-19.

Passing Through the Pico Neighborhood

Meet Our Pico Area Residents

By Stacy McClendon

CeCe Talamantez-Bradley works at the Information Booth at the Virginia Avenue Park Farmers Market on Saturdays. You can tell how much she enjoys what she does. I chose to interview her at Cafe Bolivar on Ocean Park Boulevard.

I first met CeCe years ago after an exercise class at Virginia Park. CeCe's smile is infectious and her spirit is bold, friendly, and welcoming. Her enthusiasm is contagious.

She brought pictures of her parents, her with her husband and their son Vincent, and then she proceeded to share why they meant a great deal to her.

CeCe described how she received many gifts from her parents. Her mother and father didn't speak any English. However, her father empowered his five daughters to read and to work in places other than factories in order to speak English. Her father worked while her mother raised their daughters. They were married for over 50 years.

CeCe met and married her husband at 23 years old. Her husband was a divorced dad who had custody of his two young daughters. They raised the daughters together with their son, Vincent. During the marriage, CeCe ended up forging a bond with his daughters and ex-wife (with whom she still connects to this day).

This adventurous lady feels her 46-year marriage was a success due to the independence that they both fostered. CeCe's independence bloomed at 35. She earned a cosmetology license and finished many courses that sparked her interest.

Sadly, CeCe's husband passed away 18 years ago, and she said their 46 years together were a "drop in the bucket," as they had much more to do. However, she is thankful to her husband for giving her his last name, their son Vincent and moving them to Santa Monica.

For Summer Chef Jahrid Suggests a Seafood Recipe

Chef Jahrid preparing to cook.

Our local chef, Jahrid Longsworth, a new high school student, had the opportunity to visit many members of his family in Belize this past month. (See photo of Jahrid and his mom, Kera, in Belize on Page 1.) He spent time with his uncle who is a chef where he learned how to make ceviche. He chose to share this summer recipe with us.

Seafood Ceviche

Ingredients:

1-1/2 lbs. of seafood of your choice (Or a combination of seafood – Cooked medium shrimp, peeled, de-veined and tails removed, or Fresh Fish - Seabass, Snapper, or Ahi Tuna
3/4 cups fresh lime juice
2 medium roma tomatoes, diced
3/4 cup chopped red onion
1/2 cup chopped cilantro
1 large cucumber, peeled and diced
1 medium jalapeno pepper (remove seeds)
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. black pepper

Directions:

1. Chop seafood into 1/3 inch pieces and place in a mixing bowl.

2. Add lime juice to seafood and let stand for about five minutes.

3. Add onions and cucumber to mixture, and stir until combined.

4. Combine tomatoes, cilantro, jalapeño pepper, and season with salt and pepper to taste.

5. Transfer to refrigerator and let rest from 30 minutes to one hour.

5. Serve with corn tortilla chips. Enjoy!

Chef Jahrid had a great turnout at his first Zoom cooking lesson for the Santa Monica Family YMCA last month. He was asked a myriad of questions from the viewers. We look forward to watching his next presentation.

Helping Seniors Learn Computer Skills

By Mark Presky

In my last column, I discussed the frustration that seniors often encounter as they try to learn computer and other tech skills. The fault usually lies with well-meaning relatives and friends who rattle off directions in a "foreign" language and then become frustrated with their student's inability to learn.

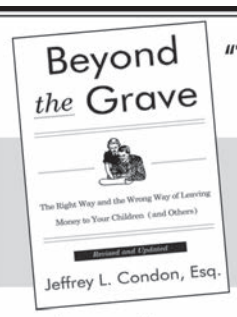

First, to the "teachers," please stop using tech/computer terminology. Stick to language the student can understand. Don't say icon; say picture. And, describe the picture. Example, the Firefox browser picture is an orange and yellow dog chasing its tail around a purple ball. Maybe mention that those pictures are called icons.

Your student is perhaps looking at a screen full of unfamiliar little pictures. In fact, are the pictures large enough for your student to easily see? Do you, the teacher, know how to make the pictures larger? (Right click on any open desktop space and choose View and then choose your picture size.) If you are describing this on the phone, don't forget to describe what you mean by right click.

Write down all of the directions in detail. If giving instructions over the phone, provide enough time for the student to write everything down. In fact, insist that the

Connect to Nature in May

By Julie Rensink Hanson
Wild Birds Unlimited
Nature Shop

May is a time when bird migrants of all colors and sizes move through Los Angeles on their way to their summer homes. It's a magical time, as you may hear calls you have never heard before, clues to the new visitors to your backyard. Some migrants stop long enough to breed, such as the Western Tanager, but others are here just for the diverse wild foods available now before they move on.

Bird migrants even have their own day. This year, May 8 is World Migratory Bird Day and you can celebrate by learning about and observing the birds in your community. Pick up a bird guide and take a drive up the coast to the Malibu Lagoon, a popular stopping-over point for our spring and fall migrants.

Migration also brings more hummingbirds. Costa's and Black-chinned Hummingbirds breed on the coast and brilliant purple-chinned Calliope Hummingbirds, the smallest birds in the USA, may migrate through here on their 5,000-mile trek to the northern Sierras and Canada. This month is peak breeding season for Anna's and Allen's Hummingbirds.

A Northern Mockingbird

A Western Bluebird

One of our most beautiful locals, the Western Bluebirds, are building nests. They love open areas, such as golf courses, parks, and cemeteries. Western Bluebirds are short on habitat to build nests, so bluebird supporters place nesting boxes in the branches of trees. Nesting boxes in a Santa Monica cemetery have produced eggs, and hatchlings are expected any day. We can't wait to meet our newest neighbors.

Along the beach, some sea birds are nesting. Least Terns work to scoop small hollows in the sand as their nests, although their eggs are threatened by human foot traffic. Efforts are under way to fence off sections of beach to save these striking birds.

May will be the month for you to finally get a good night's sleep. Our Northern Mockingbirds generally stop singing their midnight songs as they finally pair off to breed.

Thoughts From a Second-Time Father

What We Can Learn From Playing Sports

By Michael Margolin

Having played sports and being an avid sports fan my whole life, I am very aware of the life lessons that sports can teach us. One thing I have admired in college and pro teams are those that come within inches or seconds of winning a championship, only to have victory snatched away at the last moment. Then, they come back the next year to win it all.

The sacrifice, dedication, and perseverance it takes to accomplish something like that are not qualities that every athlete necessarily has. Sports can also teach us how hard work can pay off and they can boost confidence.

My son Jake will play soccer in the fall as a five year old. He will be on a team for the first time in his life. Alexa will soon be eight and she has played soccer for several years. Currently, she is the only female on the field now when she plays flag football. And, she excels.

She told me a long time ago she wanted to play football, and I am not about to tell my daughter there is something she cannot do. I have expressed to her plenty of times that football hurts and is very difficult to play. When the opportunity for flag football came up, I told her about it, and she never really looked back. I explained that she would be playing with only boys and that they can be rougher and less forgiving than some of the girls she has been playing with. Her reaction to that was she really wanted to play. A friend of mine mentioned to me how proud I must be. Not only am I proud, I am also impressed – impressed by my young daughter's willingness to try something new and to approach it without fear, and just as importantly, without fear of failure. She will have competition from both sexes as she gets older for opportunities in employment for promotions. If the attitude she exemplifies now is one she continues to carry with her, there will simply be no stopping her.

Another thing sports can teach us is that we need to appreciate greatness. Kobe Bryant only won the NBA League Most Valuable Player once, Michael Jordan five times, and Lebron James four times. Tom Brady has won seven Super Bowls and the NFL MVP only three times. My point here is that with these players, we expect greatness and we become complacent with how good they are. Almost that their greatness is so expected and commonplace and we get so used to watching it, that we take it for granted. Agree with any of my player examples or not, it is hard to argue that there should not be more MVP awards for any of them.

Mother's Day is approaching, and I witness great parenting every day. There is hall of fame-worthy mothering taking place regularly at my house, and I have a front row seat for it. Enjoli is my family's MVP and Alexa and Jake could not be luckier to have her as a mom. Chances are if I did not have the exemplary mother or ideal stepmother that I do, I would not have figured out how to find a woman of Enjoli's caliber. If you are fortunate enough to be the husband of a spectacular mother or you were raised by one, do not take their greatness for granted. After all, their dedication and perseverance has paid off as well. And, least not, their sacrifices.

Michael Margolin is an avid sports fan and former coach of Alexa's soccer team when they played.

student write it all down and read it back to you.

Most of the time, spoken tech instructions skip the majority of steps in a process. Don't tell your student to go to a website. How does one go to a website? What is an address or location bar? What does it look like? Note that the address can end in .com or .org. – or may have letters and symbols after that text. Ask lots of questions along the way. Don't assume that the student knows what the browser field is. Ask him/her if he/she knows. If you receive a vague answer, describe it clearly. Be sure to write everything down. Your student may not remember all of your described details even just hours later. He/she is going to, later on or the next day, depend entirely on the notes. Include all the details.

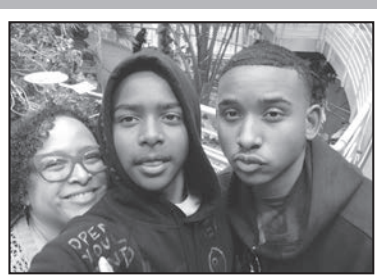

To you seniors, please don't hesitate to ask your teacher to slow down. You will learn this information if it's presented correctly. Don't withdraw and feel embarrassed. In my next column, I'll list some sources for good, basic help in learning how to use your computer.
