City anticipates deficits in coming years

BY KATE CAGLE
Daily Press Staff Writer

While the Santa Monica's fiscal outlook looks strong for the next two years, a dramatic rise in pension costs threatens the City's ongoing stability, according to a nearly 400 page budget released by the City Manager's Office Wednesday.

Even if national economic growth continues over the next two years, the City faces a $3.8 million General Fund deficit in 2019 that balloons to $19 million in 2021, according to current estimates. Pensions and workers' compensation present the most significant pressures on the budget.

"We can and will avoid those sobering threats," City Manager Rick Cole said in the report. "But only with a rigorous focus on the efficiency and effectiveness of our programs and expenditures -- and accepting the reality that we will need to be exceptionally disciplined in setting priorities."

Beginning next year, the California Public Employees' Retirement System (CalPERS) lowers its anticipated investment

Chinese Theatre marks 90 years as Hollywood glamour hotspot

BY SANDY COHEN
AP Entertainment Writer

"King Kong" made his cinematic debut there in 1933.There was a yellow "brick" carpet when the "Wizard of Oz" premiered in 1939. George Lucas brought R2-D2 and C-3PO along for the premiere of "Star Wars" in 1977, and the two droids left their marks in the cement out front.

A glamorous symbol of Hollywood's golden age, Grauman's Chinese Theatre is turning 90. Now known as the TCL Chinese Theatre, the landmark movie palace first opened on May 18, 1927, and it's been hosting movies, stars and fans ever since.

"It's still the most amazing theater," Cher said at a recent premiere. "I remember coming here (when) I was very small... It was so magical."

Sid Grauman's masterpiece movie house stands on a bustling corner of Hollywood Boulevard, next door to the Dolby Theatre where the Oscars are now presented and across the street from the historic Roosevelt Hotel, where the first Oscar ceremony was held in 1929. Like a Hollywood take on a Chinese temple, it boasts a pagoda-

Marina Del Rey preparing for summer fun

BY REGAN TAYLOR
Daily Press Intern

With the summer entertainment season rapidly approaching, local officials want to remind Santa Monicans of the options for recreation just down the beach in Marina Del Rey.

"Marina del Rey is a popular recreational destination offering all of what visitors love about Southern California," said Janet Zaldua, CEO of the Marina del Rey Convention & Visitors Bureau. "L.A.'s Marina continues to thrive as an active waterfront playground for both visitors and LA locals who enjoy the Marina's resort-style amenities like dining with sparkling marina views and on-the-water activities like sailing, jet skiing, kayaking, parasailing, sportfishing, yacht charters, and paddleboarding."

The Marina is easy to get to for locals. Several large parking lots are about a 20-minute drive. The facilities are also accessible via a short bike ride along the beach.

The Big Blue Bus also offers route 18, which takes riders from downtown Santa Monica straight to the heart of the Marina.

Here's a list of summer events throughout the week:

CALIFORNIA YACHT CLUB'S SUNSET SAILING SERIES REGATTA

Or, join on of Hornblower's Sunset Cocktail Cruises, timed perfectly each Wednesday to see the regatta, an optional prime-vantage point cocktail cruise is 2 hours, and $37 per guest.

By Popular Demand "Illegal Start"... Stays

AGI

ILLEGAL START: On the Pier, the play "An Illegal Act" extended May 19, 20, 25 & 26

The Santa Monica Pier, which is over 100 years old, is one of the most popular landmarks in the country. From all over the world, tens of millions of tourists have visited the Pier. Hollywood has featured the Pier and surrounding areas in dozens of movies. The list includes: "Mutiny On the Bounty," "Elmer Gantry," "Inside Daisy Clover," "The Sting," "They Shoot Horses, Don't They?" and "Forrest Gump." (When Forrest jogged across the U.S. he jogged to the end of the Pier!)

Personally, I have many fond memories of the Pier. When I was 7 my father took me and my best friend, Denny, to fish off the Pier. We put bait on our hooks and lowered our lines with the highest of hopes. We were delighted as we caught perch after perch.

My dad taught us how to properly clean the fish after which my mother breaded it before broiling. We thought it was just amazing to eat dinner from what we caught that day on the wonderful Pier.

The idea of the Pier ever being demolished was unthinkable. And yet numerous times the Pier almost met that fate. In 1973, the City Council approved of the City Manager's plan to demolish it and construct an artificial island including a 1500 room hotel and convention center. Outraged residents organized and applied enough political pressure that the plan was scrapped. (The group included the late journalists Bill Bauer and, in 1983, Peggy Clifford, as both loved their precious Santa Monica.)

PLAY

Jim Harris, local historian, Deputy Director of the Pier Corporation and playwright, chronicled the controversial and dramatic events in his play, "Save the Pier." Directed by Paul Sand, longtime Santa Monica resident and Tony Award-winning actor, the play debuted in October 2015, being artfully staged outdoors at the end of the Pier by Sands.

"Save the Pier" played again in September 2016 and will run in April 2018 as part of the Pier's annual programming from then on. The lesson learned from the play is the importance for all Santa Monicans to remain active and ever-vigilant in local politics.

And now I'll get to the "by popular demand" in my title. (Those readers who dubbed me "Rambling Jack," I can hear them saying, "Finally!") Harris and Sand have another creative and crowd-pleasing production staged on the Pier but this time It's in a locale never used for such a purpose in the Pier's history and maybe in the country's.

A two-man play, "An Illegal Start," is Harris' semi-autobiographical story set in the 1980's in rural western Colorado. During a powerful thunder and lightning storm, two teenage boys, strangers, endure a near death experience on an isolated country road as a result of a horrific traffic accident. (The only other performance of "An Illegal Start" was a public reading at a radio station in Grand Junction, CO, where the accident actually took place.)

Still in shock, and desperately needing shelter from the dangerous weather, the pair find an abandoned Merry-Go-Round. And that's where the Santa Monica carousel, inducted into the National Registry of Historic Places in 1987, is the perfect setting. It's not a backdrop but more like a character in the play as are the beautifully painted horses which seem to come to life before our eyes. The carousel spins at crucial moments and the music and mirrors, the lighting and chilling thunder, all add to the dramatic atmosphere.

The play is compelling, occasionally funny and ultimately poignant. The two bond over what they've been through and, while the play covers only a 15-year period where they reunite, in reality they're friends to this day. The two actors, Cameron Tagge and Irish Giron, both from Loyola Marymount University, give authentic performances which pulls you into their story.

This production is one of hopefully many to come from Santa Monica Public Theater founded by Sand with the goal of bringing unique and extraordinary theatrical experiences to our unique and extraordinary city. At its core, "An Illegal Start" is a play about the power of friendship. Staged in the intimate 50-seat venue of the Carousel where every seat is so close to the action, it's also just a lot of fun.

The good news for theater-goers is "An Illegal Start" has extended its run to include May 19,20, 25 & 26 and may extend into June. The bad news is tickets are going fast.

Well, that's it for this week, gang. To those who gave me the less-than-flattering nickname, this is "Rambling Jack" signing off.

Tickets for "An Illegal Start" are available on Evenbrite and at www.paulsandprojects.com or call (424) 372-7678 . Jack can be reached at jackneworth@yahoo.com.

BUDGET

growth from 7.5 percent to 7 percent. That half percent decrease over three years means an additional $2 million will come out of Santa Monica's General Fund in 2018, and then $13 million in 2021. At the same time, workers' compensation costs will likely increase between 5 to 10 percent and healthcare costs may increase by as much as 8 percent annually.

The overall proposed budget for the City is $773.7 million in 2017/18 and $802.1 million in 2018/19. Total compensation, which includes employee salaries, pension contributions, health care and workers' compensation costs, makes up 64 percent of the City's overall operating budget.

"To make the most of our resources, and to ensure that we continue to have resources in harder times, we must be purposeful, watchful, and strategic about how we spend," Cole said.

The City currently has 2,325 employees (both permanent and temporary) and will add net 5 positions over the next year, but plans to cut six positions soon after to end up with 2,324 by the end of the fiscal year in 2019. The City Manager's office alone will cut a total of 16 positions from a high of 76 full time employees in 2015 to 60 in 2019.

The City has faced a backlash from some neighborhood groups and fiscal conservatives over the last year in response to the size of city staff, their salaries and growing pension liability. The City's various pension plans have a combined unfunded long-term liability of $387 million (the other 75 percent of its $1.5 billion liability is funded, according to the City's Director of Finance Gigi Decavalles-Hughes). Complaints lead to the launch of an audit subcommittee to look at the City's fiscal health.

Critics often compare Santa Monica's staff size to nearby Newport Beach which has a similar population but 1,700 fewer employees, according to the conservative watchdog Transparent California. However, the tax base for the two cities is starkly different. For example, in 2015 Santa Monica brought in twice as much Transit Occupancy Tax ($46.6 million compared to $25 million) while visitors spent $840 million more in Santa Monica than in Newport, according to data from the City of Santa Monica and Newport Beach & Co., the company that handles marketing for that city.

However, despite Santa Monica's diverse tax base, all major sources of revenue are projected to grow more slowly or decline over the coming years, according to the report. Charges for services make up 24 percent of the City's revenue, sales tax accounts for 19 percent and hotel taxes and property taxes each make up 9 percent. Most of the City's tax revenue depends on the health of the overall economy, International tourism, and the real-estate market, which could all be significantly impacted by a slow-down or down turn in the coming years. If the economy continues to grow, it would be the longest period of economic expansion in the last century.

THEATRE

shaped roof and ornate marble carvings, with a cement forecourt filled with celebrity footprints.

The theater still hosts dozens of premieres each year and its famous footprint forecourt draws an estimated five million tourists annually from around the world — many of whom don't realize they can actually go inside and see a movie.

"Occasionally you'll get the tourist that comes up and asks for a restaurant reservation," said Levi Tinker, the theater's general manager and staff historian.

Ticket prices have climbed a bit, though. It cost 75 cents to see a feature in 1927. An IMAX 3-D screening today runs $22.75.

A showman and entrepreneur, Grauman started building the Chinese Theatre in 1926, the same year he and other Hollywood titans established the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. He imagined an elegant and otherworldly movie palace that would transport visitors to ancient China, with its serene gardens and regal temples.

"He really wanted to give the audiences who came inside here an escape from reality," Tinker said. "So he spared no expense in getting the best artists, the best designers, and even importing elements from China."

Grauman commissioned original murals and paintings by international artists with Hollywood connections. He hired a Chinese sculptor to make statues and figures that still decorate the auditorium. He sought permission from the American and Chinese governments to bring in marble and other materials from China, including the "Heaven Dogs" statues that sit at the theater's front doors. Most of the original 1927 artwork has been preserved, Tinker said.

The theater's best-known element, the footprint collection officially known as the "Forecourt of the Stars," wasn't part of the original plan.

Silent film star Norma Talmadge came to see Grauman at his new building on Hollywood Boulevard when she accidentally stepped in the wet cement out front. Inspiration struck: Grauman thought a few celebrity footprints would be a great way to promote his new theater.

He invited his friends and business partners Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks to intentionally put their hands and feet in wet cement, and the tradition was born. More than 300 actors, directors and producers have since followed suit. "Alien: Covenant" director Ridley Scott added his prints just this week.

Those footprints are what made Grauman's Chinese Theatre a sensation, said Marc Wanamaker, a historian with the Hollywood Heritage Museum.

"It was something special, mainly because of the footprints in the forecourt and the attention around the ceremonies," he said. "No other theater in Los Angeles had this kind of attraction."

The city of Los Angeles declared the theater a historic-cultural monument in 1968.

While the history has been preserved, the technology inside has been upgraded.

As the owners reflects on the landmark's 90th birthday, there's also the future of the TCL Chinese Theatre to think about. The company plans to expand the brand around the world, she said, with a San Diego location set to open later this year.

But for countless tourists and celebrities past and present, the Chinese Theatre will always be on Hollywood Boulevard, representing the golden age of cinema.

■ Q: What do you call the smooth part of the forehead between the eyebrows?

■ A: The glabella, which derives from the Latin word glabellus, meaning smooth. It also refers to the underlying bone, which is slightly depressed and, according to Wikipedia, is a "cephalometric landmark just superior to the nasion." That's good to nose.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (May 19)

You are very much your own person this year, and you'll be shedding old myths and definitions. The next10 weeks will do wonders for your satisfaction at work and also for your social ties. July presents a fun challenge and the ideal teammate. November brings romantic proclamations. Save up through the colder months. Cancer and Leo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 40, 2, 22 and 18.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

The current cosmic bent will help you realize the wondrous power of saying no, setting a boundary and enforcing a limit. Such a gesture will make love stronger and life simpler.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

You'll take back your time from the digital bandits. You won't answer the phone just because it rings or act on every electronic impulse demanding attention. You'll enjoy a few distractions -- distractions of your own choosing!

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)

Either your prayers will be answered, or that thing you do that's a little like praying will be linked to some interesting results. Tonight, hone social skills, including the art of making a powerful entrance and a smooth exit.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)

For today, "Why?" is not the right question to ask. The question "How?" on the other hand, could change your life. It's also a lucky day for running into the exact people who know about the "how," and you should definitely take lots of notes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

You refuse to think of yourself as a victim of circumstance. There are alternatives to explore -- hard to see when you're invested in one way of being, but they are there nonetheless. Decide to see them. You always have choices.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Sometimes all it takes is a simple decision to feel different. It's as though you're an actor and the director has just walked up to you and told you to play the scene confident, empowered and ready to make the next winning move.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

The potential for trouble lies in reacting to events in an emotional and unthinking way. Take a breath and be thoughtful and deliberate in your response instead and you'll avoid the trouble altogether.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)

Embrace the paradise of imperfect circumstances. Right now, exactly as you are, you're good enough to do what you really want to do, to the best of your ability. Also, you'll never be more ready. Go!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

There are people you you're not happy around and yet can't avoid altogether. When you have to deal with them, involve others. More people will dilute the power of one negative influence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

If you contradict someone, or even yourself, the energy of conflict will be ignited. This isn't necessary! Acknowledge the things you can't agree on. The validation may be all that's necessary to discharge the bad energy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

You'll be given gifts today, although they may be disguised as other things. Your definition of the term "gift" will be thereby expanded. Whether something is a gift or a bane is best determined over time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

You know what fun is to you. Stick with that today and the smiles keep coming, whereas subscribing to other people's idea of fun might actually make you feel irritated, uncomfortable or worse.

Venus and Jupiter's Heavenly Tension

Venus and Jupiter face off, pulling tension across the heavens. For all of his largess, Jupiter can hardly overpower the love goddess, who is fiercely feminine in her Aries armor. Anyway, neither will win. The lesson: There are many different kinds of power and just as many ways to wield it. Force is often the least effective use of power.
