The Westside Food Bank braces for worsening humanitarian and hunger crisis

Westside Food Bank

FOOD: A queue for food bank supplies forming outside the Thelma Terry Building on Virginia Ave.

SCOTT SNOWDEN
SMDP Staff Writer

The Westside Food Bank, together with its partner agencies, is reporting a significant increase in the need for food assistance. Meals on Wheels West, for instance, has seen an almost two-fold rise among seniors and other homebound individuals.

Moreover, St. Joseph Center, which operates one of Westside Food Bank's largest partner food pantries, says that they're seeing families who used to access their food pantry 10-15 years ago returning since they can no longer meet their households' basic needs amidst rising inflation and other financial pressures.

"There's a myth that we've been trying to overcome – that the height of the need was during the height of the pandemic. And that's just not what we're seeing. We're actually seeing that the crisis is now in terms of hunger," says Genevieve Riutort, Chief Development Officer, Westside Food Bank.

The Santa Monica-based food bank has expanded its service over the past three years in direct response to the increase in need.

Council votes to allow ArcLight cinema complex to be repurposed

SCOTT SNOWDEN
SMDP Staff Writer

The former movie theater atop the Santa Monica Place Mall will transition to a new art gallery space following Council's recent decision to dissolve the Development Agreement (DA) that, in essence, tied the owner and operator of the Santa Monica Place shopping mall to developing the former ArcLight cinema complex solely as a movie theater, thus now allowing it to be repurposed for a different use.

This action is among the last of the legal formalities to be finalized before the property at 315 Colorado Avenue is transformed into the Arte Museum, self-described as a "50,000 square foot immersive, digital art destination." The development

New Modern Core Health and Wellness offers pelvic floor therapy and more in downtown Santa Monica

MODERN CORE: Dr. Corrine Macchi has opened a new wellness business in Downtown Santa Monica.

GRACE INEZ ADAMS
SMDP Staff Writer

Like many people, Corrine Macchi had never heard of pelvic floor therapy ten years ago. She came across it while working as a physical therapy aide and realized it was a field she found interesting and wanted to pursue further.

Now, having obtained her Doctorate in Physical Therapy from Drexel University, Dr. Macchi, who also has a degree in business administration, recently opened Modern Core Health & Wellness, her own physical therapy practice in Santa Monica.

While she offers various kinds of orthopedic physical therapy, as well as yoga instruction, she specializes in pelvic floor therapy – an area she said is often misunderstood and stigmatized, but has the potential to help treat a wide range of conditions.

"There is a bowl of muscles basically at the base of your trunk that is the pelvic floor," she explained. "That is obviously connected to your pelvis, but there are other muscles that connect onto your pelvis that could be impacting the pelvic floor, and also the nerves that supply these muscles."

"Everything's kind of connected, so lower back pain, for example, might actually start from your pelvic floor," she said.

Dr. Macchi said pelvic floor therapy can help people of any gender with issues including bladder function, bowel function, sexual function and pelvic pain and can also help relieve symptoms of uterine and ovarian-related

California's digital privacy battle: It's police vs. civil libertarians, with an abortion twist

CalMatters

ONLINE: Two sides are fighting over the future of online privacy.

KRISTEN HWANG
Special to the Daily Press

On March 1, 2019, 38-year-old Adbadalla Thabet arrived at a Bank of America in the Paramount neighborhood of Los Angeles to deposit cash from a string of gas stations he helped his family manage. As he parked, two other vehicles — one red, one gray — approached from behind. The driver of the gray vehicle shot and killed Thabet while the driver of the red vehicle took his backpack and sped away, court documents show.

Law enforcement suspected the two of following Thabet throughout the morning as he visited the family's gas stations to collect money. A "reverse search warrant" allowed the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department to demand that Google surrender identifying information of every device with a Google account at six locations Thabet visited during a five-hour window. The evidence collected from that warrant was used to prosecute Daniel Meza and Walter Meneses.

Meza pleaded guilty and Meneses pleaded no contest.

Law enforcement use of these warrants — also known as reverse keyword demands and geofence warrants — has become increasingly common but are controversial among civil liberties groups. They contend such warrants are unconstitutional and an invasion of digital privacy.

On Thursday, lawmakers in the California Assembly narrowly advanced a digital privacy bill prohibiting police from using warrants that compel tech companies to disclose the identities of individuals based on the location of their phone and internet search history.

The bill, carried by Assemblymember Mia Bonta, a Democrat from Oakland, is part of the reproductive health package sponsored by the powerful Women's Legislative Caucus and Future of Abortion Council, and is intended to protect the identities of people seeking abortion services or gender-affirming care. Abortion rights groups say stronger privacy protections are needed as more states move to criminalize abortion and transgender health care.

"People in California have a fundamental constitutional right to privacy in their reproductive health decisions," Bonta said during the floor debate, which stalled one vote shy of passing before squeaking through the process.

Google, which is typically the subject of these warrants, faced a more than 1,000% increase in location-based search warrants between 2018 and 2020, according to its own data — increasing from 982 to 11,554.

The measure mostly flew under the radar without opposition until a few weeks ago, when law enforcement agencies across the state began warning that it would impede their ability to solve a variety of crimes.

Santa Monica College

Ambassador Christopher P. Lu to Speak at Santa Monica College Commencement Ceremony June 13

U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations for Management and Reform Christopher P. Lu will be the speaker at the Santa Monica College (SMC) 2023 Commencement Ceremony. This year's ceremony will be the first in-person graduation to be held live since 2019.

SMC's 93rd Commencement Ceremony will start promptly at 5 p.m. on Tuesday, June 13, at Corsair Field, located on the main SMC campus (1900 Pico Blvd., Santa Monica). The ceremony will also be webcast live and available on the SMC Graduation webpage (smc.edu/graduation).

GRADUATION: Ambassador Lu will speak at Santa Monica College.

Families and friends from all over the world who are not able to attend graduation in person can go to smc.edu to enjoy the ceremony, congratulatory speeches, and "Move the Tassel Moment" for the graduates. The ceremony also features a "Salutation" by SMC Superintendent/President Dr. Kathryn E. Jeffery; "Board of Trustees Remarks" by SMC Board of Trustees Chair Barry Snell; "Faculty Challenge" by SMC Academic Senate President Jamar London, and the "Student Challenge" by graduating student Monique Janee Johnson.

"Santa Monica College has a storied history of providing a high-quality education to a diverse student population," said Ambassador Lu. "I can't think of a better place to address tomorrow's leaders and encourage them to tackle the challenges of the 21st century."

SMC will award 8,557 degrees and certificates. About 1,000 of the 6,162 students who have earned degrees and certificates are expected to take part in this year's graduation.

"Each year, we try to thoughtfully invite a commencement speaker whose life and career trajectory embodies what is possible for our students, who come from varied backgrounds, and who come to Santa Monica College to fulfill their educational and career goals," said SMC Superintendent/President Dr. Kathryn E. Jeffery. "We are thrilled to have Ambassador Chris P. Lu, the son of immigrants, who made history as the second Asian American to become a deputy secretary of any cabinet department! His presence and story will undoubtedly be an inspiration to our graduates and demonstrate the possibilities higher education can unlock."

Christopher P. Lu was nominated by President Biden on April 27, 2021, and was sworn in as U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations for Management and Reform on January 4, 2022, after being confirmed by the U.S. Senate.

As one of five ambassadors to the U.S. Mission to the UN, Ambassador Lu works to advance American foreign policy interests in all facets of the UN's work, including peace and security, development assistance, and human rights. Ambassador Lu leads the U.S. Mission's negotiations on the UN budget, promotes oversight of UN programs, and oversees reform initiatives.

During his public service career, Ambassador Lu has worked in all three branches of the federal government. From 2014 to 2017, he served as U.S. Deputy Secretary of Labor. In this role, Ambassador Lu was the chief operating officer of a department with 17,000 employees and a $12 billion budget.

From 2009 to 2013, he served as White House Cabinet Secretary and Assistant to the President, where he was President Obama's primary liaison to the federal agencies. At the end of the first term, President Obama said, "Through his dedication and tireless efforts, Chris has overseen one of the most stable and effective cabinets in history — a cabinet that has produced extraordinary accomplishments over the past four years."

During the Obama Administration, Ambassador Lu also co-chaired the White House Initiative on Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders.

Prior to his service in the executive branch, Ambassador Lu was Legislative Director and Acting Chief of Staff for then-Senator Obama. The day after Election Day 2008, Ambassador Lu was named Executive Director of the Obama-Biden transition planning efforts.

A lawyer by training, Ambassador Lu began his career as a law clerk for Judge Robert E. Cowen on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit and a litigation attorney at Sidley Austin. He also spent eight years as Deputy Chief Counsel of the House Oversight Committee.

Outside of government, Ambassador Lu has been a senior advisor at the global technology company FiscalNote, and a senior fellow at the University of Virginia Miller Center. He is the co-editor of the book Triumphs and Tragedies of the Modern Congress, and a fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration.

Ambassador Lu is a magna cum laude graduate of Princeton University and a cum laude graduate of Harvard Law School. He is also the recipient of an honorary doctorate from MacMurray College.

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING BEFORE THE SANTA MONICA PLANNING COMMISSION

SUBJECT: Proposed Amendments to the Text of the Santa Monica Municipal Code to Provide Incentives for Certain Housing Projects That Filed an Application Prior to Implementation of the City's 6th Cycle (2021-2029) Housing Element

A public hearing will be held by the Planning Commission to consider a Resolution recommending to the City Council that that the City Council adopt an Ordinance amending the text of the Zoning Ordinance to provide incentives for certain housing projects that filed an application prior to implementation of the City's 6th Cycle (2021-2029) Housing Element. More specifically, the following local incentives would allow:

1) A 15% inclusionary requirement for the development of off-site affordable housing units, giving the owners more flexibility to pool off-site affordable housing units into one 100% affordable housing project to satisfy off-site inclusionary requirements for multiple market-rate projects;

2) The grant of State Density Bonus waivers and concessions for the market rate projects as if the off-site units were provided on-site; and

3) An increase in the Downtown Community Plan maximum parking requirement from 0.5 to 1.0 spaces.

California State Parks to Hold Public Workshop for the Malibu Creek Ecosystem Restoration Project

California State Parks will be conducting a public workshop on the Malibu Creek Ecosystem Restoration Project on Tuesday, June 13, from 6 to 8 p.m. at Malibu City Hall, 23825 Stuart Ranch Road, Malibu, CA 90265 in the Senior Multipurpose Room. The project, which is moving into the pre-construction, engineering, and design (PED) phase, involves the removal of Rindge Dam and removal/modification of eight upstream barriers to improve creek habitat within the Malibu Creek watershed and nourish nearby beaches with sand. The workshop will give the public an overview of the project, the current work that is occurring, and an opportunity to ask State Parks and the project team questions about the project. An Integrated Feasibility Report (IFR) with Environmental Impact Report (EIR)/Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) was completed in 2020 by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and State Parks that resulted in the selection of a preferred project, called the Locally Preferred Plan. For more information about the public workshop, contact Judi Uthus, California Trout Public Engagement Specialist at juthus@caltrout.org. The public may sign up to receive project information and updates by emailing restoremalibucreek@parks.ca.gov and learn more about the project by visiting www.parks.ca.gov/MCERP and www.restoremalibucreek.org.

conditions such as endometriosis, PCOS and postpartum issues.

She said pelvic floor physical therapists often work with other medical specialties to effectively treat patients and supplement and complement other forms of care.

"Pelvic floor PT helps to reach your goals that medicine might not necessarily take care of," she said. "We're pretty collaborative with other specialties, specifically gynecology, urology, GI (gastrointestinal) docs, etc. to kind of do a little bit of detective work as far as which system is responsible for causing the issue that someone is experiencing."

Dr. Macchi said pelvic floor therapy typically involves a combination of education to help patients better understand where their own pelvic floor is and what is going on with it as well as manual therapy and personalized exercises. However, she said she works closely with each individual patient to develop a plan that they are comfortable with to address their unique needs and concerns.

"I always team up with the patient and if they're not comfortable doing something, there are other ways as to how we can approach getting them to where they need to be," she said. "That's something really big that I want everyone to know – it's a collaborative effort, it's not just me telling you what to do."

She said research shows that it typically takes between six to eight weeks to make true musculoskeletal changes.

"I expect to see results within that time period, but depending on what their background is and what is going on, that might be sooner or that might be later, but that's kind of a ballpark."

Dr. Macchi said she typically sees patients once a week and uses an online platform to send instructions for how to do exercises at home. She does not accept health insurance directly but said she can provide patients with an itemized superbill for reimbursement from their insurance.

is being managed by Macerich, the Santa Monica-based real estate investment trust that is the third-largest owner of shopping centers in the country. (ArcLight itself was operated by the Decurion Corporation until 2021 and now no one company owns the whole chain as individual sites across the country have been bought by different organizations.)

The Arte Museum is Korea's largest immersive media art exhibition organized by renowned digital design company d'strict. They created the colossal computer-generated "Wave" displayed at the Coex Convention & Exhibition Center in Seoul, South Korea, that you might have seen when it was circulating on social media a few month's back.

Set to open in early 2024, the Arte Museum is expected to draw one million visitors annually to Santa Monica Place.

The mall's ArcLight was given the green light by Council in April 2014, which was for the conversion of a then vacant retail space on the third floor. It subsequently proved very popular with locals and tourists alike. However, it ceased operations in 2020 as a result of the pandemic and was never reopened. The DA was only required because at that time, some additional height was needed to accommodate the theater. Today's Downtown Community Plan allows for the building height without a DA.

The item was first raised on the Council's agenda for the May 9, 2023 meeting where Roxanne Tanemori, Acting City Planning Division Manager of the City of Santa Monica Department of Planning and Community Development, provided a succinct staff report.

"The item before you tonight is a request to cancel the Santa Monica place development agreement," Tanemori said, recommending that council adopt a finding of no possibility of significant environmental effect pursuant to the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA). Tanemori also recommended that Council authorize the City Manager to take all necessary implementing actions to effectuate the cancellation.

"This action to council really allows Macerich the ability to reuse and release the space in support of economic activity both for the mall and broader downtown region," Tanemori said.

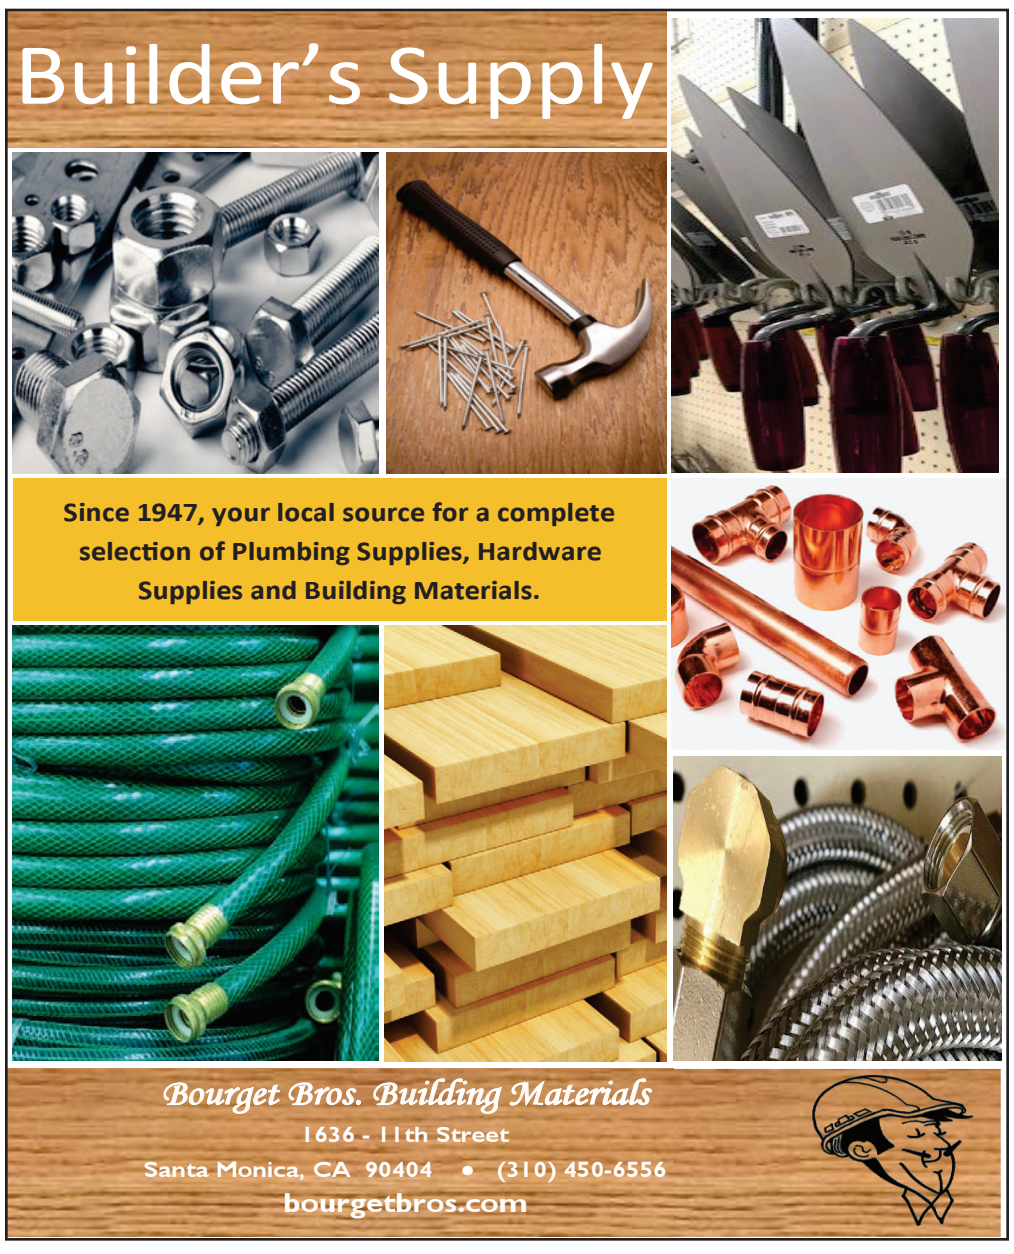

The decision was finalized without the need for any discussion or debate last week as the motion was made by Councilmember Caroline Torosis and seconded by Councilmember Phil Brock. All six present councilmembers voted yes, with Mayor Pro Tempre Lana Negrete absent.

ARCLIGHT: While the pandemic did a number on the popularity of movie theaters, this one will become something worthwhile.

Now, inflation is affecting the wholesale price of the foods it buys in bulk while funding from both public and private sources has decreased.

"We try to provide free food, so that people can use their limited resources to stay housed, because we want to keep families in their housing," Riutort says. "Because that's really what's driving the crisis, it's new people who are falling into homelessness that's causing a huge surge in the numbers. So we're trying to prevent that from getting even worse, but we're struggling because people think that there's not a need anymore and we haven't been getting as much support."

According to the food bank, the trend is particularly prevalent among families with children and Riutort herself comes from a low-income household, growing up in the Bronx in New York with a single mother. She joined the Westside Food Bank 19 years ago when she was a struggling single mum, consequently she understands this tragic situation better than most.

"I was living on government subsidy programs and not able to support my family. It was getting a job at the food bank that put me on the path to stability and not needing food assistance or housing assistance anymore," Riutort says.

When pandemic-era CalFresh food benefits expired in March 2023, individuals lost up to $82, while families lost up to $300. This comes as families are still adjusting to the loss of $300 per month per child after the Additional Child Tax Credit ended last year. At the end of April 2023, the eviction moratorium was suspended, which means local households now have to pay off back rent, further straining their budgets while the cost of basic needs is rising. In March 2023, Westside Food Bank distributed a record 501,319 lbs of food, the highest monthly distribution in its 42-year history.

"But food banks can't do it alone," Riutort says. "We're part of a system and we need the community to support us to recognize that this is an ongoing crisis. I think COVID really shined a light on how much food insecurity there already was and it's just getting worse."

To support the cause, you can make a donation to Westside Food Bank by visiting wsfb.org/donate. Because of the en masse manner in which the Westside Food Bank buys food, a $1 donation is equal to four meals. Plus, throughout the month of June, all monetary donations will be matched by the Johnny Carson Foundation, effectively doubling the amount that could potentially be raised.

Westside Food Bank

WSFB: A scene you probably wouldn't expect to see in the US; food shortages are a very real, very serious problem.

"We don't have a problem with the purpose of the bill — it's the breadth of the language," said David Harris, assistant CEO of the California District Attorneys Association.

In a letter, the association said the bill "prevents the issuance of search warrants for critical information routinely used to help solve cases involving mass shootings, bombings, rapes, child pornography, and a host of other crimes."

Civil liberties groups, on the other hand, say in the modern era these types of warrants easily skirt the requirement of probable cause needed for a search warrant of a physical location. They give law enforcement broad discretion to demand the identification of people who have nothing to do with a crime.

"Instead of finding the needle in the haystack, it's saying give me the haystack and maybe the needle will be in there," said Hayley Tsukayama, senior legislative activist at the Electronic Frontier Foundation, which co-sponsored the bill. "Particularly in a post-Dobbs era, it would be very easy to target reproductive health clinics."

In April a state appellate court ruled that the geofence warrant used by the Los Angeles Sheriff's Department in the Thabat murder violated the Fourth Amendment's protection against unreasonable searches and seizures.

Harris said law enforcement still needs to present strong evidence to a judge that the culprits will be caught for digital search warrants to be granted. While specific warrants have been found unconstitutional, the practice itself has not been ruled as such, Harris said.

In a late-night deal ahead of the vote, Bonta agreed to work with law enforcement to "narrowly scope" the bill to protect abortion clinics and gender-affirming care. The measure will move to the Senate for further amendments and consideration.

"I commit to that. I am an author that does that consistently," Bonta said from the floor.

Tsukayama said the last-minute deal was "a compromise for sure," but her organization recognizes the immediate need to protect people who come to California for abortion or gender-affirming care.

"We would like to see them not used at all, but when we're having discussions of how to focus the bill in response to opposition, we wanted to give the strongest protections to the groups that are the most vulnerable and are under attack," Tsukayama said.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 5)

However old you are in years, you keep getting younger and more resilient, creative and curious. Your frequent visitors: wonder and awe. More highlights: Impulsivity will send a relationship sailing. What was once a job will get transformed into a spiritual practice, an incredible network and a means for self-development. Scorpio and Aquarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 7, 20, 19 and 18.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). In a way, the praise you give others today is self-praise because you wouldn't see the quality if you didn't have it to some degree in yourself. Similarly, criticism of others is self-criticism. Be light with it all!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Momentum is hard to get going and harder to stop. You won't regret putting in the extra effort in the beginning. Mostly, it's about solving a problem. Once that's out of the way, a project comes together quickly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You're not easily impressed nor are you concerned with impressing others. Because you don't worry about your social ranking, it tends to be quite high. Your lack of a personal agenda puts people at ease.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Group problem-solving has its own magical dynamic. This is part of the appeal of a good mystery, which you'll come across today. Varying opinions and misunderstandings are communication issues that add to the fun.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You're wise to be careful about what you take on. You'll accept two kinds of challenges: the sort you are reasonably sure you can impact, and the type that looks like so much fun, it doesn't matter.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). This is your day to take a risk. If you win, great. If you lose and lose with grace, even better. It will spark your creativity, endear you to the heart of someone loving, or both.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Something you do today will give you bragging rights. Whether you exercise those rights in the future will be fully up to you. Either way, it will make you feel wonderfully confident just to know you have them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Tranquility can only be achieved in the now. A memory of tranquility can be a tranquil thing to linger on, or it can be a contrast that makes the current chaos more apparent.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). If you make a mistake, you'll own up to it. Also, you are wise and realize that "mistakes" are often a subjective concept — just one person's opinion against another's. Light apologies are the answer.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You'll come to a point in which you really don't know what to do next, but don't fret. Any move will do. Once you're in motion, you'll fall into the groove that eventually leads to the next move.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). By human standards, life often seems inherently unfair. Even so, you'll get the feeling that there's some other standard in effect today as disparate elements come together in a beautiful, unpredictable balance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Each person's brain is different. Some hear a running narrative in their head, and others see the way. Still, others feel the impulse and move. There's luck for working with those who have a different thinking style from yours.
