STEERS

Guiding guests through history

BY MELODY HANATANI
Daily Press Staff Writer

SM BEACH Nick Steers was apprehensive, concerned that besides 12 hours crammed full of facts about 1930s era Hollywood, early Santa Monica beach culture and Georgian revival architecture, that he would still be stumped.

The Santa Monica resident had just undergone four weeks of intensive training with the Santa Monica Conservancy to prepare for tour guiding duties at the new Annenberg Community Beach House, learning about the history of the former estate of Marion Davies and the long and challenging process of turning it into the nation's first public beach club.

Now it was opening day and Steers, 64, was making sure he got his facts straight.

"They provided you with a lot of information so I was trying to figure out what information was going to be pertinent to the public that was going to be there," Steers said during a recent interview.

District officials remove one house at Samohi

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

The Board of Education on Thursday voted to cut one house from Santa Monica High School's celebrated House System, effectively transferring one principal to Malibu High School and reducing several other positions.

The board did elect to keep two advisers and one outreach specialist for at least another school year, a change from the superintendent's original recommendation. The three positions would have saved the district a combined $220,000.

The reduction of the system from six houses to five is part of a series of measures

Officials consider rewriting social contract

JUDY LIN
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO With empty pockets and maxed-out credit, California is debating whether it can continue honoring all parts of its social contract with the state's most vulnerable residents.

The state faces an unprecedented drop in tax revenue and a widening budget deficit amid the deepest recession in decades, prompting Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger to propose cost-cutting steps that once seemed unthinkable.

At stake are programs for the poor, elderly and frail, placing millions of people in the nation's most populous state at risk of falling through a decades-old social safety net.

Ending the welfare-to-work program for mothers and their children, which would affect some 546,000 families, and eliminating health insurance for 1 million children from low-income families are among the proposals that have generated the most criticism. The number of Alzheimer's patients, disabled and other frail recipients of in-home care also would be greatly reduced under the governor's latest budget proposal, leaving more than 400,000 people without such support.

This week, Schwarzenegger acknowledged that his decisions will be painful for many.

"I know the consequences of those cuts are not just dollars. I see the faces behind those dollars. ... I see the Alzheimer's patients losing some of their in-home support services," he told lawmakers. "It's an awful feeling, but we have no choice."

Ticket seller expands service fee program

RYAN NAKASHIMA
AP Business Writer

LOS ANGELES On the heels of its first successful "No service fee Wednesday," concert promoter Live Nation Inc. says it will expand the summer ticket program from the lawn to reserved seats this week, while acknowledging that some fees never went away.

The first 24-hour discount Wednesday drove lawn ticket sales up six-fold to a single-day record, although the company wouldn't say how many tickets it sold.

Live Nation said this Wednesday it will drop service fees on all tickets to its U.S. amphitheaters this summer, including for regular seats, and lift the cap on the number available. It will continue to charge $6 on every ticket for parking at some venues, while other venues still incur a $3 to $4 facility fee.

Since many tickets have already been sold, there are about 1 million tickets for reserved seats still available, along with about 4 million lawn tickets for concerts featuring Coldplay, Toby Keith, Crosby Stills & Nash and others.

Lawn tickets cost about $20 to $25, and the discount trims about $10 from the cost. The average reserved seat ticket costs $62.04 with an average $14.40 service charge that would be waived.

"It was a pretty resounding message from the fans: 'Make it cheaper for us to see a concert and we'll come,'" said Live Nation's chief executive of global music, Jason Garner. "So we're responding to it this week by taking it to the next step."

The move to drop service fees was made possible after Live Nation launched its own ticketing platform in January. Typically, service fees help pay the ticket-selling company — which is usually Ticketmaster Entertainment Inc. The two companies plan to merge this year following an antitrust review.

Live Nation was able to cut the surcharge in the hopes that it would make that money up by getting more people to come to the venues it owns and having them pay for such things as parking, hot dogs and beer.

L.A. dog walkers bark at three canine limit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES Dog walkers are sniffing at the city's law limiting the number of dogs a person can bring to off-leash parks to three.

The law took effect six months ago, but scores of dog walkers continue to bring their packs of pooches.

On any given day, between 15 and 20 dog walkers, many of them taking care of pets belonging to the rich and famous, conduct their doggy day-care service at Laurel Canyon Park in the Hollywood Hills.

They include Kelly and Ross Levy, who come to the 5-acre park with two vans full of dogs and stay for three hours each day.

The couple charge $35 per dog, earning as much as $180,000 a year.

Critics say the dog walkers need to be kept on a tight leash. They complain their dogs run wild, beg for food and create a mess.

"I've had eight years of hell up there," said Tamara Merry, 63, a regular of the hilltop park. "The dog walkers seem to think it's their park, and we should accommodate them."

Park police say they plan to enforce the rule as soon as warning signs are posted at the city's nine dog parks. Anyone who wants to bring more than three dogs must apply for a permit allowing a greater number of dogs during special hours of the day.

The Levys said they know they're breaking the law. They added they have contacted the city but received no guidance on how to obtain a permit.

"If this is enforced, God knows us and how many people will go under," Kelly Levy said. "There are a lot of dogs who will suffer."

Supporters or critics?

Editor:

In your June 1 article ("Malibu High, Lincoln lose 'distinguished' title," page 1) about Malibu High and Lincoln Middle school losing their designations as California Distinguished Schools because of reporting errors and low scores for disabled students, you reported that "Critics of the school district point to the lack of a cohesive special education program" as one of the reasons for the problem. While I'm sure that no slight was intended I would like to call into question the use of the word "critics" as a way of identifying those who have been advocating reform of our school district's special education programs.

Given all we have learned about over the past year about the very real problems with special education programs and finances it would be more appropriate to label those who challenge the status quo as district "supporters." Supporters of positive change. Supporters of a vision for reform that can lead to improvements in our district's ability to deliver services to special ed students, help control costs and ultimately benefit all of our students. King George saw community members like Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin as critics and malcontents. We see them as founding fathers. It's just a matter of perspective.

Busting leaf blowers made easy

Editor:

After suffering for months, from the gas fumes, dust and din, caused by the leaf blowers used by virtually every gardener in my neighborhood; repeated calls to the police that accomplished nothing; and repeatedly being laughed at, or threatened, by gardeners when I tried to educate them about the law, I am pleased to announce that the Santa Monica police are finally enforcing the leaf blower law. Last week, I reported a violation to the police, and the police were out within two minutes. A gardener was given a ticket, and since then, the fumes, dust and din, have finally come to a halt. I want to thank all the people who have complained to the Santa Monica police, who played a major role in convincing the police, of the importance of enforcing Santa Monica's leaf blower law.

I wanted to provide your readers with the direct number to the police officers, who are in charge of enforcing the leaf blower law, and have the ability to get an immediate response to reported violations. It is (310) 458-8495.

I also wanted to inform your readers of an organization called Zero Air Pollution Los Angeles, devoted to the enforcement of leaf blower laws, that provides excellent information on their Web site, www.zapla.org

I appreciate the opportunity to be able to write to your readers.

Landmarks and payoffs figure into development proposals

THERE ARE THREE LANDMARK-RELATED development projects are up for public hearings this week.

The appeal of landmark designation for a 47-unit, 1950s era apartment building at 301 Ocean Ave. is on Tuesday's City Council agenda (Item 6A). The building was formerly owned by Santa Monica's first female mayor, Clo Hoover.

Texas-based, mega-developer Trammell Crow Company purchased the property and has evicted the building's tenants. If the landmark designation is set aside, the firm plans to develop 26 units of multi-million dollar, three- and four-bedroom condominiums. The proposed project will be four floors high, approximately 60,000 square feet in size and have two levels of subterranean parking for 60 vehicles.

Pending upholding of their appeal, Trammell Crow will likely request a Development Agreement — a negotiated deal between the city and developer that allows more flexibility in how the property is developed than is allowed by the generally more restrictive zoning codes.

The DA can include design features that may not be permitted under the general codes such as height and density. However, it must conform to the general plan. In return, the developer must provide some public benefit. Low income housing — on or off-site — are big favorites with City Hall.

The property located at 301 Ocean Ave. was landmarked on Jan. 12, 2009 by the Landmarks Commission. The reason for the landmarking was landmark Criteria 3: Identification with historical personages or with important events in local, state or national history — that being Clo Hoover who co-owned and occupied the building for 45 years. Attorneys for Trammel Crow argue that the structure only meets only one of the six possible landmark criteria, therefore granting landmark status was "in error."

Then there's the eviction of tenants from the 47 units — many were elderly and low income tenants, some were under rent control when the Company "Ellised" (discontinued rentals) the property. If City Hall grants the appeal and Trammel Crow obtains their development agreement, city officials will be rewarding the developer for evicting many dozens of vulnerable rent controlled tenants who the city claims it protects.

Trammel Crow contributed $6,150 to Save Our City, the "No on T" committee that opposed last fall's failed ballot Measure T (or "RIFT") that would have placed limits on future commercial development in Santa Monica. Trammell Crow's point man on the project, Gregory Ames also personally donated $250 each to Mayor Ken Genser's and Councilman Richard Bloom's reelection bid. To avoid any appearance of impropriety, they both need to recuse themselves from deliberating and voting on this item.

ONE MORE PROPOSAL

The other (former) landmark before council Tuesday night is an extension of design compatibility and development review permits for a proposed nine unit condo project at 125 Pacific St. According to an Aug. 21, 2006 planning memo, the Mission Revival style bungalow court building on the project site was constructed in 1924 and identified on the City's Historic Resources Inventory.

On July 24, 2004, the Landmarks Commission declared the 24-unit courtyard apartment building a city landmark. This decision was appealed by the property owner and on July 26, 2005, City Council upheld the appeal, overturning the landmark designation.

The proposed condo project has been delayed numerous times since winning initial Planning Commission approval in December of 2005. Tomorrow, council is being asked to extend review permits for this long delayed project, again.

COMING SOON

One of the larger new developments proposed for the downtown area will be before Planning Commission on Wednesday evening. The commission will consider a request for a Development Agreement to readapt a landmarked seven-floor, 1928 office building at 710 Wilshire Boulevard — The Santa Monica Professional Building — for hotel use, a conference center with ground floor retail and construction of a new, eight floor, "platform," hotel building with 240 guest rooms, 16 multi-family apartments, 14,700 square foot food market space, open air paseo and four floors (430 spaces) of underground parking on an adjacent, nearly one-acre surface parking lot

Developer, Maxser and Company has suggested "public meeting rooms" as one possible "public amenity" in exchange for the extra height and density allowances requested through the proposed Development Agreement.

The ornate, 81-year-old, Spanish Colonial Revival-style building was declared a Santa Monica Landmark on Sept. 12, 2005. The designation invokes restrictions that preserve/maintains the exterior facade of the original edifice but doesn't apply to the new construction.

Maxser contributed $10,000 to Save Our City, co-chaired by current Planning Commission Chair Terry O'Day. Maxser's was one of the larger campaign donations to the "pro-development" political group. It's widely rumored that O'Day will run for City Council in 2010 with substantial backing from "business and developer" interests. O'Day and fellow Planning Commissioners affiliated with SOC should also recuse themselves from deliberating and voting on item based on obvious conflicts of interest.

The Planning Commission meeting will be held in City Hall City, City Council chambers at 7 p.m.

No one is above the law

FROM ITS INCEPTION, AMERICA HAS stood for the principle that everyone is under the law. There are no kings or power elite that stand outside the law. Yet this has been overlooked in the midst of the escalating debate over the Bush administration's alleged authorization of torture.

Much of the debate thus far has focused on President Obama's decision not to release photos depicting alleged abuse of prisoners in Iraq and Afghanistan by American service personnel. However, this is but a smokescreen issue for the more troubling question: who should be held responsible for these abuses?

Obama has already been warned by generals in Iraq and Afghanistan that releasing the photos would endanger U.S. troops deployed there, and I have gone on record as supporting his decision.

Recently, Major General Antonio Taguba, who conducted an inquiry into the Abu Ghraib jail in Iraq and confirmed the existence of photos documenting allegations of rape and abuse, said: "I am not sure what purpose their release would serve other than a legal one, and the consequence would be to imperil our troops, the only protectors of our foreign policy, when we most need them, and British troops who are trying to build security in Afghanistan. The mere description of these pictures is horrendous enough, take my word for it."

The descriptions are indeed horrendous. Taguba has reportedly confirmed the existence of photos depicting an American soldier apparently raping a female prisoner and a male translator apparently raping a male detainee.

Even if a case could be made to justify the use of certain harsh interrogation techniques, there is no way to justify rape.

So who is to blame, and who should be held accountable? Obama has stated that the military personnel involved in carrying out the abuse depicted in the photographs have been "identified, and appropriate actions" taken. Yet isn't it somewhat hypocritical to punish those who carried out the abuse while giving a free pass to those who condoned the use of torture in the first place?

George W. Bush, Dick Cheney and those within the Bush administration who sanctioned torture deliberately and unapologetically violated U.S. laws and virtually every international treaty against torture.

American law is clear as to what constitutes torture. Title 18 of the U.S. Code, Section 2340-2340B, defines torture as "an act committed by a person acting under the color of law specifically intended to inflict severe physical or mental pain or suffering (other than pain or suffering incidental to lawful sanctions) upon another person within his custody or physical control."

U.S. courts have also consistently found that the following acts rise to the level of torture: severe beatings using instruments such as iron barks, truncheons and clubs; threats of imminent death, such as mock executions; burning, especially burning with cigarettes; electric shocks to genitalia or threats to do so; rape or sexual assault, or injury to an individual's sexual organs, or threatening to do any of these sorts of acts; and forcing a prisoner to watch the torture of others. Despite the Bush administration's refusal to categorize waterboarding as torture, it too has widely been denounced as such by legal experts, intelligence officials and military judges.

There's no room for interpretation here, and ignorance of the law is no excuse. Neither can the blame be placed on legal counsel. President Bush and those serving him took oaths to defend the Constitution. In other words, they pledged to uphold the law of the land. When they authorized the use of torture, Bush and his minions knowingly violated U.S. law and international treaties against torture, which under Article II of the Constitution became part of the body of U.S. federal law when adopted. Thus, the prohibitions against torture in the aforementioned treaties are part of American law.

If the rule of law is to mean anything, we cannot overlook such a monumental transgression on the part of Bush administration officials, including Bush himself. And if President Obama fails to hold those responsible accountable by calling for a formal, Watergate-style congressional investigation into these allegations, he too will be guilty of perpetuating the power elite, undermining the rule of law and helping to destroy the moral fiber of this country.

As for the fate of the torture photos, General Taguba is right: if the photos are to be released to the public, it should only be after a formal legal investigation has taken place and they have been introduced as evidence. To do otherwise would serve no purpose other than to further imperil our troops around the world.

The Q Line

Reading into it

City leaders are considering building a new library in the Pico Neighborhood. There are currently two proposals on the table. One calls for having the library placed in Virginia Avenue Park. Others think it should be elsewhere on Pico Boulevard.

So this week's Q-Line question asks:

Where should the new library be located and why?

Call (310) 285-8106 before Friday at 5 p.m. and we'll print your answers in the weekend edition of the Daily Press. Please limit responses to a minute or less.

THE UNITED STATES ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY
ANNOUNCES THE OPENING OF THE PUBLIC COMMENT PERIOD
FOR THE PALOS VERDES SHELF SEDIMENT CONTAMINATION
PROPOSED PLAN

PUBLIC COMMENT PERIOD: June 15 – July 15, 2009

The United States Environmental Protection Agency (U.S. EPA) is requesting public comment on the proposed plan to address the health risks posed by contaminated sediment located off the Los Angeles coast on the Palos Verdes Shelf (PV Shelf). The sediment is contaminated with dichloro-diphenyl-trichloroethane (DDT) and polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs).

At this time, EPA has completed a Feasibility Study (FS) that contains a detailed evaluation of the alternatives presented in the proposed plan. The action recommended in the proposed plan would be an interim step while EPA continues its investigation of PV Shelf. EPA will accept written comments on the proposed action from June 15, 2009 to July 15, 2009 (see below).

EPA's preferred interim alternative: 1) maintains the Institutional Controls Program (public outreach and education, enforcement and monitoring) to protect public health; 2) places a cap (18-inch layer of clean sand/coarse silt) over approximately 320 acres of PV Shelf that appear to be eroding and have the highest contaminant concentrations; and 3) undertakes studies to gauge the rate of natural recovery of PV Shelf, verify effectiveness of the cap, and further characterize the risk from fish consumption. After completing these studies, EPA will determine what additional remedial actions are warranted and prepare a final Record of Decision.

The Administrative Record file that contains the information EPA considered in developing its recommended actions (including the FS and human health risk evaluation report) is available for your review at the San Pedro Public Library, 931 South Gaffey St., San Pedro; at the Redondo Beach Public Library, 303 N. Pacific Coast Highway, Redondo Beach; and at the U.S. EPA Superfund Records Center at 95 Hawthorne St., San Francisco, CA. If you would like a copy of the proposed plan mailed to you, please call toll-free 800-231-3075 and request a copy.

PUBLIC MEETINGS

EPA is holding a series of public meetings to explain and discuss the alternatives presented in the plan. There will be a 1-hour open house before each meeting to ask questions informally of EPA staff and contractors. Written comments will be accepted at all meetings, and oral comments will be formally recorded by a transcriber at each location listed.

Something in the water

Dear EarthTalk

Is there any truth to the rumor about high levels of birth control chemicals being found in some cities' drinking water? If so can these be filtered out?

Elizabeth Yerkes

IT IS TRUE THAT TRACE AMOUNTS OF birth control and other medications — as well as household and industrial chemicals of every stripe — are present in many urban and suburban water supplies around the country, but there is considerable debate about whether their levels are high enough to warrant concern.

In 2008 the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) tested water in nine states across the country and found that 85 man-made chemicals, including some medications, were commonly slipping through municipal treatment systems and ending up in our tap water. Another report by the Associated Press found trace amounts of dozens of pharmaceuticals in the drinking water supplies of some 46 million Americans.

But according to USGS, such chemicals and medications are so diluted — at levels equal to a thimble full of water in an Olympic-sized swimming pool — that they do not pose a health threat. But others aren't so sure. Researchers have found evidence that even extremely diluted concentrations of drug residues harm fish, frogs and other aquatic species, and have been shown to labs to impair human cell function.

One of the common culprits is estrogen, much of which is inadvertently released into sewers through the urine of women taking birth control. Studies have shown that estrogen can wreak reproductive havoc on some fish, which spawn infertile offspring sporting a mixture of male and female parts. Researchers at the University of Pittsburgh found that human breast cancer cells grew twice as fast when exposed to estrogen taken from catfish caught near untreated sewage overflows. "There is the potential for an increased risk for those people who are prone to estrogenic cancer," said Conrad Volz, lead researcher on the study.

What may be more troubling is the mixture of contaminants and how they might interact to cause health problems. "The biggest concern is the stew effect," says Scott Dye of the Sierra Club's Water Sentinels program. "Trace amounts of this mixed with trace amounts of that can equal what? We don't know."

With such contaminants proving elusive to municipal filtration systems, the burden of protection often lies with the end user. But getting traces of birth control and other drugs out of your tap water isn't so easy. Of the many different kinds of in-home water filtration systems available today, only those employing reverse osmosis have been shown to filter out some drugs. Some makers of activated carbon water filters claim their products catch pharmaceuticals, but independent research has not verified such claims.

SECRET INGREDIENT: In 2008 the U.S. Geological Survey tested water in nine states across the country and found that 85 man-made chemicals — including birth control medications — were commonly slipping through municipal treatment systems and ending up in our tap water.

"The best choice," says Cathy Sherman of the natural health website Natural News, "would probably be a combination of a reverse osmosis filter augmented by pre- and post-activated carbon filters." Installing such a system just for drinking water is sufficient, she says, given that water used for cleaning and plumbing doesn't typically get ingested. As to prevention, the non-profit public health and safety agency, NSF International, urges individuals to not use their toilets or sinks to dispose of unused medications and to opt for the garbage instead; most modern landfills are lined to keep such contaminants inside.

California trying to cut social services

at least for now, in considering solving its budget deficit with such deep cuts to core social services.

The state's projected $24.3 billion deficit for the fiscal year that begins in July amounts to a quarter of its general fund. Schwarzenegger and Republicans in the Legislature say they will not raise taxes again, after agreeing to $12.8 billion in sales, personal income and vehicle tax hikes earlier this year.

That has left lawmakers with few alternatives to severe spending cuts because Republicans, while the minority party, hold virtual veto power over the state budget by virtue of California's unusual requirement that fiscal measures be passed by a two-thirds vote of the Legislature.

There is a sense of irony in Schwarzenegger's proposals: Many of the programs to assist the frail and needy have their roots in the Great Depression. It has taken the largest economic downturn since then to undo those programs, at least as proposed in California.

The elimination or significant reduction in social service programs also cuts against President Barack Obama's economic recovery efforts and attempt to overhaul the nation's health care market.

"The movement is to expand coverage, not contract," said Rachel Klein, deputy director of health policy for Families USA, a consumer advocacy group based in Washington, D.C. "If California were to do it, it would certainly be an enormous step behind for the country."

California stands to lose billions in federal matching dollars if Schwarzenegger's proposals pass. Advocates have argued that his cutbacks would jeopardize even more money from the federal stimulus program, but the Obama administration so far has granted waivers on that portion of funding for the state.

White House spokesman Adam Abrams acknowledged California's budget difficulties and said getting through the recession would require tough choices and shared sacrifices.

Melody Nolan is among those who might come out on the short end of those tough budget choices.

The 39-year-old Sacramento woman is worried the state will cut her in-home care. If so, she would not be able to see one of her many doctors for systemic lupus, an autoimmune illness that saps her of strength. Even though she still would receive disability benefits and subsidized housing, Nolan said she would lose her sense of independence and worries about ending up in a nursing home.

"Not being able to work is very hard on me. I'm a very goal-oriented person," Nolan said. "Not being able to take care of myself would just be devastating."

There are few precedents in modern history to the level of social spending cuts being contemplated in California.

In 1991, Michigan's then-governor, Republican John Engler, proposed ending general-assistance payments to single, able-bodied individuals with no dependents. His welfare-reform plan was intended to encourage employment and eventually reduced the number of recipients, saving the state millions of dollars a year.

Advocates worry that unraveling some of California's largest social safety nets would be disastrous, but conservatives say states still have a long list of assistance programs that will leave few people without any help at all.

Even if Schwarzenegger's cuts are adopted, federally mandated programs such as food stamps, low-income housing and Medicaid, the U.S. health program for low-income people, seniors and the disabled, will continue, said Robert Rector, a senior fellow at the conservative Heritage Foundation.

Those programs received financial boosts under the federal recovery act.

"It's not removing the safety net because we have all of these other programs," Rector said.

California also tends to spend more on welfare than other states. The state spent 5.4 percent of all its state and federal funding on public assistance in 2007, compared to a national average of 1.7 percent. The figures don't include Medicaid and other social service spending.

While the federal recovery act contains roughly $140 billion for state budget shortfalls, the temporary boost has not been enough to prevent other states from cutting public services.

Arizona has cut funding for a rehabilitation program that affects 4,700 children with chronic or disabling conditions, according to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a left-leaning think thank based in Washington, D.C.

Georgia has reduced services for the elderly, such as Alzheimer's services. And Nevada will make it harder for low-income families to apply for cash assistance and health insurance.

Democrats in the California Legislature have advocated similar steps, preferring what they call a surgical approach to the state's budget problems rather than the wholesale elimination of programs proposed by the Republican governor.

California's Healthy Families program, the state's version of the federal government's State Children's Health Insurance Program, is an example of how widely Schwarzenegger's cuts would be felt if the Legislature adopts them.

The program is designed for children whose families earn too much to qualify for Medicaid but not enough to afford private insurance. Ending it in California would eliminate 15 percent of the 7 million children who benefit from it across the country.

"It'll send a terrible message to the nation about what our values are in California," said Wilma Chan, a former Democratic state lawmaker who now advocates for Children Now, a national group based in Oakland.

An estimated 4.7 million of California's 38 million residents — or 12.4 percent of the population — live below the federal poverty line, according to state figures. That's in line with the national average of 12.5 percent, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

California also has a relatively high number of illegal immigrants, which complicates the debate over social service spending.

More than one third of cash-assistance cases involve benefits given only to children because their parents don't qualify based on work requirements or their immigration status.

Waiting more than two hours at a Sacramento County welfare office on a recent day, Carolina Fuentes applied for cash assistance, food stamps and health coverage for her 5-year-old daughter, Katherine Fuentes.

The 22-year-old single mother said she is looking for a job and does not qualify for benefits herself because she crossed the U.S.-Mexico border illegally as a teenager. She doesn't know what she will do if core state assistance is eliminated for her daughter.

"We really need the help," she said.

District forced to make move

the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District has been considering to close a revenue shortfall of more than $10 million over the next 18 months due to state funding cuts. Other measures include increasing class sizes and reducing the special education budget.

The controversial decision to reorganize the House System has been met with resistance from parents who argue its success over the past several years. Some have said that Santa Monica High School has been unfairly targeted during the round of cuts. Administrators have said that all schools are being affected by the district's budget issues through class size increases.

Steers goes from lifeguard to beach house docent

Turns out visitors just wanted to view the architecture of the buildings on the property, which features the original pool and guest house and newly constructed club house. Regardless, Steers can recite with ease the facts that he learned during the training sessions at the Ken Edwards Center.

For example, Julia Morgan was a prevalent architect who was the first female to graduate from the University of California Berkeley's school of engineering, Steers said.

The former Santa Monica and Los Angeles County lifeguard is one of about 75 docents who give tours several times a month at the silent film star's one-time home, which was transformed into a public beach house thanks to a $27.5 million grant from the Annenberg Foundation.

The property was once the site of a 110-room mansion, later sold in 1945 to a hotel operator. It had several identities over the next half century, including as the Sand & Sea Club. The location was also popular for filming, including serving as the fictional Beverly Hills Beach Club on 1990s drama, "Beverly Hills 90210."

Steers came into the role of docent with more than 40 years knowledge of Santa Monica Beach through his career as a lifeguard and time serving on the Recreation and Parks Commission. It was during his term on the commission when the issue of the beach club first came up after the Sand & Sea Club stopped its operations.

He also closely followed the long process of transforming the mansion into a beach club, an idea that at one time was met with resistance from neighbors.

"I always liked the idea," Steers said. "I don't know how viable it is going to be in the long run and whether people can afford to come to this kind of place."

Born in Holland, Steers moved to Santa Monica in 1959, graduating from Santa Monica High School five years later.

He went on to Santa Monica College where he played on the water polo team under whom he calls the "greatest coach," John Joseph.

It was the coach who told him about the lifeguard program and in the summer of 1965, Steers began his career. About four years later, he graduated with a bachelor's degree in political science at California State University Northridge.

Steers remembers receiving a call once about a 7-week-old baby who wasn't breathing. He ran from Tower 16 to the headquarters next to the Santa Monica Pier, performing CPR.

"It was enlightening to see a blue face turn color again," Steers said.

The incident occurred just a few months into the job.

He remembers Santa Monica Beach before it became an international tourist destination, a relaxing spot for locals to gather.

Then came the I-10 Freeway during the 1960s, bringing with it more visitors, he said.

> "HOPEFULLY PEOPLE WILL ENJOY THE BUILDING AND IT WILL HAVE MANY YEARS OF LIFE."
> Nick Steers
> Docent, Annenberg Community Beach House

Steers, who has been married for 34 years and has two children, retired in 2005 as a county lifeguard at Zuma Beach.

While Steers had a deep knowledge of the beach house's relatively recent history coming into the docent program, he admitted to lacking information about its early years.

That's where the training sessions came in handy.

Approximately 125 people applied for the docent program, about 25 of whom ended up on the waiting list because the capacity for the classroom in the Ken Edwards Center was 100.

The program focused on three interpretive themes that were developed by a city consultant about the beach house — "Three remarkable individuals," which centered on Hearst, Morgan and Davies; "A beach like no other," which discussed the Santa Monica beach culture; and "A public place henceforth," which was about the evolution of the site from a private estate to public beach club.

Everyone who survived the four weeks of training became a docent. The conservancy requires a commitment of two full hour shifts a month to maintain docent status.

"Nick stands out among our docents because of his long connection to Santa Monica beach as a lifeguard and as a surfer," Ruthann Lehrer, who ran the docent training program, said.

Steers has worked a handful of shifts since the beach club opened in April. He said the most challenging aspect of the job is coming up with information the guests might want to know.

While most of the visitors have been locals, Steers said he expects that to change come this summer when the tourist season begins.

He said one of the most interesting aspects of the beach house is that it's made with sustainable building materials, including an insulation of blue jeans.

"Hopefully people will enjoy the building and it will have many years of life," he said.

Heal the Bay

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

TENNIS

Federer wins 14th major

HOWARD FENDRICH
AP Tennis Writer

PARIS Oh, how Roger Federer savored every moment with his first French Open trophy.

He raised it overhead. He cradled it in the crook of his elbow. He closed his eyes and kissed it. He examined the names of other champions etched on its base. Even in a downpour on Court Philippe Chatrier, as heavy, gray clouds blocked any shred of sunlight Sunday, that silver trophy sure seemed to glisten.

Finally, the lone major championship that had eluded Federer was his. With his latest masterful performance, Federer tied Pete Sampras' record of 14 major singles titles and became the sixth man to complete a career Grand Slam.

History was at stake, and Federer was at his best, completely outplaying No. 23-seeded Robin Soderling of Sweden en route to a 6-1, 7-6 (1), 6-4 victory in a French Open final that lacked suspense but not significance.

"Maybe my greatest victory — or certainly the one that takes the most pressure off my shoulders," Federer said in French, moments after dropping to his knees, caking them with clay, as his 127 mph service winner ended the match. "I think that now, and until the end of my career, I can really play with my mind at peace and no longer hear that I've never won at Roland Garros."

Federer came heartbreakingly close in the past, losing the previous three French Open finals, so there certainly was something poetic about his tying Sampras' Grand Slam mark at this particular tournament, on this particular court.

"Now that he's won in Paris, I think it just more solidifies his place in history as the greatest player that played the game," Sampras told The Associated Press.

"If there's anyone that deserves it, it's Roger," Sampras said. "He's come so close — lost to one guy who's going to go down as probably the greatest clay-courter of all time."

That would be Rafael Nadal, the man who beat Federer at Roland Garros in the 2006-08 finals and the 2005 semifinals, too. But Nadal's 31-match French Open winning streak ended this year with a fourth-round loss to the hard-hitting Soderling.

"I knew the day Rafa won't be in the finals, I will be there, and I will win. I always knew that, and I believed in it. That's exactly what happened," the second-seeded Federer said. "It's funny. I didn't hope for it. But I believed in it."

Milton on DL, DeWitt recalled from Triple-A

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES Veteran left-hander Eric Milton was placed on the 15-day disabled list by the Los Angeles Dodgers on Sunday because of tightness in his back.

The 33-year-old Milton pitched 4 1-3 innings on Friday night against Philadelphia and allowed eight hits and three runs, one of which was earned. He did not complain to manager Joe Torre of any discomfort after the game.

The Dodgers signed Milton as a minor league free agent on Feb. 10, after he spent an entire season out of the big leagues while recovering from Tommy John surgery.

He is 2-0 with a 2.89 ERA in four starts.

The Dodgers won't need a fifth starter again until June 20, because of three off days in the calendar between now and their interleague series with the Angels in Anaheim. Right-hander Eric Stults, whose sprained thumb forced the Dodgers to recall Milton, is expected to resume his starting role when he comes off the 15-day DL. He is eligible on June 15.

Infielder Blake DeWitt was recalled from Triple-A Albuquerque to fill the Dodgers' vacant roster spot. He appeared in 117 games, playing mostly third and second base, with the Dodgers last season and batted .264 with nine homers in 52 RBIs.

NBA

Los Angeles to host 2011 All-Star game

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES The NBA All-Star game will return to Los Angeles for a record fifth time in 2011.

Commissioner David Stern made the announcement Sunday before Game 2 of the NBA finals between the Lakers and Orlando Magic.

The 60th game will be played Feb. 20 at Staples Center, also the site of the 2004 game.

The city also hosted the game in 1963 at the Sports Arena, and at the Forum in suburban Inglewood in 1972 and '83, when Marvin Gaye performed a memorable version of the national anthem.

Staples Center will be the site of the Rookie Challenge, Youth Jam and All-Star Saturday Night. The All-Star Jam Session, an interactive fan experience, will be staged at the convention center next door.

By 2011, a 54-story, 1,001-room complex that includes two hotels and 224 luxury condos will be completed, giving the NBA additional space across the street from Staples Center.

In 2004, Lakers teammates Shaquille O'Neal and Kobe Bryant combined for 44 points to give the Western Conference a 136-132 victory over the East. O'Neal earned MVP honors.

Dallas is hosting the 2010 game. This year's event was in Phoenix, where O'Neal and Bryant shared the MVP award and helped the West beat the East 146-119.

Meet someone halfway, Scorpio

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ If you're grounded, you'll get information necessary to end negotiations about a job. Take action late this afternoon, when you are more likely to get everyone's ear. Rethink revising your opinion about a key associate. Tonight: Burning the midnight oil

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Understand the power of a passive role and subsequent gains. What you want might not happen immediately, but it will happen. Remain optimistic, despite new information. Tonight: Find a respected friend for feedback

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Others continue to dominate. Your sense of direction could play out in the afternoon with a partner. Tonight: A trusted pal or friend gives you unusual feedback

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Tackle your work, as time might be limited from tomorrow on. Truth be told, the afternoon brings many unthought-of options. Be willing to make an adjustment if visiting or networking. Tonight: Out and about

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Confront challenges immediately, when you are more likely to see a solution appear. If you are wondering what would be best, hold off for a while. Tonight: Burning the candle at both ends

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Choose to anchor yourself. Move a project forward, but wait until midafternoon before launching any new concepts. Information from those at a distance or from experts could force your hand. Understand that there is more than one way to approach a situation. Tonight: Do only what you enjoy and with people you enjoy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Make calls immediately, and understand your choices. Someone is likely to shine some light on what you thought was a done deal. You reach a fork in the road of life: to be closed and rigid, or to open up to new possibilities. Tonight: Happily at home

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Handle your finances directly before they handle you! Ignoring the situation certainly won't work. A discussion with a family member is instrumental in making the right choices. You might need some time to mull over ideas. Do just that. Tonight: Meet someone halfway

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Continue the high-energy performance before your energy goes south. Avoiding financial matters for whatever reason needs to stop or never happen! The more time you spend on a job, the better the end results. Tonight: Balance your checkbook first

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ You could drag for a good part of the day. When you perk up, you feel unstoppable. Notice what might be going on with a close associate or friend. Give this person a smile, and he or she will open up, revealing many different aspects. Tonight: Kick up your heels.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Clearly, you have certain matters that need to be handled, and the sooner the better. Consider news and evaluate which course might be the best. Tonight: Remember, you don't always need to be available.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ A situation demands your total focus and energy. Others want you to take the lead. Though this request might be very flattering, you might have other plans. Focus on your goals right now. Tonight: Do you really care that it's Monday night?

Happy birthday

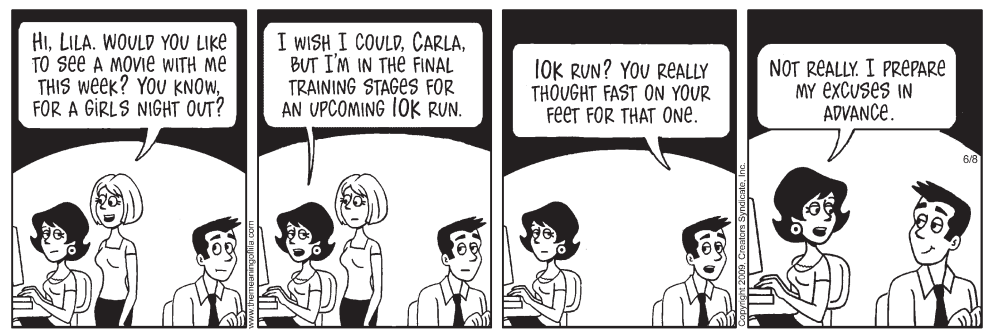

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS
The stars show the kind of day you'll have:
★★★★★Dynamic ★★ So-So
★★★★ Positive ★ Difficult
★★★ Average

The unexpected runs riot this year. You might be taken aback by everything that occurs, reminding you once more to toss thinking in terms of the status quo. Experiment and open up to new processes and different ways; delight in the newness of life. The more you flex, the happier you will be. A closer bond could appear for single Twins. Someone you meet in the near future might make you very happy. Just don't allow this whirlwind romance to take off too fast! If you are attached, affection deepens as newfound openness refreshes your bond. CAPRICORN might understand you better than you think!

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ First-time bank robber (according to police) Jason Durant, 32, reported to the hospital in New Milford, Conn., shortly after knocking off the National Iron Bank in April. As he fled the crime scene, he accidentally tumbled down a steep hill behind the bank, losing control of his stash, and his gun, during the fall. He broke his leg in several places (saying later that he heard snapping sounds). At the bottom of the hill, he crashed into a plow blade, slashing himself before dragging his bleeding, broken body to his getaway car (with only $2 left from the robbery). Suspicious hospital staff members notified police.

■ Russia's long-running Moscow Cat Circus/Theater, reported in News of the Weird in 1998, is still in service, astonishing all who ever tried to train a cat. In the United States, Samantha Martin runs her own similar show (at such venues as Chicago's Gorilla Tango Theatre in March) featuring the Rock Cats trio on guitar, piano and drums, as well as a tightrope-walker, barrel-roller and skateboarder, among other daring performers. Martin admitted to a Chicago Tribune reporter that the cats' music "sucks," in that "when they're playing, they're not even playing the same thing," and anyway she has two backup drummers because her regular is prone to "walking off in a huff," sort of "like diva actresses." "This is why you don't see trained cat acts. Because ... the managers can't take the humiliation."
