Council ready to talk home-sharing, hate letter and ethics

BRENNON DIXSON
SMDP Staff Writer

Santa Monica City Council is set to meet for the third time in seven days on Tuesday, June 8, and there are a number of discussion items on the agenda that are of interest to local residents.

HATE LETTER

In recognition of the 30-year anniversary of the unsolved 1991 act of hate that targeted Mexican/Latino students at Santa Monica High and residents of Santa Monica, Councilmember Oscar de la Torre has requested that City Council acknowledge the harm caused by the incident and express regret that the investigation did not produce justice for those affected.

In the spirit of healing and to work towards reconciliation, de la Torre is also asking for the Chief of Police to provide an internal report to the Council on the investigation's conclusions and findings, including whether the United States Postal Inspection Service or the Federal Bureau of Investigation was engaged in the matter; direct that this report is shared with the Public Safety Reform and Oversight Commission

'New' Pier Executive Director has been on the job for 32 years

MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

Editor's Note: This is the first of several stories about the future of the Santa Monica Pier.

Jim Harris is as much a fixture of the Santa Monica Pier as the horses in the Hippodrome or the seagulls stealing fries. With more than 30 years of experience, he's recently been tapped for a second tour of duty as Interim Executive Director. However, this is not like a trip around the carousel because for his second ride, the job, budget and very philosophy of government are all radically different.

Former Executive Director Negin Singh resigned in April after about three years in the role. At the time, she said the needs of the Pier no longer aligned with her skills in event planning. Harris took over this month.

Pier Corporation Chair Chris Foster said Harris' experience covers literally every aspect of the Pier and that he is the only person capable of handling the current situation.

"He literally wrote the book about the Pier," he said. "Jim is tasked with a daunting project. To basically rebuild the entire Pier Corporation for the different environment that we're currently in. He's basically starting from scratch. He has to rebuild with a smaller budget, you know, and creating more of those relationships, you have to rebuild those relationships, it's quite a big task."

Harris said his first stint in the ED chair was truly temporary while the Pier Corporation searched for a full-time replacement but this time, the job itself is interim as stakeholders are reconsidering the fundamental governance structure of the iconic location.

"I can tell you from my almost 32 years on the Pier, certainly the governance of the Pier has been problematic," he said. "And over

Pico art gallery celebrates the beauty, resilience and richness of Latino culture

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

As the City's streets spring back to life, a bright new art gallery has popped up triumphantly declaring "un mundo nuevo en Pico" or "a new world on Pico."

This boldly titled exhibition features photography, painting, and handcrafted goods from Pico and Los Angeles based Latinx artists. Spearheaded by the Pico Improvement Organization, the initiative seeks to use art to propel the neighborhood's economic recovery and showcase the area's Latino heritage.

"I believe in the power of art to bring the community together, to attract visitors, and bring them to our merchants," said Dana Moorehead, who curated the exhibition and serves as the merchant engagement director for the Pico Improvement Organization.

PICO: The new art space is a public/private partnership.

The exhibit is inspired by the success of a similar pop-up last summer and aims to draw more visitors to Pico to explore the artwork, admire the street's colorful murals and patronize local businesses.

The PIO renovated the vacant Nancy's Nails storefront to create the vibrant new gallery space. The exhibition features artwork from Linda Vallejo, Nicola Goode, Anne Carmack, Jeff Gros and Rosa Maria Lares as well as handmade crafts from five Latina Pico residents.

"It felt very important to showcase our Hispanic community, to bring it to the forefront and give it the importance that it deserves as a part of our identity," said Moorehead. "Our show is a celebration of the diversity and resiliency of people who are amongst us who we aren't always aware of."

The gallery is a deeply collaborative project. The City provided an Art of Recovery Grant for the project and the 18th Street Art Center assisted with the curation of local artists. The lease was generously given by the Lares family of the family-owned Lares Mexican restaurant on Pico Blvd. The Lares matriarch, Rosia Maria, is also one of the show's featured artists.

"It's a very interesting public-private collaboration that incorporates art to bring the community together and revitalize business," said renowned Mexican-American artist Linda Vallejo. "I think art builds culture, builds business, builds interests, builds community."

Vallejo is showcasing five pieces from her 'Brown Dot Project' in the Pico Pop-up. In this series she takes striking statistics about Latino peoples in the United States and displays them in data pictographs that she often transposes on top of images.

The pieces on display in Pico feature photographs of Southern Californian adobe houses covered by a dot data grid illustrating statistics on DACA recipients, Latino home ownership and the Latino population in Los Angeles.

"What I like about the Brown Dot Project is that we (Latinos) learn something about ourselves and it teaches other people about us," said Vallejo. "It incorporates math and art into it, which makes it mind bending and good for expanding learning capacity."

In addition to the photographs and artwork hanging on its walls, the pop-up features an installation of handmade items crafted by Pico based artisans. This installation is titled 'Manos a la Obra', meaning hands to the task, and was curated by Misael Diaz and Amy Sanchez Arteaga of the Cognate Collective.

SOLUTIONS TO YESTERDAY'S WORDS PUZZLE.
Is it a bird? Is it a plane?

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (JUNE 7)

The best way to ensure that you get your piece of the pie is to make the pie yourself. Your gift from the stars will be a cosmic peach to get the recipe started. Many will gather around you, and your creations bring good times and fortification to all who share in the work. Financial growth and renovations happen, too. Virgo and Pisces adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 8, 40, 15, 35 and 22.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). The item is worth what people will pay for it, which is to say there is zero inherent worth, only what is perceived. You'll drum up interest, demonstrate usefulness and make a sale.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Nothing is lost, though somewhere in this dance, things have drifted beyond reach. It gives you more room and reason to stretch yourself. You'll have what you need when you need it. All is well.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). The more fun you have, the more effective you'll be with the serious work of the day. The improvisational spirit of play will be entwined with the mysterious magic of intuition.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You let go of one attachment and life gets instantly more interesting. Don't rush to fill the void, because the offerings get even better the longer you can hold an opening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You want many to be lifted by what you put into the world, and yet, if you're too general, you'll speak to no one. Focus on the core few who will really get what you're offering and make the most of it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Don't wait for permission to move forward. Asking for it would only alert others to the fact that you don't have it. Many assume you're already in. And for those who don't, intensity of purpose will be more valuable than permission.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You don't have to worry about who owns what. These things have a way of sorting themselves out. No effort to cling, save, hide or hoard can keep what belongs together from finding its way back together.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You're fun to be around. The positive emotions you emit are a joy for others to soak in. Your good cheer is so constant those around you sometimes take it for granted. The appreciation of new people will invigorate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Terms of endearment like "sweetie" and "honey" can come as a comfort from the lips of loved ones. Perhaps they can even more so coming from a perfect stranger today -- a sign that the unknown world can be welcoming.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Avoid accidentally making a project of what's going wrong. The more you study a topic, the more of that topic you'll find to study. For this reason, your study of a thing that gives you energy will be better for your vitality.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). The cost of having a thing is greater than your current accounting shows. What about the time involved? What about mental and emotional investment? You won't know if it's worth it until you consider the entire picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). The inspiration strikes. You act on it, creating quickly by hand and then delivering it before you have time to second-guess yourself. This is a success formula to keep following all week.

for review and subsequent recommendations regarding best practices for the reporting, investigation, and follow up on hate crimes, as mandated by State and Federal laws and statutes.

In the future, de la Torre wishes for Council to declare a week in 2022 as "Santa Monica Hate Crimes Awareness Week," which would align with the soon to be announced 2022 National Crime Victims' Rights Week and allow for the promotion of hate crime prevention and awareness efforts through a social media and public information campaign coordinated around Santa Monica Hate Crimes Awareness Week.

CODE OF CONDUCT

Santa Monica's current Code of Ethics for city employees does not clearly apply to council members and contains no enforcement provisions, but Mayor Sue Himmelrich is hoping to change this. According to the agenda, Himmelrich is asking Council to direct staff to prepare a Code of Conduct and Ethics for the City Council that's similar to drafts adopted in cities like Vallejo and Irvine.

HOME SHARING

The final item of the night will center around proposed amendments to the City's home-sharing ordinance.

At the request of Councilmember Gleam Davis, Council will discuss possibly directing staff to return with proposed amendments that would allow the home-sharing of detached accessory buildings as long as they are located more than six feet from the main building that's occupied by the host who wishes to home-share the accessory building.

The city of Santa Monica originally passed a home-sharing ordinance in 2015 to prevent permanent housing from being converted to vacation rentals. Currently, any guest house that was permitted before March 31, 2017 and is on a parcel that is classified as a single-family parcel by the L.A. County Office of the Assessor can be used for home-sharing so long as the host continues to reside in either the main house or guest house during the home-share.

PIER

the past year that's really been dramatically heightened. It's confusing. It's confusing because the city has their responsibilities here on the Pier, the Pier Corporation has a role and the tenants have certainly had a lot of concerns and want a bigger voice, and understandably so."

The Pier itself is City property and is akin to a public park. However, management of leases for businesses and programming responsibilities fall to the Pier Corporation, a standalone non-profit whose board is appointed by City Council.

"It's always been confusing as to whose responsibility is what and really where does the buck stop? And so we're really focusing on the governance right now, it appears that we're going to have a different structure moving forward and what that's going to be has yet to be determined," he said. "So, for an executive director to step in right now, it would have to be on an interim basis, because we don't know what it will be in a year or 15 months from now. And that excites me because, as I said, I've been here almost 32 years and seen the difficulties and the issues that have arisen from the confusing governance structure, and I'm eager to be a part of making things work better and hopefully right."

Harris said he could imagine the Pier governance transitioning to something like Business Improvement District that had a strong central figure with authority to oversee the differing aspects of Pier culture.

Discussions of reorganization come as the Pier has had its budget slashed by more than two-thirds. All Pier-sponsored programs were eliminated last year and the staff was dramatically reduced but Harris said he's going to be looking at small steps to rebuild Pier operations.

Several staff members have been rehired as the Pier has been allowed to reopen and he said he is working on some budget-friendly programs that cost very little but will make the Pier feel more like a community hangout again.

"We're going to be putting a lot of attention into bringing the locals to the Pier and giving them the incentive to do so," he said. "Probably with something like a locals night, happy hours, reaching out to schools to decorate our windows in the merry-go-round. Keep keeping things that they're low budget items but very impactful for the local community and really getting the citizens of Santa Monica to come spend some time on this pier that technically they own."

up include traditional Mexican paper flowers, knitted home goods, handmade jewelry and hand-sewn clothing. Cognate Collective's artisan partnerships are part of a larger project called Market Exchange, which hosts an online store to sell these crafts.

"A lot of the artists we are working with, in addition to being interested in providing an alternative economic outlet for themselves and their family, are also interested in preserving traditions that they feel are valuable," said Diaz.

"These crafts create a vital tie between immigrant communities and diasporic communities and people back home in other countries," said Sanchez Arteaga.

Diaz and Sanchez Arteaga created an animated neon sign for the window of the pop-up to help attract visitors into the space. The sign depicts hands at work in an homage to the different forms of labor that take place in Pico.

"We have mechanic hands, hands sewing, hands doing upholstery, hands that are preparing food,"said Diaz. "We wanted to create a link between craft based work with other forms of labor that are just as valuable for maintaining a sense of community for the neighborhood and the city at large."

The Pico Pop-up is open at 2917 Pico Blvd. from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and by appointment.

Hope Refreshes

By Dr. Joe Metoyer
Pastor/Teacher

It has been a long journey, filled with fear and anxiety and packed with uncertainty. Now, at last we can realize a hope that has been deferred. We have longed to see family and friends without the masks, and in person. Grandparents have waited to meet the arrivals of a new grandchild, and parents want the lives of their children to return to normal. The children are looking forward to resuming play dates, getting back to school, playing sports, and graduation ceremonies which celebrate their accomplishments.

A wise Hebrew proverb says, "Hope deferred makes the heart sick, but a desire fulfilled is a tree of life." (Proverbs 13:12) "Proverbs are not intended to be understood as promises or divine guarantees. They are general principles: descriptions of how things normally work out in this life."[1]

"Hope deferred makes the heart-sick." (Proverbs 13:12a). It is good for a person to have hope, but if it is not fulfilled for a long time, (deferred means "put off or long drawn out") then he experiences disappointment (his heart becomes sick). He is not talking about eternal hope, but temporal hope – a hope that one can set a goal and accomplish that goal.

Dr. Henry Cloud, in his book, The Law of Happiness, writes: Setting and reaching goals is good for us. When we set goals and put legs to our desires and reach them, it definitely does do the heart good.[2] (Cloud, 2011). When a runner sets out to run a marathon and she accomplishes the goal and finishes the race, it really does not matter how she placed, but that she finished. Finishing the 26-mile run makes her heart glad!

Hope is refreshing! (Proverbs 13:12b) "When the desire comes, it is a tree of life." When a hope is fulfilled, a person is refreshed. Families are now able to realize that hope to be together again in a loving fellowship and a growing community. We must prepare to celebrate a new season of life, offering a new hope to all the people of our world. Let's value and cherish the life opportunities we are blessed with on this earth.

More to Help Seniors Learn Computer Skills

By Mark Presky

In my last two columns, I've discussed the frustrations that many seniors and others face when trying to learn or improve their computer skills. I've made suggestions to help the situations. Here, I'd like to discuss sources to get help.

Most of the public teaching of computer skills for seniors was put on hiatus during COVID-19. Listed here are some sources that existed before COVID-19 and that will likely resurface after COVID-19.

The Culver City Senior Center (310-253-6700) had people from Symantec (Norton Antivirus) visiting once a month to help seniors (one-on-one) with computer questions. It also had students from Culver City High School come to help individuals with their phones, tablets, and laptops once a month.

One might also check with the Santa Monica Senior Center (310-458-8644) to see what they are offering in the way of computer help for seniors. Public libraries can also help, now that they are beginning to reopen. In fact, any senior center is likely to have help available for seniors seeking help with computer skills.

The Culver City Senior Center had short classes (two-hour classes, once a week, for four to six weeks) on basic computer topics. One had to be a member ($15 a year + $5 for parking permit + optional postage charge for the monthly newsletter). There were fees for the classes.

Surprise Dad With a Barbecue Lunch

By Jahrid Longsworth

Chef Jahrid immediately thought a barbecued burger would be the best lunch to make on Father's Day. Here is the recipe he plans to prepare.

BBQ Burgers

Ingredients:
1 lb. ground beef
2 cloves garlic
1/4 of a yellow onion
1/4 of a green bell pepper
1 egg
1 Tbsp. of barbecue sauce
1 tsp. honey
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. pepper
1 tsp. curry powder

Instructions:
• Place ground beef into a large mixing bowl.
• In a blender, mix all remaining ingredients together until combined. Mixture should be like a thick paste.
• Pour blended mixture into the bowl with ground beef and use your hand to combine all of the ingredients thoroughly.
• Using a burger press, form four perfectly shaped burger patties.
• Grill the patties for 12-14 minutes, turning once. Do not push down too much on the burgers, or you will wind up with a drier burger.
• About a minute or two before you are finished cooking, brush the tops of the burgers with a little more barbecue sauce.
• Remove from the grill and serve on buns with any toppings you desire. Enjoy! Happy Father's Day.

My Favorite Brunch Menu

By Stacy McClendon

I believe that brunch time is the best time for celebrations with family and friends. Our spring weather brings us a time of new beginnings and longer days under the sun.

I am a true connoisseur of a great brunch that is created by the restaurant of my choosing. However, the brunch I'm writing about today is the one that puts me in the kitchen to create a wonderful breakfast that my family and I will enjoy. It is actually something that my children look forward to every weekend.

Once Saturday rolls around, I get that question, "Mom, are you cooking breakfast?" My older son even takes it a step further and asks me if it's going to be a "care breakfast." This means that he can tell whether I was in a rush to cook, or if I took my time. At this point I can only blame myself for this, as it's something I introduced my children to early on in their lives.

I make a myriad of items, depending on what we're craving – scrambled eggs made with a variety of veggies and cheese, spices and seasonings, bacon or sausage, oven-roasted potatoes smothered in spices with onions and peppers, grits with cheese and jalapeños, biscuits or cinnamon rolls, or crumb cake, scones, muffins, and/or pancakes or Brioche French Toast. Are you hungry yet?

Also, I must have my espresso with foam milk and/or a mimosa made with my favorite champagne and some sort of freshly-squeezed juice (orange/blood or orange/peach/mango/etc.) swimming in it.

This is not only a time where my family and I eat, but we also catch up on our latest happenings and what's on the horizon.

I'd urge you to try this also. You can even add one of Chef Jahrid's creations that he highlights monthly in this paper.

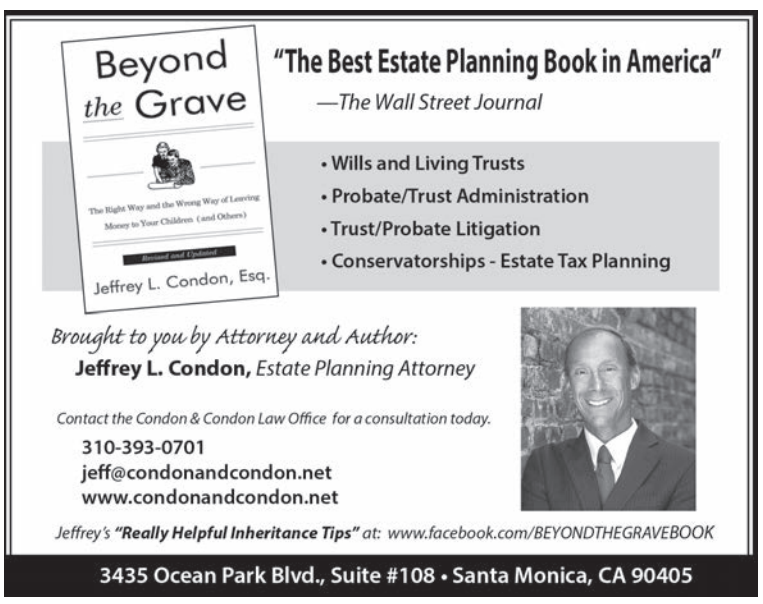

Stacy McClendon is a longtime Pico Neighborhood resident and Santa Monica City staff member.

Connect to Nature in June

By Julie Rensink Hanson
Wild Birds Unlimited
Nature Shop

We celebrate all fathers this month, but the bird Father-of-the-Year Award goes to the Downy Woodpecker. Though they share daytime nest duties with their mate, only the fathers incubate the brood at night, and they roost in the nest until their offspring fledge. Also a true family man, Mourning Dove dads love to raise families. They may have up to six clutches per year, the most of any North American bird.

As bird families are forming, they become a part of your family's world, too. The next generation of youngsters are making their first appearances everywhere around your yard! Watch for birds feeding their young. Baby birds are seen relentlessly begging for food as parents introduce them to food sources and feed them until they are ready to stick it out on their own. Look up to see young raptors starting to fly. They will return to the nest every day for food and grab anything their parents bring in. Check out local cams, such as those on http://explore.org for up close views of bird families.

Phainopeplas, with a name that comes from the Greek for "shining robe," move into coastal areas from the desert for a second nesting. With shiny black feathers and a showy crest, they live up to their name. They specialize in eating berries, but will swoop from high trees to catch bugs.

A bright-orange beak and black head cap announce the Caspian's Tern, the largest tern in the area. They nest in locations where they can be left alone, such as islands (Catalina) and estuaries (Bolsa Chica). Anyone bold enough to disturb a nest may be greeted by a diving, sharp-beaked parent, employing the same weapon they use to spear fish. Also seen along the coast, Least Terns are fledging their young.

June is National Rivers Month. Take a moment to think about your favorite river and how it helps sustain important wildlife and our communities. If you would like to discover our local river, visit Friends of Los Angeles River at www.folar.org.

Thoughts From a Second-Time Father

Anticipating Fathers Day Celebrations

By Michael Margolin

Eight years ago this July, I became a father to our baby girl, Alexa. Those eight years have gone by so fast.

Five years ago, we added Jake to the family. Bringing Alexa home was like bringing home the world's most important responsibility. I remember not wanting to sleep because if we slept, who was going to watch the baby? She seems to be functioning just fine now, so I suppose we did most things correctly.

When we brought Jake home, we had several years of parenting under our belts. However, when Jake was born, the umbilical cord was around his neck. That is an image that will be burned into my mind forever. It was loose enough, there was no damage done, and he is fine today. I am not sure if I ever held my breath more in my life than I did in that moment. To this point, that is probably the most my son has scared me. He is only five, though I am sure he will find a way to outdo himself.

Newborns are tiny, cute, and they smell nice, but they are terrifying if they belong to you. They require constant feeding and attention and go through what seems like a countless number of diapers. You do not always know why they cry uncontrollably because when you ask, they have no idea what you are saying, and even if they did, they do not speak.

They just make more noise, which can simply add to the confusion that the little swaddled riddles present. And, yet just the other day I told my wife, Enjoli, that our children are about to get more complicated. Emotions are an interesting thing to figure out in five and eight year olds. We have not even approached the teenage years, in which I am sure the terrifying aspects of childhood will resurrect themselves. I was excited to become a father, and was beyond ecstatic when it happened and am truly fascinated by the thoughts of what is to come.

Father's Day is one of my favorite holidays because it is the one I earned. I am fortunate enough to have an exceptional man as my own dad to celebrate with on Father's Day. My father loves his family, is a very caring husband, and is honest and hardworking. All are traits I try to emulate, and will do my best to pass them along to my children. Happy Father's Day to all you lucky fathers!

More to Help Seniors Learn

These classes and those at Emeritus College (310-434-4306), associated with Santa Monica College, are designed for seniors.

Also, almost every high school, and some middle schools offer adult learning classes that may offer basic computer skills classes.

I'm certain that there are many more sources for help online, but Techboomers.com comes to mind. One "can access over 100 free website and application courses along with thousands of useful articles to help take your tech skills to the next level." Their courses are designed to be at very basic levels, and on their website they request feedback from those who find anything too complicated.

Last, I belong to the Los Angeles Computer Society, a group of about 100 mostly, but not all, seniors. Members, who have quite varied levels of computer skills, help each other with their computers (lacspc.org) and also may be able to help other seniors. Call the group line at 310-398-0366 and leave a clear, slow, short message.
