Community Corp. to build 48 affordable apartments on Pico Boulevard

MADELEINE PAUKER
SMDP Staff Writer

Santa Monica's largest affordable housing developer is planning to construct 48 apartments on Pico Boulevard across the street from Santa Monica College.

Community Corporation of Santa Monica plans to demolish a church at 1819 Pico Blvd. to construct a four-story building for low-income renters. In addition to apartments, the 46-foot-tall building will house a food hall and community room on its ground floor, according to an Architectural Review Board report. Community Corp. plans to include 49 underground parking spaces and

When do you have to wear a mask in Santa Monica?

MADELEINE PAUKER
SMDP Staff Writer

The city of Santa Monica — in alignment with Los Angeles County and the city of Los Angeles — is now requiring people to wear masks whenever they leave their homes.

Prior to last week, people were only required to wear masks while visiting a business. The order the city issued Thursday requires a face covering while outside as well, except if you're in the water, have trouble breathing, or have a disability that prevents you from wearing a face covering. Children under two are also exempt from the order, which remains in effect through the end of June and may be extended.

But do you have to wear a mask if you're not close to other people? How about while you're exercising?

Westside School of Ballet in danger of closing

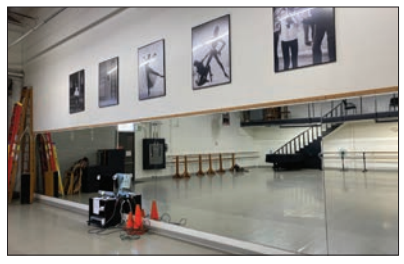

BRENNON DIXSON
SMDP Staff Writer

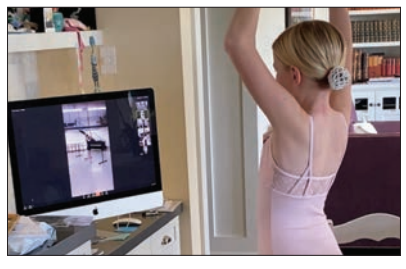

After 53 years of serving community members with dazzling displays of dance, Westside School of Ballet is in danger of closing.

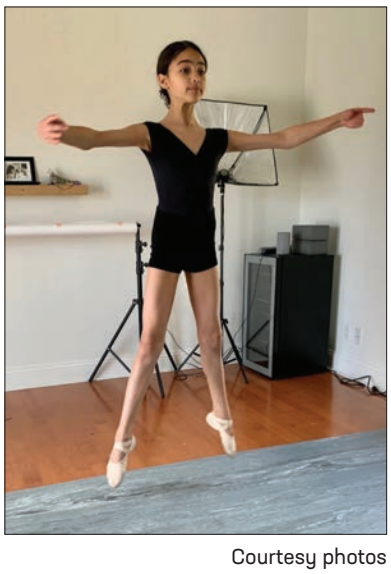

Founded in 1967 by New York City Ballet's principal ballerina Yvonne Mounsey and Westside Ballet co-founder Rosemary Valaire, the school distinguishes itself as a non-audition academy where all are welcome to study ballet and other dance forms.

Mounsey's daughter Allegra Clegg now serves as the Westside's owner and Executive Director of the renowned ballet, and she explained Tuesday that the school

Preferential Parking Restrictions for Beach Zone 3 Effective May 22

Interim City Manager and Director of Emergency Services Lane Dilg issued a fifteenth supplement to Santa Monica's local emergency, authorizing the enforcement of preferential parking rules in Zone 3 beginning May 22, 2020. Preferential parking rules in other zones remain suspended through the length of the local emergency, which is currently effective through June 30, 2020.

Santa Monica Police Department will begin citing for parking violations May 22 and will begin issuing warnings this weekend. For more information about what streets Zone 3 includes, please reference Santa Monica's preferential parking map. On May 22, enforcement will begin at Main Street Lot 11 (170 Hollister) and will no longer allow the storage of residential cars.

Additionally, street sweeping will resume in all zones beginning June 1, 2020, once per month. Residents are encouraged to comply with posted signs for parking prohibitions for street sweeping during the days and times indicated, but only during the first full week of each month. Citations for parking violations based on street sweeping remain suspended.

For the latest information, please visit santamonica.gov/coronavirus, or call the City's Coronavirus Hotline at (310) 458-8400.

Downtown Los Angeles textile warehouse burns

A downtown Los Angeles commercial building densely packed with rolled textiles burned for more than 90 minutes early Tuesday.

More than 100 firefighters battled flames deeply seated in rolls stacked up to 15 feet (4.6 meters) high, a Fire Department statement said.

No injuries were reported, and the fire's cause remained under investigation.

It was the second major fire downtown in four days.

A dozen firefighters were injured Saturday when a huge explosion rocked a vape and marijuana accessories wholesaler where a fire had broken out. As of Monday, four of the firefighters remained hospitalized.

Former WWE pro Shad Gaspard missing in ocean

Former World Wrestling Entertainment pro Shad Gaspard was still missing Tuesday after he was swept out to sea in Southern California last weekend while swimming with his young son.

Gaspard's 10-year-old son, Aryeh, was rescued and several other swimmers made it out of the water safely after they were caught in a rip current Sunday afternoon at Venice Beach.

"When last seen by the lifeguard, a wave had crashed over Mr. Shad Gaspard and he was swept out to sea," Los Angeles police said in a statement Monday.

Gaspard, 39, was about 50 yards from shore when he was last spotted, police said.

His wife, Siliana Gaspard, issued a statement Tuesday thanking authorities and fans.

"We would like to express our gratitude to the first responders who rescued Aryeh and to the lifeguards, coast guard, divers, fire and police departments for their continued efforts to help find our beloved Shad," the statement said.

The statement added: "Shad is a fighter, a warrior and a magical soul. We are hoping and praying for his safe return. As a family we thank you all for your concern and well wishes. Please continue to keep sending your positivity and prayers to our beloved Shad."

Gaspard gained prominence in the WWE as one half of the tag-team group Cryme Time, along with his partner, JTG.

After retiring from the WWE in 2010, Gaspard has had small roles on TV and in movies, including the 2015 Kevin Hart comedy "Get Hard."

USC hires Jeremy Kipp as men's and women's swim coach

Jeremy Kipp is the new head coach of Southern California's men's and women's swimming teams, replacing Dave Salo, who is retiring after 14 years.

Kipp spent the last two years in a similar job at Northwestern, where his teams were among the best in program history. He previously coached for three years at Boise State and at UC Santa Barbara.

Kipp returns to USC, where he was on staff from 2008 to 2015, the first three years as an assistant and the last five as head assistant under Salo.

The 42-year-old Kipp was the national team coach for Austria at the 2009 European championships and was the personal coach for Olympian Markus Roga.

Google says it won't build AI tools for oil and gas drillers

Google says it will no longer build custom artificial intelligence tools for speeding up oil and gas extraction, separating itself from cloud computing rivals Microsoft and Amazon.

A statement from the company Tuesday followed a Greenpeace report that documents how the three tech giants are using AI and computing power to help oil companies find and access oil and gas deposits in the U.S. and around the world.

The environmentalist group says Amazon, Microsoft and Google have been undermining their own climate change pledges by partnering with major oil companies including Shell, BP, Chevron and ExxonMobil that have looked for new technology to get more oil and gas out of the ground.

But the group applauded Google on Tuesday for taking a step away from those deals.

"While Google still has a few legacy contracts with oil and gas firms, we welcome this indication from Google that it will no longer build custom solutions for upstream oil and gas extraction," said Elizabeth Jardim, senior corporate campaigner for Greenpeace USA.

Google said it will honor all existing contracts with its customers, but didn't specify what companies. A Google cloud executive had earlier in May revealed the new policy during a video interview.

Greenpeace's report says Microsoft appears to be leading the way with the most oil and contracts, "offering AI capabilities in all phases of oil production." Amazon's contracts are more focused on pipelines, shipping and fuel storage, according to the report. Their tools have been deployed to speed up shale extraction, especially from the Permian Basin of Texas and New Mexico.

Some of the contracts have led to internal protests by employees who are pushing their companies to do more to combat climate change.

Amazon declined to comment on the Greenpeace report, but pointed to wording on its website that said "the energy industry should have access to the same technologies as other industries."

Microsoft published a blog statement Tuesday that didn't address Greenpeace's claims but emphasized the company's commitment to remove from the air all the carbon it has ever emitted by 2050.

Health Systems Unite to Encourage Patients to Put Health First, Access Care When Needed

Six of Los Angeles County's largest nonprofit health systems with hospitals, clinics and care facilities across the region have come together united in a mission to encourage community members to put health first and access care when needed.

UCLA Health, Providence, Keck Medicine of USC, Kaiser Permanente, Dignity Health and Cedars-Sinai have launched public service announcements called BetterTogether.Health with themes that include, "Life may be on pause. Your health isn't.," "Thanks L.A. for doing your part" and "Get care when you need it."

Among issues the educational campaign is addressing are the growing concerns by health professionals that many people are not seeking needed medical advice and assistance when critical to do so. Health care providers remain committed and available to serving the community's health care needs – including emergency, primary, specialty and urgent care.

Rather than each health system individually addressing what medical professionals increasingly call a "silent sub-epidemic" of those requiring but instead avoiding timely medical services, they came together to tackle head on what could become, if not curbed immediately, the next public health crisis, resulting in serious and avoidable health consequences. Today the six health systems are joined for this purpose, believing it is their duty to reach out and let people know they are open and committed to maintaining the health of the communities they serve - and saving lives.

"Those caring for patients in our hospitals, urgent care centers, clinics, testing centers and through telemedicine have responded with remarkable dedication, resilience and skill," says Johnese Spisso, President, UCLA Health, CEO, UCLA Hospital System and Associate Vice Chancellor, UCLA Health Sciences. "The health of our community continues as our number one priority, and we are prepared to address all health care needs."

The Better Together Health public service effort will include messages on multi-language television and radio, as well as billboards, newspapers, magazines, digital, social media, online information, links to vital health care resources and more. Combining resources demonstrates the organizations are in this together, will accomplish more together, and will get through this together.

"We are grateful to those who did what was asked – stay home, safe and healthy," says Erik Wexler, Chief Executive, Providence Southern California. "We are confident these efforts are making a positive difference in the health of Californians. This collaboration of health systems is not only extraordinary, it provides meaningful information in meeting a challenge beyond anything any of us ever experienced."

Emergencies don't stop and neither do the hospitals providing emergency care 24/7.

"We know many patients who in the past dialed 911 for life-threatening emergencies are now not accessing these vital services quickly," says Julie Sprengel, President, Southwest Division, Dignity Health Hospitals, CommonSpirit Health. "We are instead seeing patients that delayed, postponed or canceled care coming to emergency departments with serious conditions that should have been treated far earlier."

Getting to a hospital quickly for heart attacks and strokes is critical and saves lives. Those exhibiting serious symptoms like chest pain, shortness of breath, numbness in one side of the body or severe headache should seek medical attention immediately.

"There is concern that patients with serious conditions are putting off critical treatments," says Tom Jackiewicz, CEO, Keck Medicine of USC. "We know that seeking immediate care for heart attacks and strokes can be life-saving and may minimize long-term effects. Our hospitals and health care providers are ready and open to serve your needs."

Scheduled vaccinations for children are part of the important medical care that needs to take place to ensure everyone is protected from infectious diseases. Staying current on your children's immunization schedule protects them from potentially deadly diseases.

"It is critically important for children to stay on schedule for vaccinations for the protection of their health and others as well, including the measles and whooping cough vaccines," says Julie Miller-Phipps, President, Kaiser Permanente Southern California, Health Plan and Hospitals. "These highly contagious diseases could become a public health issue if not addressed. Immunizations help protect children and those around them from diseases caused by bacteria or viruses."

Patient health and safety are top priorities for every health care provider.

"Receiving timely treatment by skilled medical professionals is essential to helping us achieve for our patients and communities the best possible outcomes," says Tom Priselac, CEO, Cedars-Sinai Health System. "Please do not delay getting your health care. We encourage you to call a trusted health care provider like your doctor's office, hospital or urgent care center."

The answer to both questions is yes, said city spokesperson Constance Farrell.

"Put it on as soon as you step outside," she said.

Farrell said Santa Monica and the rest of the county will move closer to reopening if residents wear face coverings and practice physical distancing in public. If you have Coronavirus — whether you know it or not — wearing a mask will prevent you from infecting others, and masks also protect you from inhaling infectious droplets.

Public health officials recommend depositing your cloth mask after each use in a bin separate from the rest of your laundry and washing it before putting it back on.

"We know it can be uncomfortable, but this is a really critical measure to protect one another," Farrell said. "As we've heard from public health officials across the country, we all have to get used to these protective health measures for the foreseeable future."

She said the Santa Monica Police Department can issue citations to people without masks, but officers aim to educate people on the law before resorting to fines.

Los Angeles County has reduced its rate of infection since residents began practicing physical distancing and wearing masks, although cases continue to climb.

Public health officials said last week that every person with coronavirus is infecting an average of one other person. On Tuesday, Public Health Director Barbara Ferrer said 9% to 11% of people tested over the last two weeks have tested positive — a drop from the 13% to 15% of people who tested positive a few weeks ago — which she attributed in part to more asymptomatic people getting tested.

Keeping the rate of infection down through masks and physical distancing will be critical as county officials plan to reopen more sectors of the economy by July 4. To move further into phase two of reopening, counties in California must demonstrate that no more than 8% of people tested for more than one week were positive.

Ferrer said Tuesday she recognizes people are tired of the lockdown and reminded residents that they must continue to take precautions in order for the county to hit statewide metrics for reopening.

"It's going to take all of us working together to do this quicker rather than slower," she said. "We're going to aim for that July 4 date ... we have to do a lot of things right so we can actually get to that date and have lots of different sectors reopen."

Santa Monica had 243 confirmed coronavirus cases Tuesday, an increase of 15% over the last week. Fourteen residents have died from COVID-19, according to the county Department of Public Health.

There are 162 confirmed cases and 23 deaths at Santa Monica nursing homes.

Beachwood Post-Acute & Rehab, Ocean Pointe Healthcare Center and the Rehabilitation Center of Santa Monica continue to report the largest outbreaks.

Brentwood Healthcare Center has 10 confirmed cases among staff and residents. Brookdale Ocean Assisted Living, Dewey Home and Santa Monica Convalescent Center II each have one or two cases.

HHS Delivers $499,203,180 to Expand Testing Capacity in California

The Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) is delivering $499,203,180 in new funding to California to support testing for COVID-19. In total, $10.25 billion in funding is being provided by The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) to states, territories, and local jurisdictions through CDC's existing Epidemiology and Laboratory Capacity for Prevention and Control of Emerging Infectious Diseases (ELC) cooperative agreement. This funding is part of the Trump Administration's broader effort to ensure that states, territories, and tribes have the resources necessary to meet their testing goals as they begin to reopen.

This funding from the Paycheck Protection Program and Health Care Enhancement Act will provide critical support to develop, purchase, administer, process, and analyze COVID-19 tests, conduct surveillance, trace contacts, and related activities. These funds, along with the previous funding support CDC provided, will help states, territories, and localities with their efforts to re-open America.

"This funding secured by President Trump for state, tribal, and local public health activities is a historic investment in America's ability to track and control the spread of the virus, which is essential to a safe reopening," said HHS Secretary Alex Azar. "For the sake of all Americans' health and well-being, we must help Americans get safely back to work and school, and that requires continued expansion of testing, surveillance, and contact tracing. The Trump Administration stands ready to support and guide states in their life-saving work to combat the virus and reopen our country."

"As the Nation cautiously begins the phased approach to reopening, this considerable investment in expanding both testing and contact tracing capacity for states, localities, territories and tribal communities is essential," said CDC Director Robert R. Redfield, MD. "Readily accessible testing is a critical component of a four-pronged public health strategy – including rigorous contact tracing, isolation of confirmed cases, and quarantine. As communities move toward a blended mitigation and containment strategy, I encourage all Americans to continue to embrace powerful public health measures – social distancing, hand washing and face coverings. We are not defenseless in the battle against this pandemic."

Each Governor or designee of each State, locality, or territory receiving funds shall submit to HHS its plan for COVID-19 testing, including goals for the remainder of calendar year 2020, to include:

Number of tests needed, month-by-month to include diagnostic, serological, and other tests, as appropriate

Month-by-month estimates of laboratory and testing capacity, including related to workforce, equipment and supplies, and available tests

Description of how the resources will be used for testing, including easing any COVID-19 community mitigation policies

Jurisdictions will use the funding they receive to meet the testing goals laid out in their COVID-19 testing plans, including purchasing supplies (such as test kits and other testing supplies, as necessary).

For more information about CDC's ongoing support to States, please visit this CDC website: https://www.cdc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/php/open-america/index.html

Keep the crossing guards

I am one of your (former) School Crossing Guards. I grew up in Santa Monica and attended all schools from elementary to high school and SMC. I love my City, my job and miss the kids many of whom I have known their families for years, some I even went to school with who themselves are parents now.

In exploring " other viable alternatives " like hiring an outside company for your School Crossing Guards , on behalf of all of us , we are begging you to just consider this: why not just cut the force by 50%, implement a reduction in pay, and keep the Guards that you already have. We have all been through extensive vetting and training and are familiar with our City, our kids and their parents. Why hire strangers? If you consider Santa Monica " a family" ... your thought process does not make sense. You already know us and WE ARE FAMILY.

Are we just too expensive for one department to bear? NYC, Philadelphia, Chicago and a slew of other Guards work for their respective police departments. Why not just split the cost (which will be lowered given the above) with the Board of Education? Are parents or the PTA really going to accept that you won't have Guards? Or that you permanently let go of family ... some of which have been on the job 30+ years?

You are going to need School Crossing Guards. We are not only essential to traffic safety but we also are an integral part of children's education about traffic and pedestrian safety. Parents will not volunteer to stand in front of traffic at corners like : Cloverfield & Virginia, Ocean Park and 15th, 16th, 5,6,7, Lincoln & Montana & 9th, 14th & California ... risking injury or death. Those statistics are located @ Nascg.org provided by the Labor Bureau.

We beg you to reconsider, during your reconstruction of City affairs ... to just restructure your School Crossing Guards force.

Y Fray, Former SMPD School Crossing Guard

CRISIS: Fixing the budget holes...

HOW GOES THE DISMANTLING

Of our bloated budget?

I know, I know, it is an impossible task. And our elected and appointed City leaders are working very hard on it, and you sure can't please everyone in a situation like this, or even very many.

But remember this. As my friend Dan is often wont to say, you shouldn't have the people who dug you into a hole, be the ones to try to dig you out. (After all, they're already at the bottom.)

Of course our City Council and staff did not create the economic tsunami from the global pandemic. But we were already sinking fast in those good times way back in 2019, when this wealthy little town had already dug a deep deficit from astronomical salaries and unrestrained, extravagant, gratuitous spending, with an unfunded pension obligation alone of very near half a billion dollars. Yes, B, billion. That's about $30,000 owed by each SM family of four. From bathrooms to buildings to billings from elite law firms, it was Monopoly money madness, but those were our tax dollars.

Now we're being told there may be more taxes to make up for the crater deficits. More taxes for the city with one of the highest tax rates in the nation.

Now we need more development than ever, we're being told, in a city with a population density of nearly 11,000/sq mi, but you have to triple that when you count our extra daytime visitors of 150,000-200,000 a day. Just because we've lost some of that tourist and other visitor numbers, doesn't put us out of the woods. In fact, our dependence on the wrong revenue streams has been our downfall. I think one thing we've learned for certain is that a pandemic loves density. Manhattan suffered greatly. Why would we ever now aim for more density as even part of a fiscal solution?

WE NEED TO PROCEED

Reimagining and reconstructing our city with an entirely new vision, not the same old schemes that benefit the few over the welfare of the residents. Done with that.

But so far, it doesn't appear so. Right now is too early to talk specifics, because the City needs to negotiate with the unions before we really know where we stand.

But our entire culture is experiencing a moment of reevaluation. What do we really need? What do we want most? What can we do without? What makes life a joyous experience? We need to proceed with criteria like those before us. We need to have a great realization. Tough times are certainly ahead but it will be bearable if we are headed down the right path.

I WEAR A MASK IN PUBLIC

Not for me, but for you. Snicker if you will but it is an act of love. And a whole lot of people are doing the same thing, because they love you and don't want you infected by this dread disease.

I know that I could be asymptomatic and still give you the virus. No, I don't live in fear of the virus, I just want to be a part of the solution, not the problem. I don't feel like the government is controlling me, I feel like I'm being a contributing adult to society.

The world doesn't revolve around me. It's not all about me and my comfort. If we all could live with other people's welfare and safety in mind, this whole world would be a much better place, don't you think?

Wearing a mask doesn't make me weak, scared or stupid, it makes me considerate. But this is not mere consideration, this is literally a matter of life or death.

When you think about how you look, or how uncomfortable it is or what others think of you, just imagine someone close to you — your father, mother, grandparent, son or daughter, wife or husband, siblings, aunt or uncle — choking on a respirator until they finally can't take another breath. It's a terrible death, from COVID19, and nearly 100,000 Americans have died that way, in just a few months. Mostly alone, with no family there to even hold a hand at the end.

Then ask yourself if you couldn't have maybe sucked it up a little for them. Because it definitely — could happen to you.

MASKS? NO WAY, NOT FOR ME!

And the arguments that wouldn't even be spoken in an informed, humane society continue to rage on social media, too often taking up space and oxygen on FB sites where we could formerly go to discuss local issues rationally with our fellow residents.

So social distancing and wearing masks is being "controlled"? What is your perspective on traffic signals, wearing clothing, and a proper place to defecate? Are these "controls" that are acceptable in your ideology, or would you like to do away with those as well?

Yeah, like, what's up with red lights? I never agreed to that type of oppression, and they definitely infringe on my rights. If you want to stop for red lights, you can do it, but why should your fear dictate my actions? Maybe if you're old and feeble red lights are a good thing for you, but with my quick reactions, I don't need them. I ran three

Study: World carbon pollution falls 17% during pandemic peak

SETH BORENSTEIN
AP Science Writer

The world cut its daily carbon dioxide emissions by 17% at the peak of the pandemic shutdown last month, a new study found.

But with life and heat-trapping gas levels inching back toward normal, the brief pollution break will likely be "a drop in the ocean" when it comes to climate change, scientists said.

In their study of carbon dioxide emissions during the coronavirus pandemic, an international team of scientists calculated that pollution levels are heading back up — and for the year will end up between 4% and 7% lower than 2019 levels. That's still the biggest annual drop in carbon emissions since World War II.

It'll be 7% if the strictest lockdown rules remain all year long across much of the globe, 4% if they are lifted soon.

For a week in April, the United States cut its carbon dioxide levels by about one-third. China, the world's biggest emitter of heat-trapping gases, sliced its carbon pollution by nearly a quarter in February, according to a study Tuesday in the journal Nature Climate Change. India and Europe cut emissions by 26% and 27% respectively.

The biggest global drop was from April 4 through 9 when the world was spewing 18.7 million tons (17 million metric tons) of carbon pollution a day less than it was doing on New Year's Day.

Such low global emission levels haven't been recorded since 2006. But if the world returns to its slowly increasing pollution levels next year, the temporary reduction amounts to "a drop in the ocean," said study lead author Corinne LeQuere, a climate scientist at the University of East Anglia.

"It's like you have a bath filled with water and you're turning off the tap for 10 seconds," she said.

By April 30, the world carbon pollution levels had grown by 3.3 million tons (3 million metric tons) a day from its low point earlier in the month. Carbon dioxide stays in the air for about a century.

Outside experts praised the study as the most comprehensive yet, saying it shows how much effort is needed to prevent dangerous levels of further global warming.

"That underscores a simple truth: Individual behavior alone ... won't get us there," Pennsylvania State University climate scientist Michael Mann, who wasn't part of the study, said in an email. "We need fundamental structural change."

If the world could keep up annual emission cuts like this without a pandemic for a couple decades, there's a decent chance Earth can avoid warming another 1.8 degrees (1 degree Celsius) of warming from now, study authors said. But getting the type of yearly cuts to reach that international goal is unlikely, they said.

If next year returns to 2019 pollution levels, it means the world has only bought about a year's delay in hitting the extra 1.8 degrees (1 degree Celsius) of warming that leaders are trying to avoid, LeQuere said. That level could still occur anywhere from 2050 to 2070, the authors said.

The study was carried out by Global Carbon Project, a consortium of international scientists that produces the authoritative annual estimate of carbon dioxide emissions. They looked at 450 databases showing daily energy use and introduced a measurement scale for pandemic-related societal "confinement" in its estimates.

Nearly half the emission reductions came from less transportation pollution, mostly involving cars and trucks, the authors said. By contrast, the study found that drastic reductions in air travel only accounted for 10% of the overall pollution drop.

In the U.S., the biggest pollution declines were seen in California and Washington with plunges of more than 40%.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (MAY 20)

You'll decide what you want and go after it daily; like the river that cuts through rock, this is not about power but persistence. You'll have several fascinating partners for your various projects. There's someone you'll provide with care. These efforts favorably shape your character and your fortunes. A whim begins an adventure. Aries and Cancer adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 25, 14, 33, 12 and 6.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You are willing to feel an unpleasant thing if it's what's necessary to obtain a benefit far more important. This doesn't make you a martyr; it makes you an adult.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). The difference between a competent performance and a struggle is often the attitude one launches from. Believe you'll succeed. If you can't believe, pretend to believe until one day you do.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). There is always a chance of thinking more clearly and perceiving things differently, because the human brain is capable of rewiring itself. Adaptation is the natural tendency. Let this work for you.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You can't really solve an emotional problem with logic. It's the wrong tool, and no matter how many ways you turn it, it just won't work. Feelings need to be felt, worked through, experienced. There's no shortcut.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). However massive a project or problem may be, it's doable when you break it down into small enough steps. Repeat the action until it is easy for you, and then build on that.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). While it's nice to get the feedback you desire, you won't get it every time. No one does. You don't need approval when you already approve of yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Often what we think will be the solution to the problem is only a different side of the problem. Hint: The root of the problem, by definition, is the part that no one sees. It's in the ground, the psyche, the heart.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You might feel a little uneasy about a new course of action, but that only means you're the brave sort who is always moving forward. You'll get more confident in your skills every time you use them.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Do what you can to set yourself up for inevitable success. If you don't know what that is, it's usually something so small that the only reason you don't do it is you think it's not enough. Untrue! Momentum builds.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Have you ever packed your bags, arrived at your destination and wished you'd packed (SET ITAL) more (END ITAL)? Likely no. In the same way that packing less makes for a lighter journey, saying less makes for lighter emotions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Self-esteem is irrelevant to your success today. Once you get into action, you won't even be listening to your own opinions of yourself, so they don't matter. Action is what matters.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). When you're doing what you're good at, you do without much doubt. Stretch into the some-doubt zone. You can take it. Doubt is uncomfortable, but it's a necessary part of growth.

BALLET

is in its ninth week of offering more than 50 online ballet and conditioning classes a week via Zoom and Instagram Livestream as well as a weekly "Dance Talks" series. And even though the ballet is operating at an expense budget that's a third of its normal operating costs, Clegg said it is not in a stable fiscal position to remain open much longer if it doesn't receive assistance or is allowed to open its doors to the public.

Normally, students and staff would be preparing for the school's annual Spring Performance, but this year will be the first "Show that wasn't" in 47 years. Current Artistic Director and Westside Ballet alumna Martine Harley added this year's Spring Performance had dancers that had trained since early childhood for the coveted roles.

But things are so dire at the Westside Ballet that its volunteer Guild and the nonprofit's Board of Directors have launched a GoFundMe campaign in recent days that aims to raise funds, which will supplement the revenue from the ballet's online classes and hopefully keep the studio doors open.

"I never thought it'd come to this," Clegg said. "I've always been involved in (the ballet) and I was a student myself, so I know the value of this place because it taught me so much more than dance. There are the most amazing life lessons to be learned here."

Clegg became emotional as she imagined a future without Westside School of Ballet but added she's holding strong because she knows she has supporters on her side.

The GoFundMe, which can be found by visiting bit.ly/westsideballet has currently raised a little more than $5,500, and Clegg said the property's landlords are willing to work with them because they have been such longtime tenants and remain closely connected with each other.

School administrators have also reached out to city and government officials about a clear path for opening but haven't received an official go-ahead to open as of Tuesday.

"I personally hope that we're allowed to open up; one for the business side of it to start receiving some type of income again, but I also think it's really important for the kids that they get back to working out and moving their bodies because you can only do so much through Zoom," Clegg said. "I'm at a point, personally, where I feel they should let us make our own decisions. And if people don't feel comfortable coming to the studio, then they won't have to. We'll still offer online classes, but there are a lot of adults and a lot of parents who've reached out to ask us to please open up again because they say they aren't fearful and want their kids back in the studio. They're ready for it."

APARTMENTS

109 bicycle stalls in the project.

The city of Santa Monica will loan Community Corp. $10.7 million from its affordable housing trust fund to acquire the property and fund the first stages of the project. The city will provide an additional $12.1 million for construction.

The estimated development cost of the project is $35 million or about $730,000 per apartment, according to Community Corp.'s housing trust fund application. Community Corp. will secure the remaining funding with $20.3 million in tax credits and $2.4 million in bank loans.

The building will contain 22 one-bedrooms, 12 two-bedrooms and 14 three-bedrooms. The average one-bedroom will be 570 square feet, the average two-bedroom 740 square feet and the average three-bedroom 960 square feet.

Fifteen apartments will be restricted to low-income households, or those earning 51% to 80% of the Los Angeles area median income. Twenty-two apartments will serve households earning 31% to 50% of the median income, and 11 will be for households earning less than 30% of the area median income.

One apartment for a household earning 80% of the area median income would be reserved for an on-site manager.

Local architecture firm Brooks + Scarpa has designed the gray-and-blue building as three structures organized around a 2,400-square-foot central courtyard. More than 5,000 square feet of open space will be provided on the building's upper levels.

Along Pico Boulevard, the ground floor of the building is transparent and recessed under the first floor. Outdoor dining space is included at the corner of Pico Boulevard and 19th Street.

"Additional articulation is created at the upper floors with projecting window boxes, creating pushes and pulls without a change in massing that would lead to a reduction in units," associate planner Cary Fukui wrote in a report to the Architectural Review Board. "A large frame element gathers the upper floors to provide a strong presence along Pico and (relates) well to the new Santa Monica College building across the street."

Parking access, loading zones and refuse areas are located off of 18th Court to the east, according to the building plans.

Community Corp. will demolish the Mount Hermon Baptist Congregation church to construct the building. The church was built in 1950 and is not a landmark.

A five-unit apartment building at 2024 19th St. built in 1957 will also be razed to make way for the building.

Community Corp. is planning another four-story building less than a mile at 1834-1848 14th St. The Las Flores complex will contain 73 deed-restricted apartments.

The nonprofit is also developing Greenway Meadows, a 39-unit affordable complex for seniors at 1820 14th St.

Another affordable developer, EAH Housing, is planning to build 42 apartments at 1413 Michigan Ave.

red lights last night and didn't get hurt, so obviously any "statistics" about "accidents" are a hoax intended to enslave me. Did you know that Red lights were invented in Communist China? Look it up! Did our Founding Fathers stop for red lights? I don't think so. Today I saw a long line of cars stopped for one, looked like a herd of sheep to me. Don't be a sheep, run the red!
