Animal lovers of all ages are invited to attend the nonprofit Santa Monica Animal Shelter Foundation's first-ever fundraiser: an open house set for June 4.

The Santa Monica Animal Shelter, which is run by the City of Santa Monica, is a city service that receives support from the Santa Monica Animal Shelter Foundation (SMASF), an independent 501(c)3 nonprofit with a volunteer board, which works in concert with both the City and the Santa Monica Police Department's Animal Control arm.

"We want to continue to raise donations so that we can continue to help the shelter have all the resources they need for the animals that are at the shelter," Elizabeth Noble, a longtime shelter volunteer who is now chairperson of the SMASF board, said. "That includes being able to step in when they have animals that need extra veterinary care, and when they need those specific facility improvements and

Council debates how to get things done and not be up until 2 a.m.

City Council meetings are long and painful for councilmembers and members of the public alike, but the best way to reform them is unclear.

Marathon meetings that stretch on until the early hours of the morning can impact councilmembers' reasoning and make it challenging for local residents to participate in public comment. In addition, the introduction of remote public comment during the pandemic made it easier for people to participate in Council meetings as well as meetings of boards and commissions. But, as meetings transition back in person, the future of this feature is both costly and uncertain.

With all of these problems in mind, councilmembers held a study session during their meeting to discuss the best way to hold meetings.

There are several options for change on the table.

The first staff suggestion, moving meeting start time to 4:30 p.m, was unanimously shot down.

"I do think we need to be sensitive that we don't create a structure where people who were in that traditional nine to five job

One of Santa Monica's oldest bars has new leadership at the helm

Since the end of prohibition to today there has always been a bar located at 2907 Main Street, and the newest owners of the property have no plans on changing that.

The building first opened as Willie Ts in the 1930s and for the last 25 years has been home to Rick's Tavern. Mark and Addie Van Gessel recently purchased Rick's from Owner Howard Alpert, and are now preparing to reopen the space as Tavern on Main in time for 4th of July weekend.

Residents who were sad to see the closing of a longtime casual watering hole need not shed a tear, as Addie says the revamped tavern will keep the spirit of Rick's alive and has a simple mission of "good pints, good times."

In a city hawking $30 truffle guacamole where going out can feel more about getting a good photo than a good meal, the pair sees the value in keeping casual and welcoming community spaces alive. In fact, this is their hospitality niche as they own both beloved longtime Venice dive bar Hinano Cafe and the new yet nostalgic feeling Nighthawk Breakfast Bar.

"We're really so happy to become members of the Santa Monica and the Main Street community," said upgrades."

Though the shelter has the resources to provide for the needs of all the animals in its care, SMASF works hard to enrich the lives of the animals, but it can't do it alone. In addition to dedicated volunteers, SMASF raises money and collects other donations for the shelter.

On Saturday, June 4, from noon to 3 p.m., the shelter will open its doors to the public for "a fun afternoon to support animals and help us raise much needed funds for the Santa Monica Animal Shelter," according to information provided by Noble.

The event isn't just an adoption opportunity — although there will be a chance to meet the dogs, cats and other animals currently residing at the shelter, located at 1640 9th Street. There will also be live music provided by the School of Rock West LA House Band, face painting by The Magical Telier and a raffle seeking small donations in exchange for the chance to win great prizes like a learning experience with the Santa Monica Police Forensics Department, plus gift certificates and other prizes from local businesses.

The event will also feature tasty treats from Vienna Pastry and the Kona Ice truck.

If scaly critters are more your speed, there's also a chance to hang out with reptiles from Allan's Pet Center.

The best part, Noble said, was that all of these local small businesses are donating their time to support the cause, meaning 100 percent of all funds raised at the three-hour event will go to the Animal Shelter.

"The donation that they're giving us to[ward] a raffle ticket or the donation they're giving us is actually going to go to the shelter — it did not go to pay for face painting or anything," Noble said.

The shelter is not just a traditional pound for stray or abandoned pets; it is a part of the City's Animal Services Unit, which also includes animal control. That means that in addition to pets in need of permanent homes, the shelter is also going out to emergency calls for injured wild animals or other animal-related issues in the city. The more support SMASF can provide, the less stress these emergency calls put on the shelter.

As of last week, the Santa Monica Animal Shelter has six dogs and one cat ready for adoption, plus four bunnies, a duck and a guinea pig. Noble said the shelter usually is caring for additional animals that aren't quite ready to be placed into homes.

JAMS Student Selected to Perform at Carnegie Hall

Grayson Fitzgerald, an eighth grade student at John Adams Middle School (JAMS) in the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District (SMMUSD), has been selected as a junior finalist for the 2022 middle school honors performance series at Carnegie Hall. Grayson will perform as a string bassist in June with the middle school honors orchestra, which will be conducted by Ms. Angela Woo, JAMS director of instrumental music. Participation in one of the three honors junior ensembles is limited to the highest-rated middle school performers from around the world.

Grayson was nominated for the honors performance series earlier this year and was recently accepted by the honors selection board. Acceptance to the elite group is a direct result of his talent, dedication, and achievements.

> “I could not be prouder of Grayson and his acceptance to the 2022 Honors Performance Middle School Orchestra - Ms. Angela Woo Grayson has studied music for five years and is a member of his school’s highest instrumental music groups: chamber orchestra and wind ensemble, (where he plays the string bass, as well as the Jazz Band (where he plays guitar). In 2022 he was also selected to participate in the California All State and All Southern Honors Orchestras. In response to his selection as a junior finalist with the honors performance series, Grayson said, “The invitation to perform with other student musicians from around the world at Carnegie Hall is an amazing way to end this school year, my time in middle school, and to celebrate the return to performing music in person. I feel incredibly honored and excited to participate, and I can’t wait to experience Carnegie Hall, spend time in New York City, and for all the opportunities to come that playing music will provide throughout my life.”

“I could not be prouder of Grayson and his acceptance to the 2022 Honors Performance Middle School Orchestra,” said JAMS Director Woo. “To perform in Carnegie Hall is a transformative experience for any musician, and I’m thrilled for Grayson to have the opportunity to stand on the same stage as many of the “giants” of the music world such as Peter Tchaikovsky, George Gershwin, and Leonard Bernstein. Having been invited to conduct with the Honors Performance Series in 2019 and 2020, I can say that it is a special privilege to share in Grayson’s musical journey, starting with his arrival to SMMUSD as a 6th grader where he first learned to play the string bass at JAMS, to his culminating performance as a middle school musician in Carnegie Hall.”

Grayson will join student performers from 39 states, the District of Columbia, and Canada for a special performance at the world-famous Carnegie Hall, a venue that marks the pinnacle of musical achievement. He is raising funds to pay for this music adventure through GoFundMe: https://gofund.me/78389d46.

The junior finalists will come together in New York City for five days in June. They will have the opportunity to learn from world-renowned conductors, work with other junior finalists, and get a taste of New York City. The three-day program will culminate in a middle school honors group performance on Saturday, June 18, 2022, and is open to the public. Tickets can be purchased through the Carnegie Hall box office.

“After having performances worldwide impacted for over a year, we are excited to be returning to the stage at Carnegie Hall. Being selected to the honors performance series is something each junior finalist should be extremely proud of accomplishing,” said Marion Gomez, program director for the honors performance series. “We process thousands of nominations annually, selecting only the most talented performers. Working with these conductors and performing at Carnegie Hall is a once-in-a-lifetime experience that these musicians will never forget.”

The honors performance series was created to showcase accomplished individual middle school performers on an international level by allowing them to study under master conductors and perform in the celebrated venue, Carnegie Hall. Learn more by visiting www.honorsperformance.org.

California needs to keep Diablo Canyon Power Plant running

ALEX TREMBATH AND ADAM STEIN

Gov. Gavin Newsom is reportedly considering extending a lifeline to the Diablo Canyon Power Plant, California's last operating nuclear power plant. He should do so. Diablo Canyon is the single-largest generator of zero-carbon energy in the state. The only thing the plant requires to continue operating is political leadership on the part of the governor.

Institutional environmentalist groups, which came of age largely before climate change was widely recognized as a global threat, have been pressuring governments to shut down zero-emissions nuclear power plants for decades. Former New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo allied with environmental groups to shut down the Indian Point power plant in 2020, which resulted in immediate increases in both carbon emissions and electricity costs. The Natural Resources Defense Council has led the activist movement to shut down Diablo Canyon.

But some political leaders are bucking this trend and making real efforts to keep existing nuclear plants online. Newsom should follow their lead.

Last month, U.S. Energy Secretary Jennifer Granholm announced $6 billion in funds from the Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act to help keep the nation's existing nuclear plants open.

The Diablo Canyon nuclear plant on the coast of San Luis Obispo County generates almost 9% of the state's total electricity and does so profitably. It does not require financial rescue by the federal government. Nonetheless, the plant is scheduled to shut down within three years.

Why? Because Diablo Canyon has lacked the support of political leadership.

Newsom previously supported retiring the 2 gigawatts of zero-carbon power provided by Diablo Canyon. And in 2016, the California Public Utilities Commission brokered a deal with the state's largest utility, PG&E, and a coalition of environmental groups, alleging that the state could replace Diablo Canyon's generation with zero-carbon power from renewables.

If that had been feasible, it would have amounted — at best — to a standstill in California's clean-energy goals. But it never was feasible. A recent Stanford University report estimates that closing Diablo this decade will result in 10% higher carbon emissions in California through 2035.

This, combined with the hundreds of jobs supported by the operation of Diablo Canyon and the lack of any other pollution from the plant, might explain why keeping the plant open enjoys strong support from local elected officials, the local electrical workers union and clean-energy activists.

Earlier this year, dozens of scientists wrote an open letter to Newsom urging him to reverse the scheduled closure of Diablo Canyon. "We are convinced it is impossible to replace the carbon-free electric output of Diablo Canyon at or near the time the plants are scheduled to close," wrote the scientists, including two former U.S. energy secretaries.

But as the story of Diablo Canyon up until now shows, support from scientists and the local community is not always enough to overcome the influence of anti-nuclear ideology.

California has an opportunity to lead. With expectations for an electric power capacity shortfall and the stalling out of renewables deployment across the state, extending Diablo Canyon's license may become not just the climate-smart option but a necessary one to keep the lights on. The state Assembly and Senate should immediately hold hearings to explore policy options for keeping the plant online.

Several parties requested an extension to the application deadline and Newsom's office requested adjustments to the federal program to suit PG&E's needs.

But the linchpin in any effort to keep Diablo Canyon online will be leadership from the top. Even if changes are made to the federal program and Diablo Canyon does get those funds, the real challenges still remain: securing waivers from the State Water Board, amendments or cancellation of the agreement to shut down the plant, and reinitiating the license extension process with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Newsom has an opportunity to show political bravery by paying less attention to the environmental lobbyists in his backyard and more attention to climate leadership from President Biden and Secretary Granholm.

Alex Trembath is the deputy director of The Breakthrough Institute, a think tank focused on technological solutions to environmental problems. Adam Stein is the director of nuclear innovation at The Breakthrough Institute.

Slow-growth heads are spinning after Phil Brock's proposal last week that hands developers a free pass to exceed local zoning and overbuild our city with unneeded market-rate housing instead of deed-restricted affordable housing for our working families.

Perhaps Phil will protest that's an unintended consequence, but think this through.

Residents have been signing petitions for a ballot measure to raise tens of millions of dollars for affordable housing. Without that money, leveraged with grants and tax credits, Santa Monica will never be able to provide the requisite low-income housing to meet the current state mandate.

If we fail to address our affordable housing challenges, the state can penalize our city by bulldozing local zoning limits and empowering developers to proceed willy-nilly, building still more highly profitable market-rate housing we don't need.

Phil has proposed a competing ballot measure, which would replace the resident-signed petition to raise affordable housing money. One consequence: missed affordable housing opportunities could lead to state intervention, and further loss of local control over our zoning.

An unintended disaster is still a disaster. City Council, please think this through before putting Phil's idea on the ballot.

Safe Place for Youth hosts 6th Annual Gala

Safe Place for Youth invites the public to join them for their Safe Place for Youth, 6th Annual Gala at the Fairmont Miramar Hotel, Santa Monica on Thursday June 9 to raise vital funds to provide a caring connection and housing for 1,000 unhoused and at-risk young people annually. The Safe Place for Youth 6th Annual Gala will take place under the historic fig tree in front of the hotel with live music, food, specialty cocktails and a silent auction.

The event will honor Los Angeles City Councilmember, Mike Bonin and Specialty Family Foundation for their unwavering commitment to Safe Place for Youth and unhoused youth in our community.

"I am humbled and deeply moved to receive this honor from Safe Place for Youth, a tremendous organization doing the work of angels. I have worked with SPY since its early days and share its fierce commitment to our unhoused youth. SPY's mission is righteous, and its work is transformative," said Bonin.

"At Specialty Family Foundation we look for heroes on a mission to replace conditions that lead to poverty with conditions that lead instead to hope and opportunity. We seek organizations with the audacity to believe that the way things should be, can be. We know of no investment made in our Foundation's history that fits this description more than our many investments in Safe Place for Youth (SPY). SPY's urgent, compassionate, and seemingly boundless approach to meeting the needs of our region's young unhoused community members is a "light in the darkness" of our region's housing crisis and a proof point of hope for each and every life SPY touches," said Joe Womac, President of Specialty Family Foundation

This event will take place outside so please dress accordingly. Cocktail attire.

"Safe Place for Youth's annual gala is a special evening of celebration and support for SPY's life- saving and life-affirming work. Each year, our dedicated team serves over 1,000 youth experiencing homelessness, by providing a comprehensive array of supportive services and housing, and by empowering our youth members to thrive. With close to 5,000 youth experiencing homelessness in LA County, on any given night, raising awareness and supporting unhoused young people is more important than ever. But we can't do this work alone, which is why we are so thrilled to be able to bring together our community of supporters and honor two incredible champions who have made our work possible: Councilman Mike Bonin and the Specialty Family Foundation. I am very much looking forward to a fantastic event and night to remember, as our community comes together to end youth homelessness," said Erika Hartman, Executive Director, Safe Place for Youth.

MEETINGS

aren't able to participate either as council members or as members of the public," said Councilmember Gleam Davis.

The second staff suggestion, holding more meetings per month in hopes of shortening overall meeting length, was a subject of greater debate.

Councilmember Phil Brock supports adding more meetings as he feels that the current length of meetings is having a noticeable effect on councilmembers' decision making skills.

"I absolutely believe in separating our study sessions and the appeals to a different day when necessary," said Brock, adding that he supports this for two main reasons, "one to make sure we're fresh and secondly, to make sure that residents really feel they're being heard and can tune in at a great time to be part of their participatory government."

Councilmember Lana Negrete disagreed and said that the current meeting schedule was already onerous enough for Councilmembers, particularly members like herself who are also working parents. Negrete does not feel like adding more meetings would result in greater net efficiency.

"I can count some of the months we were here for back to back nights multiple weeks in a row, and like Councilmember Davis said, I don't think that it's making the meetings any shorter. It's just redistributing it, and I think it'll actually just mean that we'll go longer at each of those meetings because we're all very long winded," said Negrete.

One possible change to meetings that Councilmembers were generally supportive of is moving all public comment to the beginning of the meeting.

The benefit is that members of the public will have a set time to speak at and thus will not need to stay up until very late hours in order to comment on an item that matters to them. The detriment is that public commenters will not hear a staff report or any councilmember comments prior before speaking on a subject and councilmembers may struggle to recall what was said on an item during public comment when it comes time to discuss it several hours later.

"Most people who come up to the mic have already decided what they're going to say. It's rarely in my experience based on anything we've said up here during the meeting," said Negrete. "We listen, or at least I know I do, to the comments that are made, so if they're made up front, we take notes and it is going to impact us in the discussion later on."

Councilmembers were also interested in continuing the option of continuing to allow remote participation in meetings as it allows greater access and input opportunities for members of the public. Currently with the exception of City Council, all other civic meetings are still taking place remotely. Moving all civic meetings to a hybrid model (in person meetings with a remote comment option) would incur significant costs.

Staff estimates that the annual cost would be $459,852. This includes covering the regular and overtime pay for staff members to assist in running these meetings as well as the one time costs of meeting room upgrades to facilitate remote public comment.

"I do think for any large number of reasons whether it's child care, differential abilities, or simply just expanding the universe of people who feel comfortable participating or meetings, we need to find a way to do truly hybrid meetings, which include an option to do live participation. And I understand it will be more expensive, and we'll probably have to have a discussion about how we pay for that," said Councilmember Gleam Davis.

> "Most people who come up to the mic have already decided what they're going to say. It's rarely in my experience based on anything we've said up here during the meeting - Lana Negrete"

Based on councilmembers' comments in the study session staff will return with formal recommendations for altering the format of meetings.

While the core essence of Rick's is staying the same, the Van Gessels will be bringing in some exciting change, the most notable being the addition of a breakfast and lunch service.

Leaning on their learnings from Nighthawk Breakfast Bar, they are excited to be the only spot on the block offering morning eats and have already crafted a menu of indulgent delights. These include pancakes, steak and eggs, cinnamon churro French toast, chilaquiles and fried chicken and waffles.

The lunch, dinner and light night bites menus are also rooted in comfort food classics. Rick's well loved chicken wings are sticking around and will be complemented by a fun range of sauces including buffalo sauce, Jamaican jerk, garlic parm, Cajun barbecue and a Thai sauce. Other highlights include bacon wrapped shrimp, short rib poutine, cool ranch Doritos chicken fingers, a Cuban sandwich, bacon mac and cheese bites and homemade cookies.

With hours from 8 a.m. to 2 a.m. seven days a week, Tavern on Main will be able to cater to essentially any meal time.

The space is also undergoing a facelift as the Van Gessels want to create a real pub feel where people are comfortable to come dine, drink and hang all day long. The marble bar is being renovated, an interior brick wall being revealed and new seating installed.

There will be a stronger emphasis on beer on tap with the couple planning to bring in 12 draft offerings in addition to select bottles. The cocktail menu is also being refreshed and will complement the brunch service with not one, nor two, but three different types of bloody marys.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (May 31)

You tap into higher, more energized states and feel strangely calm and still inside them. Insights pop to mind for you and others around you, which will prove quite prescient. Definitely act on your whims. More highlights: a lucrative summer business move, new family and a chance to right a wrong of the past. Libra and Sagittarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 2, 30, 18, 4 and 17.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You can sense how much someone needs you, and that can get heavy. What offsets the weight is realizing how much you need them. Helping has a way of organizing and sharpening you to greatness.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). It will be incredibly satisfying to use your power to make someone else look good. They deserve to be seen in this lovely light. The glow will bounce back most pleasingly onto you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). In short, you like them and you're not totally sure they feel the same. It's an uncomfortable but exciting place to be, perched in anticipation of a potentially exhilarating learning curve.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Economic circumstances will affect what you do, but not how you feel. You can tap into a glorious mood at any price point, especially when you're around your favorite people.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Because you come across as fantastically capable, you'll be given more work than you deserve or can do alone. Don't be afraid to mention it! Your lack of pretense inspires someone to help.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The goods are coming. In anticipation, lines form; people jockey for position. Something to keep in mind: Nothing at stake here has inherent value. All value has been assigned and/or agreed upon.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Success is neither mysterious nor complicated. It boils down to repetition. Do the desired thing until it's the automatic thing. Anything that gets repeated will become ingrained.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). While versatility is a useful virtue, the upcoming adventure will require you to specialize. The focus perfectly suits your new mood. Anyway, you'd rather be masterful at one thing than adequate at everything.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Do not concern yourself with who deserves what, as it's too subjective a territory to waste your time with. It's a good day to shoot high, even unreasonably so, because you just might get it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). People are picking up what you're putting down today, even when it's done in very small gestures or with little more than subliminal intent. Given the telepathic vibes, you'll be careful what you think!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). One of the many reasons that your pleasure matters is that you will not be able to bring yourself into compliance with your better angels until you've tended to your creature comforts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). With so much else going on in your life and the lives of those close to you, the goal you want the most seems to be getting the least of your attention. To flip this, you'll need new rules.
