Neighboring protests trigger local curfews

The city of Santa Monica was under a citywide curfew Tuesday for the third consecutive day.

Officials announced the restriction Tuesday morning. Residents were required to stay home from 2 p.m. Tuesday through 5:30 a.m. Wednesday. Emergency responders were exempt, as were those traveling to and from work or seeking or giving emergency care.

Curfews have been in place since Sunday when looters ransacked sections of the city during a protest against police violence.

According to City Spokeswoman Constance Farrell, the City continues to actively monitor and respond to unlawful activity within and outside of its borders.

Police chief: More than 2,700 arrests in Los Angeles so far

JOHN ANTCZAK, BRIAN MELLEY AND KATHLEEN RONAYNE
Associated Press

More than 2,700 people have been arrested since protests and violence began in Los Angeles in response to the death of George Floyd.

Chief Michel Moore told the city Police Commission on Tuesday that about 2,500 of those arrests were for failure to disperse or curfew violations.

The remainder were for crimes including burglary, looting, assaults on police officers and other violence, chief told the panel, which functions as the Police Department's civilian oversight board.

A huge new demonstration filled streets in the Hollywood area, with police and National Guard troops on scene.

Earlier, police officers took a knee with clergy-led demonstrators near the downtown police headquarters where speakers urged everyone to heed the call of Floyd's family for people to protest peacefully.

Other major cities including San Francisco and San Diego also were calm.

Los Angeles County, however, announced its 10 million residents would again be under curfew starting at 6 p.m. Other jurisdictions around the state also renewed curfews.

The full impact of curfews on the ability to police downtown Los Angeles and other areas of the city was evident by Sunday night, Moore said on Monday.

Violence and thefts on Monday were not on the scale of the weekend, when blocks of stores were devastated, police cars torched and officers injured.

In Sacramento, where two-thirds of downtown businesses were damaged over the weekend, 500 National Guard troops were deployed and the city imposed a Monday night curfew.

Most demonstrations were peaceful and sympathy was expressed by law enforcement. Riverside County Sheriff Chad Bianco took a knee at the invitation of demonstrators.

"We support and will protect those who wish to demonstrate peacefully," U.S. Attorney Nick Hanna in Los Angeles said while announcing the FBI will help identify people who commit serious crimes.

San Diego Police Chief David Nisleit said Floyd's death prompted him to revisit department policy and stop the use of a controversial neck restraint method. Floyd, who was black, was handcuffed and on the ground pleading for air as a white police officer pressed a knee on his neck for several minutes.

Most of Monday's demonstrations ended when curfews took effect. But remaining crowds tossed fireworks and bottles in several cities, and authorities responded with tear gas and rubber bullets.

Police who had been overwhelmed during the weekend were reinforced by 4,500 National Guard troops.

"Don't be dumb," Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti warned before the night's curfew went into effect.

Even so, scattered attacks on stores threatened to overshadow the message of protesters. Televised images showed attacks on stores in Van Nuys and Hollywood. Police said some people carried hammers.

At one point, a handful of protesters stopped would-be thieves from entering a Walgreens on Sunset Boulevard.

Many of the trashed businesses had only recently reopened after closures due to the coronavirus. Volunteers turned out to help merchants clean up broken glass, board up storefronts and scrub away graffiti.

Alex Rose clutched a garbage-picker as he joined others cleaning up downtown Sacramento.

"There's a very clear distinction between protesters and the looters," said Rose, who protested during the day Sunday. "I went home last night, and that's when the criminals came out."

Some leaders blamed outsiders for the violence.

Oakland's acting police chief said organized thieves traveled more than 100 miles (160 kilometers) from other cities.

"Fifteen, 20, 30 cars at a time, hitting as you've seen different shopping malls, different areas," Chief Susan Manheimer said.

San Francisco Police Chief Bill Scott said some people "came to this city with crowbars, bolt cutters, tools that were designed specifically to get into businesses, to take property and loot."

Ronayne reported from Sacramento. Associated Press journalists Olga Rodriguez and Janie Har in San Francisco, Cuneyt Dil and Adam Beam in Sacramento, Robert Jablon in Los Angeles contributed to this report.

LOOTING

an act of defiance against the racist criminal justice system.

What happened in Santa Monica Sunday afternoon was different, Patterson said. Using a heavy-duty drill, looters bored three-inch wide holes in Hi De Ho's door until the doorknob fell off.

"If this was a riot, they would have just broken this glass door and come in through there," he said. "But the fact that they brought these professional tools — they were obviously here to loot."

As hundreds of people protested against police violence in downtown Santa Monica Sunday, looters broke into dozens of stores in downtown Santa Monica and on Main Street.

With police blocking off the Third Street Promenade, they broke into Santa Monica Place and targeted clothing, jewelry and shoe stores, banks, restaurants and a Vons grocery store. Nine fires were set during the chaos.

Officials said more than 400 people were arrested later that evening but have not disclosed how many were charged with looting or burglary. More than 150 businesses sustained significant damage.

On Monday morning, about 100 members of the National Guard, who had arrived in Santa Monica Sunday evening, stood throughout the city as hundreds of people came to help clean up debris from broken windows and scrub graffiti.

Patterson said more than $40,000 worth of merchandise was taken from Hi De Ho, which is considered Los Angeles' longest-running comic book store. He said he was already worried about how the business would keep going with the shutdown and the loss of the summer tourism season. He's established a fundraiser to help pay for repairs (https://www.gofundme.com/f/help-hideho-comics-recover-from-looting).

"It's a huge setback," he said.

Without rent forgiveness or additional loans, Patterson said he predicts a wave of small businesses to close in two or three months.

"It's going to be a ghost town," he said.

Many residents have criticized the way the Santa Monica Police Department handled the situation on Sunday, saying that the scores of officers who were deployed to block protesters — and used tear gas and rubber bullets in an attempt to disperse them — should have focused on looting.

A petition circulated on Change.org that had amassed more than 8,000 signatures as of Tuesday morning called for SMPD Chief of Police Cynthia Renaud to be recalled.

The petition's organizer, Oliver Greene, said it appeared that police stood by while looters hit dozens of stores without clear direction from Renaud.

Andrew Kirschner, the owner and chef of Tar & Roses, said his restaurant was ransacked and looted for an hour without any intervention by police.

Kirschner said cops standing near the restaurant while it was being looted told his landlord that there was nothing they could do because the looters outnumbered them.

But there were plenty of cops monitoring protesters, he said.

"There were hundreds of cops standing there at the protest — just standing there all in one spot — while all the looters were destroying properties behind their backs and not doing anything about it," he said.

Kirschner said Tar & Roses was destroyed "from top to bottom."

"They destroyed everything in there, from the tables and chairs, to the counters, to the light fixtures, walls and mirrors, plates — every bottle of wine was smashed or stolen," he said. "It's like a hurricane tore through there."

He said insurance will likely cover the damage, but his staff, who were preparing to return the following week for "COVID-19-style dining," will be left out in the cold.

"That's the tragedy of the whole thing. People were dying to get back to work and that's not going to happen now for at least four to six weeks while we put the place back together," he said.

CURFEWS

destruction two days ago, the City is taking ongoing actions to keep our community safe," she said. "These actions include active deployment of the Santa Monica Police Department across our community, maintaining a national guard presence in the Civic Center and Downtown Areas, drawing on mutual aid resources where necessary, and imposing curfews."

She said curfews are set based on an overall assessment of the risks to persons or property.

"Based on an assessment of all the circumstances, a decision was made to move to a 2 p.m. start time for the curfew (Tuesday)," she said. "The City will be reevaluating the circumstances each day to see whether a curfew remains necessary and if so what the appropriate start time for that curfew is. The National Guard will remain in place indefinitely, until the City makes a determination based on regional activity that their presence is no longer needed."

SMPD Lt. Joseph Cortez said local officers are committed to preventing any kind of violence. The pre-emptive and preventative strategy includes education about curfews and enforcement where necessary.

"We are going to assure residents that anyone out will be contacted and educated about the curfew," he said. "If they fail to leave or are in possession of dangerous items or looting material, we will be taking them to jail."

Cortez said five individuals were arrested Tuesday.

"We are going to be responsive, we are not going to be reactive," he said.

According to City Hall, forty-one arrests were made Monday and 438 were made Sunday. The city has recorded 347 damage reports, including 84 reports of graffiti and 292 reports of damage to retail businesses, of which 155 indicated significant damage. The city is calling affected businesses today to get further details on estimated cost of damages and stolen property.

Business owners should report past looting and vandalism to santamonicapd.org/crimereport/. The most important question to answer is 3. All other questions can be answered with "no". Community members should continue to submit information related to evidence and surveillance to info@santamonica.gov.

Trump threatens military force against protesters nationwide

DARLENE SUPERVILLE, TIM SULLIVAN AND AARON MORRISON
Associated Press

Wielding extraordinary federal authority, President Donald Trump threatened the nation's governors on Monday that he would deploy the military to states if they did not stamp out violent protests over police brutality that have roiled the nation over the past week. His announcement came as police under federal command forced back peaceful demonstrators with tear gas so he could walk to a nearby church and pose with a Bible.

Trump's bellicose rhetoric came as the nation convulsed through another round of violence over the death of George Floyd at a time when the country is already buckling under the coronavirus outbreak and the Depression-level unemployment it has caused. The president demanded an end to the heated protests in remarks from the White House Rose Garden and vowed to use more force to achieve that aim.

If governors throughout the country do not deploy the National Guard in sufficient numbers to "dominate the streets," Trump said the U.S. military would step in to "quickly solve the problem for them."

"We have the greatest country in the world," the president declared. "We're going to keep it safe."

A military deployment by Trump to U.S. states would mark a stunning federal intervention rarely seen in modern American history. Yet the message Trump appeared to be sending with the brazen pushback of protesters outside the White House was that he sees few limits to what he is willing to do.

Some around the president likened the moment to 1968, when Richard Nixon ran as the law-and-order candidate in the aftermath of a summer of riots, capturing the White House. But despite his efforts to portray himself as a political outsider, Trump is an incumbent who risks being held responsible for the violence.

Minutes before Trump began speaking, police and National Guard soldiers began aggressively forcing back hundreds of peaceful protesters who had gathered in Lafayette Park, across the street from the White House, where they were chanting against police brutality and Floyd's death in Minneapolis. As Trump spoke, tear gas canisters could be heard exploding.

Floyd died last week after he was pinned to the pavement by a police officer who put his knee on the handcuffed black man's neck until he stopped breathing. His death set off protests that spread from Minneapolis across America. His brother Terrence pleaded with protesters on Monday to remain peaceful.

Five months before Election Day, the president made clear that he would stake his reelection efforts on convincing voters that his strong-arm approach was warranted to quell the most intense civil unrest since the 1960s. He made little effort to address the grievances of black Americans and others outraged by Floyd's death and the scourge of police brutality, undermining what his campaign had hoped would be increased appeal to African American voters.

The scene in and around the White House on Monday night appeared to be carefully orchestrated. As the crowd of protesters grew, Attorney General William Barr arrived in Lafayette Park to look over at the demonstrations and the swarm of law enforcement.

The sudden shift in tactics against the protesters was initially a mystery. Then, after finishing his Rose Garden remarks, Trump emerged from the White House gates and walked through the park to St. John's Church, where an office had been set on fire the previous night.

Trump, who rarely attends church, held up a Bible and gathered a group of advisers — all white — to pose for photos.

The moment was quickly decried by Trump's critics, with New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo saying the president "used the military to push out a peaceful protest so he could have a photo op at a church."

"It's all just a reality TV show for this president," he said on Twitter. "Shameful."

Federal law permits presidents to dispatch the military into states to suppress an insurrection or if a state is defying federal law, legal experts said. But Trump's statements also set up an immediate conflict with officials in New York and other states who asserted that the president does not have the unilateral right to send in troops against the will of local governments.

The country has been beset by angry demonstrations for the past week in some of the most widespread racial unrest in the U.S. since the 1960s. Spurred largely by Floyd's death, protesters have taken to the streets to decry the killings of black people by police. Minneapolis Officer Derek Chauvin has been charged with murder, but protesters are demanding that three of his colleagues be prosecuted, too. All four were fired.

While most of the demonstrations have been peaceful, others have descended into violence, leaving neighborhoods in shambles, stores ransacked, windows broken and cars burned, despite curfews around the country and the deployment of thousands of National Guard members in at least 15 states.

On Monday, demonstrations erupted from Philadelphia, where hundreds of protesters spilled onto a highway in the heart of the city, to Atlanta, where police fired tear gas at demonstrators, to Nashville, where more than 60 National Guard soldiers put down their riot shields at the request of peaceful protesters who had gathered in front of Tennessee's state Capitol to honor Floyd. Two people were killed during protests in the Chicago suburb of Cicero, authorities said, but provided no details. In Louisville, Kentucky, riot police firing tear gas scattered several hundred protesters from downtown, violently capping a day of mostly peaceful protests.

A vehicle plowed through a group of law enforcement officers at a demonstration in Buffalo, New York, injuring at least two. Video from the scene showed the vehicle accelerating through an intersection shortly after officers apparently tackled a protester and handcuffed him. The officers were hospitalized in stable condition, authorities said.

In New York City, where nightfall has brought widespread scenes of destruction, large crowds rallied peacefully in Times Square and Brooklyn during the day. Then, in early evening, looters rushed into a Nike store in Manhattan

Magic: Turn Bad Into Great

I KNOW IT LOOKS DARK

Very very dark. American philosopher, political activist, author and social critic Dr. Cornel West said Monday evening on Brian Williams' show that now may be the darkest moment in American history. Or something very close to that. Cornel West never holds back, nor plays nice with his words.

The reasons for his assessment were socially and politically complex and not what you may have immediately thought.

But whoa. Wait. Not the Civil War? Not the arrival of the first slave ships in America 400 years ago? And this from a black man who seriously ponders his ideas and words before he turns them loose. He didn't say it outright, but you got the impression he felt Donald Trump and the Republicans are intent on and capable of destroying our democracy of 230 years.

No need to act incredulous, though. How many of us have let our thoughts wander to the dark side the last few days? Are we witnessing the beginnings of an American Armageddon?

DID WE JUST SEE STRIKE THREE WHIZ BY?

Within three months we've had to confront three disasters the likes of which this nation has rarely seen in 100 years. First, a pandemic that has so far taken the lives of more than 115,000 Americans and is threatening to pick up steam. Then, the economic fallout from that, the food lines, closed businesses and unemployment not seen since the Great Depression. And now, an assault on the peace and wellbeing of communities almost everywhere by the violent lawlessness of organized gangs of looters taking advantage of police deployment to handle large crowds of mostly peaceful protesters, over ingrained practices of police brutality and racial inequality, sparked by the recent murder of George Floyd.

But in the midst of the chaos, so many, many stories of sacrifice, reaching out, selflessness, bridges built, community spirit and even bravery, from ordinary people and local leaders who do understand we are all in this together. I say those stories, those people, represent a huge majority that wants real change and maybe this time they are not going to stop until they get it. The Great Realization of course includes equality and justice for all. All.

WE SHOWED UP TO CLEAN UP, TOGETHER

A lot of young people, it was reported, but Santa Monicans of all ages, races, genders, incomes, turned out independently Monday morning with brooms and trash bags to begin the huge task of cleaning up from the destruction of the night before. The City was out there too, in force. It was something that needed to be done, but it was also a way for people to say this is my community and I care about it. It was reported and televised widely by the media, to their credit.

I dislike the term "silver lining" in situations like this. I'd rather look for great good and change that can come hand in hand with great tragedy and loss. And if you've been glued to your screens, you have seen it, over and over.

Police, even captains and chiefs, taking a knee with protesters. Going in to nervous crowds and speaking with people, one on one. Even consoling, understanding how distraught people are over racism and injustice, seeming to be on an endless cycle. Protesters confronting those intent on violence and destruction and often dissuading them.

THE CITY AND POLICE RESPONSE

Here Sunday was terrible, with tragic consequences. Around 100 SM businesses were damaged or even destroyed. Many of them Mom and Pops, built up over years or decades of hard work. I reserve judgment until there is a good investigation but it appeared as though those entrusted with keeping us safe did not take the most obvious steps.

This didn't come out of nowhere. We saw what happened to other communities for two nights running. The police chief and her officers needed to sit down with the entire City Council to prepare. It would appear that didn't happen.

When you ask for a position like Police Chief, at very high profile, responsibility and salary, and City Council, with enviable benefits and prestige, you have to do so knowing you may have to step up during a war, or tsunami, earthquake or terrible fire, or civil unrest. You have to be ready for that. We were not, the consequences were extreme, and the residents need to know why not.

BUT THERE IS MUCH TO CELEBRATE

And build on. Let's focus on that. So many now seem to better understand the decades and centuries of racial oppression in the USA, how devastating it is for families of color, every single day, and how that degrades us all. "No Justice, No Peace" used to bring knee-jerk reaction from many whites, now much more understood and accepted. "Black Lives Matter" was a source of conflict not very long ago, and now seems to have hit home. (I saw someone post recently, a white woman, "If I see 'all lives matter' one more time, I think I'll scream -- it's not about YOU!")

These terrible events are that, and sad and depressing, but I see so much possibility for meaningful, radical, lasting, good change that I am choosing that perspective. Only light can chase the darkness, and the Beatles, among a few others, reminded us what that light is. It's all you need.

and protesters smashed storefront windows near Rockefeller Center. Video posted on social media showed some protesters arguing with people breaking windows, urging them to stop.

The city has already endured immense commercial damage from the unrest. On Monday, rioters got through the doors of the city's flagship Macy's store, famous for its Thanksgiving Day parade, and police later pulled at least two handcuffed men out of the store and put them into a van. By that time, most of the the street was littered with broken glass.

In Washington, protesters continued marching peacefully through Washington hours after being forced from Lafayette park and past the 7 p.m. curfew.

Eventually, within sight of the Capitol building, the marchers were turned back by law enforcement officers using tear gas, pellets and low-flying helicopters kicking up debris. As they dispersed, some protesters smashed windows at a nearby office building.

Earlier Monday, Trump told the nation's governors in a video conference that they "look like fools" for not deploying even more National Guard troops. "Most of you are weak," he said.

He added: "You've got to arrest people, you have to track people, you have to put them in jail for 10 years and you'll never see this stuff again."

Washington Gov. Jay Inslee, a Democrat, dismissed Trump's comments as the "rantings of an insecure man trying to look strong after building his entire political career on racism."

Former Vice President Joe Biden, the Democratic presidential candidate, vowed to address institutional racism in his first 100 days in office. He met in person with black leaders in Delaware and also held a virtual meeting with big-city mayors.

Biden said hate emerges "when you have somebody in power who breathes oxygen into the hate."

In Minneapolis, meanwhile, Floyd's brother Terrence made an emotional plea for peace at the site where Floyd was arrested.

"Let's switch it up, y'all. Let's switch it up. Do this peacefully, please," Terrence Floyd said as he urged people to use their power at the ballot box.

Also Monday, an autopsy commissioned for Floyd's family found that he died of asphyxiation from neck and back compression, the family's attorneys said.

Authorities in many cities have blamed the violence on outside agitators, though have provided little evidence to back that up.

But on Monday, federal authorities arrested a 28-year-old Illinois man saying he had posted self-recorded video on his Facebook page last week that showed him in Minneapolis handing out explosive devices and encouraging people to throw them at law enforcement officers.

More than 5,600 people nationwide have been arrested over the past week for such offenses as stealing, blocking highways and breaking curfew, according to a count by The Associated Press.

Sullivan and Morrison reported from Minneapolis. Associated Press journalists across the U.S. contributed to this report.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (JUNE 03)

Commitment is your forte this year. You'll put your money where your heart is, your muscle where your head is, your whole self where your values are -- no wonder you keep winning. Instincts land you in lucky places. You'll make a deal and get a lifelong friend and/or partner out of it. You'll accept a generous gift in November. Cancer and Virgo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 6, 29, 42, 24 and 11.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). While it is difficult to see beyond the environment one is immersed in, it is absolutely essential to personal responsibility. In a sick society, the status quo can be a terrible thing to uphold and protect.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). A person who doesn't know his or her own motives can do as much harm as one who hides or is dishonest about them. To know what you want and why you want it is powerful and inspires trust.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You value intelligence and realize that there are many different kinds. You'll attract others who value intelligence and have similar or complementary kinds to yours.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). However you treat yourself, you are inviting the world, either consciously or unconsciously, to treat you this same way. To bend over backward and give yourself respect and care is completely worthwhile.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You give your love in many forms: in the support of your friendship, the generosity of your conversational style, your warmth and charm, or the forthrightness of your pursuit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). What is keeping you from attracting the things you want? You'll give the question some serious thought and come up with a strategy for adjusting your output to change the input.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Even though you like and accept yourself for who you are, ultimately, you want to improve and grow. So when people challenge you, it's not a deal breaker. You'll see what you can learn.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You want to help people and make them happy, but you also recognize that this is not your job, obligation or purpose. If you only make yourself happy, that's one more happy person in the world.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You show people what you value in the way you live. It is therefore unnecessary, or even detracting, to say much else about it. Your example speaks volumes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). There's something you want to know. You could take a class. You could read up. Or you could just jump in. If the process is left to trial and error, most of the learning will come from error.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). These independent issues you're dealing with may actually be more connected than you realize. Look for patterns, with a keen eye to that old classic "cause and effect."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). As you take care of yourself, you are taking care of all the people who love you, the ones who depend on you, and even ones you don't know but with whom you happen to share a community.
