Survey results measure scooters' impact on driving/walking habits

MADELEINE PAUKER
Daily Press Staff Writer

About half of scooter/bicycle riders used the devices to replace a car trip but locals made up only 35 percent of total trips in Santa Monica according to the results of a survey tracking usage of e-scooters and on-demand bike rentals.

Many people who ride e-scooters and e-bikes in Santa Monica are young (42 percent are between 25-34), male (69 percent) and affluent (37 percent reported income over $100,000), according to a survey released Wednesday.

The user survey was created by the City of Santa Monica and was open to responses from Jan. 25 to Feb. 15. The four scooter and bike companies authorized to operate in the city distributed the survey through email and in-app pop-ups. A total of 4,700 users self-selected to respond to the survey, with approximately 3,000 completing all 21 questions.

The survey gathered demographic information and gauged riders' knowledge of Santa Monica's shared mobility pilot program, which launched last September and regulates Bird, Lime, Lyft and Jump (which is owned by Uber).

Only 10 percent of those surveyed reported being unfamiliar with the pilot program, including its prohibition on riding on sidewalks, and 59 percent said they were very familiar with it.

86 percent of all riders know they are not allowed to ride on the sidewalk, but 20 percent still do. 77 percent ride on streets with bike lanes and half ride on streets without bike lanes and 20 percent ride on the sidewalk.

HISTORY SPOTLIGHT

Gussie Moran House
1323 Ocean Avenue
Built ca. 1891, designated 1979

Consistent with the Queen Anne style popular during the late 19th century, this home is constructed of wood, displaying a deep pitched front gable, an L-shaped porch wrapping around the southwest corner, and a prominent corner tower. The use of plain and fish scale shingles creates an interesting gable pattern. This house is the last remnant of Ocean Avenue as it appeared prior to 1900, when the street was the center of Victorian residences. The house was the home of internationally known tennis player, Gussie Moran, who ranked among the top ten female players during the late 1940's.

Rent Control Board asking for restrictions on renovations

MADELEINE PAUKER
Daily Press Staff Writer

Landlords could no longer renovate occupied apartments without a tenant's consent and would be prohibited from subdividing rent-controlled units under a resolution the Rent Control Board is recommending to City Council.

Landlords are renovating and subdividing apartments to displace long-term tenants, said board member Anastasia Foster. They can then charge higher rents to new tenants or take in even more rent if they subdivide rent-controlled units and rent them as medium-term, furnished vacation rentals or corporate housing. Foster said many tenants believe they have to leave their apartments either temporarily or permanently or take illegal buyouts.

"Voluntary renovations should not force tenants to relocate," Foster said. "If you want to renovate an empty unit, that's fine."

Board members urged Council Thursday to create a new local law that only allows landlords to make necessary repairs, not cosmetic or optional upgrades, to an occupied apartment unless the tenant agrees to renovations. The board is also asking Council to enact a law barring landlords from subdividing rent-controlled apartments.

Council moved in December to prohibit medium-term rentals in Santa Monica's residential areas but board members said the city is still losing rent-controlled apartments to subdivision on a daily basis.

Council will also vote Tuesday whether to ban apartments smaller than 375 square feet after WS Communities, an offshoot of NMS, filed applications to build six buildings downtown entirely composed of micro-apartments.

"There needs to be an immediate moratorium on the carving up of units," said board chair Caroline Torosis.

SCOOTERS

About 70 percent know that they can't ride on the Promenade or beach path and slightly less than half know they are not allowed in Palisades Park.

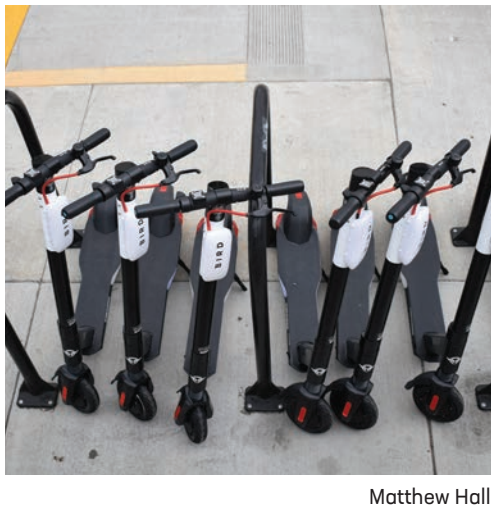

According to the survey, 35 percent of riders are Santa Monicans, 44 percent are from elsewhere in Los Angeles County and 21 percent live outside the county.

42 percent are between 25 and 34, 21 percent are 18 to 24 and two percent are under 18. 34 percent are 35 and older. 69 percent are men. About half of riders earn more than $75,000. 28 percent earn between $30,000 and $75,000 and 20 percent earn less than $30,000. Three-quarters of riders own a vehicle, less than 10 percent share a vehicle and 15 percent don't have access to one.

Riders use scooters and bikes for a wide range of purposes. Work and recreation trips were the most commonly reported trips, at 31 percent and 23 percent of trips, respectively.

"Respondents reported that 50 percent of their most recent shared mobility trips displaced a car trip (including drive alone, ride share services, taxi, etc.)," said the results. "While 38 percent of shared mobility trips displace a walking trip."

Most respondents said their use of other transit options (train, bus, personal bikes, Breeze Bikes and walking) were unchanged but among those who had changed their habits all other forms of transit lost users overall. About 16 percent of bike/scooter riders said they use the train more while 23 percent said they used it less. Only 3.4 percent of riders said they used Breeze more often while 40 percent said they used it less. The results said 18 percent of respondents reported walking more while 24 percent reported walking less.

Matthew Hall

SCOOTERS: The study tracked who uses scooters and what transit they replaced.

44 percent use the devices less than once per week, 30 percent use them one to three times per week and 26 percent use them more than three times per week. 54 percent said a lack of bike lanes prevent them from riding scooters or bikes as much as they would like, and 45 percent said it was difficult to locate the devices.

Two-thirds rarely or never use helmets, which is not a requirement in California under a state law that went into effect Jan. 1.

Pollution free boating

Dear EarthTalk: I am in the market for a small motor boat to putter around in lakes near my home in Michigan but I don't want to contribute to water pollution. What are my options? – Marlene Y., Merritt, MI

No doubt, boating can be an environmental nightmare given the spewing of petrochemicals and other pollutants into the waterways we love, and the toll it takes on marine wildlife and ecosystems. Spilling even a small amount of oil, diesel or gas can contaminate acres of water and poison shellfish beds.

Meanwhile, hull paints leach copper and other toxins into the water, while soaps and other cleaning solutions — not to mention the improper discharge of on-board sewage holding tanks — can be toxic to aquatic life as well.

But if you take proper precautions, boating doesn't have to be so bad. According to the non-profit Oceana, being careful not to spill during refueling seems trivial but could save the life of marine wildlife nearby. And if your boat has a two-stroke outboard engine, you can do a lot better for the environment by upgrading to a newer four-stroke engine. Due to the way they're designed, two-strokes lose up to 30 percent of their fuel right into the water, and are about a third less fuel efficient overall than newer, four-stroke counterparts.

Even better, get an emissions-free electric motor (inboard or outboard) from a company like Ray Electric, Aquawatt, Torqeedo, Elco or Pure Watercraft. The last few years have seen lots of innovation in the industry—including the development of high-capacity marine-grade lithium-ion or absorbed glass mat (AGM) batteries which in some cases can be charged up by on-board solar panels.

If you want to buy a new all-electric boat, Ray Electric and Aquawatt have several options — from fiberglass speedsters to pontoon party boats to wooden fishing boats. Another option is Duffy Boats, which makes 18- and 22-foot all-electric cruisers perfect for puttering around a harbor or lake at cocktail hour and entertaining friends. The company brags that its boats "do 5 mph better than anyone else!"

If you're just trying to be greener on an existing boat, take care to only use non-toxic cleaning products inside and out, and avoid conventional hull paint containing toxic heavy metals. Always hose off your boat right after you take it out of the water so you don't transport any marine species, invasive or otherwise, to your driveway or your next launch spot. Also, if your boat has a "head," make sure to get it pumped out properly so you don't release bacteria-laden human waste—often containing traces of antibiotics and medications that aren't good for marine wildlife—into the water column.

Of course, you could always just forgo the worry, environmental footprint and expense of a motor boat and go green in a kayak or canoe. Self-powered boats don't emit any pollutants whatsoever and allow you to get closer to wildlife which would otherwise be scared off by engine noise — and you can get a good workout as well. Likewise, you could get a small sailboat that doesn't need a motor — and pray for wind (or download a wind prediction app and time your outings accordingly).

Ballentine's job at the Medical Center is unique not only because he'll be working with the woman who gave birth to him, but also because he'll be working in the very hospital he was born in.

"It's nice to share the experience," Geduld said. "We have a lot to talk about, life, work and experience. I've told him it's hard work, but it's gratifying work."

The medical field has deep roots in the Geduld/Ballentine family tree.

Geduld's mother was a dietitian, exposing her to a hospital work environment relatively young. At just 16 years of age, Geduld was helping her mother around her workplace with various tasks such as cleaning test tubes.

During college, Geduld was initially on track to become a medical technologist but "didn't like the idea of looking at telescopes all day." Yearning for day-to-day human interaction, she switched her major and got into nursing.

For decades she's held her nursing job and as a single mother, too.

Once divorced, Geduld says she chose to have her son on weekdays so she could do Mom Things with him. "I volunteered, did the field trips, did a lot of that stuff," Geduld said. "I was there for him going to the park, parties for when his friends were over, giving them rides, all that. I was tired, but I loved it."

During these Mom Thing tasks and as he grew, Geduld would talk about her job with Ballentine. She says Ballentine was initially unsure of what he'd do for a career, but eventually, mom's words enticed him.

"When I came home I'd talk about work, when I picked him up, I talked about it and I think deep down he liked the idea of my relationships with my patients," Geduld said. "Hard job, very stressful, but at the end of the day, you feel good about what you've done. Not a lot of jobs can say that."

Ballentine went to UCLA, graduating in 2016, and began an accelerated nursing-degree program at the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy & Health Sciences. While in Massachusetts, he applied to UCLA's new-grad program and was accepted.

He's now just finishing up orientation as a medical-surgical nurse. He has no qualms with the career he's chosen, especially as it brings him closer to mom. The two now share a livelihood, a life come full-circle for both.

"I could not be happier with my choice," he says. "I'm learning so much. It's a perfect career."

"We always had a good bond, but our jobs have brought us together," Geduld said. "The conversations we have now, talking about different medical situations, what to do, sharing a lot of information... It's been nice. I'm proud of him."

RENT CONTROL

Landlords can get permits from the city to reconfigure their units up to the very limit of what the current law allows, said Stephen Lewis, the board's general counsel.

"This makes the units unattractive to anyone looking for a permanent dwelling," he said.

Although renovations to rent-controlled apartments don't preclude them from being used as permanent housing, they often displace long-term tenants, Lewis said. State law stipulates that a property owner may only enter a tenant's apartment to perform work that's either necessary or that the tenant has agreed to, but landlords are using renovation permits from the City to convince tenants they can enter their apartments for however long they need to complete renovations.

"The responsibility to respect state law requirements regarding entry to a tenant's unit ultimately belongs to the property owner," Rebecca Sherman, the board's senior litigation counsel, wrote in the resolution. "But by granting a permit the City inevitably gives the impression that the owner has full authority to perform the work contemplated by the permit, despite the limits of state law."

Heal The Bay Announces Green Honorees For May 23 Gala

Environmental group Heal the Bay today announced its honorees for the Bring Back the Beach Annual Awards Gala on the evening of Thursday, May 23 at the Jonathan Beach Club in Santa Monica, California. Reflecting the eclectic nature of Southern California's devoted ocean lovers, the nonprofit will salute the eco-accomplishments of Los Angeles County Supervisor Sheila Kuehl and "The World Famous KROQ".

This year's attendees include American Airlines – the official airline of Heal the Bay. The organization is leading the way in their commitment to environmental sustainability.

Los Angeles County Supervisor Sheila Kuehl has a long history of collaboration with Heal the Bay, starting with her days as a California State Senator. Under her fearless leadership in public office, she has made the L.A. region more environmentally healthy and sustainable. She protected the long-term health of the local coastline by co-authoring legislation that created the Santa Monica Bay Restoration Commission in 2002. Last year, she championed Measure W, a ballot measure that will generate $330 million annually to fund projects that capture stormwater, treat runoff and replenish our local water supply. Measure W passed with a huge 69% majority. This crucial progress toward sustainable water would not have been possible without the leadership and vision of Supervisor Kuehl.

KROQ has given a steady stream of support to Heal the Bay over nearly three decades. As the region's leading alternative rock music purveyor, KROQ has connected millions of music listeners and concert-goers to the shoreline, to their watershed and to each other. Driven by an unrivaled dedication to the Los Angeles community and culture, KROQ has contributed $1,000,000 to Heal the Bay's local science-based programs since 1992. Proceeds generated from KROQ Weenie Roast and benefit concerts fund Heal the Bay's work surrounding plastic pollution, climate change, contaminated seafood and beach safety.

Now in its second decade, Heal the Bay's Gala has grown into L.A.'s ultimate beach party. The Gala will welcome 1,000 guests to celebrate on the sand, and under the stars, in support of thriving oceans and healthy watersheds. The event consistently sells out and brings together a lively group of artists, influencers, entertainment figures, local government officials and business leaders.

At last year's Gala, Bring Back the Beach partygoers celebrated Mayor Eric Garcetti, Gabriela Teissier, Zooey Deschanel and Jacob Pechenik. Attire is "beach chic." Group tables and individual tickets are available at www.healthebay.org/bbb.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (May 13)

The solar return brings high spirits and curiosity about distant places. Go visit! You'll be invigorated and inspired to create something that will light up your life and improve the lives of others. Physically, you'll become stronger and more energetic, which is excellent because you'll need it to earn extra for your next adventure. Sagittarius and Leo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 30, 22, 19, 42 and 3.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). What some see as a problem, you treat like an advantage. Reality bends and molds itself until your way of seeing things seems truer than any other way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). What's good can get hobbled by a bad influence; what's bad can be elevated by a good one. This is why the company you keep is so crucial to your success.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You'll enjoy the natural simpatico relationship you have with fellow air signs Libra and Aquarius. It's a jolly tie with professional possibilities as you may as well do business with those who make it fun.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). While it's not possible right now to luxuriate with your favorite activities for hours on end, you can at least make a slice of time to do what you like to do. True, you'll have to guard that time rather intently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Give up a bad habit for a good one? If only it were so simple. Well, today represents the rare moment in which it actually may really be so! Just make the trade and see.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Every time you think the thought, do the action and remember what you did, that version of you gets stronger and stronger – a principle you can use to your advantage today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Some acts of generosity are accounted for; others are felt. Generosity of spirit is harder to account for, but always felt. Hitting both categories is good, but if you can do only one, chose gifts of spirit. More good comes of it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Today features an interesting game. You can't help but get emotionally involved. You'll root for the underdog. It doesn't change the odds, but it changes the stakes and the story, too.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). There's a lot you could get, don't really need, but would like and use all of the same. Should you purchase such items? If you'd get it for your best friend, go ahead and get it for yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). It's never too early or too late to work on yourself. Every age brings excellent reasons for doing so. Once you decide what you'd like to work on, a "classroom" will show up to facilitate your education.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You appreciate people who can deliver a short, sharp truth, thus oxygenating the scene, keeping everyone awake and fresh. Long-winded stories and elaborate explanations do the opposite.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You'll bond with a team over a group assignment of sorts. This will take many more hours than you'll first anticipate, but when the project wins, everyone wins.

Moon, Mercury and Robots

We don't intend it, but getting a new app sometimes means that robots posing as us will send messages to all of our contacts. Thanks overhelping robots! Moon and Mercury offer the bright side: Being on the receiving end of programmed opportunism (posing as service) makes us mindful not to perpetrate the same kind of annoyance.

SUN AND PLUTO TRINE

The sun in Taurus and Pluto in the fellow earth sign realm of Capricorn form an extremely lucky window in the sky – a portal through which new clarity and insights about wealth will flow.

The spiritual dictates regarding material wealth vary between religions and cultures. It is easy to find sacred references and common sayings claiming the evils of materialism. "Money is the root of all evil," says the Bible, with over a 1,000 financial references, many of them warnings of the trouble caused by materialism and debt. The nuns and monks of any number of religions denounce worldly possessions and some religions, such as Jainism, advocate having no possessions at all. Some Jains do not even wear clothes.

As for your own views and attachments to material things, they may shift slightly in the weeks to come. The current trend has more people leaning toward less and seeing the burden inside ownership of too many possessions. Tiny houses, nomadic living and ways of organizing a life with of fewer items/more joy are cultural trends that have a new generation devoted to reusing, recycling and upcycling instead of rushing straight to the purchase. Sooner or later, what you own will end up owning you.

CELEBRITY PROFILES

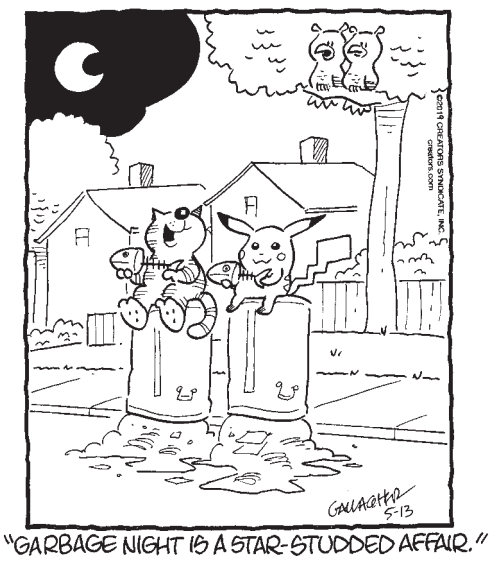

Robert Pattinson is involved in no less than six upcoming films including the historical piece "The King" and the drama "Waiting for the Barbarians" which also stars Johnny Depp. Like Depp, Pattinson is musician. Sun and Mercury in Taurus favors musical expression, lending a natural sense of rhythm and strong vocal chords. Pattinson also has a natal Cancer moon indicating a reflective and sometimes psychic nature. Write to Holiday Mathis at HolidayMathis@gmail.com.
