SM libraries work to fill demand

Fueled by frugality and other factors, local residents make use of collections

BY WILL WEISS
Special to the Daily Press

MAIN LIBRARY With the economy on its back, want for public services is at a high, and as residents continue to trim discretionary spending, community assets, including library collections, have become more essential than ever.

A recent Internet search of Santa Monica Public Library's electronic catalog found that an overwhelming majority of the best-selling titles are unavailable due to demand.

The library's selection of paperback nonfiction best sellers, for example, includes a collective total of 23 volumes for the top three books in that category. Of them, one is available to be checked out (not including alternative versions of the texts including children's

Daughter honors her father

DOWNTOWN Her name is Shannon Lee but many might know her as Bruce Lee's daughter.

And she doesn't really mind that facet of her identity one bit.

Yet Lee, 40, is making her own claim to fame in the entertainment industry, founding a new production company — Leeway Media — in July 2008 and celebrating its first major project in the United States, a documentary about her legendary father, titled, "How Bruce Lee Changed the World."

"It's not your straight bio," Lee said from her Santa Monica office on Monday. "It's really about what areas Bruce Lee has influenced in terms of our culture today.

"It looks at martial arts, action, filmmaking, fitness and body building."

The film, which will premiere on the History Channel on May 17, was produced by Waddell Media and Leeway Media, which was founded to create content meant to promote both Bruce and his son, Brandon Lee, who died in an accidental shooting on the set of "The Crow" in 1993.

She vividly remembers the day when her mother called in the middle of the night telling her that Brandon Lee had been

Jury clears Snoop Dogg of man's beating

ANTHONY MCCARTNEY
AP Entertainment Writer

SANTA MONICA A civil jury says Snoop Dogg didn't hit a man who came up on stage during a 2005 concert near Seattle.

The rapper wasn't in court Friday when the jury's verdict cleared him of civil assault and battery claims. The jury did find that Richard Monroe Jr. suffered serious injuries during the concert and awarded him $449,400 in damages to be paid by a record label, another performer and others involved in the concert.

The damages awarded were substantially lower than the $22 million Monroe sought when he sued the rapper in 2006.

Jurors found that Snoop Dogg, whose real name is Calvin Broadus, doesn't personally owe Monroe anything.

During two weeks of testimony, jurors were repeatedly shown a video of a melee that Monroe said left him unconscious, badly bruised and nearly naked.

Monroe's attorney, Brian E. Watkins, said jurors did believe his client's contention that Broadus' people were involved in a savage beating.

"We're very pleased that the jury found that this incident was not something to be taken lightly," Watkins said.

Responsibility for paying the judgment falls on Doggystyle Records, which Broadus founded; rapper Soopafly, whose real name is Priest Brooks; and other unnamed parties.

While Broadus was not present for the verdict, he attended part of the trial and testified, denying that he struck Monroe.

Residents return as evacuations called off

AMY TAXIN
Associated Press Writer

SANTA BARBARA Thanks to a dramatic change in the weather, residents have begun returning home to areas that had been threatened by a devastating wildfire — but they've been told to remain alert in case conditions worsen again

The blaze that charred an area of more than 13 square miles was 40 percent contained late Saturday after a blanket of cool, moist air flowed in from the Pacific Ocean, keeping a dry wind from the interior from stoking the flames again.

Fire officials said the blaze destroyed 31 homes and two detached garages, and damaged 47 other home, saying an earlier estimate that 80 buildings were destroyed was incorrect.

Cheers erupted at an evacuation center when Santa Barbara County Sheriff Bill Brown announced Saturday that mandatory evacuation orders for most areas were being downgraded to evacuation warnings, meaning residents could return but would have to remain alert.

"It's easy on a day like today to look around and go 'Wow, you know, we've got this thing beat," Joe Waterman, the overall fire commander from the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection, said Saturday evening. "We don't have this thing beat yet."

Water-dropping helicopters continued to shuttle between reservoirs and hot spots but flames were not apparent and the huge plumes of smoke that loomed over the city for days had vanished.

The blaze isn't expected to be fully contained until Wednesday.

Among the first to return were Jonathan Kenny, 44, and his wife, Susan Kim, 42, who found their home covered in ash but still standing near blackened hillsides.

"I feel like we dodged a bullet on this one," said Kenny, who watered plants and fed goldfish in a backyard pond.

Enforce leaf blowers

Editor:

RE: "Leaf blower enforcement upsets some SM residents" (SMDP, page 1, May 6)

The SMDP reports: "Sunset Park Neighborhood Resource Officer Artis Williams explains that officers must catch an individual in the act of using a leaf blower in order for the individual to be cited."

While that would be true for officers acting on their own initiative, a citizen's arrest is an available option that does not require an officer's presence at the time of the violation.

A private person has the right under California Penal Code Section 837(1) "to arrest another for a public offense committed or attempted in his presence." A public offense includes infractions (such as leaf blowing), as set forth in Cal PC sections 15 and 16.

As long as the arresting citizen is willing to pursue the complaint when the officer arrives, Williams' limitation of the offense actually occurring before the responding officer's eyes would not be a requirement for a citation and the proper enforcement of the law.

As for Officer Adam Gwartz's take on the leaf blower ordinance that "I haven't written a citation for a leaf blower violation in years" and "I have a whole little project I do with that," may I respectfully remind the officer that Santa Monica Municipal Code Section 4.08.270 reads "No person shall operate any motorized leaf blower within the City."

That sentence ends with a period, not an asterisk.

We citizens would like to have the law enforced, not nuanced.

City sells sow's ears at SM Civic Center

THERE'S A BIG PUSH FOR A CITY library branch in the Pico Neighborhood. The Fairview Branch in Sunset Park, two blocks south of Pico Boulevard on Ocean Park Boulevard at 21st Street, currently serves the Pico Neighborhood.

I was surprised to see un-named "community members felt that Pico Boulevard represents a cultural divide that keeps residents away from that branch" in the staff report prepared for the April 28 City Council meeting. Cultural divide? What unmitigated nonsense. Won't a branch library north of Pico just help perpetuate that cultural divide?

Originally, it was thought the new library could be integrated into the remodeled Edison Language Academy, but school district officials were reluctant to have any portion of school property open to the public during school hours. So a great opportunity for a shared-use facility evaporated.

The new library in Virginia Avenue Park would cost an estimated $12.8 million and mean giving up precious park space, especially at the present Farmers' Market location. For the record, Mayor Ken Genser and Councilmember Richard Bloom support a Virginia Avenue Park site while Councilmembers Kevin McKeown and Gleam Davis say to look elsewhere such as purchasing private property somewhere on Pico Boulevard for the branch library.

This idea, backed by the Pico Improvement Organization, would lend itself to a three or four story, mixed-use facility with a ground floor post office, art gallery and retail space. The library would occupy most of the second floor and upper floors would contain two and three-bedroom, affordably-priced apartments. The facility would cost an estimated $30 million and hopes are it'll revitalize Pico Boulevard and look like an Orange County office park.

Stay tuned, this saga will continue.

Tonight, city planners are hosting a community workshop to present "great opportunities" for remaking Downtown and the Civic Center. This is where city staff and its fanciful consultants will try to bamboozle us into buying their silk purses when they're really only selling sow's ears.

I wrote about this pie-in-the-sky conceptual plan to integrate various urban design and circulation "improvements" in the downtown area in my March 30 column, "Hodge-podge in a world class city."

Most of City Hall's Downtown "improvements" will center around a proposed Expo Light Rail terminal at Fourth Street and Colorado Avenue, currently Sears Automotive. The Expo board recently approved, at the city's urging, a ground level train station for the site.

An elevated station, accessible via elevator and escalator over ground level retail, was originally envisioned, but this has been jettisoned for a mundane street level terminus that begs for a couple of floors of affordable rental housing above it.

One major issue is the minimal parking proposed at this and other Expo stations. City planners and their pro-sustainable, multi-modal cheerleaders don't want you to drive to these facilities. Conversely, the Port Authority of Allegheny County in Pittsburgh, where common sense reigns, just announced a plan for upgrading its transit system in part by constructing more "park and ride" lots to encourage rail and bus ridership.

Widened sidewalks, reduced traffic lanes and new bicycle and pedestrian amenities on Colorado Avenue from 19th Street to Ocean Avenue — a Grand Promenade — is promised. I fear it'll be more like the laughable "transit mall" city planners implemented on Broadway and Santa Monica Boulevard Downtown a few years ago — only worse. This won't be any Avenue des Champs-Elysees, it'll be, "Watch out for the train, Ulysses."

With its wide underutilized sidewalks, single lane traffic and dedicated bus lanes, the current "transit mall" is "Gridlock City" for blocks on evenings and weekends. The Colorado streetscape is a repeat of that "transit mall" experience and promises to exacerbate a major bottleneck.

City Hall wants to deck the Santa Monica Freeway to expand park space and better connect the current Civic Center, Samohi campus and the Colorado Promenade. Of course, specific plans or costs haven't been presented.

Moving people and cars is also up for discussion. Based on previous efforts, reducing traffic capacity and reconfiguring streets in one of the already most congested parts of the city to implement a pedestrian and bicycling utopia is impractical and a recipe for disaster.

All this is being guided by "Green Mobility" principles that encourage motorists to ditch their cars by prioritizing non-motorized travel with walking and bicycling options. Pedestrian and bicycle lanes carved out of reconfigured streets and enhanced alternative transportation connections to the Santa Monica Pier, beach, Ocean Avenue and renovated Santa Monica Place are at the core of this redo. Bottom line: the city wants to degrade (instead of upgrade) accessibility to do it — and near a major Downtown freeway on and off ramps, too!

The big sell begins tonight in the East Wing of the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium beginning at 6:30 p.m. Be there or be silent!

The Q Line

Which kind of green?

A recent Daily Press article revealed that gaining a Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) certificate could be a costly process, which is off-putting for some developers who want their projects to be "green."

So this week's Q-Line question asks:

Do you think that the money is well spent on LEED certification or do you believe that the benefit is not worth the cost?

Call (310) 285-8106 before Friday at 5 p.m. and we'll print your answers in the weekend edition of the Daily Press. Please limit responses to a minute or less.

Residents refuse to resent a system that serves them well, they say versions and Spanish language copies).

Between its four locations in Santa Monica, the public library keeps copies of national best sellers of every category, but the number of copies kept has little to do with the popularity or release date of any given title.

This is because librarians target such materials for purchase and insertion into the library's system before the titles have a chance to become popular, said Wright Rix, principal librarian of reference services at the Santa Monica Public Library.

"Having bestsellers in a timely manner is a high priority for us," Rix said. "Here at the Santa Monica Public Library our primary focus is to function as a popular materials collection, as opposed to a research collection like one would find at UCLA."

Rix explained that the library staff uses a number of methods to stay abreast of which titles receive, or are expected to receive, a strong response from consumers. Media distributors including Baker and Taylor, Inc., with whom the library consults before purchasing, provide reviews and popularity estimations for many books prior to their release date, or "street date," Rix said.

"We also follow library media publications such as Library Journal which provide news about what's happening in libraries, including reviews. From these we try to get a sense for what the demand will be, and we pay attention to pre-publication alerts," he said. "When we come across anything we think will be a best seller we are liberal about how many copies to order and how quickly we get a hold of them; it is our responsibility to get these titles to the consumer in as expeditious a way as we can."

Rix also said that some titles are of great interest to the library even if they will not or do not become best sellers.

"Authors who publish in large quantity that normally are well-received, we take interest in," he said. "Any time Danielle Steel publishes a new title, for instance, it's understood that we want X number of copies."

But despite efforts to keep the shelves filled, community demand seems to be depleting the supply at nearly the same speed.

Of the best sellers in the library's catalog, an overwhelming majority are on loan. A varied number of copies of each title reside at any of the four library locations, but in almost all cases these copies are either checked out, on hold (some with several compounding holds), or on order.

The library staff also makes an effort to plug the holes. Rix explained that a list of titles with the most holds is generated weekly, and his staff orders additional copies accordingly.

"I've heard and read that library visits are up," said John Evans, co-owner of Diesel, A Bookstore, an independent book seller on 26th Street. "I find it encouraging. I don't see libraries as competitors; if people don't go to them, libraries don't get funding and have to close, and that's bad for democracy."

But high demand or no, Santa Monica residents remain satisfied by the services and resources provided by the library.

"It's a great library. The fiction is good, the nonfiction is good, and they have a great [Charles] Bukowski section here." said William D. Woodcock. "I lived in Venice for 13 years. Now I live in Downtown L.A., but I still come all the way down here to go to the library."

Some library-goers said they have personally been inconvenienced by a high demand for books and other resources, but were anything but discouraged in consequence.

"A couple of times," said Justin Lemons when asked if he had trouble getting a hold of a book he wanted at the library. "But I've come to expect that. I think it's a good sign because it means people are using the resources here."

But a short distance away up a narrow canyon road, homes were gutted and cars were burned-out wrecks.

More than 30,000 people had been under mandatory evacuation orders since the fire erupted Tuesday just above Santa Barbara on the face of the steep Santa Ynez Mountains.

An additional 23,000 had been on evacuation standby.

By Saturday evening, well over half of the those residents were back in their homes, Santa Barbara County sheriff's Commander Darin Fotheringham said.

The fire was driving into outlying residential areas Wednesday by the notorious local wind known as the "sundowner," which sweeps from inland and down the face of the mountains late in the day. The wind returned and fanned the flames again late Thursday and into early Friday.

After that gusty onslaught, the fire was active along a five-mile-long front Friday just above Santa Barbara, west toward neighboring Goleta and east toward the community of Montecito.

PESKY PROBLEM: World Health Organization research concludes that global warming is already causing 150,000 deaths and some five million human illnesses per year, including malaria and dengue fever, which are commonly spread by mosquitos.

Killer heat

Dear EarthTalk

Has anyone been tracking whether climate change is causing more loss of human life as it gets more pronounced?

Gordon Gould
Compton, CA

RESEARCHERS BELIEVE THAT GLOBAL warming is already responsible for some 150,000 deaths each year around the world, and fear that the number may well double by 2030 even if we start getting serious about emissions reductions today.

A team of health and climate scientists from the World Health Organization (WHO) and the University of Wisconsin at Madison published these findings last year in the prestigious, peer-reviewed science journal Nature. Besides killing people, global warming also contributes to some five million human illnesses every year, the researchers found. Some of the ways global warming negatively affects human health — especially in developing nations — include: speeding the spread of infectious diseases such as malaria and dengue fever; creating conditions that lead to potentially fatal malnutrition and diarrhea; and increasing the frequency and severity of heat waves, floods and other weather-related disasters.

Backing up WHO's findings is a study by Stanford civil and environmental engineer, Mark Jacobson, showing a direct link between rising levels of carbon dioxide (CO_2) in the atmosphere and increased human mortality. He found that the added air pollution caused by each degree Celsius increase in temperature caused by CO_2 leads to about 1,000 additional deaths in the U.S. and many more cases of respiratory illness and asthma. Jacobson estimates as many as 20,000 air-pollution related deaths may occur worldwide each year with each one degree Celsius increase.

"This is a cause and effect relationship, not just a correlation," relates Jacobson. "The study was the first to specifically isolate CO_2's effect from that of other global-warming agents and to find quantitatively that chemical and meteorological changes due to CO_2 itself increase mortality due to increased ozone, particles and carcinogens in the air."

For their part, though, global warming skeptics such as atmospheric physicist Fred Singer maintain that cold weather snaps are responsible for more human deaths than warm temperatures and heat waves. "The elderly die in inadequately heated homes. People get skull fractures from falls on the ice. Men die of heart attacks while shoveling snow. People get colds, flu, pneumonia and other respiratory diseases. Infectious diseases proliferate. Hospital admissions rise." Singer, founder of the Science and Environmental Policy Project, concludes that since global warming would raise maximum summer temperatures modestly while raising winter minimum temperatures significantly, it "should help reduce human death rates."

A team of Harvard researchers found otherwise. Their July 2007 study, published in the peer-reviewed Occupational and Environment Medicine, found that global warming is likely to cause more deaths in summer because of higher temperatures, but not fewer deaths in milder winters. In analyzing weather data related to the deaths of 6.5 million people in 50 American cities between 1989 and 2000, the researchers found that during two-day cold snaps there was a 1.59 percent increase in deaths because of the extreme temperatures. But in similar periods of extremely hot weather, mortality rates increased 5.74 percent.

Bruce Lee's influence is apparent involved in an accident. The two departed for North Carolina, meeting up in Dallas.

As they traveled throughout the day, the family learned that the actor's condition was worse than originally believed.

By the time the plane touched down in North Carolina, Brandon Lee had died.

Lee said she is starting to work on projects to educate the public about her brother.

The reach that their father had is evident in the Downtown Santa Monica office of Bruce Lee Enterprises, which manages the trademarked brand name of the late actor. Along the walls are old movie posters. Magnets with Lee's famously concentrated stare are scattered on the mini fridge. On the wall of one office are Andy Warhol-esque pictures of Lee, while the common area is occupied by a large cutout of Lee performing a side kick. Posted on the fridge along with the magnets are four block letters spelling out Wren, the name of Shannon's 6-year-old daughter.

"I thought it would be great for people to know how my father had influenced so many different things," Shannon Lee said. "So many know him as an action film star. They don't know how he had to break down barriers of race and tradition to do what he did in such a short time."

Lee and his late son also had a profound impact on Shannon, who has acted, sang and is now getting into the behind-the-scenes portion of the entertainment industry.

"I look at all the messages in my father's philosophies that have help ground me and guide me," she said. "I look at my brother's life and how he was so passionate about acting."

Included in her resume is a singing career. A graduate of Tulane University where she received a degree in vocal performance and music, Lee has performed concerts in Hong Kong, sang on a variety of films and even once landed a demo deal with a subsidiary of Island Records.

For the past few years, Lee's professional focus has been geared toward several projects, including the production company, the licensing of the Bruce Lee name, and the Bruce Lee Foundation which she cofounded in 2002 with her mother, Linda Lee Cadwell. The nonprofit organization is dedicated to perpetuating the Lee legacy in an educational way, holding seminars on martial arts and offering scholarships. The eventual goal of the foundation is to build a museum.

In her regular life, she's Shannon Lee, but when it comes to events and going out in public, she understands that she is the famous martial artist's daughter.

"I think that there was more of a difficulty in terms of feeling like there was some expectation of me from certain people and in certain areas of life," she said. "I try to really hold all of that in a very separate place for myself."

Lee is also working on other projects related to her father, including preparing for the official upcoming launch of BruceLee.com in June and the annual convention hosted by the Bruce Lee Foundation, which is scheduled for November in the Sheraton Universal Hotel.

A number of pieces have come out about Bruce Lee since his death, some good, some sensationalistic, looking to "stir the pot," Lee said.

She remembers the media coverage shortly after her father's last film, "Enter the Dragon," was released, her mother endlessly spending time writing rebuttals to articles in newspapers and magazines about Lee.

"I found she was spending her whole life doing that and not anything else and it was just sucking the energy out of her," Lee said. "The best way for me to combat anything like that is to do my thing and to do what I do and put out the products that I put out."

Man alleges that members of rapper's entourage attacked him at concert

Monroe's attorneys contended that Broadus hit their client with a microphone during the scuffle. But a video shown during the trial didn't show Broadus striking Monroe and the performer said he left the stage before the fight was over.

Broadus' attorneys attacked Monroe's recollection of the events, telling jurors that his story about who hit him changed over time. They contended Monroe didn't tell investigators immediately after the incident that Broadus hit him with his microphone.

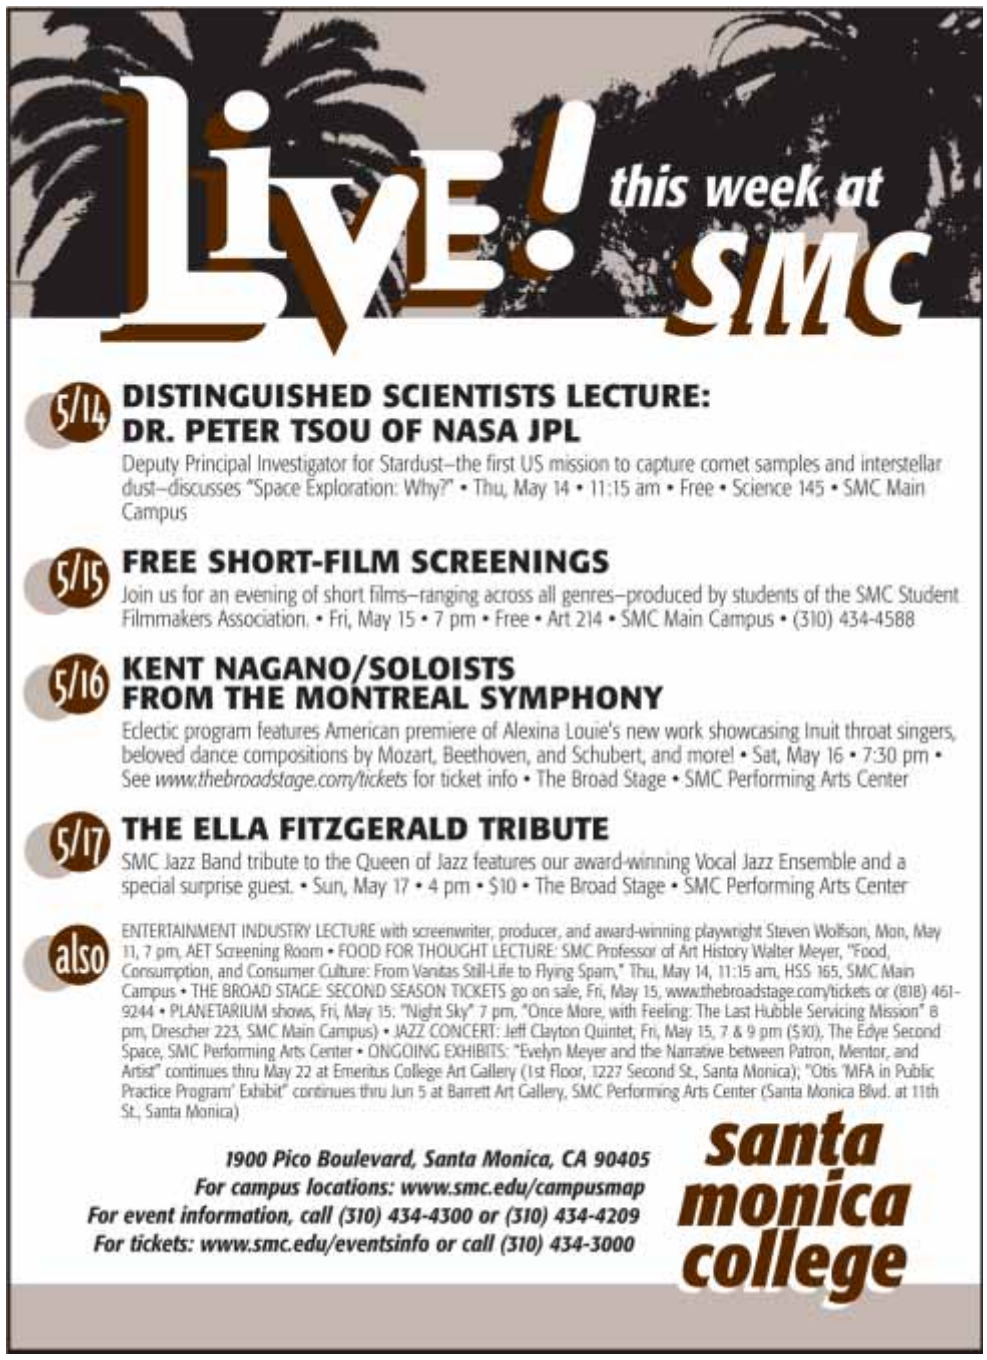

The video shows Broadus and others performing one of the rapper's signature songs "Gin and Juice" during the concert at the White River Amphitheater near Seattle. Monroe, who said he thought he had been invited onstage, appears in the video and puts his arms around Broadus, but is promptly tackled by security.

The fracas then moves to the back of the stage, where Broadus is seen standing, but he then disappears from the video.

Broadus testified that he quickly left the stage and was on his tour bus.

Monroe awoke moments after the incident, dazed, in a pool of blood and with his pants ripped off. Photos shown to jurors included images of his swollen face hours after the concert.

Monroe told investigators that the men who beat him also poured their drinks, which appeared to be a mix of gin and juice, on him during the beating.

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

Heal the Bay

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Coming Soon to Reality TV: The CMT cable channel has scheduled an August start-up for "Runnin' Wild ... From Ted Nugent," in which the rock singer, hunter and uninhibited gun advocate will spend five episodes training three novices on how to survive in the woods, and then, in the final episodes, Nugent and his 18-year-old son will go hunt them down, with the last one to avoid capture declared the winner.

■ In April, sex offender Barry Whaley was under suspicion for failing to register his new address but made things much worse. Being questioned at a police station in Fairbanks, Alaska, he asked an officer to retrieve a laptop computer from his car so that it would not get stolen, and when the officer brought it to him, Whaley mentioned an "amazing" flight simulator program he had been using, which the officer asked to see. As Whaley powered up the computer, a video of child pornography appeared, and Whaley was arrested.

■ In April, police in Copley Township, Ohio, were called to a restaurant where Erik Salmons, 39, was allegedly intoxicated and annoying customers. Officers declined to arrest him but did insist that he call someone for a ride home, and Salmons complied. However, at home, Salmons decided that he was insulted at being thought of as intoxicated and so drove himself to the police station and demanded a breathalyzer test, which of course he failed, and he was arrested.

NOTICE OF DIVIDED PUBLICATION
Made pursuant to Section 3381, Revenue and Taxation Code

Pursuant to Sections 3381 through 3385, Revenue and Taxation Code, the Notice of Power to Sell Tax-Defaulted Property in and for Los Angeles County, State of California, has been divided and distributed to various newspapers of general circulation published in the County. A portion of the list appears in each of such newspapers.

NOTICE OF IMPENDING POWER TO SELL TAX-DEFAULTED PROPERTY
Made pursuant to Section 3361, Revenue and Taxation Code

Notice is hereby given that real property taxes and assessments on the parcels described below will have been defaulted five or more years, or, in the case of nonresidential commercial property, property on which a nuisance abatement lien has been recorded or that can serve the public benefit by providing housing or services directly related to low-income persons when three or more years have elapsed and a request has been made by a city, county, city and county, or nonprofit organization that property will become subject to the tax collector's power to sell.

The parcels listed will become subject to the tax collector's power to sell on July 1, 2009, at 12:01 a.m., by operation of law. The tax collector's power to sell will arise unless the property is either redeemed or made subject to an installment plan of redemption initiated as provided by law prior to 5:00 p.m., on June 30, 2009. The right to an installment plan terminates on June 30, 2009, and after that date the entire balance due must be paid in full to prevent sale of the property at public auction.

The right of redemption survives the property becoming subject to the power to sell, but it terminates at 5:00 p.m. on the last business day before actual sale of the property by the tax collector.

All information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption will be furnished, upon request, by Mark J. Saladino, Los Angeles County Treasurer and Tax Collector, 225 North Hill Street, First Floor, Los Angeles, California 90012.

The amount to redeem, in dollars and cents, is set forth opposite its parcel number. This amount includes all defaulted taxes, penalties, and fees that have accrued from the date of tax-default to the date of June 30, 2009.

I certify, under penalty of perjury, that the foregoing is true and correct. Dated this 22nd day of April, 2009.

MARK J. SALADINO
TREASURER AND TAX COLLECTOR
COUNTY OF LOS ANGELES
STATE OF CALIFORNIA

PARCEL NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's maps and further explanation of the parcel numbering system are available in the Assessor's Office, 500 West Temple Street, Room 225, Los Angeles, California 90012.
