Airport Runway to be chopped at both ends

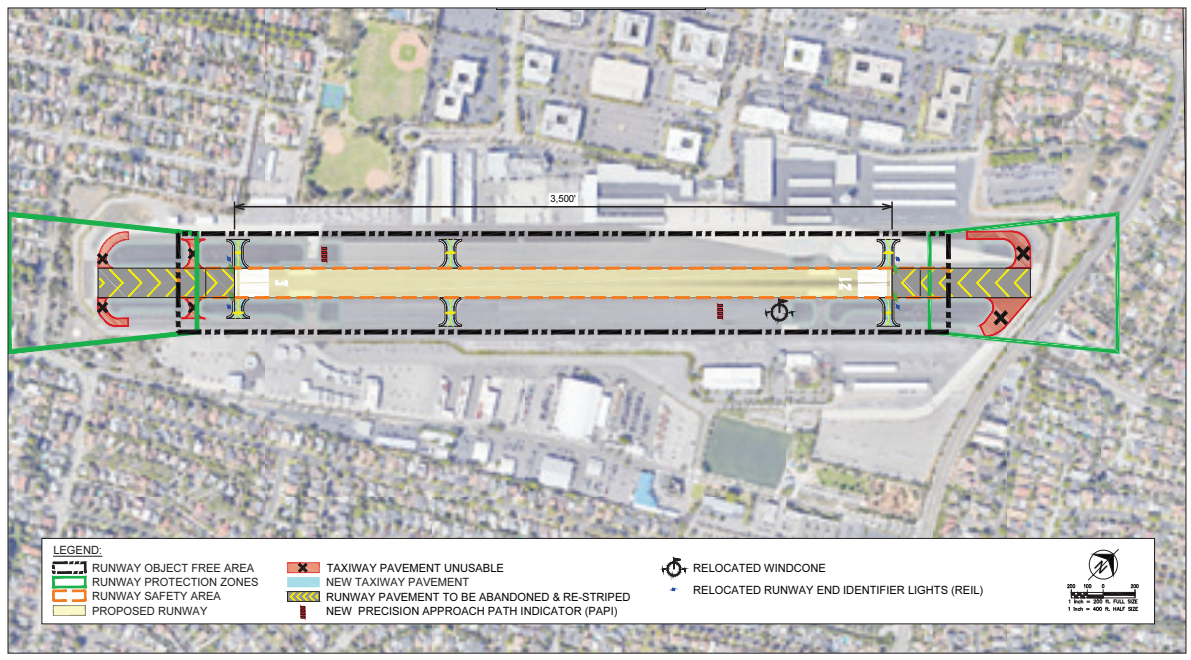

BY KATE CAGLE
Daily Press Staff Writer

The City Council green-lit plans to shorten the runway at Santa Monica Airport Wednesday by removing over 700 feet of take off and landing space at both ends.

Construction, tentatively scheduled to begin this fall, may require the airport to completely close for three to seven days, according to a report from engineering consultants at AECOM, while the rest of restriping will be done overnight. Crews will repair the runway, relocate lights and repaint.

The shorter runway will effectively shut down business jet charters at SMO, according to a report from airport planning firm Coffman Associates. However, most personal and corporate jets will still be able to fly out of the airport. Overall, the shortened runway will reduce jet operations by 44 percent, from around 16,300 flights per year to 9,000 with an annual increase in traffic between five to ten percent.

"The new runway is going to be FAA compliant for the first time," Senior Airport Advisor Nelson Hernandez said in an interview with the Daily Press. Hernandez said the existing 5,000-foot runway did not have sufficient runway protection zones, with 141 houses in the RPZ. The new runway design reduces the number of homes to 25.

700 FEET: Council has approved a plan to shorten both ends of the runway at Santa Monica Airport.

"That's over a hundred fewer families who are in the danger zone," Hernandez said.

Hernandez expects construction will be completed by the end of the year. Because the existing runway will be reutilized, the City says the project is exempt from review under the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA).

Despite an outcry from neighbors and a recommendation from the Airport Commission, immediate construction will not include removing the excess 1,500 feet of asphalt no longer in use by the airport.

"If all you are able to achieve by the end of this year is a painting of a line on the runway then I feel you ought to be ashamed of yourself for failing the people who have made it clear they want this airport closed," Gavin Scott, a Santa Monica resident whose home is currently in the RPZ, told the City Council during a special meeting.

Scott says about twelve airplanes fly directly over his house every day. He says each time the rumbling of overhead engines is jarring.

"It's like someone ripping your brain. It is tearing. You cannot speak. The windows rattle. Your children cannot play in the garden. It is as if the jet is coming through your garden. Again and again and again every day."

The City Council directed staff to come back to them in the future with options to remove the excess asphalt, but stipulated it will be a separate project. Hernandez says completing the construction and

Malibu advocates give unfiltered feedback on purified water fountains

BY MARINA ANDALON
Daily Press Staff Writer

Malibu parents want permission from local officials to replace water fountains at Malibu schools with specialized water stations that provide electrolyte fortified, filtered water.

The May 18 meeting of the Santa Monica – Malibu Unified School District featured a significant discussion of sustainability efforts within the district and a group of Malibu advocates took the opportunity to request installation of the FloWater hydration system at Malibu High School, Malibu Middle School, and Juan Cabrillo Elementary.

These stations offer students and staff drinking water that is purified with three advanced filters; sediment, carbon and advanced osmosis. The system also adds electrolytes.

Electrolytes are commonly occurring substances that serve a variety of important functions within the body. Consuming electrolytes following intense exercise can help the body rehydrate and electrolytes are present in many common foods as well as specialized sports drinks.

The proposal has been taken on by Malibu parents Mindy Peterson, Jennifer Denicola, and Malibu Librarian Sarah Ryan.

Immigration agents arrest nearly 200 in LA-area raids

By The Associated Press

Immigration agents arrested nearly 200 people suspected of being in the country illegally in a five-day raid in the Los Angeles area, authorities said Thursday.

Ninety percent of the 188 people detained had prior criminal convictions, many for drug offenses and driving under the influence, Immigration and Customs Enforcement said in a statement.

The arrests took place through Wednesday as federal immigration agents fanned out across cities including Los Angeles, Santa Ana and Oxnard to arrest immigrants for deportation. The vast majority of those detained were men and more than 75 percent came from Mexico.

President Donald Trump's administration has touted an increase in immigration arrests since taking office in January on promises to bolster immigration enforcement. Immigrant advocates have decried many of the arrests, especially those of immigrants without criminal histories.

One in five of those arrested had prior convictions for drug crimes. Other offenses on arrestees' rap sheets included domestic violence, sex crimes and battery, the statement said.

One of the arrestees was a 29-year-old Salvadoran man who was deported in 2014 after he was sentenced to nine years in prison for rape. He later returned to the country illegally, ICE said.

Democrats advance single-payer California health care bill

A California bill to replace health insurance companies with universal government-funded care is advancing to a vote in the full Senate.

But Democrats who back the measure have not identified a way to pay for the estimated $400 billion annual cost.

The single-payer health care bill cleared a hurdle Thursday when it passed the Appropriations Committee in a 5-2 party-line vote.

SB562 has energized liberals at a time when President Donald Trump and Republicans in Congress are looking to overhaul former President Barack Obama's health care bill.

Supporters say a single-payer system would redirect insurance company profits and administrative costs to patient care.

Insurance companies and business groups say the bill would upend the health care system and its costs would cripple businesses.

Oregon, California governors seek salmon disaster aid

Oregon Gov. Kate Brown and California Gov. Jerry Brown are seeking a federal disaster declaration to help salmon fishermen enduring a second bad year in a row.

A record-low number of fall-run Chinook salmon returning to the Klamath River has led to fisheries restrictions, including the cancellation of the season along a large stretch of coastal southern Oregon and Northern California.

In letter dated Wednesday, the governors asked Secretary of Commerce Wilbur Ross for an expedited declaration of a catastrophic regional fishery disaster, a move necessary for fishing businesses to request federal assistance.

The letter asserts that Oregon's commercial ocean salmon fisheries are projected to earn 63 percent less revenue than what they averaged from 2012-16. California fisheries are expected to make 72 percent less.

California neighborhood flooded after seawall is damaged

Ocean water rushed through the streets of a low-lying Southern California coastal community after a seawall was damaged by construction workers.

A crew doing demolition work at a seaside lot accidentally knocked off the top portion of the wall Wednesday night in Newport Beach. When high tide came, water flooded into a neighborhood.

At least one resident reported flooding inside a home, while up to 20 others had water in their yards, fire Battalion Chief Brian McDonough said.

Thursday's tide was expected to be slightly higher than the previous night's when it peaks around 9:30 p.m.

The city of 58,000 people south of Los Angeles sits at 10 feet (3 meters) above sea level and is often beset by flooding during storms or extraordinary tides.

Suspect killed, deputy wounded in shooting near Los Angeles

A gunbattle during a traffic stop near Los Angeles left a suspect dead and a sheriff's deputy wounded, authorities said Thursday.

A man in the backseat of a sedan suddenly opened fire on two deputies shortly after they pulled over the car for traffic violations late Wednesday in Compton, officials said.

Both Los Angeles County deputies fired back. One of them was struck in the arm and the torso, "which thankfully was stopped by a bulletproof vest," Lt. Joe Mendoza said.

The deputy was hospitalized and was expected to survive, he said. The second deputy suffered minor injuries after falling backward during the shootout.

The suspect, described by authorities as a known gang member, was shot and died at a hospital.

Two women inside the car were detained and interviewed by detectives, and the suspect's handgun was recovered.

Detectives search grandmother's home in missing boy probe

Authorities are searching the Southern California home of the grandmother of a 5-year-old boy who has been missing for more than a month.

Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department says detectives were serving a search warrant Thursday at the home in Montebello. They say several items were seized during the search but declined to comment further.

Investigators have been searching for 5-year-old Aramazd Andressian Jr. since his father was found passed out in a park in South Pasadena on April 22. Sheriff's officials say the father took prescription pills and was in a car doused in gasoline.

The father was initially arrested on suspicion of child endangerment but later released.

The boy's mother, Ana Estevez, joined sheriff's officials last week to make a public plea for her son's safe return.

Out Like Flynn

APPARENTLY, A FEW PRO-TRUMP READERS aren't exactly thrilled with me. (Okay, maybe more than a few.) I received a rather unpleasant example last Friday from an "acquaintance" who shall remain nameless.

He and I have a close mutual friend who's moving back here next month. Though he's never been friendly to me, I said a quick hello and mentioned I'd recently talked to our friend. When he asked sarcastically, "Did you discuss Trump?" things went south. "With what you've written, you should be in jail with Hillary and Barack 'Hussein' Obama," he fumed. Good Lord.

I tried to diplomatically extricate myself but he wasn't having it. The softer I spoke the louder he got. Passersby were starting to look over. I found myself wondering if Andy Rooney ever went through this.

Admittedly, I find Trump's presidency thoroughly depressing for a variety of reasons, including his white supremacist following for whom he's seemingly legitimized hate. As it happens, Monday marks the 100th birthday of JFK who stood not for hate but for hope. Maybe Darwin was wrong.

I find Trump a classless, ignorant, narcissistic bully. (I know, but how do I really feel?) At only 127 days, his presidency is mired in one serious scandal after another. It's not only depressing, it's exhausting. Ironically, on the campaign trail, Trump guaranteed voters that, as president, he'd provide "so much winning," that we'd be exhausted. Frankly, I see zero "winning."

Now let me switch to Mike Flynn whom I actually think might wind up in jail. Flynn spent a grand total of 24 days as National Security Adviser, a record unlikely to ever be broken. In March, Flynn first asked for immunity in exchange for his testimony, saying he "has a story to tell." I bet he does.

Last summer, at the Republican National Convention, Flynn. in referring to Hillary Clinton, led the crowd in the chant "lock her up." He shouted rather prophetically, "If I did one-tenth of what Hillary did, I'd be in jail today." How about lock HIM up?

Flynn also asked self-righteously, "Why would anyone plead the 5th if they weren't guilty." Trump echoed the sentiment, "The mob is who takes the 5th." But only a few days ago, sources close to Flynn revealed he's going to ignore a subpoena ordering him to turn over documents to the House Intelligence Committee as part of their Russia investigation. Instead, he will invoke...you guessed it, his 5th Amendment right against self-incrimination. Some are predicting that Flynn may ultimately "earn" himself a Contempt of Congress charge and be arrested. Stay tuned.

It seems everybody warned Trump about Flynn, even Chris Christie. "If I were president he wouldn't get near the White House." Obama cautioned the president-elect and, in late January, Acting Attorney General Sally Yates, who has had an illustrious 28-year legal career, warned Trump. She noted that Flynn hadn't been truthful about his contacts with Russia related to sanctions and that he was vulnerable to blackmail by Russian intelligence.

Rather than fire Flynn, Trump fired Yates. In fact, it took Trump 18 days to ask for Flynn's resignation. Bitter, Trump incoherently blamed it on the media, suggesting to some Flynn might still be in office were it not for a newspaper revelation

In Watergate, Deep Throat told Woodward and Bernstein to "follow the money." It may be equally true here. I'm convinced Trump is so "dirty" with Russian money and connections, as he might say, "It'd make your head spin." He's never acknowledged Russians hacked the DNC, saying, "For all we know, it's a 400-pound guy in his mother's basement."

When Trump isn't busy giving away highly sensitive classified information to the Russians and in the Oval Office no less, he's revealing to Kim Jung-Un where our submarines are located. In fact, Trump did it again just the other day divulging the info to the autocratic Philippine President Rodrigo Duterte, who in September, 2016, called Obama "the son of a whore." (Trump loves him some dictators.)

A recent nationwide poll indicated only 31% of the country thinks Trump is "level-headed." Frankly, I'm shocked it's so high. In December, 2016, when Trump infamously said, "I could shoot somebody on 5th Avenue and I wouldn't lose any voters" he revealed to many observers that he thinks he never has to pay a price. That said, I genuinely fear we will.

Meanwhile, on Wednesday, on the eve of a special election in Montana, Greg Gianforte, a pro-Trump GOP Congressional candidate, body-slammed a reporter sending him to the hospital. The Gallatin County Sheriff's Office cited Gianforte for assault giving him until June 7 to appear in court. (What a fine Congressman he will make.)

Trump supporter violence in mind, this week at Starbucks, I might quietly tip-toe in and out as I get my copies of the Daily Press.

"Students have been raised to be water drinkers rather than soda drinkers, and they like to drink water if it tastes good," said Ryan. "Students need to be hydrated to succeed in school and in sports, and our students need to find the drinking water to taste good."

Schools throughout SMMUSD receive water from two different agencies, the Santa Monica Public Water Works department supplies Santa Monica and Los Angeles County Waterworks District No. 29 serves Malibu Schools.

Peterson said the water straight from the fountains contains bacteria, heavy metals, pesticides and other contaminants that can have negative impacts on health. However, she did not present evidence showing the tap water was unsafe.

According to the Annual Water Quality Report for Waterworks District No. 29, the water provided by the district meets all state and federal safety standards. The report said all drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants likes salts, metals, pesticides, herbicides, or organic and chemical contaminants.

According to the report, while contaminants like lead and copper are not at dangerous levels at the source, they can reach dangerous levels if they are present in the pipes or plumbing of a home, business or school.

In the 1990's the district did extensive work in all schools replacing lead pipes and old facilities. With the recent concern from parents and educators, the district submitted letters to District No. 29 and Santa Monica Public Works making an official request to test the water for lead content. The last tests were finished at several schools over a decade ago and showed all sites tested were well below the action threshold. Additional tests have been requested to provide more timely measurements.

The Malibu advocates said students do not like the taste of the tap water and the District should provide water of a higher quality to students.

Peterson said the district should approve a pilot program for FloWater systems and said volunteer donations would hopefully pay for the system.

"We are looking at the FloWater rental agreement, which appeals to the donors," said Mindy Peterson. "The cost is $99 a month per unit which includes installation, as well as maintenance and service with a 60-month commitment."

Parents would like to see six stations at Malibu High School and one at Malibu Middle School.

The discussion occurred during a larger agenda item on sustainability and the Board was not asked or able to vote on the proposal that night. However, several members seemed to support the idea.

At the Board of Education meeting, board members Craig Foster, Jon Kean and Oscar de la Torre expressed their support for filtered water systems to be installed.

"This is something we should move on to immediately. If we were to vote on this today I would vote yes," said De la Torre. "It is all about health, safety and the wellbeing of our kids."

The district has not approved the installation of FloWater stations, however they do plan on installing water refilling stations, providing regular tap water, throughout the district.

"We understand the growing interest in installing water filling stations on our campuses, as we enhance our sustainability efforts, and this is in the research and discussion phase right now," said SMMUSD Spokeswoman Gail Pinsker.

Pinsker said any updates will be done with student safety in mind.

"Our top priority is the health and safety of our students and staff and that includes ensuring the water available at school is safe to drink," she said.

"We are awaiting test results from both the Santa Monica Water Agency that supplies water to our Santa Monica schools and LA County that supplies to our Malibu schools.

Based on annual reports of both providers, our water sources are high quality, and we are anticipating the test results through our fixtures to reflect these high quality standards."

The Malibu parents said efforts to replace the fountains should account for the wants and needs of the individual communities.

"It is clear that the district and our administration understand we need water stations, but I think they are not moving forward with this despite the fact we have the money to purchase the units," said Ryan. "They feel every school must have the exact same water stations and they want less expensive units. This is an unrealistic goal to have this be the case 100% of the time, when our schools have different opportunities and needs."

RUNWAY

design in phases will help neighbors get immediate relief from air traffic and noise. Deviations from the newly striped runway onto the excess pavement would violate FAA regulations, according to Hernandez who says the City is looking into video cameras for enforcement.

"The yellow chevrons will make the airport a 3,500 foot runway and that's what counts," Hernandez said. He expects to be back before the Council with additional plans in August.

The City is currently dealing with two lawsuits that seek to overturn the consent decree with the FAA that allows Santa Monica to shorten the runway and eventually close it for good in 2028. In February, the National Business Aviation Association (NBAA) along with several other business and aviation groups petitioned the U.S. Court of Appeals to review the agreement. Three Circuit Court judges recently denied the NBAA's motion to halt all construction until the court can review the settlement.

Other airport activists point out the City is losing critical infrastructure in the case of a major emergency by shortening the runway and eventually closing SMO.

"Shortening the runway by any distance leaves pilots fewer options in the case of an emergency," said David Hopkins, vice president of the Santa Monica Airport Association. "Choosing to shorten the runway is clearly a political move which will have negative impacts on safety at the airport."

Representatives from the offices of Los Angeles City Councilmember Mike Bonin and Congresswoman Karen Bass complained SMO also effects their constituents. City staff did not publicly present a runway reconfiguration that would have moved the landing strip west, away from Los Angeles neighborhoods.

"SMO has long disproportionately impacted the City of LA residents through what I think is a concerted effort to shift noise and air pollution away from the City of Santa Monica," said Jeff Thomas, a representative from Councilmember Bonin's office.

California bullet train opponents refile suit over project

Opponents of California's bullet train have refiled a lawsuit against state legislation that allows high-speed rail money to be spent on electrification of Caltrain from south of San Jose to San Francisco.

In a new filing Thursday, opponents named the lead plaintiff as the state of California, rather than the California High-Speed Rail Authority, and also named state Finance Director Michael Cohen.

They're taking up a Sacramento judge's offer earlier this month to refile the lawsuit. He rejected their arguments in the case aimed at blocking California's $64 billion high-speed rail project.

The lawsuit challenges AB1889, signed into law last year by Gov. Jerry Brown. Opponents say it unconstitutionally allows high-speed rail bonds to be spent on Caltrain, violating the promises made to voters in 2008.

Small undersea quake jiggles coast west of Malibu

A minor undersea earthquake has jiggled a small stretch of the Southern California coast in Los Angeles and Ventura counties.

The U.S. Geological Survey says the magnitude-3.3 temblor occurred just before 7:20 a.m. Thursday.

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON MAY 18 AT APPROXIMATELY 12:59 A.M.

Officers working uniform patrol in a marked police unit observed a bicyclist riding south in the 1500 block of 7th street. Officers observed that the bicycle was not equipped with a forward mounted white lamp visible up to 300 feet. The officers conducted a traffic stop on the bicyclist due to the violation of 21201 (d) (1) California Vehicle Code. When officers asked the suspect whether he was in possession of anything illegal he admitted to having methamphetamine on his person. When the officer facilitated a consensual search of the suspect they found a plastic bindle of off-white crystalline substance in the pocket of the suspect. The suspect claimed that he works for a drug dealer as a "runner," delivering drugs to the buyers for a fee. Officers arrested the suspect for 11378 H&S possession/transportation of methamphetamine for sales and was transported to the Santa Monica Police Department jail. Michael Spinks, 51 of San Fernando, had bail set at $30,000.

WELL NEWS BY SCOTT LAFEE

Medical History

■ This week in 1969, the first transplant of an entire human eye was announced in newspaper reports, albeit incorrectly. Dr. Conrad Moore of Methodist Hospital in Houston operated on John Madden, age 54, in an attempt to restore his right eye, which had been destroyed by bleeding following an earlier cornea graft. Others were skeptical, however, that a complete eye transplant had occurred and Moore eventually reported that he had actually transplanted just the front optical portion, retaining the original retina, optic nerve, blood vessels and muscles of the patient's eye. Three weeks after the operation, however, the patient still had no sight, though the eye had normal movement and appearance. Moore was subsequently expelled from the Houston Ophthalmological Society for poor practices.

Gemini Lunar Opportunity

At the root of suffering is a relentless drive for something better than what's here right now. The quest for happiness is one of the best searches to take on -- if your goal is unhappiness. Yesterday the moon was new, and today is full of ripe opportunity for those willing to climb the tree a little. Don't be afraid of risk or a little unpleasantness.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
What affects you directly will affect others indirectly. We're all tied together, whether or not we want to be. Our wants do not change the way things are.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
If you can't seem to muster up a positive attitude or visualize the ideal outcome, don't worry, because today you'll be much better off just being yourself and approaching things in your usual down-to-earth way.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
For reasons lost in the mist of time, you still manage the logistical details of your work with some degree of redundancy. You're either not using or not trusting new technology. Remedy this today.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)
You want to make gains but are afraid to risk and possibly lose the gains you've already made. To minimize loss and avoid danger is a legitimate aim. Don't let daring people persuade you otherwise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
There's no need to fight over who is right. You're both right; you just have different styles. As long as you stay focused on the same aim and are respectful in the way you disagree with one another, this team can win.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
You will definitely need some confidence to get through the next challenge, but not a swaggering "I am the greatest" kind of confidence. Rather, you'll simply need the "I believe I can" type.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
You've such an engaging personality that, in certain areas, you've gotten by on charm instead of skills. Today you'll be given (or create for yourself) the opportunity to circle back and pick up those skills you missed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
It will be pretty easy to get going on today's mission. You have something to prove and a strong reason for demonstrating that to others and finally receiving the validation you deserve.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
The Easterners say that separateness is an illusion, while the Westerners say we should each make the most of ourselves. What's the balance? Amazingly, you'll strike it today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Be ready with plan B. The stronger your fallback plan is, the likelier it is that your first choice will succeed. The law of detachment applies here, but don't think too deeply into it. Just know that it's good to be prepared.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
What you care about is getting better. Because you're so focused on improving, you will. Just keep in mind that progress isn't always readily apparent, but as long as you're learning, you're also growing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
In order to stay motivated today, you need to know you're progressing quickly toward your aim. Break the goal down to smaller sub-goals you can reward and celebrate along the way.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (May 26)

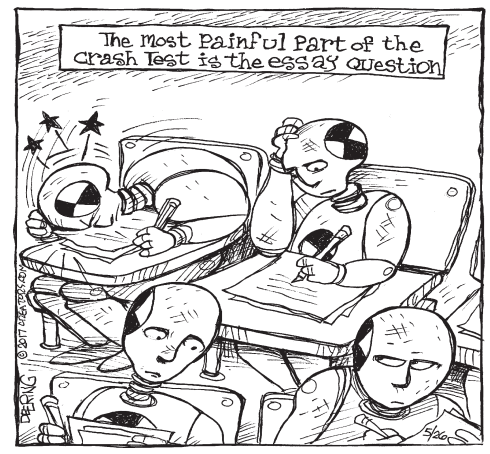

You're in the driver's seat this year, but not all of time -- which is good, because sometimes it's more fun when you don't know exactly where things are going. June brings commitment and stability, while August is more about the freedom to pursue what you imagine. A unique partnership sets projects sailing in October. Aries and Aquarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 49, 3, 33, 28 and 16.
