THE THINKING OF NORM ISSUE

Samohi's Lacy passes away

BY DANIEL ARCHULETA
Managing Editor

SAMOHI Norm Lacy, Santa Monica High School's athletic director, passed away on Saturday, school officials and friends said.

The cause of death was due to a heart attack, according to a number of sources associated with the school.

"Just terrible," Samohi softball Head Coach Debbie Skaggs said. "This is very devastating for the student body, the faculty and the administration,"

Skaggs, who has known Lacy since she started at the school 24 years ago, said that he will be honored before the softball team's semi-final playoff game on Tuesday. She said that there will be a moment of silence before the team takes the Samohi field. The ceremony is slated to begin before the team's 3:15 p.m. game.

"It's with a heavy heart that we play the game," Skaggs said,

Lacy, who won two California Interscholastic Federation football titles with Samohi, also spent time across town at St. Monica, where he led the Mariners to a CIF title as well.

"I haven't shed tears like this in a long time," said Tony Todd, an assistant baseball coach at Samohi.

Todd played for Lacy during the early 1980s, helping the Vikings win a CIF title.

In search of families

BY REBECCA KHEEL

DOWNTOWN Linda Brenden knows she's changed at least one life from opening up her home to foreign exchange students.

During one of the 21 years she has hosted international high school students as part of Education First's Foundation for Foreign Study, a boy from Scandinavia did not interact much with the other students and stayed close to adults. His father died a couple months prior to his trip. After a few weeks, Brenden found other foreign exchange students in the program who had been in similar situations and helped the boy connect with them.

"He was so despondent when he came that he wanted to go home, but by the time he left, he didn't want to go home," recalled Brenden, the area manager for EF. "I would never look back and say, 'No, I could never (host a foreign exchange student)'."

Education First is currently searching for host families in Santa Monica and other areas of West Los Angeles for its first program in Malibu, which will start July 14 and last 18 days, though it has faced some difficulties recruiting families.

EF has been bringing foreign exchange students to America since 1979. Programs have been held across California, but Brenden, a Thousand Oaks resident, decided to expand the program to Malibu this year. One reason for that is because it is physically closer to where she lives. But she said also thinks students will enjoy the area.

"Kids want to come to Southern California," she said. "They want to go to the beach."

But because it is a new area and there is no base of host families to rely on, there has been some difficulty in finding hosts, said Nina Edwards, the program leader for Malibu. As of Friday, 48 of 101 students and five chaperones still needed to be placed in homes.

Edwards also attributed the slumping economy to deterring possible host families.

"People are a little less eager to have

'Shrek' tops 'Sex' with $43M at box office

DAVID GERMAIN
AP Movie Writer

LOS ANGELES Movie audiences are showing more appetite for Shrek than for sex over Memorial Day weekend.

DreamWorks Animation's sequel "Shrek Forever After" remained the No. 1 movie for a second weekend with $43.3 million from Friday to Sunday. The film raised its domestic total to $133.1 million.

That easily topped the Warner Bros. sequel "Sex and the City 2," which was No. 2 with a $32.1 million debut that came in far below the $56.8 million opening weekend of its predecessor two years ago. Along with a $14.2 million haul in its first day Thursday, "Sex and the City 2" has brought in $46.3 million.

Debuting at No. 3 with $30.2 million was Disney's action tale "Prince of Persia: The Sands of Time."

Even with bad reviews and a running time of nearly two and a half hours for "Sex and the City 2," many in Hollywood had expected the sequel to open at No. 1.

But the fourth "Shrek" installment, itself opening far below the previous sequels, held up strongly in its second weekend. Family crowds continued to pack theaters for what is billed as the final big-screen tale featuring voice stars Mike Myers, Cameron Diaz, Eddie Murphy and Antonio Banderas.

Women made up 90 percent of the audience for "Sex and the City 2," which reunites the stars of the HBO series — Sarah Jessica Parker, Kim Cattrall, Kristin Davis and Cynthia Nixon — for an adventure in Abu Dhabi.

While that would be less than the three-day opening weekend for the first movie, the sequel still could match the $152.6 million domestic total of "Sex and the City" if it holds up well in subsequent weekends, Fellman said.

"The numbers are the numbers, but it's a little unfair to go in the direction of trouble in River City until we have an opportunity to see how we leg it out," Fellman said. "We might end up getting there. It's just a different pattern than the first one."

DreamWorks is hoping for a lengthy shelf life on "Shrek Forever After," a fourth installment in the franchise that had critics wondering if audiences finally were growing tired of the big green ogre.

"We always knew with the fourth entry in particular that we were in some kind of unprecedented territory," said Anne Globe, head of marketing at DreamWorks. "There was really no game plan to follow."

The box office for "Shrek Forever After" slipped 39 percent from its opening weekend, compared with a 56 percent drop in the second weekend for the third "Shrek" flick.

The modest results for "Prince of Persia" leave the movie's franchise potential in doubt. Producer Jerry Bruckheimer, whose movies include the "Pirates of the Caribbean" and "National Treasure" series, was aiming for similar franchise treatment on "Prince of Persia."

Set in ancient times, the movie stars Jake Gyllenhaal as a king's adopted son accused of treachery and murder, who obtains a magic dagger that can turn back time.

Police: Search turns up head of slain man

ANDREW DALTON
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES Authorities searching a Long Beach park found the final missing body part — a severed head — believed to belong to a community college student killed and dismembered in a double murder-for-profit plot in Orange County, police said Sunday.

FBI agents and police from Costa Mesa and Long Beach searched El Dorado Park with cadaver dogs for two days before finding the head thought to be Samuel Herr, 26, on Saturday, Costa Mesa police Sgt. Patrick Wessel said.

An arm and hand were found at the park Friday, and authorities had said the head was the only body part still missing. A coroner will officially determine whether the remains were Herr, Wessel said.

Herr's Costa Mesa neighbor Daniel Wozniak, 26, is accused of killing and dismembering Herr and killing Herr's friend Juri Kibuishi for money.

Wozniak was charged with two counts of murder Friday, just hours before he was scheduled to get married in another Long Beach park.

He was being held without bail Sunday at Orange County Jail. He was scheduled to be arraigned by videoconference Tuesday.

Investigators believe Herr was shot and killed in a theater at the Los Alamitos Joint Forces Training Base. His torso was found in the theater's attic May 21.

Authorities have not said why the two were at the base. However, Herr was an Army veteran who had served in Afghanistan, the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday. He and Kibuishi were both students at Orange Coast College.

Authorities allege Wozniak shot Herr, then cut off his head, left arm and right hand. Investigators said Wozniak told them where to find the torso.

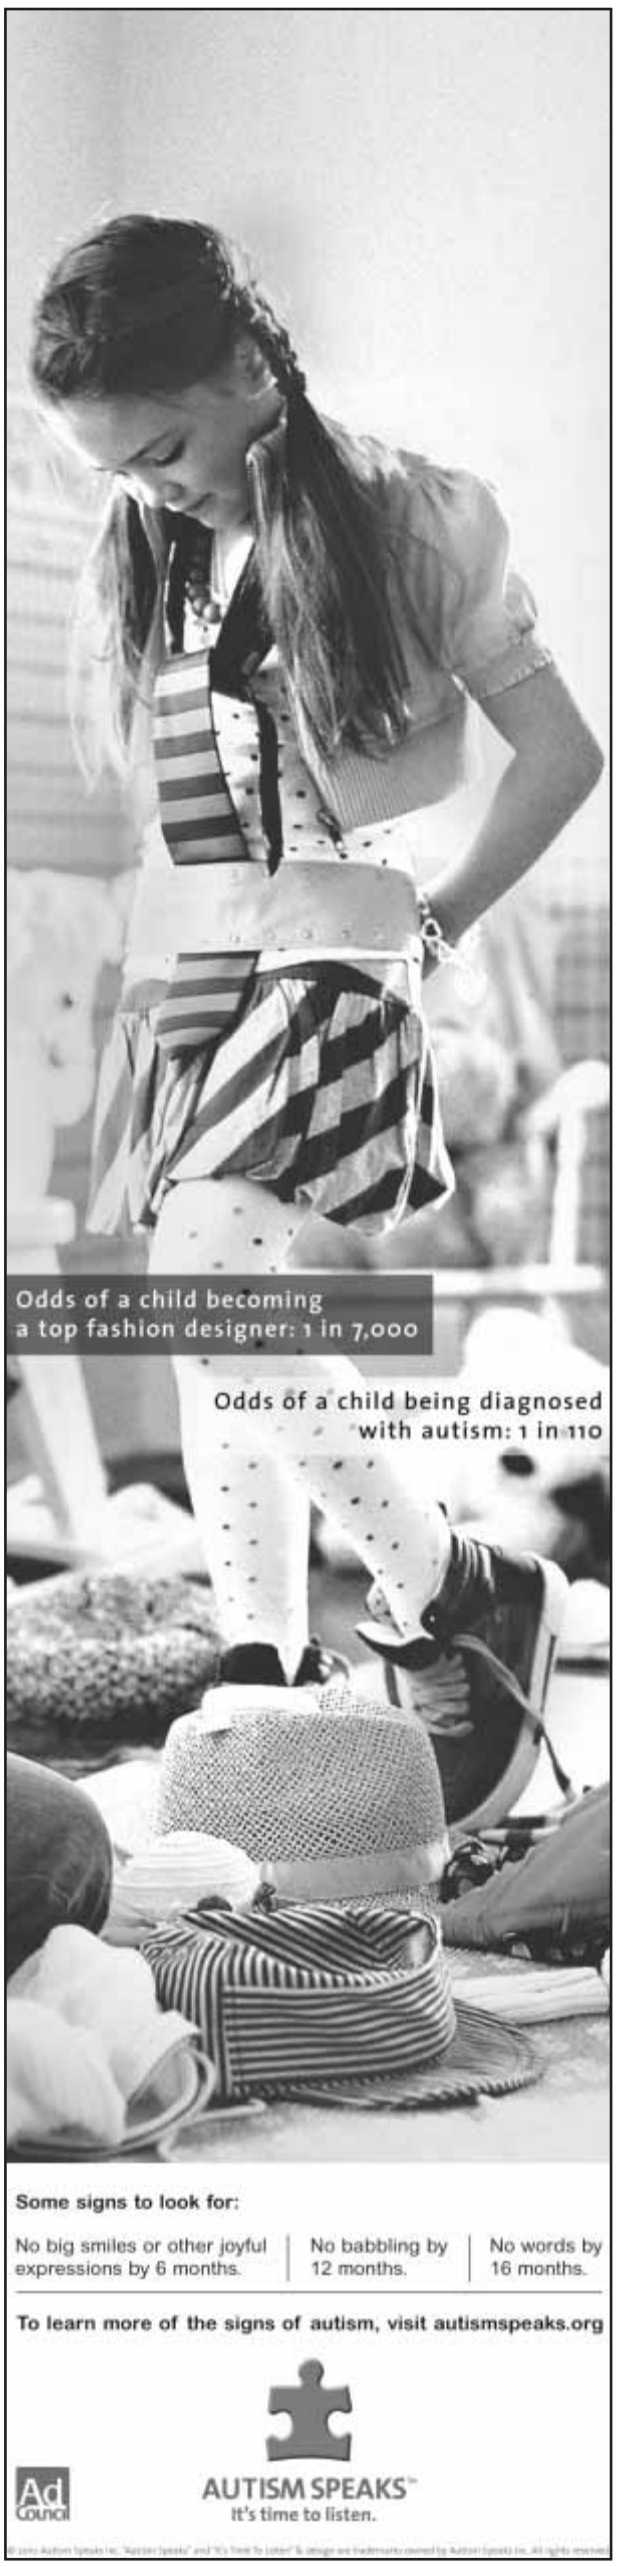

Wozniak also is accused of shooting Kibuishi after summoning her with a text message on Herr's phone. Authorities believe Wozniak removed Kibuishi's clothes to fake a sexual assault. Herr's father found her body in Herr's apartment May 22.

Wozniak, a stage actor, had recently appeared in the leading role in the musical

Soaring heights

THE LONG OVERDUE UPDATE TO Santa Monica's master plan, the Land Use and Circulation Element, is nearing completion and undergoing public review prior to final City Council comments, revisions and approval.

LUCE is the framework for determining the size, amount of and types of development in the city's future as well as its traffic circulation over the next 30 years. The scope and locations for new growth are all outlined in LUCE.

Many factions are jostling to have their own ideas represented in LUCE. The powerful Santa Monicans for Renters' Rights organization supports residential development over new commercial and office development, for example.

Neighborhood groups want to preserve existing neighborhoods and minimal growth. Business interests including the Santa Monica Chamber of Commerce want development standards that encourage positive economic development and a "friendly" business climate.

Over the last few weeks, a flurry of letters advocating for greater flexibility in LUCE's framework from land-use attorney Chris Harding (as the co-chair of the chamber's LUCE subcommittee) have been sent to City Hall department heads, Planning Commissioners and City Councilpersons.

Harding is a partner in Harding, Larmore, Kutcher & Kozall, LLP, a law firm that represents a number of real estate interests and developers with numerous present and pending projects in the city. Harding's May 5 letter suggests a number of changes to LUCE such as higher building heights and densities than recommended in the draft LUCE.

In a letter to the Planning Commission, the Santa Monica Coalition for a Livable City and a number of neighborhood organizations accused Harding and the chamber of derailing LUCE by inserting a lengthy list of development-friendly recommendations into the plan at the 11th hour and near to its completion.

Harding dismissed their criticism by saying the chamber's LUCE subcommittee's recommendations were "focusing on technical points of the LUCE and don't significantly change its vision." Changes are geared toward facilitating better building design and making smart development more practical, he added. But, in a letter dated May 17, Harding describes the recommendations as "... fundamental to the draft LUCE." "Technical points" or "fundamental changes?" Which is it?

Last Monday, commissioner Ted Winterer e-mailed me that the Planning Commission "voted four to two for additional height recommendations on most boulevards and districts." With the exception of Winterer and Jay Johnson, commissioners Gerda Newbold, Jason Parry, Gwynne Pugh and Vice-Chair Jim Ries voted to raise the height limits. Chair Hank Koning was absent. I'm sure Harding's clients are happy he "brought home the bacon" even though nobody else is.

"For instance, the (previous 75-foot) maximum height allowed at Bergamot is now 81 feet (hard to say as the numbers were not published in advance and instead concocted on scratch paper after 11 p.m. — unbelievable). Coincidentally or not, it's the same height as the PaperMate proposal," Winterer e-mailed.

Connecting the dots — Hines, the Texas developer behind the 969,000-square-foot Bergamot Transit Village mega-development proposed for the PaperMate property at 26th Street and Olympic Boulevard is Chris Harding's and HLKK's client.

MEASURE A FAILS

Measure A, the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District's $198 parcel tax proposal failed to garner the necessary two-thirds or 66.66 percent needed for passage. With virtually all ballots counted Friday, May 28, the measure only received 64.25 percent while the "no votes" pulled 35.75 percent.

The district spent more than $200,000 for last week's special mail-in election — above the $160,000 cost for inclusion on the June primary ballot. The "yes" campaign raised $372,557 as of May 11 according to campaign disclosure statements. "A's total cost was close to $600,000. The campaign spent about $42 each for its 13,671 yes votes. The "no" folks only spent $31 for a website and domain name.

The tragedy is that a fortune in "yes" money was spent on mailers, campaign coordinators and postage — not in the classroom. It's another sign of the misdirection and dysfunctionality within our public school system — including the SMMUSD itself and extending to its well-intentioned supporters.

Measure A's backers noted they would have had a landslide victory if only a "50-percent, plus-one" vote were needed to pass. "No on A" supporters say that if they had a fraction of the budget spent by the "yes" committee to get their message out, the measure would have fallen considerably short of even a simple majority.

There's talk of floating another parcel tax in November. Let me repeat myself: What is needed is total reform from the school board down, not more taxes. The first place I'd start is by removing the teachers union president from the district payroll.

ACLU HOMELESS SUIT DOWN IN FLAMES

A Southern California ACLU lawsuit against City Hall and the Santa Monica Police Department filed last July on behalf of six homeless individuals has been dismissed. I'll have a more detailed commentary about the ACLU's misguided blunder after a joint City Hall statement and press release scheduled for release Monday, June 8.

Latest spill fix fails

BOOTHVILLE, La. There is still a hole in the Earth, crude oil is still spewing from it and there is still, excruciatingly, no end in sight. After trying and trying again, one of the world's largest corporations, backed and pushed by the world's most powerful government, can't stop the runaway gusher.

As desperation grows and ecological misery spreads, the operative word on the ground now is, incredibly, August — the earliest moment that a real resolution could be at hand. And even then, there's no guarantee of success. For the United States and the people of its beleaguered Gulf Coast, a dispiriting summer of oil and anger lies dead ahead.

Oh ... and the Atlantic hurricane season begins Tuesday.

The latest attempt — using a remote robotic arm to stuff golf balls and assorted debris into the gash in the seafloor — didn't work. On Sunday, as churches echoed with prayers for a solution, BP PLC said it would focus on containment rather than plugging the undersea puncture wound, effectively redirecting the mess it made rather than stopping it. Yet the new plan carries the risk of making the torrent worse, as top government officials warned Sunday.

"We failed to wrestle this beast to the ground," said BP Managing Director Bob Dudley, doing the rounds of the Sunday talk shows.

As the oil washes ashore, crude-coated birds have become a frequent sight. At the sea's bottom, no one knows what the oil will do to species like the newly discovered bottom-dwelling pancake batfish — and others that remain unknown but just as threatened.

Scientists from several universities have reported large underwater plumes of oil stretching for miles and reaching hundreds of feet beneath the Gulf's surface, though BP PLC CEO Tony Hayward on Sunday disputed their findings, saying the company's tests found no such evidence of oily clouds underwater.

"The oil is on the surface," Hayward said. "Oil has a specific gravity that's about half that of water. It wants to get to the surface because of the difference in specific gravity."

Perhaps most alarming of all, 40 days after the Deepwater Horizon blew up and began the underwater deluge, hurricane season is at hand. It brings the horrifying possibility of wind-whipped, oil-soaked waves and water spinning ashore and coating areas much farther inland. Imagine Katrina plus oil spill.

The spill is already the worst in American history — worse, even, than the 1989 Exxon Valdez disaster. It has already released between 18 million and 40 million gallons of oil into the Gulf, according to government estimates.

"This is probably the biggest environmental disaster we've ever faced in this country," White House Energy and Climate Change Advisor Carol Browner said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

At some point — the widespread debut of the BP "spillcam" is as good a delineation point as any — this tipped, in the national conversation, from a destructive event into a calamitous, open-ended saga. And for the bruised and cantankerous American psyche, it could not come at a worse time.

Fear is everywhere, and polarization prevails. Faith in institutions — corporations, government, the media — is down. Americans are angry, and they long ago grew accustomed to expecting the resolution of problems in very short order, even if reality rarely works that way.

So when something undefined and uncontrollable happens, they speculate in all the modern forums about collusion and nefarious dealings. In the process, this tale of environmental disaster and economic damage cripples the sea-to-shining-sea narrative that usually offers Americans comfort during uncertain times.

"There are people who are getting desperate, and there are more getting anxious as we get further into the shrimping season and there is less chance they will recover," said the Rev. Theodore Turner, 57, at Mount Olive Baptist Church in Boothville, near where oil first washed ashore. Fishermen make up about a third of his congregation.

BP's next containment effort involves an assortment of undersea robot maneuvers that would redirect the oil up and out of the water it is poisoning.

The first step in BP's latest effort is the intricate removal of a damaged riser that brought oil to the surface of the Deepwater Horizon rig. The riser will be cut at the top of the crippled blowout preventer, creating a flat surface that a new containment valve can seal against.

The valve would force the oil into a new riser, bringing it up to a ship. The seal, however, would not prevent all oil from escaping. White House energy czar Carol Browner said Sunday the effort could result in a temporary 20 percent increase in the flow. BP has said it didn't expect a significant increase in flow from the cutting and capping plan.

If the containment valve fails, BP may try installing a blowout preventer on top of the existing one.

In the end, however, a relief well would ease the pressure on the runaway gusher in favor of a controlled pumping — essentially what the Deepwater Horizon was trying to do in the first place. But that will take at least two months.

Using government figures, if the leak continues at its current pace and is stopped on Aug. 1, 51 million to 106 million gallons will have spilled.

The Q Line

What next?

Now that the SMMUSD's parcel tax Measure A appears to be headed to defeat, district officials are considering their options, which include another funding measure.

So, this week's Q-Line question asks:
Do you think that the district should consider floating another parcel tax, and why?

Call (310) 285-8106 before Friday at 5 p.m. and we'll print your answers in the weekend edition of the Daily Press.

TELLING THE DIFFERENCE: We must keep in mind the difference between climate and weather. Climate is the average of weather over at least three decades, which means that specific storms or even individual snowy winters, let alone other types of extreme weather, cannot be considered evidence of either the existence or nonexistence of global warming.

Are storms a sign of what's to come?

Dear EarthTalk

The U.S. got socked with several major storms this past winter. Local weather reports never mentioned this as odd. But is it a sign of global warming?

R.A. Forbes
via e-mail

WEATHER PATTERNS AND TRENDS ARE notoriously unpredictable, varying due to a great many different inputs. While it's true that snowier, stormier winters could be the result of global warming, many meteorologists believe that El Nino — a climate pattern involving warmer-than-usual sea temperatures across the tropical Pacific that affects weather all over the globe — is mainly to blame for this past winter's ongoing white misery.

According to Joe Bastardi, a meteorologist with the Pennsylvania-based AccuWeather forecasting service, the current El Nino — they occur once every three to seven years — has been "very strong, prompting many major blizzards for the mid-Atlantic region." By altering the intensity of the atmospheric jet stream, El Nino can force cold air from Northern Canada to push down into the United States, converting the moisture in clouds into falling snow as temperatures drop.

Bastardi believes that El Nino is exacerbating an already ongoing trend of cooling in the Pacific that is part of natural cyclical patterns of heating and cooling unrelated to global warming. "When you get an El Niño with a cold Pacific, you get crazy winters in the East," he told National Geographic News.

Of course, global warming could also be playing a role, according to Amanda Staudt, a climate scientist with the National Wildlife Federation. "It's hard to determine global warming's effect on any particular storm, but it's highly unusual to have these really large winter storms in one winter," she says. "Oddball winter weather is yet another sign of how uncontrolled carbon pollution amounts to an unchecked experiment on people and nature." Staudt reports that warmer temperatures cause more water to evaporate off the oceans and settle in clouds in the sky, where it eventually falls back to the Earth's surface as rain or, if temperatures are low enough, snow.

The same types of atmospheric conditions have conspired at times to dump multiple feet of snow in the Great Lakes of the Midwest at unseasonable times. A 2003 study in the Journal of Climate found that as global temperatures have risen; the winter ice cover over the Great Lakes has decreased, leading in turn to more moisture in the atmosphere and snowier winters throughout the region. This is sometimes referred to as the "lake effect."

Whether or not this past winter's storms were exacerbated by global warming, scientists maintain that we must keep in mind the difference between climate and weather. According to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), climate is the average of weather over at least three decades, which means that specific storms or even individual snowy winters, let alone other types of extreme weather, cannot be considered evidence of either the existence or nonexistence of global warming.

Radioactive fish near nuke plant deemed common

DAVE GRAM
Associated Press Writer

MONTPELIER, Vt. When a fish taken from the Connecticut River recently tested positive for radioactive strontium-90, suspicion focused on the nearby Vermont Yankee nuclear plant as the likely source.

Operators of the troubled 38-year-old nuclear plant on the banks of the river, where work is under way to clean up leaking radioactive tritium, revealed this month that it also found soil contaminated with strontium-90, an isotope linked to bone cancer and leukemia.

Three days later, officials said a fish caught four miles upstream from the reactor in February had tested positive for strontium-90 in its bones. State officials say they don't believe the contamination came from Vermont Yankee.

Tritium was reported leaking from the plant in January, and since then has turned up in monitoring wells at levels 100 times the federal Environmental Protection Agency's safety limit for that substance in drinking water. Other radioactive isotopes have been found as well, including cesium-137, zinc-65 and cobalt-60.

Officials have said tritium has been flowing downhill from the plant to the adjacent river, though it is diluted quickly in the fast-flowing stream. Tests on river water have not produced measurable tritium readings. Now the question is whether strontium-90, generally considered a more dangerous isotope than tritium, may also have found its way to the river.

State health officials say Vermont Yankee most likely was not the source of the radioactivity in the fish, a yellow perch. Fish and other living things — including humans — around the world have been absorbing tiny amounts of strontium-90 since the United States, Russia and China tested nuclear weapons in the atmosphere in the 1950s and 1960s. A fresher dose was released by the Chernobyl nuclear disaster in 1986.

"It's clearly consistent with the background levels from Chernobyl and weapons testing that went on until 1965," said Michael Dumond, chief of prevention services, which includes radiological health, for the state of New Hampshire. The river between the states is New Hampshire territory, though Dumond said New Hampshire has largely deferred to Vermont on testing samples from it.

Does that mean strontium-90 is present in fish caught around the world?

"Yes. It's everywhere," said John Till, president of South Carolina-based Risk Assessment Corp. and a consultant for more than three decades in testing for radioactive substances in the environment.

Till said he supports nuclear power but faults the industry for a lack of speed and candor in discussing its risks.

Should people limit fish consumption because strontium and other radioactive substances can collect in their tissue?

"Absolutely not," Till said, adding that the amounts are too tiny to be a concern. (Some states, including Vermont, have urged limits on fish consumption — especially by children and pregnant women — because of mercury contamination.)

The International Agency for Research on Cancer has determined that radioactive strontium is a human carcinogen, but the arm of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention that tracks toxic substances says exposures must be at high levels before the risk of cancer is elevated.

David Deen, a Vermont state legislator, Connecticut River Watershed Council river steward and fishing guide, is not mollified.

"As a guide, I'll tell you when the fish you're angling for are identified as having strontium-90 in them, it doesn't do much for the image of pristine fishing," said Deen, chairman of the House Fish and Wildlife Committee.

Some people think Vermont Yankee should not be let off the hook any more easily than was the fish that ended up in a Tennessee lab and tested positive for strontium-90.

William Irwin, radiological health chief for the state of Vermont, acknowledged that it was impossible to establish a baseline for strontium-90 in Connecticut River fish, because the state had not tested for it before this year. For that reason, it can't be determined for certain whether Vermont Yankee has been adding strontium-90 to the river.

Inaccurate scales can be costly

GLENN ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

AUGUSTA, Maine A cover illustration from an old "Saturday Evening Post" shows a shopkeeper and woman standing on each side of a butcher-shop scale that holds a chicken. His finger pushes down on one end to add a bit of weight, while she pokes a finger up on the other side.

"It's still true today," says Dan Newcombe, whose job is to make sure all the weights and measures in Maine are true. At least $24 billion in annual sales in Maine alone are weighed or measured in some way. Weighing devices that are even slightly off can have an impact of millions of dollars, either for or against the consumer, in Maine.

The stakes are greater in larger states, and nationally they could add up to a staggering $7 trillion.

Earlier this year, more than a dozen states uncovered a pattern of fish packers adding the weight of glaze ice to the labeled weight of fish, meaning consumers ended up paying several dollars more per pound of fish.

There's no proof such scams are related to the recession but authorities say unscrupulous businesses are more likely to cheat when states cut back on enforcement.

Correct weights affect the formulations of medicines, baby formulas, the chemicals in toothpaste, foods and liquids people eat and drink. Americans depend on accurate measurements when they fill their gas- or heating-oil tanks, buy meat at the butcher counter, pay taxi fares or purchase a gallon of milk.

The National Institute of Standards and Technology, a non-regulatory federal agency and lead standards-setting organization for the country, says its work to advance an accurate measuring system underpins about half the U.S. economy, or about $7 trillion of the U.S. gross domestic product.

"As dollars become tight, it's more important than ever," said Carol Hockert, chief of NIST's Weights and Measures Division. It's important not just to consumers, who assume they are getting what they pay for, but also to businesses that need to know they're competing on a fair basis and aren't giving customers more than they paid for.

Ensuring the accuracy of weighing and measuring devices all comes down to obscure shops like Newcombe's, a flat, brick building that houses precisely scaled weights starting at 1 milligram — roughly the size of the tip of a ball point pen — to huge 1,000-pound blocks that are used to make sure roadside truck scales are exactly right.

A small team of five inspectors from the Maine Agriculture Department's weight and measures program fan out across the state with their precision testing devices to ensure the accuracy of scales, pumps and containers that measure out goods sold at wholesale and retail levels.

Their work takes them from bakeries and butcher counters to fuel-storage facilities and paper mills. They check milk tanks at dairy farms and package scales and scanners from supermarkets and department stores to make sure prices are correct, said Newcombe.

Questionable firewood measurements trigger many of the complaints in Maine, said Steve Giguere, deputy state sealer of weights and measures. In the fall of 2008, inspectors found more than 90 percent of the complaints to be valid, a much larger percentage than the 8-10 percent of the gas pumps and small retail scales that fail.

With a limited field staff, the Maine inspectors end up spending half their time responding to complaints. That's the trend across the country, as cash-strapped states find less and less money for inspections.

"States are more reactive, not proactive," said Steve Dishon of the International Society of Weighing and Measurement, the trade association for weighing and measurement industry professionals. "They react to whoever squawks the loudest."

In the case of the frozen fish scams, The U.S. Food and Drug Administration sent letters to two Illinois companies in October and February, threatening action over labeling issues. Wisconsin and New York have said they may take enforcement action. In Fairfield County, Ohio, two local retailers found to be selling fish at the wrong weight were assessed $500 per store.

Dishon, who's been in the business for 32 years, said the biggest causes of discrepancies are flaws in electronic transferal of data in modern-day devices. And hospitals, which are full of scales and other measuring devices, have the most discrepancies, he said. Hospitals often hire private companies for periodic checks of devices.

Plenty of errors turn up elsewhere.

A surprise inspection in 2008 at Phoenix Sky Harbor International Airport found that 28 of Southwest Airlines' 72 baggage scales were slightly out of calibration, while three others had more serious problems and were shut down until they were fixed. At US Airways, 25 of 46 scales had minor problems. Accurate weights are important now with airlines charging extra fees for bags weighing over 50 pounds.

The good news — for consumers, anyway — is that scales found to be out of compliance generally were off in the passengers' favor.

But sometimes consumers lose.

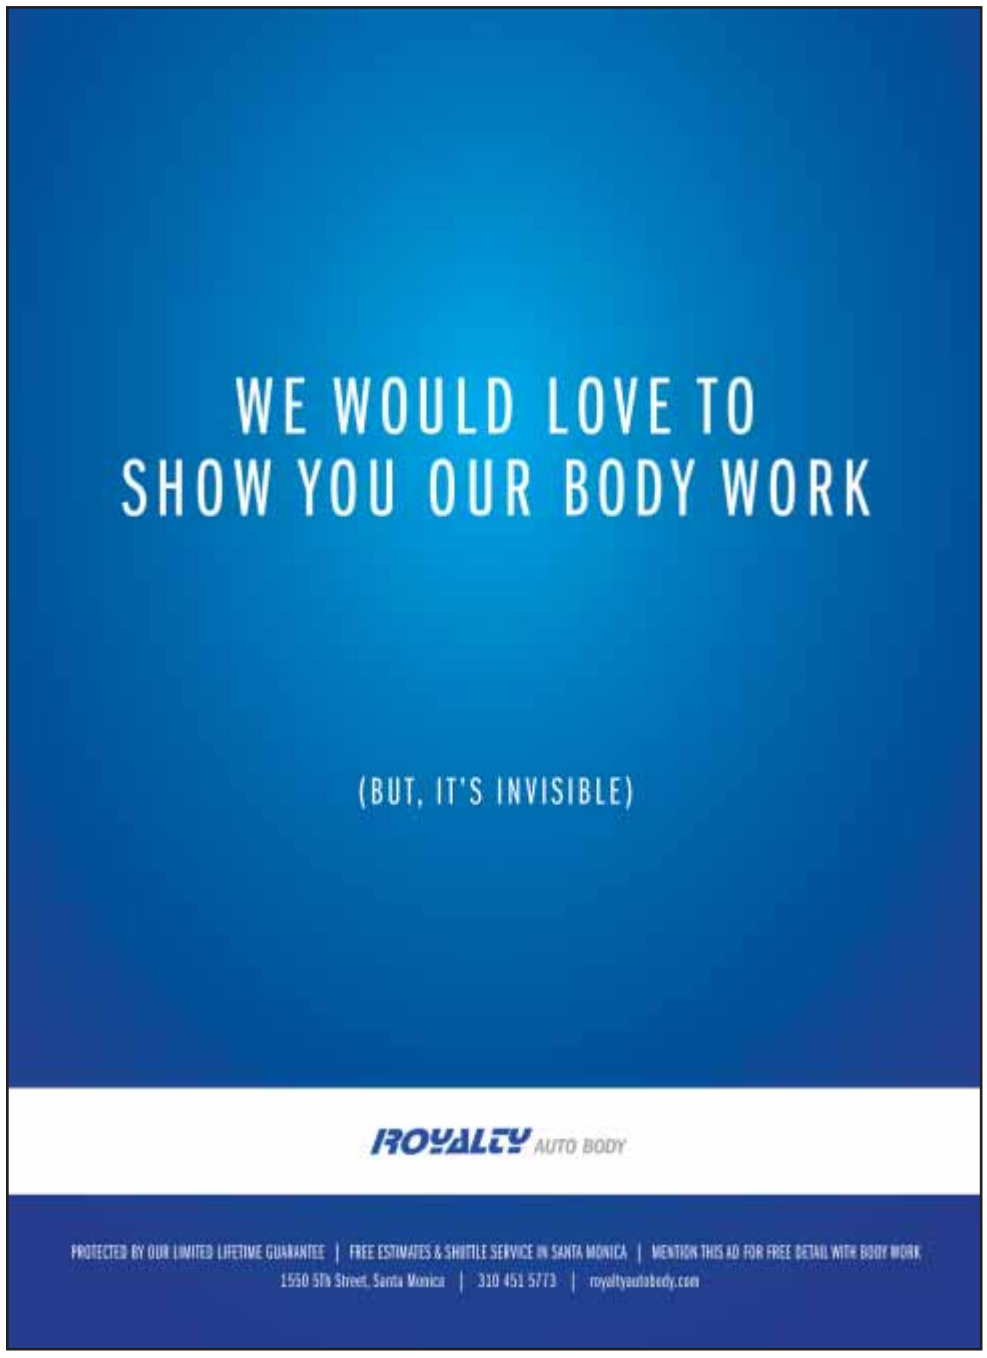

Office Depot Inc. agreed in 2007 to pay $2.3 million to settle a lawsuit claiming that California customers were overcharged by faulty scanners at the checkout line. Office Depot did not admit any wrongdoing in the settlement.

Also in 2007, the Texas Agriculture Department published on its website a list of 100 gas stations whose inaccurate fuel pumps were shortchanging drivers in the state. The same year, inspections in Minnesota turned up a gas station where customers were getting about 4? gallons of gas for every 5 gallons they paid for.

While it's only a guess how much money consumers and businesses win or lose because of skewed scales, Newcombe's calculations give a hint. Advanced technology that enabled Maine to change the way it measures liquid density revealed a 0.024 percent error. When you add up the difference it made in sales of motor and heating fuels, the total impact was $4.8 million — to the benefit of consumers in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts.

In 2007, Wisconsin inspections over the previous two years showed a gas pump failure rate of about 3 percent. But they also turned up a bad pump that gave drivers four gallons of extra gas for every 15 they bought, and one showing customers lost about a half gallon for every 15 gallons purchased.

"Nine" at the Hunger Artists Theater Company in Fullerton. He had money problems, and police believe the motive was financial.

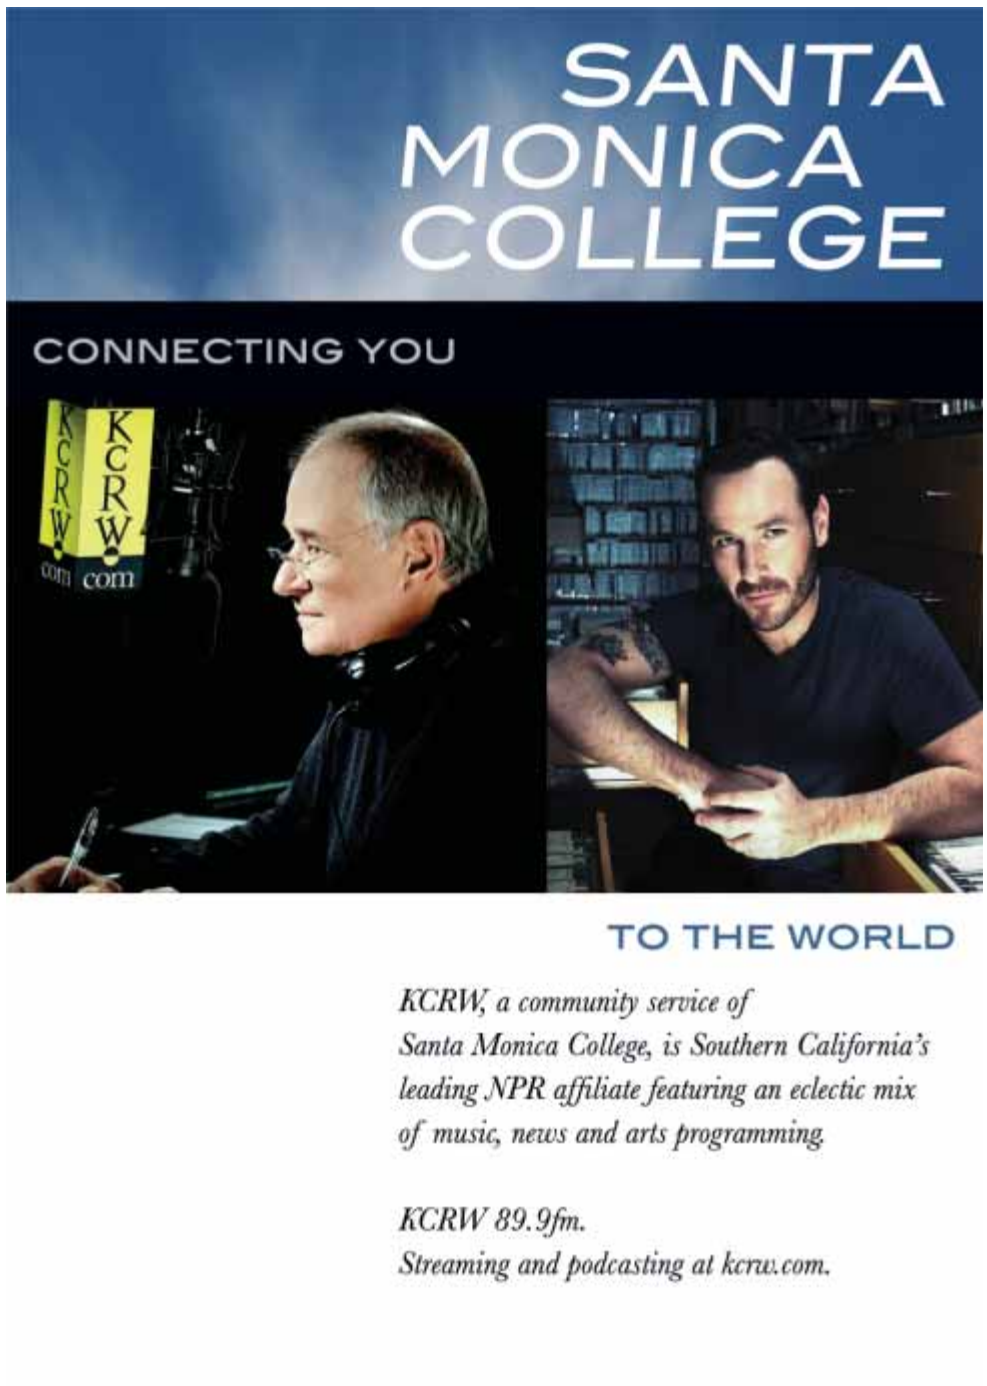

Wozniak had been scheduled to marry Rachel Buffet, one of his "Nine" co-stars, on Saturday.

Police detained a 17-year-old boy Wednesday after he withdrew nearly $2,000 from Herr's bank account, money the boy said was for Wozniak, Costa Mesa police said. Detective Sgt. Ed Everett said the boy was not considered an accessory to the murders but may be charged with other crimes. His name was withheld because he is a minor.

Wozniak's father, Daryl Wozniak, said his son tried to commit suicide after his Wednesday arrest and was treated at Western Medical Center.

Daryl Wozniak said his son never showed any violent tendencies or psychological problems but stopped accepting his phone calls six months ago.

Two other people, Daniel Wozniak's brother Timothy Wozniak and Buffet's brother Noah Buffet, were arrested for investigation of being accessories after the fact. However, Everett said Sunday authorities have since determined neither was involved with the case, and he said neither is expected to be charged.

another mouth to feed," she said.

Brenden said placing students in host homes is always a worry. Coordinators are beginning to run out of names and referrals to use, but EF is sending out fliers to local high school students to advertise the opportunity to host exchange students.

For the 18 days foreign exchange students are in Malibu, they will attend classes held at Our Lady of Malibu. Classes will be held Monday through Friday and include English, American culture and American history. They will also take trips and do activities like attend a Dodger game, go to Disneyland and visit San Francisco.

During the students' stay, it is the host families' job to act like surrogate parents, Edwards said. They must take the students to local bus stops during the week and provide dinner. They may also participate in some of the students' activities.

Though Edwards has never been a host for EF students, she said her own experiences studying abroad attest to the benefits of hosting foreign exchange students. When she was in college, Edwards spent a couple weeks in Japan and stayed in a traditional Japanese household. She said she and her Japanese mom still exchange letters.

Brenden also said hosting foreign exchange students is as beneficial for the hosts as it is for the students. Because she has hosted before, when her own family went to Europe, they had people to visit and places to stay.

"My own kids knew every country on the map because they would say, 'Oh, that's where Alex comes from,' or 'Oh, that's were Freddy comes from,'" she said.

And through the years, Brenden has seen the connections other host families have made with their students.

"People always tell me, 'You never told us how difficult it is to say good bye.'" cancer in 2009.

"We rode the highways of America and changed the way movies were made in Hollywood," Peter Fonda, his "Easy Rider" co-star, said in comments carried by several news outlets. "I was blessed by his passion and friendship."

The success of "Easy Rider" and failure of his next film, "The Last Movie," fit the pattern for the talented but wild Hopper, who also had parts in such favorites as "Rebel Without a Cause," "Apocalypse Now," "Blue Velvet" and "Hoosiers."

Other tributes were posted on celebrities' websites and Twitter feeds.

"So long Dennis," actress Virginia Madsen, who starred in the Hopper-directed "The Hot Spot," said on her Twitter page. "U taught me so much."

After a promising start that included roles in two James Dean films, Hopper's acting career languished as he developed a reputation for tantrums and drug abuse. On the set of "True Grit," Hopper so angered John Wayne that the star reportedly chased Hopper with a loaded gun.

"Much of Hollywood," wrote critic-historian David Thomson, "found Hopper a pain in the neck."

All was forgiven when he collaborated with Fonda on a script about two pot-smoking, drug-dealing hippies on a cross-country motorcycle trip.

On the way, Hopper and Fonda befriend a drunken young lawyer (Jack Nicholson in a breakout role) but arouse the enmity of Southern rednecks and are murdered before they can return home.

"'Easy Rider' was never a motorcycle movie to me," Hopper said in 2009. "A lot of it was about politically what was going on in the country."

Fonda produced "Easy Rider" and Hopper directed it for a meager $380,000. It went on to gross $40 million worldwide, a substantial sum for its time.

It was a hit at Cannes, netted a best-screenplay Oscar nomination for Hopper, Fonda and Terry Southern.

The establishment gave official blessing in 1998 when "Easy Rider" was included in the United States National Film Registry for being "culturally, historically, or aesthetically significant."

Its success prompted studio heads to schedule a new kind of movie: low cost, with inventive photography and themes about a restive baby boom generation. With Hopper hailed as a brilliant filmmaker, Universal Pictures lavished $850,000 on his next project, "The Last Movie."

The title was prescient. Hopper took a large cast and crew to a village in Peru to film the tale of a tribe corrupted by a movie company. Trouble on the set developed almost immediately, as Peruvian authorities pestered the company and drug-induced orgies were reported.

The film took a drug-and-drink addled Hopper nearly a year to edit, and when it was released, "The Last Movie" was such a crashing failure that it made Hopper unwanted in Hollywood for a decade, and forced him to find work in Europe.

He made a remarkable comeback, starting with a memorable performance as a drugged-out journalist in Francis Ford Coppola's 1979 Vietnam War epic, "Apocalypse Now." Hopper was on drugs off camera, too, and his rambling chatter was worked into the film.

Hopper made a series of scattershot film appearances in the 1980s, but steady use of drugs and alcohol led him into rehab and at one point a hospital's psychiatric ward.

Upon his release, Hopper joined Alcoholics Anonymous, quit drugs and launched yet another comeback. It began in 1986 when he played an alcoholic ex-basketball star in "Hoosiers," and earned an Oscar nomination for best supporting actor.

His role as a wild drunk in "Blue Velvet," also in 1986, won him more acclaim, and years later the character wound up No. 36 on the AFI's list of top 50 movie villains.

He also returned to directing, with "Colors," "The Hot Spot" and "Chasers."

Dennis Lee Hopper was born in 1936, in Dodge City, Kan., and spent much of his youth on the nearby farm of his grandparents.

After moving to San Diego with his family, he played Shakespeare at the Old Globe Theater.

Scouted by the studios, Hopper was under contract to Columbia until he insulted the boss, Harry Cohn. From there he went to Warner Bros., where he made "Rebel Without a Cause" and "Giant" while in his late teens.

Later, he moved to New York to study at the Actors Studio, where Dean had learned his craft.

Hopper married five times. In January he filed to end his 14-year marriage to Victoria Hopper, who said in court filings that the actor was seeking to cut her out of her inheritance, a claim Hopper denied.

He was married to a scion of a Hollywood family Brooke Hayward for eight years and to Mamas and the Papas singer Michelle Phillips for eight days.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

A good time is had by all, Aries

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Just when you thought everything was clear, you discover otherwise. Confirm a get-together and make sure everyone is on the same page. Though you might not feel like pitching in, do. Tonight: A good time is had by all (if they are around you!).

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Your mind might not be present with others. Don't even think that they don't notice your mental drifting. Perhaps you need to hop into a car or make a call to whomever is distracting you. Tonight: Don't create a problem; choose to eliminate one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Your ability to engage others comes out. Your innate understanding of others and your ability to read body language make it easy for others to share matters they usually wouldn't. Tonight: You are everyone's confidant!

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Be sensitive to the many possibilities. The question might be simple: who, where and when. You will figure it out by going within and deciding what is important to you. Tonight: Make special time for a special person.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You might want to pitch in a little more. You have more energy than many others right now. If anyone can hit a home run, it is you, especially today. Your efforts do make a huge difference. Tonight: Relax, wherever you are.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ It appears that you take your creativity wherever you go. Often you hold back and don't share your opinions. Right now, your suggestions -- which often lead to solutions -- will be welcome. Tonight: Let your hair down.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Stay as close to home as possible, whether entertaining or squeezing in some work. Zero in on what is important to you. Don't allow a low level of worry to take over. Take a walk and release this energy. Tonight: Flipping the burgers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Keep conversations moving, and worry less about others' opinions. You might want to rethink an incident or a relationship. You suddenly realize that there is more than there appears to be. Tonight: Hang out with a friend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Be aware of what you are doing. A loss of self-discipline could be very costly or might become a problem. Be careful when dealing with someone you look up to. Your words could hang around for way too long. Tonight: Remember that there is a tomorrow.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You might want to confirm who is doing what before charging in. Misunderstandings seem to happen with ease. Use care, especially around financial matters. You might not be as comfortable as you would like to be. Tonight: The world, once more, is your oyster.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Know when to kick back and do little. Easily, you could be overwhelmed by recent events and happenings. Do rethink plans that revolve around tonight, or at least confirm them. Tonight: Make it OK to do nothing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You could feel vaguely out of sorts without a good reason. Don't over-analyze. Rather, think carefully, knowing what needs to happen. Your instincts could be off, and pushing to get answers won't work. Tonight: Hang out with friends.

Happy birthday

This year, you discover the real meaning of flexibility. You often will go overboard trying to accommodate others. You can understand where others are coming from and often cannot decide whether to defer. The issue will be how much to give and how to establish better boundaries. Your energy soars, making it difficult to limit your role. An issue that arises this year is how much to give. If you are single, you could enjoy dating more than ever.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

ARITHMO™ CrossMath

- Fill the grid with the set of given numbers (1 to 12) to satisfy the Equa demands (7 to 24) in the shaded boxes. The Equa demands represent the sum of the digits that you will insert into the empty squares.
- Each horizontal row has one Equa demand to satisfy; each vertical column also has one demand to satisfy. Each empty square in the grid dictates the math operation (addition +, subtraction -, multiplication X, and division ÷) that must be performed to meet the demands.
- You must follow the given math operations for each square and you must make sure all the numbers satisfy the demands in the shaded boxes when connected in adjacent threes and calculated together from left to right, and top to bottom.
- The numbers you insert into the grid must satisfy the Equa demands both horizontally and vertically.

For more games, go to www.arithmo.com

Fill in the empty fields with the given numbers so when calculated together they satisfy all Equas in the gray boxes:

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Among the ill-fated public relations moves by the Brown & Williamson tobacco company to counteract the industry's cascading legal problems in the year 2000 were these automated telephone announcements for 800-number callers (according to an April 2000 New York Times story): (1) a male chorus serenading callers with, "Oooh, the tobacco plant is a lovely plant / Its leaves so broad and green / But you shouldn't think about the tobacco plant / If you're still a teen," and (2) an earlier message featuring a sexy male voice intoning, "Brown & Williamson Tobacco is in love. We're a giant corporation, and you make us feel like a little kitten." "Thank you, lover."

■ American families from certain Asian and African cultures continue to ritually "circumcise" their young daughters, though the practice is illegal in the U.S. and most of the world. In May, the bioethics committee of the American Academy of Pediatrics changed its policy from absolutely banning such surgery to one which would sanction a minor "pinprick" on girls' genitals (comparable, it said, to ear-piercing), with the hope of satisfying parents so they would not opt to send the girls to the home countries for full genital "mutilation." U.S. anti-female-circumcision support groups were outraged. Said one advocate, "We don't let (husbands) beat their wives a little bit" just because their cultures permit wife-beating.
