THE ALL ABOUT THE BBQ ISSUE

ON THE WAY UP

Homeless youth attracted to the Westside

BY GREGORY ASCIUTTO
Special to the Daily Press

Gathered around a public bench in Venice Beach, three young men share a celebratory marijuana joint early one morning.

Cody, who has just turned 20, takes a long drag and passes the joint to his friend Squirrel.

"You want to know the meaning of life?" he asks.

"To live."

Homeless on the streets of Los Angeles for two months, Cody says that for the first time in his life, he actually feels alive.

According to the 2011 Greater Los Angeles Homeless Count Report, nearly 4,000 homeless youth without families currently live in Los Angeles County.

Though the number accounts for unaccompanied minors, individuals between the ages of 18 and 25 make up the bulk of the homeless youth population.

Like Cody, many homeless young adults in Los Angeles end up on the city's Westside.

"A lot of the kids, especially down at the beaches, they just like the freedom," said Kenan Henderson of the Hope for Homeless Youth program. "They'll leave some small town in Iowa and they want to just come out to the West Coast and see what it's like out here."

Such travelers account for most of the region's homeless youth population.

"I just travel, I don't think about really what's going to happen tomorrow or what happened yesterday," said Squirrel, a 21-year-old from Alabama, who, like Cody, uses a nickname to prevent his family from tracking him on the streets.

"I'm going with what's going now, I could be here right now and in two days ... I could be in Portland, Ore.," he said.

Officer Robert Martinez of the Santa Monica Police Department's Homeless Liaison Program said traveling youth rarely stay in Westside cities for extended time periods.

"They'll come in, they'll get what they need, whether it's a needle exchange, to see the doctor ... then they'll move on to the next

Driving season begins, as does griping about gas

JONATHAN FAHEY
AP Energy Writer

NEW YORK It's Memorial Day and our national obsession with the price of gasoline is in focus once again.

We'll spend a little less at the pump than a few weeks ago, but that won't stop us from muttering to ourselves, griping to friends and pointing fingers in many directions.

Our rants about gasoline and the oil industry may not always be based on facts, but one thing is undeniable: Americans are obsessed with the price of gasoline. More than any other good or service we buy.

In the language of economists, the price of gasoline is "salient." That means it sticks in our brains. Here's why:

We're reminded of the price every time we pass a gas station and see those huge, numbered signs. We buy gas every week, unlike bills we pay monthly or a couple times a year. Milk is $4 a gallon, but we buy only one. When we fill up with gas, we spend $50 or more.

And the biggest frustration, which comes into focus as the numbers spin ever higher at the pump: There is no alternative.

"The oil companies have cornered the market and they are squeezing us for everything we have," says Bob Simpson, 62, of Lodi, N.J., who pays close to $60 to fill up his Ford Escape.

Cheap gas makes the wide open spaces of America seem full of possibility and adventure. When it's expensive, we think twice before setting out.

"Driving is a symbol of freedom in the U.S.," says Shanjun Li, an economist who studies consumer behavior at Cornell University's Dyson School of Applied Economics.

At a nationwide average Friday of $3.67 per gallon, gasoline is far cheaper in the U.S. than much of the rest of the world, thanks to relatively low taxes. In Japan, gas costs more than $7 a gallon; in Britain, nearly $9. Yet Americans consider cheap gas a birthright, so it's a shock when factors beyond our control drive up the price.

People understand why a big TV costs more than a small one, or why tickets to

DAVID GERMAIN
AP Movie Writer

LOS ANGELES The suits have knocked off the superheroes at the box office.

Will Smith and Tommy Lee Jones’ sequel “Men in Black 3” debuted as the No. 1 movie over Memorial Day weekend with $55 million domestically from Friday to Sunday.

That bumps Disney’s “The Avengers” into second-place after three blockbuster weekends on top for the superhero sensation. “The Avengers” took in $37 million over the three days to push its domestic total to $514 million and become only the fourth movie ever to top half a billion dollars.

Distributor Sony estimates that by the end of the four-day holiday weekend Monday, “Men in Black 3” will have pulled in $70 million domestically and $202 million worldwide.

Universal’s “Battleship” was No. 3 in its second weekend with $10.8 million, raising its domestic earnings to $44.3 million. Paramount’s comedy “The Dictator” took in $9.6 million to finish fourth in its second weekend and lift its total to $41.5 million.

The Warner Bros. horror tale “Chernobyl Diaries” opened at No. 5 with $8 million.

“Men in Black 3” launched with a bit more cash than its two predecessors, which both had opening weekends of just above $50 million.

But the original “Men in Black” debuted in 1997 and “Men in Black II” premiered in 2002, when admission prices were much lower than today’s. That means “Men in Black 3” sold fewer tickets than the previous installments.

“Men in Black 3” reunites Smith’s Agent J and Jones’ Agent K as they battle a new alien menace that travels four decades back in time to do away with the younger Agent K (Josh Brolin).

Among the movie’s box-office highlights overseas were debuts of $19.5 million in China, $18.9 million in Russia, $8.5 million in South Korea and $8 million in Japan.

Distributor Disney estimates that “The Avengers” will take in $47.1 million for the four-day holiday weekend, lifting the film’s domestic total to $523.8 million. That will put “The Avengers” within $10 million of “The Dark Knight,” the No. 3 movie on the all-time revenue chart with $533.3 million domestically.

“The Avengers” will pass “The Dark

STATESIDE: Sgt. Robert Jennings Spangle (left) speaks about his experiences serving two tours in the Marines.

Malibu vets readjust to life back home

BY ED KAMEN
Special to the Daily Press

MALIBU Fallen angels are what Marines call those who do not return from battle.

“The last full measure of devotion” is how Lincoln put it. It’s also the dread of every family with a son or daughter on the battlefield.

For the Malibu families of Marines Robert Jennings Spangle and Nathan Ball, who each recently returned safely after two tours of duty in Afghanistan, the uncertainty of war was never more fully realized than when they learned their sons were being sent into the heart of the conflict.

The occasional e-mails and phone calls home often didn’t allay their fears. As Mark Ball, Nathan’s father, recalled: “It’s just day-to-day terror.”

The two Malibu High School grads both enlisted in the Marines after finishing school — Spangle was one year ahead of Ball — and, although they wound up training in different branches of the Marines, their wartime experiences took very similar paths. Ball was recruited into the specialized Marine Expeditionary Force, which was responsible for reconnaissance, while Spangle joined the infantry. Yet both young men found themselves in Helmand Province — the eye of the storm in the war against the Taliban — for both of their seven-month deployments. In fact, for nearly two full years one or the other was there.

“That’s where we centralized our focus on rooting out the Taliban,” Ball, 21, said.

And there was another similarity — they each had their share of close calls.

Second Cpl. Spangle, 22, was in a town called Nawzad, the same town Ball would find himself in less than a year later, doing recon. “It was like a mud and brick Stalingrad,” Spangle said.

While checking out a rooftop, he suddenly felt “like someone was breaking my ribs.” He’d been shot in the side by a sniper from more than 200 meters away.

“He (the sniper) definitely knew what he was doing,” Spangle said, whose body armor protected him. “I had a good reaction, I just tucked and rolled. There was a hole near where I was standing and I just ducked into that. I was out there (on patrol) for three days so I didn’t have time to check myself out. I was like, ‘I’m not bleeding, that’s good.’”

Lance Cpl. Ball, meanwhile, had a startling introduction to the war on his very first patrol riding a military vehicle. An IED, or improvised explosive device, planted along the road his truck was traveling exploded, blowing up the front end of the truck.

“The guy driving the truck was saying this area’s been quiet and this should be easy for you guys. Then 15 seconds later, boom! All I remember was seeing blackness and stars. It took me a couple of minutes to realize where I was,” Ball said. “You train for everything, but it wasn’t what I expected just starting out. But it was good that it

One to learn from

Editor:

I would like to express a deep emotional pain and a disappointment beyond words in learning that the Santa Monica Police Department is responsible for the killing of the young, gorgeous mountain lion female that was found wandering around Downtown Santa Monica last Tuesday. ("Cops to review mountain lion shooting, death," May 24)

After what happened I seriously question the ability of the SMPD to protect its human citizens, if the same department showed its inability to catch and release a vulnerable defenseless cat without victims and shooting guns.

I hope that the SMPD will work as soon as possible on re-training its officers to make them really capable to serve and protect everybody, including the ones in real need, who are often the weakest ones, and the loneliest ones, just like that big female cat.

Santa Monica is a city named after a woman of great heart and wisdom and it is not surprising that its people dearly treasure nature, animals and evolution. I would love to see that the SMPD is on the same page.

I will follow the investigation of this heartbreaking accident looking for justice and hopeful developments that will make us – as a community – able to avoid such shameful mistakes in the future.

With respect and regards I wish the SMPD and the Animal Control Unit the best of luck for their future work in which I want to keep trusting.

Not again

Editor:

I can't believe the city of Santa Monica is actually giving Oscar de la Torre another chance to try and clean up and fix the longtime financial problems he has created at his youth center ("City Hall may stop funding PYFC," May 19). What about the missing money? Why isn't the city investigating him for corruption?

Working out the problems

IT SEEMS THAT AT LEAST A COUPLE of fairly large, privately-owned fitness organizations have found a great, free place to hold their exercise classes and boot camps — Palisades Park.

For example, Body Inspired Fitness by Angela Parker conducts three co-ed body fitness classes and/or boot camps in Palisades Park on three weekday mornings during the spring/summer seasons, according to its website.

As many as 30 clients pay Parker up to $275 each for class sessions which are held in six week increments. Privately-owned exercise organizations must purchase a business license to do business in Santa Monica, but do not pay any other charges or fees for the use of public park land.

Vending in the parks is prohibited, but it only applies to direct payment for goods and services in the parks themselves. Memberships, class fees or pre-registration charges for training and exercise activities are collected off premises, therefore, not covered by any existing municipal ordinance.

Residents complain the classes "take over" and prevent people from using the park and City Hall isn't even recouping expense in maintaining and restoring the grounds once these conditioning classes are through.

There are a couple of ways to handle the problem. Revise the municipal code to expand the vending prohibition to include payments for goods and services made outside the parks as well as in the parks.

However, I think it would be more desirable to come up with a system to regulate the size and frequency of exercise and boot camps and develop a fee structure to be paid by private trainers or fitness organizations for the use of municipal recreational facilities. Licenses and filming fees are collected from production companies who film in the city, so why not implement a similar system for privately-run fitness classes and boot camps?

The director of Community and Cultural Services, Karen Ginsberg, e-mailed this to me:

"On April 10, 2012 the City Council directed staff to consider options for regulating non-city sponsored fitness classes in parks and at the beach in order to address the issues that you have raised in your e-mail as well as other concerns that community members have raised."

She said that staff will return later in the year "with options for regulating non-city sponsored fitness classes." Sounds like she's on the right track.

I've been a member of private and celebrity gyms over the years. Some require personal trainers and their clients to join the gym or pay weekly, monthly or per-session fees for using the facilities. Some gyms just charge personal trainers an hourly fee — typically $25 or more per session to train clients.

Here, it's obvious that some trainers are using Palisades Park and other public space because it's "free" and they can avoid the cost of using private gyms.

City Hall should also require those conducting exercise services on public property to be certified by the National Exercise and Sports Trainers Association or other accredited personal fitness trainer program and provide proof of insurance.

Getting people in shape and healthy while letting those who are profiting by it pay for the use of city resources seems like a fair situation to me.

MONSTER ON OUR DOORSTEP?

It's been in the works for three years; another large, mixed-use development proposed for West Los Angeles near Santa Monica's eastern border may be closer to breaking ground. The project combines 512,870 square feet of residential housing (538 units) with 260,800 square feet of retail space and parking for 2,090 cars. The developer is Casden West L.A., LLC. Currently the site is a cement plant near the corner of Pico and Sepulveda boulevards.

Casden's massive project — with components as high as 200 feet or 17 floors — is near Expo Light Rail stops and next to Interstate 405. The developer is claiming the project "will provide people a place to live without daily dependence on a car," reports L.A. Curbed. Right. How many parking spots?

But, the big question is, after complaining about the Hines Bergamot Village Transit Center in Santa Monica and, now dead, Olympic/Bundy Medical Center in West L.A., where is all the neighborhood opposition to this mega-project? Getting organized, I hope.

NATIVITY SCENES IN LIMBO

Last Tuesday night, the City Council listened to public comment about nativity dioramas and other unattended holiday displays in Palisades Park. Because of the late hour, they deterred taking action until a future meeting — most likely June 12.

Allowing them will only trigger complaints that displays promoting religion have no place on public property. Others will claim that they're "OK," good for tourism and a valued tradition. Arguments about what's fitting and appropriate will never be resolved, which is why I say an outright ban on all unattended displays in our parks is the only rational way to end this controversy.

PAYING RESPECT

If you've finished your morning coffee and are looking for something to do, I suggest marching over to Woodlawn Cemetery at the corner of Pico Boulevard and 14th Street for the 74th annual Memorial Day Observance. It's a great way to pay respect and honor the brave men and women in uniform who've made the ultimate sacrifice for our freedom.

This free event will feature speeches on our city's history, lots of patriotic songs and music plus a flyover by a World War II vintage DC-3 and maybe even a surprise or two. The observance begins at 11 a.m. Free parking and shuttle service is available at Santa Monica College across Pico.

Forecasters expect 9 to 15 storms this hurricane season

JENNIFER KAY
Associated Press

MIAMI U.S. forecasters predicted Thursday that this year's Atlantic hurricane season would produce a normal number of about nine to 15 tropical storms, with as many as four to eight of those becoming hurricanes.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration released its initial outlook for the six-month storm season that officially begins June 1. One to three storms could become major hurricanes with top winds of 111 mph (178 kph) or higher.

Though this season isn't expected to be as busy as last year's above-average season, federal officials warned coastal residents to start stocking up on hurricane supplies and forming evacuation plans anyway.

"That's still a lot of activity. So just because we're predicting a near normal season doesn't mean anybody's off the hook at all," said Gerry Bell, the lead seasonal forecaster at NOAA's Climate Prediction Center.

Atmospheric and marine conditions indicating a high-activity era that began in 1995 for Atlantic hurricanes continue, Bell said.

However, the weather phenomenon known as El Nino, which warms Pacific waters near the equator and increases wind shear over the Atlantic, may develop by the late summer or early fall and help suppress storm development.

"Our range (of expected storms) is a bit wider this year because of this inherent uncertainty right now based on the best guidance we have as to whether El Nino will form or not," Bell said.

This season got an early start when Tropical Storm Alberto formed Saturday off the coast of South Carolina. Alberto dissipated Tuesday over the Atlantic.

Alberto was unusual for being a small storm that formed in a small area favorable for storm development, but the weather conditions as spring transitions into summer sometimes produce tropical systems, said Bill Read, director of the National Hurricane Center.

Forecasters name tropical storms when their top winds reach 39 mph; hurricanes have maximum winds of at least 74 mph. The next named storm will be named Beryl.

Senators seek to name bison 'national mammal'

MATTHEW BROWN
Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. Western lawmakers want to elevate the Plains bison to a status similar to that of the iconic bald eagle with legislation to declare the burly beasts America's "national mammal."

Bison advocates launched a "vote bison" public relations campaign Friday to coincide with the bill.

The National Bison Legacy Act introduced in the Senate is backed by lawmakers from Wyoming, Colorado, Nebraska, Kansas, New Mexico, North Dakota, South Dakota and Rhode Island.

The largely symbolic measure would provide no added protections for the estimated 20,000 wild bison in North America. And the bald eagle would still hold a somewhat loftier role as the national emblem, as declared by the Second Continental Congress in 1782.

But supporters said the bison legacy bill would afford overdue recognition to a species that has sweeping cultural and ecological significance. Bison — North America's largest land animal — already appear on two state flags and the official seal of the U.S. Department of Interior.

"The North American bison is an enduring symbol of America, its people and a way of life," said Wyoming Republican Sen. Mike Enzi, chief sponsor of the bill along with South Dakota Democratic Sen. Tim Johnson.

Tens of millions of bison, also known as buffalo, once roamed most of North America. They were heavily relied on by many American Indian tribes who harvested the animals for food and materials to make clothing and shelter.

Overhunting reduced the population to about 1,000 animals by the turn of the 20th century.

That's when conservationists, including President Theodore Roosevelt, intervened to save the species from extinction.

The Q Line

Safe in the water

A recent report card released by nonprofit Heal the Bay revealed that local beaches enjoy good water quality after years of being considered some of the most polluted waters in the state.

So, this week's Q-Line question asks:
Do you feel safe going for a swim or does the threat of being exposed to polluted water keep you from taking a dip?

SAVED: Without the 1972 ban on DDT and ensuing protections, the bald eagle (left) and peregrine falcon (right), let alone dozens of other bird species, would likely be gone now in the continental U.S.

Doing away with DDT

Dear EarthTalk:

I understand there is good news about the recovery of bird species like the Peregrine Falcon, Bald Eagle and others owed to the 1972 ban on DDT. Can you explain?

– Mildred Eastover
Bath, Maine

RACHEL CARSON'S SEMINAL 1962 book, "Silent Spring," told the real-life story of how bird populations across the country were suffering as a result of the widespread application of the synthetic pesticide DDT (dichlorodiphenyltrichloroethane), which was being used widely to control mosquitoes and others insects. Carson reported that birds ingesting DDT tended to lay thin-shelled eggs which would in turn break prematurely in the nest, resulting in marked population declines. The problem drove bald eagles, our national symbol, not to mention peregrine falcons and other bird populations, to the brink of extinction, with populations plummeting more than 80 percent.

Luckily for the birds, "Silent Spring" caused a stir, and many credit it with launching the modern environmental movement. Indeed, one of the world's leading environmental non-profits, the Environmental Defense Fund (EDF), initially formed in 1967 in reaction to the DDT problem. The group's first order of business included filing lawsuits in New York, Michigan, Wisconsin and Washington DC to force a ban on DDT. EDF enlisted the help of dozens of scientific experts-ornithologists, ecologists, toxicologists, carcinogenesis experts, and insect control specialists-to testify at multi-month hearings to prove its point in regard to the dangers of DDT. In 1972 environmentalists' prayers were answered-and their hard work vindicated-with the federal government finally banning DDT.

But with lots of the pesticide already dispersed through ecosystems far and wide, not to mention myriad other threats to bird habitats and the environment in general, no one could be sure whether populations of eagles, falcons and other predatory and fish-eating birds would come back from the brink. While the federal Endangered Species Act went a long way to protect these at-risk species and some of their habitat, non-profits also played a key role in helping specific species recover. To wit, the Peregrine Fund was founded in 1970 by a leading Cornell ornithologist to help nurse peregrine falcon populations hit hard by DDT back to their once abundant numbers. Researchers with the group pioneered methods of breeding peregrines in captivity and releasing them into the wild; such techniques have since been adopted widely by biologists trying to bring other wildlife species back from the brink of extinction. Thanks to a combination of factors and the hard work of bird lovers and scientists, peregrine falcons are once again common across the U.S., graduating off the national endangered species list as of 1999.

The bald eagle's recovery is perhaps the best known example of how our environmental laws worked to restore not just a resource but our very national symbol. In the mid-1960s fewer than 500 nesting pairs of bald eagles existed in the continental U.S.; today, thanks to the DDT ban and other conservation efforts, some 10,000 pairs of bald eagles inhabit the Lower 48-that's a 20-fold population increase in just four decades! In 2007 the federal government removed the bald eagle from the Endangered Species List. Without the 1972 ban on DDT and ensuing protections, the bald eagle, let alone dozens of other bird species, would likely be gone now in the continental U.S. And without the song of the birds, the spring would be a very silent time indeed.

Scientist: Evolution debate will soon come to an end

FRANK ELTMAN
Associated Press

NEW YORK Richard Leakey predicts skepticism over evolution will soon be history.

Not that the avowed atheist has any doubts himself.

Sometime in the next 15 to 30 years, the Kenyan-born paleoanthropologist expects scientific discoveries will have accelerated to the point that "even the skeptics can accept it."

"If you get to the stage where you can persuade people on the evidence, that it's solid, that we are all African, that color is superficial, that stages of development of culture are all interactive," Leakey says, "then I think we have a chance of a world that will respond better to global challenges."

Leakey, a professor at Stony Brook University on Long Island, recently spent several weeks in New York promoting the Turkana Basin Institute in Kenya. The institute, where Leakey spends most of his time, welcomes researchers and scientists from around the world dedicated to unearthing the origins of mankind in an area rich with fossils.

His friend, Paul Simon, performed at a May 2 fundraiser for the institute in Manhattan that collected more than $2 million. A National Geographic documentary on his work at Turkana aired this month on public television.

Now 67, Leakey is the son of the late Louis and Mary Leakey and conducts research with his wife, Meave, and daughter, Louise. The family claims to have unearthed "much of the existing fossil evidence for human evolution."

On the eve of his return to Africa earlier this week, Leakey spoke to The Associated Press in New York City about the past and the future.

"If you look back, the thing that strikes you, if you've got any sensitivity, is that extinction is the most common phenomena," Leakey says. "Extinction is always driven by environmental change. Environmental change is always driven by climate change. Man accelerated, if not created, planet change phenomena; I think we have to recognize that the future is by no means a very rosy one."

Any hope for mankind's future, he insists, rests on accepting existing scientific evidence of its past.

"If we're spreading out across the world from centers like Europe and America that evolution is nonsense and science is nonsense, how do you combat new pathogens, how do you combat new strains of disease that are evolving in the environment?" he asked.

"If you don't like the word evolution, I don't care what you call it, but life has changed. You can lay out all the fossils that have been collected and establish lineages that even a fool could work up. So the question is why, how does this happen? It's not covered by Genesis. There's no explanation for this change going back 500 million years in any book I've read from the lips of any God."

Leakey insists he has no animosity toward religion.

"If you tell me, well, people really need a faith ... I understand that," he said.

"I see no reason why you shouldn't go through your life thinking if you're a good citizen, you'll get a better future in the afterlife ...."

Leakey began his work searching for fossils in the mid-1960s. His team unearthed a nearly complete 1.6-million-year-old skeleton in 1984 that became known as "Turkana Boy," the first known early human with long legs, short arms and a tall stature.

In the late 1980s, Leakey began a career in government service in Kenya, heading the Kenya Wildlife Service. He led the quest to protect elephants from poachers who were killing the animals at an alarming rate in order to harvest their valuable ivory tusks. He gathered 12 tons of confiscated ivory in Nairobi National Park and set it afire in a 1989 demonstration that attracted worldwide headlines.

In 1993, Leakey crashed a small propeller-driven plane; his lower legs were later amputated and he now gets around on artificial limbs. There were suspicions the plane had been sabotaged by his political enemies, but it was never proven.

About a decade ago, he visited Stony Brook University on eastern Long Island, a part of the State University of New York, as a guest lecturer. Then-President Shirley Strum Kenny began lobbying Leakey to join the faculty. It was a process that took about two years; he relented after returning to the campus to accept an honorary degree.

Kenny convinced him that he could remain in Kenya most of the time, where Stony Brook anthropology students could visit and learn about his work. And the college founded in 1957 would benefit from the gravitas of such a noted professor on its faculty.

"It was much easier to work with a new university that didn't have a 200-year-old image where it was so set in its ways like some of the Ivy League schools that you couldn't really change what they did and what they thought," he said.

Earlier this month, Paul Simon performed at a benefit dinner for the Turkana Basin Institute. IMAX CEO Rich Gelfond and his wife, Peggy Bonapace Gelfond, and billionaire hedge fund investor Jim Simons and his wife, Marilyn, were among those attending the exclusive show in Manhattan's Chelsea neighborhood.

Simon agreed to allow his music to be performed on the National Geographic documentary airing on PBS and donated an autographed guitar at the fundraiser that sold for nearly $20,000.

Leakey, who clearly cherishes investigating the past, is less optimistic about the future.

"We may be on the cusp of some very real disasters that have nothing to do with whether the elephant survives, or a cheetah survives, but if we survive."

Expo Light Rail Line Project: Construction

Please note the following street closures and after hours work: There will be night work and closure of 17th Street and Colorado Avenue from 9 p.m. – 6 a.m. for the next two weeks. 17th Street will be closed to through traffic. Northbound traffic will be detoured at Olympic Boulevard; southbound traffic will be detoured at Broadway; westbound traffic will be detoured at 20th Street; and eastbound traffic will be detoured at 14th Street. Work crews will be relocating an existing sanitary sewer line currently located under Colorado Avenue. Sanitary sewer relocation activities will include excavating approximately 1,200 linear feet along the parking lane on the south side of Colorado Avenue and some areas of the sidewalk to install new manholes and pipes. Upon completion of the excavation and installation of the new manholes and pipes, the street and sidewalk will be restored. In addition, for the week of May 28, 2012, work crews will be conducting potholing activities necessary to locate and identify existing underground utilities on Stewart Street south of Olympic Boulevard and on 26th Street south of Olympic Boulevard. Stewart Street will remain open to through traffic, however, both northbound and southbound traffic lanes will be impacted by these activities during non-peak hours. 26th Street will remain open to through traffic, however, northbound traffic lanes will be impacted by these activities during non-peak hours. Follow us on Twitter @EXPOinSM. For more information about the Expo Line project, visit BuildExpo.org or call (213) 922-EXPO (3976).

Parking Structure No. 6: Closed for construction through 2013

Fencing and scaffolding work will take place in the alley behind the parking structure (Second Court), with partial alley closures taking place through Nov. 30, 2012. All work will take place Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. – 5 p.m. For more information about the Parking Structure 6 project, visit www.SMConstructs.org or call (310) 458-2205.

Water Main Replacement at Third Court

The water main at Third Court between Broadway and Santa Monica Boulevard is undergoing removal and replacement. Please be advised that two-way traffic will be allowed on each side of the construction work zone for local access only. There will possible alley closures from Arizona Avenue to Santa Monica Boulevard between 8 a.m. –5 p.m., through June 2012. Detour Info: During alley closures two-way traffic will be allowed on either side of the construction work zone for local traffic only. No deliveries will be allowed during construction hours.

Advanced Traffic Management Systems Project (Phase 3 & 4)

Phase 3 construction will install pull boxes on Pico Boulevard from Lincoln Boulevard to the east city limit. Phase 4 construction will make various traffic signal modifications on Olympic Boulevard between Lincoln Boulevard and 26th Street. All work will take place between the hours of 8 a.m. – 6 p.m. Impacts to traffic should be minimal but partial and full lane closures may be necessary at times. Questions may be directed to the project hotline at (866) 755-7679. For more info, go to: www.SMConstructs.org.

Ocean Park Boulevard Complete Green Street Project

There will be no left turn on Lincoln Boulevard off of Ocean Park Boulevard. Construction will take place Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., on Ocean Park Boulevard, between Neilson Way and Lincoln Boulevard. Traffic control will be in place during construction and will maintain one lane of traffic in each direction. There will be lane closures from Nielson Way to Lincoln Boulevard. Please use alternate routes whenever possible. For more info, go to: www.SMConstructs.org.

Main Street Lighting Conversion Project

Work will take place to convert the existing streetlights on Main Street between Pico Boulevard and Colorado Avenue from a series circuit to a multiple circuit. The work will also include concrete work, conduit installation, new pull boxes in the sidewalk, and some jackhammering in various locations along this corridor. The estimated project duration is two weeks. Impacts to traffic should be minimal but partial or full lane closures may be necessary. For more information, contact Hany Demitri (310) 458-2201 ext. 5385.-- community," he said.

HOMELESS

Travelers, however, are not the Westside's only homeless youth population.

"There are some young kids that are homeless and don't travel, they just stay there," said Dalton Mock, a 19-year-old currently living on the streets of Santa Monica.

These individuals, called street kids by travelers, are chronically homeless youth who are permanently fixed in one location.

"Those are the people that I feel need more help," said Mock. "Whenever they're on the streets and not moving, they're usually subjected to some kind of drug, like crack, coke [or] meth."

Despite the population's internal classifications, homeless youth organizations say that all young adults eventually face the same problems on the streets.

"You'll start seeing some symptoms of mental illness," said Katie Sue of Night Light, a youth homeless program at OPCC in Santa Monica. "Other times you'll see a lot of drug use, a lot of alcohol use."

At the Teen Project in Venice, Executive Director Jeff Williams says drug abuse is one of the biggest issues facing youth on the streets.

"75 percent of [these] youth are on drugs," he said. "Heroin is rearing its ugly head again."

Mock said homeless youth find it hard to maintain cleanliness and hygiene while living outdoors.

"I've had a staph infection," he said.

"I was up in Northern California this winter on a weed mountain, trimming weed and making hash ... not taking showers and my hands got infected."

Throughout the Westside, dozens of agencies are fully committed to fighting these problems and helping homeless youth get their lives back on track.

At Night Light, the staff shapes its daily schedule around the specific needs of its clients.

"Sometimes that means driving them from place to place to make an appointment, or sometimes that means connecting them with the right resources to get them where they need to be," said Sue.

"It's literally walking them through each and every step to get them off the streets."

Hope for Homeless Youth, a Christian organization, uses a religious approach to combat youth homelessness.

"What we do basically is go out ... and meet their physical needs as well as spiritual needs," said Henderson. "A lot of the time we'll share a testimony of what somebody has done or [what] God has done in our lives ... then we'll give out food and talk to them."

Though such organizations try to build trusting relationships with their clients, many have trouble getting youth to respond to the outreach.

"One of the major problems we had was just dealing with authority," Henderson said about a former Hope for Homeless Youth program that housed youth at the Los Angeles Dream Center.

"When you would try to set up boundaries, rules, a lot of the time they didn't want to listen and would just leave."

According to Sue, excessive restrictions and authority will repel youth and make them resist aid.

"That's exactly what young people are trying to get away from ... they're trying to break out of rules and they're trying to break out of someone telling them they have to do things a certain way," she said.

"If they break one of those rules ... they get kicked out and that's it for them in terms of trying to get off the street."

Common Ground, a Santa Monica agency that specializes in HIV treatment, has recently faced a different problem with its homeless youth clientele.

Currently in the process of relocating, Common Ground previously housed a youth drop-in center for its homeless clients.

Former neighbors have said that while the service was valuable to the community, the program caused problems for surrounding businesses.

"We would get families shopping in our store and they wouldn't want to come anymore because of that," said one store manager who wished to remain anonymous.

John Garcia, an employee of another former neighboring business, said that the transient youth population "would do some shoplifting," but since Common Ground has moved, he has seen fewer incidents.

According to Interim Executive Director Jeff Goodman, Common Ground's new neighbors voiced concerns that the drop-in center would bring similar problems to the Sunset Park community.

"Arguably, the neighborhood residents really did not want this program in their neighborhood," he said.

In April, Goodman announced that the youth drop-in center would be relocating to a partnering agency in Venice.

According to the homeless youth of the Westside, they are not offended by such accusations of criminal behavior or stereotypes that portray them as social nuisances.

"I feel like in a way though, that I can relate to these people out here, that when they see us, that when they see me hold a sign for them, they don't even look at me," said Squirrel.

"I understand that people look down on homeless people and think about them like 'Can't you do something better with your life?'" said Mock. "I just try to be a better person myself and try not to judge them."

Despite the social pressure upon them to find jobs and homes, the youth say they have no reason to leave the streets anytime soon.

"What I try to do when I'm on the road is I try not to want for anything, I only take what I need," said Squirrel. "For some reason, when I do that, when I don't want and I just chill and take everything for what it is, everything that I need presents itself right in front of me."

Knight" in the coming week, leaving only two movies above it: "Avatar" at $760.5 million and "Titanic" at $658.5 million.

With $26.3 million overseas, "The Avengers" raised its international total to $781.6 million, and its worldwide revenues to just under $1.3 billion. "The Avengers" will soon overtake "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 2" at $1.33 billion to become the No. 3 film on the global revenue list, again behind "Avatar" at $2.8 billion and "Titanic" at $2.2 billion.

Overall domestic receipts for the four-day Memorial Day weekend will come in well behind last year's record of $276 million. Paul Dergarabedian, an analyst for box-office tracker Hollywood.com, estimated that four-day revenues this time will total $195 million to $200 million, about 30 percent below Memorial Day weekend a year ago, when "The Hangover Part II" delivered a $100 million-plus debut.

Hollywood remains on a record pace this year, with domestic revenue so far at $4.24 billion, up 12.5 percent over 2011 receipts, according to Hollywood.com.

But "The Avengers" and now "Men in Black 3" have been the only notable successes for the summer season so far, with big releases such as "Dark Shadows" and "Battleship" fizzling on the domestic front.

"We really need to get going if we don't want to have play catch-up every weekend through the summer," Dergarabedian said. "Some of these summer movies are just not doing the business people had hoped for in North America."

happened because I really knew I was in (the war) now."

Despite the constant danger of firefights, snipers and mortars — "I had tons of close calls," said Spangle — both men agree it was the IEDs that posed the greatest threat to their safety.

"They (Taliban) can literally put them anywhere," said Spangle. "Plastic bottles, tubes, even tree trunks. In the walls. And they come in a bunch of terrible flavors. It was a daily threat."

Both men had breaks stateside before their second deployments and, strangely enough, both men were anxious to get back.

"Being back in the States, knowing you're going to have to go back, you just want to get it over with as soon as possible," Ball said. Unfortunately for Ball, his second deployment was as difficult and unpleasant as the first. "I got there in the summer (of 2011), when the Taliban really picks up the offensive. It got pretty bad over the summer.

"The biggest issue for us was figuring out who were civilians and who were Taliban."

He also discovered that one of the areas his battalion had fought so hard to secure his first time there had been retaken by the Taliban.

Spangle, however, noticed a definite change between his two deployments, especially in the quality of life for the locals, although clashes with the Taliban were just as frequent as before.

"Our success and failure is defined by how the population reacts to our presence," he said. "I actually got to see the progress being made. In areas that had been unattainable to us, there were roads, schools, gas stations, a radio station. When I first got there, there was one paved road in the whole country. Now, there are 26 paved roads."

"It's something, I think, that is very hard for most Americans to appreciate, not being there and the way some of it is reported. There definitely was progress."

After two deployments, both men returned home to their families. And safety.

"Some things come back and bother you," said Spangle, who saw more than his share of fallen angels, as did Ball. "But that's not strange. Love them or hate them, the guys you work with are your best friends. It's a lot closer than most American families in many ways. It can be traumatizing, but that's what we trained for."

As for the future, both men are on "inactive reserve" for a few years before their commitment to the Marines and the country is completed. In the meantime, they're going to do what most high school graduates do — go to college.

"I have a month left to finish my commitment (to the Marine Corps)," said Ball. "Then I'm going to go to Moorpark (College) in the fall." He plans to follow in his father's footsteps in the insurance business.

Spangle is already attending Otis College of Art and Design, where he plans to follow a career in fashion design.

As grueling and dangerous as their time in Afghanistan was, neither man has any regrets.

"There were a billion reasons why (I enlisted)" said Spangle. "I probably wouldn't have joined if Sept. 11 hadn't happened. That was the jumping off point. I felt like it was my civic duty to do something about it."

a playoff game are more expensive than a regular season game. But it's harder to appreciate why a local gas station charges more because of high oil demand in China or a remark by an official in Iran. It must be, we reason, that someone is taking advantage of us.

It's not the case, of course: The market for oil and gasoline is global, so rising demand anywhere can push up prices everywhere. And world oil demand is forecast to rise to a record this year.

Also, oil and gasoline are priced on financial exchanges, not by oil companies. Investors can buy oil and gasoline futures contracts — and push up prices — if they fear supplies could be disrupted in the future. But they also can bet that prices will go down.

When President Barack Obama promised stricter oversight of oil markets and a crackdown on "speculators" last month, he stopped short of saying market manipulation was responsible for the current high prices.

Still, the market forces just don't feel right. "People like the idea of a free-market economy but they don't like feeling abused. The fluctuations in the gas prices make people believe this is not an outcome of a free market," says Daniel Airely, a professor of Behavioral Economics at Duke University and author of the book "Predictably Irrational."

Of course, dramatic price rises are common to many markets. The difference with gasoline, and a big part of the reason we are obsessed, is that people who need to get to work or want to visit family may have no choice but to drive.

When broccoli is expensive, we can buy asparagus instead. If flights to Paris are expensive in July, we can wait until November. Or visit Seattle instead.

"We are powerless," says Dave Bartiromo, 39, an internet marketing specialist from Wadsworth, Ohio. "I can get by just fine without orange juice if it's expensive. Gas is my only option."

U.S. motorists spend far more than any other country at the pump — $470 billion last year. A typical family spends 8 percent of its household income on gasoline, according to the Oil Price Information Service.

That weighs on the mood of Americans. When prices are high, we worry about spending on other goods and our financial situation in general.

Still, the concern over gasoline prices "is completely out of proportion with the financial damage it does," says Amy Myers Jaffe, director of the Baker Institute Energy Forum at Rice University.

In a study of reactions people had in 2008 when gasoline spiked above $4 a gallon for the first time, the Baker Institute and the Brookings Institution found that people's happiness dropped as if their monthly income had fallen by $530, even though the damage was closer to $70 a month.

Beyond those price signs in our faces, the high cost and the lack of an alternative, there are subtle factors that make us grumble about gasoline, experts say.

We know that buying gasoline sends U.S. dollars abroad and supports countries whose interests don't always line up with those of the United States. We also know that burning gasoline pollutes the air and contributes to climate change.

We rarely consider that gasoline is amazing stuff. So packed with energy that one gallon can propel a family 30 miles down a highway in a 3,000 pound car at 70 miles an hour.

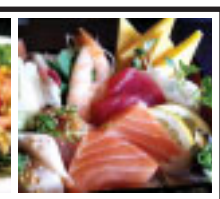

It is so useful, convenient and, yes, cheap that we haven't developed an economically viable alternative.

But we've come to expect it to do all that it does at a much lower price than we pay today. And when it costs more than we'd like, we just have to take it. We're stuck staring at a big bill with nothing to do but obsess over how much it costs, how much it will cost next time and who's to blame.

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

Heal the Bay

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card℠ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A-F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

HORSE RACING

No workouts for O'Neill's I'll Have Another for Belmont

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK Santa Monica-based trainer Doug O'Neill is taking an unconventional path to a Triple Crown bid by using a series of strong gallops rather than formal workouts to prepare I'll Have Another for the Belmont Stakes on June 9.

"There will be a lot of days when I'll Have Another, strictly galloping, will pass a lot of workers," O'Neill said Sunday morning after taking a red-eye flight from his West Coast base and being reunited with his Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner.

The last three Triple Crown champions, Secretariat (1973), Seattle Slew (1977) and Affirmed (1978), all drilled at least one mile in preparation for the 1 ?-mile "Test of the Champion." The Belmont is the longest of the Triple Crown races.

O'Neill said his plan has everything to do with the vigor the colt brings to his daily morning regimen.

"If anyone got a chance to see him, he stretches and puts a lot of effort into his morning gallops," he said.

I'll Have Another was shipped to Belmont Park the morning after little-known Mario Gutierrez, 25, he ran down Bodemeister by a neck in the Preakness on May 19. His trainer was encouraged by everything he observed.

"His appetite is strong, his stride is great and his coat is there," he said.

O'Neill added, "We have all the confidence in the world in I'll Have Another. As long as he stays healthy and injury-free, we think he'll be very tough."

His pre-race handling of the colt is likely to spark discussion and debate. Seattle Slew, for instance, was given three workouts to fortify him for the Belmont marathon. He went three furlongs in a sizzling 35 4/5 seconds the day before he beat Run Dusty Run by four lengths.

I'll Have Another appears to be well prepared for the challenge ahead from a freshness standpoint. Shin problems sidelined him after he ran sixth in the Hopeful last Sept. 5, ending his 2-year-old season with three starts. He was the fifth consecutive Derby winner to compete in two prep races, pulling an upset at 43-1 in the Robert Lewis on Feb. 4 before edging Creative Cause by a nose in the Santa Anita Derby on April 7.

O'Neill, 44, gained a major victory last Thursday when a hearing officer determined that he was not guilty of "milkshaking" in a case involving one of his horses, Argenta. The horse was found to have an elevated carbon dioxide level after finishing eighth in a race at Del Mar on Aug. 25, 2010. The California Horse Racing Board reduced his original suspension of 180 days to 45 days and a $15,000 fine. The remainder of the suspension will be stayed as long as he does not have any Class 1, 2 or 3 medical violations in the next 18 months.

We're pumped about Ross' Birthday!

Have a good one, chief!

Do some personal shopping, Leo

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ A vague sense of uncertainty could weave its way through your day. You do not need to let it impact your decisions or actions. Just recognize that the feeling exists. Tonight: Do for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Note the implicit risk of going after a certain wish. Unexpected hunches might impact your finances. Detach and you'll gain an unusual perspective about what might be going on. Tonight: Add fun to the mix.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Today you can be found doing mental gymnastics in order to understand others, their actions and how to choose an appropriate response. Do not forget to tap into your feelings; otherwise, it could seem as if you're playing an overly intellectual chess game. Tonight: Pick up the phone and have a long-overdue discussion.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ If you don't open up an issue for discussion, you might never get it resolved or get feedback. It is fine and good to work out a problem in your head, but you certainly will not get someone else's perspective that way. Tonight: Talk over dinner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Be smart when handling your finances. Do not get involved in someone else's theory or idea; instead, focus on your own. You could be evading an emotional or intellectual risk, but you might decide to jump in anyway. Tonight: Do some personal shopping.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ You might feel on top of the world, but you could be wearing rose-colored shades that are distorting reality. A child or loved one appears to be adjusting and changing in front of your very eyes. Tonight: Knowing the world is your oyster, what would you go for?

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ You are a skilled diplomat following your intuition, and if your instincts suggest you do little, do just that. A person or persons in your life have developed some very unpredictable behavior. Don't worry why -- just strap on your seatbelt and go for the excitement. Tonight: Get as much R and R as possible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ You probably are the organizer of the Memorial Day party or get-together. Curb your innate nervousness by spending some quality time with a special friend who always helps you relax. Tonight: Expect fireworks.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You feel as if you could take the world on. Wherever you go, you run into friends and enjoy yourself. Knowing how to handle this many people who all want your attention takes talent. Tonight: Enjoy the admiration.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Reach out for someone you have cared about for a long time. It is not important that you are with this person -- just enjoy catching up on his or her news. Detach from a situation that can easily trigger you. Pitch in, and help someone who feels overwhelmed. Tonight: Let the party go on.

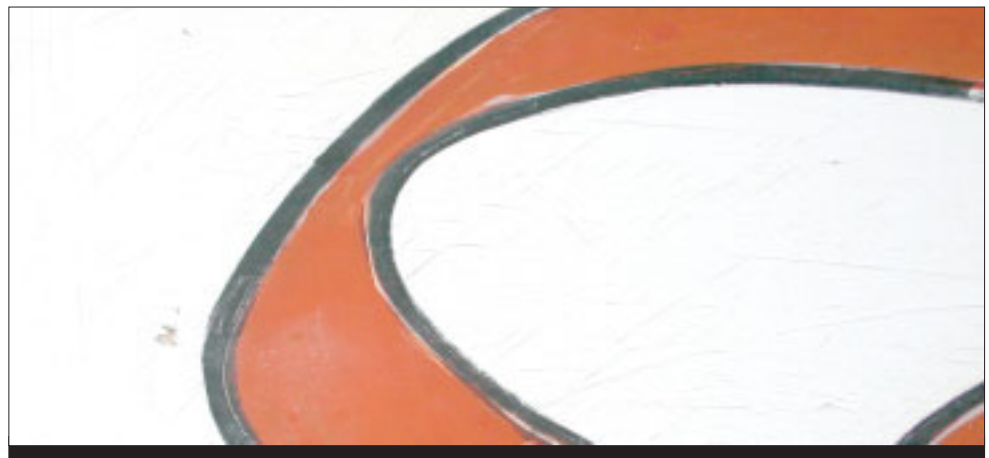

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Clearly someone demands all your attention, yet you seem to be able to accomplish a lot in a little amount of time. Use care when handling someone's money. You could drop some cash or misplace your wallet. Tonight: A long-overdue and caring talk.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ You see what you want to see, and nothing more. This trait of late might help or level out a difficult situation. Just the same, be more realistic. Bone up on your listening capacity. Tonight: Let someone else steal the limelight.

Happy birthday

This year you stay calm and centered. Look at the expectations you put on yourself; they might differ from what others expect from you. You demand the best from yourself, which is an excellent quality. On the other hand, if it drives you to judge yourself too harshly, it will be a problem. Remind yourself that you are only human. Many opportunities will be present from June on. Follow your instincts. If you are single, you meet someone quite important to your life history. If you are attached, you feel loved. VIRGO can be very irritating -- don't take it personally.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Fun for Everyone: The Ahlgrim Family Funeral Services in Palatine, Ill. (first reported in News of the Weird in 1991), continues to serve its community with the unique game room in the basement that it rents out for parties (except during actual funeral events). Even though the arcade games, shuffleboard and billiards are popular, the main basement attraction is still the nine-hole miniature golf course with its own "hazard" rules (e.g., two-stroke penalty for disturbing a "grave" on the course).

■ Dr. Oliver Di Pietro of Bay Harbor Islands, Fla., is a leading prescriber of the "K-E diet" that offers desperate people drastic short-term weight loss by threading a feeding tube through the nose to the stomach and dripping in a protein-fat solution, as clients' only "meals," for 10 straight days. "Within a few hours," Dr. Di Pietro told ABC's "Good Morning America" in April, "your hunger and appetite go away completely." Fat is burned through "ketosis," he said, and a loss of 10 to 20 pounds in 10 days is possible. Such short-term loss might be important, for example, for a woman prepping for her wedding day. One client said she doesn't have "all of the time on the planet" just to exercise, "so I came to the doctor."

TODAY IN HISTORY

1958 - Cuban Revolution: Fidel Castro's 26 July movement, heavily reinforced by Frank Pais Militia, overwhelm an army post in El Uvero.

1961 - Peter Benenson's article The Forgotten Prisoners is published in several internationally read newspapers. This will later be thought of as the founding of the human rights organization Amnesty International.
