NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Management at the Globe Hotel in Topsham, England, reported in February that a guest had dismantled and removed the entire shower unit out of his room. And Norwegian Arild Nicolaysen told reporters in February, after arriving at his mountain cabin for the weekend, that the in-ground swimming pool was missing (steel lining, plastic liner, filter, hoses and pipes). And in March, police in Lindale, Texas, arrested two men who they said had taken a house apart, brick by brick, board by board, over a three-month period and sold the materials for drugs.

■ Tennessee state Sen. John Ford testified in a juvenile court hearing in January that his child support payments should be reduced, in accordance with a state law that he had introduced on behalf of fathers with many children. Ford owns two homes, lives part-time in one with his ex-wife and their three children (with another on the way), and lives part-time in the other with an ex-girlfriend and their two children. Hence, he said, he should have lesser payments to a third woman, who is the mother of his 10-year-old daughter.

Land of the lost

Fabian Lewkowicz/Special to the Daily Press

More than 1,000 crosses line the sandy shore north of the Santa Monica Pier to represent American soldiers who have died in the Iraq War.

The ritual of placing the crosses on the shores of Santa Monica has been performed every Sunday since early 2004 by the local chapter of Veterans of Peace. The only difference is the number of crosses grows each week.

The project, dubbed "Arlington West," is highly visible to the thousands of people who frequent the pier and beach. Organizers say they plan to continue the memorial until the war is over.

Many who stop at the memorial look at the detailed list of soldiers killed, often times seeing their own hometown. They're given the opportunity to write a soldier's name on a slip of paper and place it on a cross, along with flowers, pictures or personal mementos.

A makeshift memorial of flowers surrounds a life-sized cardboard image of Santa Monica Police Officer Rick Crocker, who, as a Marine, died in combat in Iraq last week. The memorial has been placed in the lobby of the Public Safety Building, where the SMPD's headquarters are located.

DOWNTOWN — Supporters of world peace have a new resource center from which to draw information and inspiration in Santa Monica.

Soka Gakkai International USA, a Buddhist organization, is opening a "Culture of Peace" resource center next month at 606 Wilshire Blvd. The resource center is part of a United Nations-backed program to promote modes of behavior that reject violence by trying to tackle its root causes.

The 400-square-foot facility will house computers and reference materials related to peace. All of the center's resources will be available to the public, said Ian McIlraith, a spokesperson for SGI USA, which owns the building where the center is will be located.

Construction is being finished, and the public opening is slated for July. To honor the creation of the community resource, Ambassador Anwarul Chowdhury — who served as president of the U.N. Security Council while acting as Bangladesh's ambassador to the world body — addressed a crowd of 100 at the center on May 23.

"We should not separate ourselves from others," Chowdhury said. "The more we feel part of a 'global village,' the more we feel empowered to build a culture of

YMCA hosts annual Community Senior Day

By Daily Press staff

Seniors: Get ready for a day to work your mind and body. Each year, the Santa Monica Family YMCA opens its door to non-members to introduce its senior fitness and health education programs and activities to the community. The event, entitled "2005 Community Senior Day," is free. Beginning at 8:30 a.m., a schedule of exercise classes begins. Classes range from Tai Chi to gentle water exercise, gym fitness to chair exercises and ballroom dancing. Informational seminars covering nutrition, the effects of tanning, long-term care planning and senior financial services will be presented on the hour starting at 11 a.m. In addition, representatives from many of the community's service organizations will be on hand as part of a resource fair. For those attending, there will be drawings for raffle prizes throughout the day. The day is geared so non-members can sample the YMCA's older adult programs. The 2005 Community Senior Day will take place on Thursday, June 9, from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tours will be available. No advance sign-up is required. The YMCA is located at 1332 Sixth St., between Santa Monica Boulevard and Arizona Avenue. For more information, call Lidia Magarian, senior physical director, at (310) 393-2721, ext. 109.

Art show for hunger awareness

By Daily Press staff

Even art can show how to lend a helping hand. Westside Food Bank, a provider of nearly 4 million pounds of food annually to 65 social service agencies, will be hosting a show of mixed-media art from local artists and students at the Ken Edwards Center, located at 1527 Fourth St. in Santa Monica. The Westside Food Bank has served the local community for more than 20 years by providing food to 65 social service agencies serving the westside area. Each year, Westside Food Bank's food touches close to 80,000 people, nearly half of whom are children. The show is entitled: "Hunger: How aware are you?" Several local artists have contributed pieces, as have students from various local schools and programs. Artists were asked to reflect on the question, "What does hunger look like to you?" A bin will be on site for canned food donations, and parking is available in the Ken Edwards Center parking structure. The art show will be on display from June 7 through June 10, during the hours of 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

SURF REPORT

Monday we have some SW swell due from a system that we've been watching near the ice cap that is in the lower 50s. This one stayed on a direct easterly course, however, not throwing much of its energy toward the California coast. Nevertheless, some surf is expected with the better and infrequent set waves coming in around waist high. But, given that the core of this system's fetch remained in the lower 50s (and near 60s), set waves are expected to be quite sporadic. This is holding some long periods in the 16-second+ range as well.

The Q Line

Staffers within City Hall are proposing significant utility rate increases for Santa Monicans because they say the money is running out. However, as they analyze the city budget prior to its adoption in June, City Council members are questioning why and if the rate increases are necessary. Staff says solid-waste, water, wastewater and stormwater fund balances have been decreasing to varying degrees over the last four years. So, the costs are most likely going to be passed to the users. So this week, Q-Line wants to know, "Do you support rate increases on your utility bills to restore the fund balances to healthy levels? How much are you willing to pay?" Call (310) 285-8106 before Friday at 5 p.m. and we'll print your responses in the weekend edition. Please try to limit your comments to a minute or less. It might help to think first about the wording of your response.

Editor:

What a refreshing surprise to see Bill Bauer's "My Write" column once again. I wholeheartedly agree with his Santa Monica/Santa Barbara comparisons (SMDP, May 23, page 4). Let's have more of his informative columns soon.

Wayne Kohli
Santa Monica

Columnist hard on the homeless

Editor:

Bill Bauer recounts his recent trip to Santa Barbara (SMDP, May 23, page 4) and compares that city's approach towards its homeless population with ours. He states, "The first thing I noticed was the dearth of drunks and street transients." Mr. Bauer obviously isn't aware of the strong support the city of Santa Barbara gives towards homeless programs. The Chamber of Commerce and the business community in general backed the purchase and funding of a shelter in the south part of town. Prominent residents of Santa Barbara regularly visit the shelter and serve meals to the clients. These volunteers include many of the most philanthropic people in the area — those who have been honored for making Santa Barbara a great place to live and visit.

Perhaps if Mr. Bauer spent less time bashing those less fortunate than him and helped create the environment that exists in Santa Barbara, more people could be helped out of the cycle of homelessness and be able to live on their own.

Who's the freak?

Editor:

On this Memorial Day weekend, one of the many things we celebrate is our country's wonderful freedom of speech. In conjunction with this, I have noticed in recent issues of SMDP several guest commentaries authored by members of the Ayn Rand Institute. The subject of the latest offering was the contention that man could be perfectly moral were religion to not exist (SMDP, May 27, page 5). Although many would disagree with this, the proponents of the Ayn Rand Institute's views are able to publish this and other philosophies, as in America well they should be. I cannot help but muse, however, that if a series of commentaries were printed by Christian organizations declaring their beliefs, there would be a large hue and cry over the "Religious Right" (whatever that composition is supposed to be), that darn "moral majority" and those "Jesus freaks." It seems the last acceptable targets of bigotry are Christians. It is not politically correct, however, to mock other religions, races or nationalities. That's OK, because the only alternative to this would be to suppress our freedom of speech. As our current president (of whom I am not an especial fan) would say, "Bring it on!"

Budget priorities don't benefit SM's residents

MY WRITE

BY BILL BAUER

Our City Council is reviewing budget priorities prior to approving a city budget for fiscal year 2005-2006, and it seems that the good times are back.

The good news is that revenues are expected to be around $433 million, which leaves about a $15 million surplus over expense. However, that money is being used to pay back other accounts that made expenditures over the past year, such as the purchase of the Fisher Lumber site for a possible expansion of Memorial Park.

There are much-needed features in the proposed budget, such as the hiring of two additional police officers for the department's Homeless Liaison Program and additional park rangers to patrol the parks. Keep in mind that these expenditures are a result of our continuously growing transient population. They're "hidden dollars" added to the estimated $20 million our vagrant population really costs on an annual basis — which aren't discussed publicly.

New monies earmarked for additional staff at the newly expanded Virginia Park and for the restoration of cutbacks for tree trimming, street lighting and other neighborhood services are all welcome news.

It's too bad City Hall can't find enough money to keep our branch libraries open on Fridays and Sundays. I don't mean to get off on a tangent here, but I'm amazed that the neighborhood branch libraries are shut down two days a week.

Open and accessible libraries are vital to a good community and the education of our children. I guess that school and education advocates, including the leadership from the politically powerful Community for Excellent Public Schools (CEPS), don't have shuttered branch libraries on their radar screens because, maybe, they have other fish to fry. So how about it City Council? Let's open those libraries seven days a week.

Only in Santa Monica would a budget surplus necessitate higher taxes.

In spite of the positive fiscal news, we're still facing the prospect of much higher usage fees and utility taxes for city water, refuse and sewage services. A report presented to the City Council on May 17 said "residents can expect sudden to gradual rate increases in water and solid-waste fees over the next five years" because officials say expenditures are exceeding revenues for those services.

City staff suggests either a 31 percent increase in the water fund for one year or 15 percent to 11 percent annual increases for either three or four years because "revenue was not keeping up with expenses."

Recommended increases in refuse collection fees range from a 20 percent increase starting in July with additional smaller increases following in years to come. Never mind that our single-family refuse rates already are significantly higher than neighboring cities.

The wastewater fund also is dwindling, and the restoration remedies call for a 25 percent increase in fees for a one-year recovery or smaller increases for a two- or three-year recovery.

Every one of us will be paying much more for basic city services — businesses and property owners alike. Renters, too, will be seeing healthy rent increases as a result of higher fees. City Hall should subsidize these services like it currently does with the various frills, pet projects and personal agenda pork it supports to the tune of millions of dollars annually.

Maybe I'm off base, but I don't hear residents whining about lack of services for outsiders. However, I sure hear them complain about all the rising fees, tax increases, inefficient government, growing municipal bureaucracy and other "nickel and diming" that costs us more without improving our quality of life. It seems our "spend and tax" City Council and city management would have us pay, pay, pay rather than divert monies from their "save the world" agenda.

The expansion of city-sponsored housing in an already densely populated city is one of the reasons why costs for basic services are going up. Maybe limiting development would slow these cost increases. Another way to increase revenue is to "get tough" with recycling thieves who regularly steal recyclables, thus stealing hundreds of thousands of dollars in potential revenue from City Hall.

City Hall has a proposal that recommends that an experienced, private company take over part of the city's refuse and recycling service. Preliminary findings indicate that costs could be better controlled and waste management would operate much more efficiently.

I'll be looking into this in a future column, but in the meantime, why hasn't City Hall gotten the message?

COMMENTARY

Parents out for profits should be prosecuted

THE WITNESS STAND

BY CLIFF NICHOLS

The other day I found myself waiting for a friend in an over-priced coffee shop located within the pleasant ambiance of a local book store. As I did, I attempted productive use of my time by reading yet again about the ongoing trial of Michael Jackson. In short order, however, my attention soon drifted. Broadcasting over the store's sound system was what I guess would be called a song.

Against a monotonously rhythmic, yet fascinating, jazz-like background, a husky female voice was speaking (i.e. she was not singing) the following words again and again and again:

"Standing on a corner ... just me and Yoko Ono ... waiting for Jerry to land."

After repeating this about 45 times — with a few minor variations occasionally tucked in for what was supposedly artistic cause — the song just abruptly ended. Never was I informed whether Jerry ever arrived, or even who he was. My imaginings, however, left me with the firm conviction that because Yoko was involved, all of this may well have had something to do with the Grateful Dead's Jerry Garcia. A tribute of some sort perhaps? Or perhaps simply an expression of the artist's desire to ask him if in fact he was indeed grateful now that he was truly dead? Or not? Who knows? The more one thought about it, however, it was amazing how even more issues began to surface.

For example, putting aside the obvious — like what was I doing listening to this in the first place — about the 35th time this sentence had been repeated, I began wondering things like whether I really cared, or would ever care, if Jerry landed or not. And, then — again because of the fact that Yoko was a named participant in this particular enterprise and since they were waiting on the corner anyway — I further wondered if it was not somewhat insensitive for them to not also be waiting for John to land as well. Who knows? In the end I was left with this thought: Can one really ever catalogue fully the contents of some artistic minds? Perhaps not, and perhaps in some instances we may not wish to. We could find ourselves in mire that is somehow less than pleasant.

So, the song having now ended, it was with that thought that my attention refocused on Michael Jackson, as I still waited patiently for my friend to land.

This time around, however, as happened while listening to the song, I found myself wanting to put aside the obvious — like what kind of grown man 45 years old wants to have milk and cookies, pillow fights and sleep in the same bed with another person's child? Due to our bombardment by these facts repeated so often by the media, such questions now took on the repetitive characteristic of the song lyric I had just heard. Instead, my thoughts went to other issues that have been lurking on the story's perimeter since it unfolded. Issues that not only have remained unaddressed to any degree of satisfaction, but because of this fact, have left us also with an unsettling feeling that via the Jackson saga we somehow have been confronted with some larger cultural mire, of which we would rather have remained ignorant.

For instance, what flaw in our culture's character would produce parents who would knowingly expose their children to any celebrity with such proclivities? Don't most people with any common sense know that most molesters of children are not shadowy figures lurking in bushes near school grounds? More likely, they tend to be people of some prominence in the child's life — a teacher, a minister, a priest, a relative, a neighbor or a family friend — predators in sheep's clothing who seek sexual gratification from children who trust them. So, how much more hideous would that make the parent — who the child presumably trusts even more — who would make their child available to such potential predators in exchange for gifts? At a minimum, are such parents not guilty of child endangerment even if they may not in reality be prostituting their children? And for what, a trip here or a jewel there?

Why then, I wondered, are we not seeing to it that such parents are prosecuted — if for no other reason than to dissuade others from doing so? When it involves the rich and famous, however, there appears to exist some twisted warp in the metal of our society that causes us to overlook such grotesque parental malfeasance and not insist that something be done about it. And, by that reality, are we not all indicted? Does not our collective silence and inaction make us all to some degree complicit in these immoral conspiracies we witness? And even if not, at the very least, it certainly reveals us to be derelict in our duty to protect our young, does it not? Consider this: Does not such apparent apathy make less sense to you than joining Yoko on the corner to wait for Jerry to land?

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

“Know before you go” is a weekly update on construction projects throughout Santa Monica. Here is a run-down of this week’s construction projects initiated by City Hall:

Beach pedestrian access

The Montana Avenue stairs are expected to open between Palisades Park and the beach. The Idaho Avenue stairs remain closed for cleanup and repair.

Cingular telecommunications lines

Cingular is installing telecommunications lines on San Vicente Boulevard between 17th and 19th streets. There may be detours around the work area.

Civic Center parking structure

Construction of a new 900-space Civic Center public parking structure located on Fourth Street, next to the Public Safety Facility, continues. Construction will require the closure of Avenida Mazatlan and portions of the west side Fourth Street sidewalk. One lane of southbound Fourth Street is subject to closure while work is occurring. Crews will continue working on Fourth Street and Civic Center Drive. One lane of southbound Fourth Street is subject to closure while work is occurring. There also is added truck traffic on Fourth Street for the week. Access to east Interstate 10 is available from Main Street via Olympic Drive.

Franklin Reservoir roof-strengthening project

This project involves the strengthening of the Franklin Reservoir roof. During the course of this project, Franklin Street will be closed to both vehicles and pedestrians between Lipton and Montana.

Gas company main replacement

Southern California Gas Company is replacing a 4-inch main on Ocean Park Boulevard between 14th and 15th streets. There will be detours around work areas. Please follow posted signs.

Main Library

Construction is underway on the new main library, located at 601 Santa Monica Blvd. During construction, visit the temporary library at 1324 Fifth St., or any of the branch libraries. There is currently no sidewalk access on Santa Monica Boulevard, Sixth Street and Seventh Street adjacent to the project.

Memorial and Los Amigos parks

This project involves demolition of existing park buildings and construction of new restrooms, concession stands and storage buildings. Access to Los Amigos Park bleacher areas and baseball field has been restored. Pedestrian and disabled access through Memorial Park has been restored. Park buildings are still under construction and inaccessible to the public. Memorial Park is located at Olympic Boulevard and 14th Street, and Los Amigos Park is located at Fifth and Hollister streets.

Memorial Park skatepark

Construction of a new skatepark facility at Memorial Park, located at Olympic Boulevard and 14th Street, is underway. During construction there will not be access to the previous site of the children’s playground, which has been relocated northerly within the park.

Street and park lighting project

Work continues on upgrading street lighting with new fixtures and circuits. Construction for this project occurs in the sidewalk area and may impact pedestrians, vehicles and park visitors. Parking restrictions also will be in place immediately adjacent to the work areas. The work is currently scheduled to occur on Colorado Avenue between Ocean Avenue and Sixth Street; Fifth Street between Colorado Avenue and Santa Monica Boulevard; Santa Monica Boulevard between Sixth Street and 12th Street; Wilshire Boulevard between Seventh Street and Euclid Street; and in and around Douglas Park (at Wilshire Boulevard and 24th Street), Marine Park (at Marine Street and 16th Street), and Clover Park (Ocean Park Boulevard at 25th Street). There will be lane closures, turning restrictions and detours around the work area.

Virginia Avenue Park

Major renovations at the park, located at the corner of Pico and Cloverfield boulevards, are expected to continue through fall of 2005. The park is closed. This project also includes construction of new turning lanes, traffic signals, striping, and irrigation and landscaping on Cloverfield and Pico boulevards adjacent to the park.

U.N. center designed to promote peace

peace. Let's invite many people to explore and contribute to the possibilities for peace that this center advocates."

SGI USA allocates the resource center as part of its larger national headquarters within the same building.

McIlraith said Santa Monica has been home to the SGI USA headquarters for more than 35 years, and it's no coincidence the group's leadership chose the city for the culture of peace site.

"This is the latest in a series of efforts we've made over the years to be a contributing member of the community," he said. "We love the city and really appreciate the friends and partnerships we enjoy with our neighbors and other members of the community."

McIlraith said that although the center is supported by SGI USA, it's strictly a secular resource that happens to advocate some of the ideals Buddhism embraces.

"The United Nation's Culture of Peace program conveys many of our core values as Buddhists," McIlraith said. "We feel that a resource center that promotes peace in a meaningful yet practical way for everyday people, without teaching religion, can make a valuable contribution to the community."

One of the highlights of the center will include "My Dream for Peace," a clearinghouse where visitors can briefly describe their hopes for peace and post it for others to read, and also be encouraged by other people's dreams for peace.

Visitors will be able to peruse a library focused on eight action areas of peace, as defined by the U.N. A Web site will provide links to other organizations, initiatives and movements on the Internet related to peace. Interactive DVDs also will be available with information about peace.

"There is a moving quote from Gandhi here in this center that reads, 'As human beings, our greatness lies not so much in being able to remake the world, as in being able to remake ourselves,'" Chowdhury said during his commemoration of the center. "This is certainly true, yet I would like to add that, 'When we successfully remake ourselves, that, in itself, remakes the world.'"

SM to be honored for “green” efforts

the United Nations attempts to stimulate worldwide awareness of environmental issues. Santa Monica is one of the cities that will be recognized for its environmental efforts during a five-day conference starting on Wednesday.

The goal is to draw awareness to the effort, during which representatives from more than 100 cities around the world will exchange information intended to improve their environmental programming. In addition to O'Connor, some city staff members are expected to participate.

The WED theme for 2005 is “Green cities,” and the slogan is “Plan for the planet.” WED organizers said this will be the first time in 33 years that a U.S. city has hosted the conference, which will include a variety of workshops.

“I am pleased to be invited, and it happens to be one of those lucky aspects of life I happen to be mayor the first time this conference is in North America,” O'Connor said. “I'm going to represent Santa Monica because of what the city has achieved through its environmental stewardship.”

O'Connor said stewardship comes largely from citizens and city staff, and requires countless hours of work and millions of dollars in funding for programming and facilities.

“In many cities it takes a leader to educate, but we are blessed to live in a city with ties to the ocean and in which clean air and clean water are important to us,” she said. “So we as a city have been innovative in taking steps earlier than other places to create policies around environmental sustainability.”

SustainLane, a privately held company committed to promoting sustainable efforts, said Santa Monica has finished first nationally for its number of “green” buildings, as well as for the city's solid-waste diversion program, planning and environmental knowledge of residents.

Some of the awards lined up for Santa Monica were based on a SustainLane study that included 20 categories, and information compiled from more than 90 interviews with representatives of 25 American cities.

O'Connor said awards such as those to be presented by companies like SustainLane are common during these types of conferences, since they provide opportunities for the companies to share information with the public.

She said she looks forward to receiving the awards on behalf of the city, but a more important aspect of the conference will be the opportunity to exchange ideas.

“There's more to do,” she said. “This is an opportunity for us to get some ideas about what is helping elsewhere and help build our tool box, so we hope to get a lot out of it by sharing and learning from other cities around the world.”

Some of the presentations will include “Pure Elements: Food, Water and Air” on Wednesday; “Cities on the Move: Transportation” on Friday; “Urban Power: Renewable Energy, Energy Efficiency and Climate Change” on Saturday; and “Flower Power: Open Space and the Urban Forest” on Sunday.

Previous hosts for WED include Barcelona, Spain (2004); Tokyo, Japan (1999); Istanbul, Turkey (1996); and Rio De Janeiro, Brazil (1992).

O'Connor said she has few expectations in anticipation of the event, except to try to take in as much as possible.

“I think the thing to do is go in with an open mind,” she said. “This is an opportunity for us to build a coalition and begin accomplishing efforts on a larger scale similar to our sustainable city plan. The idea here is to set goals for the city to pursue and a road map to stay the course.”

“We have a good start down that road, and hopefully what we have done and other cities have done can help us keep doing this kind of thing.”

Mayor Villaraigosa targets school violence

BY JEREMIAH MARQUEZ

Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Mayor-elect Antonio Villaraigosa appeared at an inner-city high school Friday after yet another student brawl and promised to make wiping out racial violence in the nation's second-largest school district a top priority.

The visit to Jefferson High School was a chance for Villaraigosa to focus on two campaign pledges: fixing the city's failing schools and bridging racial divides. Villaraigosa united black and Hispanic voters last week to become the city's first Latino mayor in a century.

“There's going to be a zero tolerance for this kind of racial violence,” Villaraigosa said after meeting with students, teachers, school officials and community leaders. “We need to get control of the situation.”

The mayor-elect, who takes office July 1, acknowledged that he will have no direct control over the city's public schools.

He said, however, that he plans to have city officials improve afterschool and weekend programs at a nearby park, send crisis counselors to Jefferson and work with police to clean up the gang-scarred area surrounding the South Los Angeles campus.

Thursday's melee, which involved several dozen black and Hispanic teens, was the third racially motivated brawl on campus in six weeks. There were no major injuries, though 22 students were suspended, officials said.

School police used pepper spray and batons to quell the fight.

To boost security, authorities said they would increase the number of school police officers assigned to the campus from two to five and expand area patrols to ensure students were safe traveling to and from campus.

Officials are investigating what sparked the fights at Jefferson and elsewhere, including two scuffles at Los Angeles High School, but they said it was likely that off-campus gang activity and other problems were spilling into the classroom.

Race could also be a factor in a district where 73 percent of the 746,000 students are Latino, 13 percent are black and the remainder are Asian, white or other ethnicity. At Grant High School in the San Fernando Valley, fights broke out between Hispanic and Armenian students earlier this year.

“All of these have racial overtones,” said school police Chief Alan Kerstein, who added that school unrest seemed to be on the rise in recent years.

In the last academic year, 141 students were expelled for reasons related to on-campus assaults and violence, up from 40 during the 2000-2001 school year, according to school data.

“We're not going to tolerate it,” Kerstein said. “If you're fighting, this isn't the school for you. If we run out schools, this isn't the district for you.”

At Jefferson, parents and students said they were skittish about returning to campus.

“There's not enough security here,” said Griselda Monroy, whose 14-year-old daughter Yacely Lopez ran into a classroom when the brawl erupted. “It's dangerous.”

Travon Taylor, 15, said he wants to transfer schools after several students tried to punch him in Thursday's clash.

“Everybody says don't be around trouble,” he said, “but trouble came to me.”
