SMC's childhood education center receives approval

BY ASHLEY ARCHIBALD
Daily Press Staff Writer

CIVIC CENTER To the list of developments planned for the Civic Center Auditorium and surroundings, it's finally time to add the Early Childhood Education Center, a learning lab for Santa Monica College that has been several years in the making.

Planning commissioners approved a change to the Civic Center Specific Plan Wednesday to allow the center, designed in 2008, to span 16,000 square feet rather than the 12,500 originally built into the CCSP.

The proposed expansion came when SMC designers realized that the 12,500 square foot limitations in the CCSP wouldn't fit all of the classes and programming planned for the lab site.

With this change, City Hall and SMC can finally begin the process of getting the project approved through the various channels of public process, including the Architectural Review Board and eventually the Coastal Commission, and make the cen-

Crossroads softball, baseball players earn all-league honors

BY DANIEL ARCHULETA
Managing Editor

XRDS The Roadrunners' spring sports yielded a number of all-league selections this season.

Crossroads' softball team, which made a surprise trip to the quarter-finals of the CIF-Southern Section Division 7 playoffs this year after winning a wild card game, placed three players on the All-Delphic League team.

Jasmine Anderson made the first team while Shayna Elian and Izzy Gaw made the second team.

The softball team wasn't alone in earning all-league honors.

The baseball team, which didn't make the playoffs this season, also had a trio of Roadrunners receive honors. Holden Miller was tabbed for the first team, with Andres Leyva and Max Robinson making the second team. All three players are seniors.

Crossroads' baseball team finished the season 8-11 overall and 2-10 in league.

SM 5000 partners with Education Foundation

Popular annual running event the Santa Monica 5000 has recently announced a new partnership with the Santa Monica-Malibu Education Foundation that names the nonprofit the race's sole beneficiary.

The race, scheduled for Oct. 2, will raise money for local school fitness and athletic programs facing budget issues. The race will also provide funding for the Ed Foundation's newly established athletic endowment.

"We are very grateful to the organizers of the Santa Monica 5000 for addressing the need to support school athletics," said Ed Foundation's Executive Director Linda Greenberg. "Students are already raising money for uniforms and equipment through non-athletic events. By teaming up with the Santa Monica 5000, we encourage fitness and raise money at the same time. This is a total win-win."

The Santa Monica 5000 is organized by Brennan and Michelle Lindner, the principals in Generic Events and the parents of two young children.

"We met at a triathlon and we know how important fitness is to the physical and mental health of a family," said Brennan Lindner.

The Santa Monica 5000 includes 5K/10K run/walks, a 2.7 Dash for Kids and Stroller Stride for parents pushing newborns and toddlers in strollers. All events take place on a scenic course that starts next to the beach at Ocean Park Boulevard and ends at the Santa Monica Pier with a free celebration featuring live music, fitness demos and sampling of sponsor products.

Gingrich hopes to restart campaign

SHANNON MCCAFFREY
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES Just days after his top staff resigned en masse, Newt Gingrich on Sunday sought to reboot his troubled presidential bid with a foreign policy speech accusing the Obama administration of placing "political correctness above common sense" in its dealings on the world stage.

The address before the Republican Jewish Coalition, scheduled for Sunday night in Beverly Hills, will be Gingrich's first since he was rocked by the sudden exodus of 16 senior strategists and advisers. They bolted Thursday less than a month after his White House campaign was formally launched.

Pledging to soldier on, Gingrich vowed to start fresh in Los Angeles, where he said his campaign "begins anew."

In remarks prepared for delivery and provided to The Associated Press, Gingrich makes only a passing reference to the upheaval, vowing to carry his message of renewal around the country "no matter what it takes."

The West Coast speech had been planned well before the Gingrich campaign imploded.

But as the former House Speaker scrambles to prove he remains a viable contender, the appearance allows him to showcase the two strongest sides of his personality: policy heavyweight and verbal bomb thrower.

Gingrich argues that "both Israel and America are at a dangerous crossroads at which the survival of Israel and the safety of the United States both hang in the balance."

Gingrich was also set to deliver red meat to the pro-Israel audience. He will pledge that, if elected president, he would sign an executive order on his first day in office moving the American embassy to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv. Palestinians contend moving the U.S. embassy to Jerusalem would be recognition of Israel's claim to the city. Gingrich argues that Israel has every right as a sovereign nation to choose its own capital and Americans should respect that choice.

In the remarks, Gingrich says his decades in public life mean that he's familiar with the rigors of the campaign trail.

Still, even for the veteran politician, the path forward is challenging.

Gingrich must replace the core of his campaign infrastructure — a daunting task, especially after telegraphing to would-be staffers that he's difficult to manage. And with the GOP race still taking shape,

'Super 8' leads box office with $37M

DAVID GERMAIN
AP Movie Writer

LOS ANGELES Hollywood's summer box-office streak has cooled a bit with a $37 million opening weekend for J.J. Abrams and Steven Spielberg's sci-fi tale "Super 8."

It was a healthy but unremarkable launch in a summer season whose newcomers often open with two or three times as much money. Released by Paramount Pictures, "Super 8" largely features a cast of young newcomers, the story centering on teen filmmakers and an alien entity that escapes from a wrecked train.

"The movie was never conceived to be a blockbuster, tent-pole film opening to $60 or $70 million," said Don Harris, head of distribution for Paramount.

Writer-director Abrams ("Star Trek," TV's "Lost") was inspired by his own youth as a Super 8 filmmaker who emulated such talents as Spielberg, a producer on "Super 8."

When the studio scheduled "Super 8" amid such known summer quantities as "Pirates of the Caribbean" and "Kung Fu Panda" sequels, "there was some concern we were sending a signal that it was a big summer blockbuster," Harris said. "What we

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Send comments to editor@smdp.com

Not a respectful memorial

Editor:

I would like to commend Raymond Beers on his letter to the editor ("Food trucks don't belong here," June 11-12, 2011). I, too, was surprised and insulted at the Memorial Day service when the Border Grill food truck was parked on the lawn. Anyone who has their family member buried at Woodlawn Cemetery should be appalled! Who approved such an act? Why not have them park off to the side? Was it so financially productive to park directly over someone's grave? I would hope that next year and future years that Woodlawn Cemetery and the Memorial Day Committee would rethink this disrespectful act. Those buried at Woodland Cemetery deserve more respect than they were given this Memorial Day.

Not a fan of circumcision

Editor:

I understand that Jack Neworth's column this week was meant to look at the light side of circumcision, but it's too bad he couldn't make room to mention how hospitals and surgeons make up to a $1,000 and more from coercing parents into accepting this barbaric act, or how insurance companies are willing to pay for this procedure but not for pre-existing conditions, etc ("Wieners in the news," Laughing Matters, June 10, 2011).

I don't know if this operation decreases penile length or reduces sensitivity, but I will never know because it was done to me without giving me a choice.

I don't believe circumcision should be banned to Orthodox Jews and Muslims who feel it is necessary for religious reasons, but I would hope the current debate will encourage them to reconsider what they are doing to their children.

I agreed, under extreme duress, to allow it be done to my son because my in-laws pressured and coerced me by saying he would not be a Jew otherwise. I just hope my son won't resent me for it when he is older.

Yahoo!, Saint John's parking problems not solved by new DAs

A PAIR OF CHANGES TO EXISTING development agreements come before the Planning Commission and City Council in the next few weeks. Both will have major negative impacts on community livability if approved. The amendments concern parking and traffic around Saint John's Health Center.

As part of its 1998 development agreement with City Hall, Saint John's was supposed to build a 442-stall subterranean parking garage adjacent to its new hospital. The garage still hasn't been built and now Saint John's is asking to amend its DA to allow it to lease 450 parking spaces at the Yahoo! Center business park nearly two blocks away, instead.

There's just one problem. The Yahoo! Center's 1981 DA precludes them from leasing parking space to non-tenants.

Yahoo! Center owner, CA-Colorado Center L.L.C., obtained all the necessary city permits and licenses to operate a parking concession in its 3,086 capacity garage in 2004. It's already paid $3,074,184.23 in parking taxes to City Hall in just over the last five years. Much of this taxable income is from leasing parking space to non-tenants, despite not being allowed per its DA!

So, the owner is asking the City Council to amend its DA to "legalize" leasing of parking space to off-site parties. They claim there is enough parking available in their garage that they could lease out 1,053 stalls to non-tenants and still provide sufficient parking.

If the Yahoo! Center were to fully lease all its office/retail space (one third is unoccupied at this time), its owners claim that even at full tenant occupancy at peak periods they would have parking space left over. Various monitoring plans and an annual community meeting would assure there would always be sufficient parking space on-site with virtually no chance of vehicular overflow into surrounding residential areas.

Current (not-tenant) rates are $183 per month. In and out rates are $2.50 every 12 minutes, $12.50/hour, $29 maximum. Package rates for multiple parking stalls such as those leased by car dealers are negotiated.

CA-Colorado Center L.L.C is also requesting a change to the center's tenant parking ratio from the current one stall for every 322 square feet of office space to one stall for every 500 square feet of office space. This would free up even more parking spots to lease to non-tenants.

The elimination of a mandate that tenants provide free parking to their employees is also requested although it's noted that tenants can still pay their employee parking. The owners also promise to implement a traffic management plan. Nevertheless, it remains to be seen if all the checks and balances promised will prevent increased traffic and congestion on neighboring streets.

This brings us back to Saint John's and the heart of the issue. Approval of Saint John's "Application to Amend" its DA to permit a 10-year shared parking arrangement at the Yahoo! Center is dependent on council approval of Yahoo! Center's amended DA allowing leasing of parking space to off-site entities — such as Saint John's.

Neighbors vehemently oppose both DA amendments. The fears are that once Saint John's receives a legal, long-term commitment to park vehicles at the Yahoo! Center, its management will continue to avoid its obligation to build on-site hospital parking.

Both Saint John's and Yahoo! Center say that visitors, doctors and staff will pay to park two plus blocks away from the hospital and either walk to and from the hospital and parking garage or wait for shuttles. Valet parking at the hospital front entrance is also available.

Saint John's could validate some parking. Example: nurses I communicated with receive $60 per month discounted parking. But, is all this good enough to make Yahoo! Center's remote garage attractive?

Most people (like me), cruise the neighborhood and look for open and free street parking or scarce metered parking — even if it means parking north of Wilshire Boulevard and walking two or three blocks.

I had previously written that the relationship between Saint John's Health Center and its neighbors was poor. The hiring of a City Hall lobbyist (and bag-woman for developers contributing to certain City Council candidates) to fight for both amendments is a slap in the face to residents. And, one more public relations failure.

If the Planning Commission and the City Council accept the Yahoo! Center's proposed amendment, and subsequently relieve Saint John's of their promise to provide on-site parking by amending their DA, this would open the door for more developers to game the system, exacerbate traffic congestion and dump more parking woes squarely on all residential neighborhoods.

The Yahoo! Center's DA amendment is before the City Council June 14. Saint John's request for an amendment for non-tenant parking is before the Planning Commission June 15 and then moves to City Council for final approval or rejection on June 28.

Express your opinion. Write, call, e-mail, or fax like your neighborhood quality of life depended on it.

Plan to cut forest for vineyards faces opposition in NorCal

JASON DEAREN
Associated Press

ANNAPOLIS The ocean fog and cool climate of California's rugged northern coast allow redwood trees to thrive and help give wine grapes a distinctive flavor.

But in the village of Annapolis in Sonoma County's coastal mountains, a quiet battle is pitting trees against vineyards. Here, where many homes are found off dirt roads that snake through dense foliage that has regrown after the clear-cut logging of a half-century ago, the usually mellow residents are riled up over plans to raze hundreds of acres of redwoods and firs to make room for grapes.

At issue are two proposed "timberland-to-vineyard" conversion projects, the first such applications that California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection, or CalFire, officials can remember in which large areas of redwoods and firs would be removed for vineyards.

Even with a three-year drop in the price of high-end wines like those grown in Sonoma County, and a glut of wine grape production on the more than 62,000 acres of vineyard already planted in the valley below Annapolis, two large wine companies want to remove nearly 2,000 acres of trees.

The companies say they simply want to make great wines. Opponents argue the projects are unnecessary in a county already producing more pinot and other grapes than the market can bear, and that the vineyards will hurt endangered fish struggling to rebound in the Gualala River by siphoning off water and introducing pesticides. At least one of the proposed sites contains sacred tribal artifacts.

Annapolis residents say the county has enough wine grapes, and that the tribal artifacts and environmental concerns are being thrust upon the community because just so two large winemakers can grow "vanity vineyards" that yield small amounts of expensive wines.

"The watershed's on its heels as far as fish goes, which is why it's important to keep the flow. If you put all these straws in the watershed drawing water out, you might as well kiss it goodbye," said Chris Poehlmann, a museum exhibit designer who lives in Annapolis and heads a local conservation group.

The grape growers argue these lands will be developed one way or another as the county grows, and that it is better to have vineyards than housing developments.

Napa's Artesa Vineyards, owned by a Barcelona, Spain-based wine heavyweight Grupo Cordoniu known for making sparkling wine, wants to develop 151 acres of pinot noir and chardonnay vineyard on a site containing artifacts from ancient Kashaya Pomo villages. Premier Pacific Vineyards is seeking to put rows of grapes on about 1,800 acres of 20,000 it owns nearby in a project that will also include residential housing called "Preservation Ranch."

Decisions on both projects are expected by county and state officials within the next year or two.

Both winemakers argue the projects are undergoing detailed environmental review, and that in some cases the developments will help, not hurt, the environment by providing better management of the land and repairing decades-old damage by logging companies.

"The vineyard has been designed as a state-of-the art operation with environmental and other resources in mind," Artesa's attorney Andrea Matarazzo said in an e-mail. "The project maintains substantial buffers from all sensitive resources and has been designed to avoid, protect and preserve many of those resources in their natural state."

But over the past half-century the once-logged area has seen regrowth, and now is host to a dense tangle of 50-to-60-year-old tanoaks, redwoods, Douglas firs and Manzanita bushes. The vineyard sites surround the Gualala River watershed, which is host to endangered coho and threatened steelhead. Both winemakers will have to prove their projects will not hurt the recovery of these federally protected fish.

The Artesa project, which is closer to a permit decision by CalFire than Preservation Ranch, would clear 151 acres next to two existing small vineyards. The acreage was scaled down from 171 after the company discovered that the site was home to archaeological resources from a former Kashaya band of Pomo Indians village. The tribe also opposes the project.

The interest by winemakers in converting timberland also spurred Sonoma County to pass their own regulations in 2006, a job previously governed solely by state forestry officials. The county has yet to approve a single large project, but has issued 31 approvals for minor conversions of three acres or less each, said Pete Parkinson, Sonoma County's director of permits and resource management.

While it may sound counter-intuitive, Premier Pacific argues that the project would end up improving, not hurting, the environment.

In documents filed for the project, the company said it would repair old logging roads that currently send sediment into the Gualala River. Removal of this sediment would improve water quality and fish habitat, it argues.

The Q Line

Rent to own

The Santa Monica Rent Control Board last week approved its annual rent adjustment – a 3.2 percent increase with a ceiling of $52. That means renters can expect to pay more later this year when the increase goes into effect. The board could have approved a 3.5 percent bump or a 2.6 percent bump with a $7 flat fee.

So, this week's Q-Line question asks:
What do you think about the increase? Is it fair or should it be more or less?

IT'S TRUE THAT SOME REUSABLE SHOPPING bags for sale in U.S. stores have been shown to contain lead, a neurotoxin linked to developmental, brain and kidney problems. The non-profit Center for Environmental Health (CEH) found that about 10 percent of the reusable bags it tested last year contained at least minute levels of lead, with Disney's "Toy Story" and "Cars" plastic reusable shopping bags topping the charts with excessive levels to the tune of 15 times the federal limit for lead in children's products.

Tests by other groups confirm CEH's findings. A November 2010 report by the Tampa Tribune newspaper found elevated levels of lead in reusable bags purchased at Winn-Dixie, Publix, Walmart and Target stores — and prompted an ongoing investigation by the U.S. Food & Drug Administration (FDA) into whether or not reusable shopping bags could be leaching lead into food items that people later eat. And earlier this year, the Center for Consumer Freedom, a trade group that opposes bans on plastic bags, reported that some 21 different polypropylene reusable bags sold at Safeway, Walgreen's, Bloom and other stores had lead content above 100 parts per million — the highest level that many states allow in consumer packaging.

While the stores in question have pulled any such questionable bags from their shelves and in some cases stopped patronizing offending suppliers, consumers should take matters into their own hands with regard to selecting safer reusable shopping bags. While plastic reusable shopping bags are a step in the right direction compared to disposable plastic or paper bags, they are still derived from petroleum, even if partly recycled, and may contain other contaminants, especially if they feature ornate designs or patterns. The safest bet, according to CEH, would be cloth bags: Not only are they usually free of lead or any other potentially hazardous substances, but they also last for years and are easy to wash. One quality, reliable source for cloth bags is the Ossining, New York-based Eco Bags, from which you can order conveniently online and pay no shipping costs on any order of $100 or more.

Regarding washing to reduce or eliminate contaminants, public health experts worry that reusable shopping bags could become a breeding ground for impurities that lead to food poisoning, and recommend washing them every few uses at least to ward off contamination. A 2008 Environmental and Plastics Industry Council of Canada study found mold and bacterial levels in reusable bags 300 percent greater than Canadian health standards allow. And a 2010 joint University of Arizona and Limo Loma University study found that 97 percent of users did not wash their reusable shopping bags — which can harbor bacteria from repeated exposure to meats and vegetables. Half of the 84 bags studied contained coliform, a bacterium found in fecal matter, while 12 percent tested positive for E. coli.

The moral of the story is to make sure your reusable shopping bags can go through the clothes washer — and then wash them a few times a month. This way you will steer clear of contaminating the food you and your family eat with trace amounts of lead, and as such you will sleep easier each and every night.

South Texas enjoys major boom from oil fracking

RAMIT PLUSHNICK-MASTI
Associated Press

COTULLA, Texas Bill Cotulla's hand rests on the handle of his great-grandfather's cane, his gravelly voice recounting the changes in the small town his ancestor founded and named for himself some 130 years ago. Almost overnight, it has transformed from a South Texas backwater to the hub of a major oil boom.

"You can't be choosy," the 75-year-old muses, considering the expanse of new RV parks, hotels and restaurants. "The oil companies that are putting up buildings are keeping nice yards."

For generations, Cotulla has been a town where even the paved roads had the aura of the dusty, saloon-lined paths from old Western movies. Cowboys, ranchers and shop owners tied their livelihood to the hunting season. Young people left to escape double-digit unemployment and poverty rates.

Now, the challenge is all the people pouring in. Cotulla, about 90 miles south of San Antonio, and nearby towns are rushing to house hundreds of workers and approve plans for apartment complexes and industrial parks to keep up with the development of the Eagle Ford shale formation, one of the most plentiful new oil fields in the country. After several years of preliminary work, the project is fully under way and sales tax revenues are soaring. Municipalities are paving roads, laying water lines and creating parks while trying to avoid being overextended when the boom tapers off.

"There's still more people coming," said Jerry Cox, owner of JJ's Country Store, a restaurant and convenience store on the main highway that runs through the town. "It's like Davy Crockett at the Alamo. You gotta think, are they ever going to stop coming?" he added, referring to the onslaught of Mexican soldiers who overwhelmed the fort.

The economic transformation is the result of a new drilling method, hydraulic fracturing, combined with horizontal drilling, that allows companies to extract oil and gas from impermeable layers of shale. Major industry players have joined the Eagle Ford project, including Anadarko, Range Resources and Shell. Chesapeake Energy of Oklahoma City signed a multi-billion dollar deal with the Chinese state-owned oil company to raise cash to drill in the shale.

No solid estimate of likely production has been made, but the American Petroleum Institute said the field should yield billions of barrels of oil. The project already supports 12,600 fulltime jobs, and by 2020 could account for $11.6 billion and nearly 68,000 jobs in a 24-county area, according to study in February by the University of Texas' Center for Community and Business Research.

Initially, some residents were skeptical about the windfall. In this barren land of mesquite trees, cactus bushes, rattlesnakes, feral hogs, coyotes and bobcats, oil booms—the real ones— always happened elsewhere. But the fat bonus checks and royalties rolling in to mineral rights' owners have changed attitudes.

Cox renovated the kitchen in his restaurant and put down new flooring. He desperately wants to hire at least six people. A friend who began building a Best Western on the Cotulla highway had all the rooms booked before construction was complete. People are driving around town in new cars.

Larry Dovalina, interim city administrator of Cotulla, home to barely 3,500 people, said new requests for water and sewer services are coming in daily. The power system is overburdened. Sales tax revenue rose from $445,000 in 2009 to more than $600,000 last year.

Some residents, like Mariane Hall, manager of the Cotulla Chamber of Commerce, are worried about possible side effects from the boom, especially ground water contamination. The development uses a technique known as fracking, which injects chemical-laced water into the shale to push out the minerals. Environmental groups and the Environmental Protection Agency have expressed concerns about the method. But the industry insists it is safe, and residents generally say they'll rely on federal and state agencies to enforce environmental regulations and provide oversight.

Similar booms have happened in other shale regions — most notably Pennsylvania, North Dakota, Wyoming and Montana. In the places with mostly natural gas, however, production is slowing as the price of natural gas drops.

In South Texas, oil courses through the Eagle Ford's geologic layers — just as the price per barrel lingers at or above $100.

The area, home to barely a half-million people in some three dozen counties, has been one of the nation's poorest. Several counties have poverty rates over 30 percent — three times the national average.

"We've gone through a long dry spell," said Jill Martin, owner of Ben's Western Wear shop in downtown Cotulla.

At times, Martin thought she might have to close. The store relied on online sales and the hunting season, when hundreds descend on the area for its white-tailed deer.

Now she knows she should stay open later and on weekends but can't find enough employees. "It's just been amazing from no activity to ...," Martin says, gesturing at the commotion in the small shop packed with cowboy boots and plaid shirts, along with the steel-toed boots and flame resistant clothing coveted by the oilfield workers.

Sixteen miles north, Dilley, sits just off the shale. Yet plans for a 60- to 90-room hotel have been approved, city administrator Melissa Gonzalez said. Three RV parks are going up. Recently, a man offered to buy the town's airport.

Forty miles away in Carrizo Springs, 72-year-old Doris Jackson's RV park has grown from 42 units to 125 in the past two years. The supermarket is packed and runs out of food. She has one well and is getting thousands of dollars in royalties every month. And she's about to get a second well on her property.

"What are we gonna do with all that money?" Jackson says shaking her head. "I'll still buy my clothes in the second-hand shop like I've always done."

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

Expo Light Rail Line Project

Exploratory excavation will occur for this project in order to plan the initial layout of upcoming construction activities. Temporary lane closures may be necessary on Fourth Street and Colorado Avenue through 17th Street; MTA right of way from 17th Street to Centinela Avenue including the intersections of 19th Street, 20th Street, Olympic Boulevard, Cloverfield Boulevard, 26th Street, and Stewart Street. Work is anticipated to start June 2011 and continue through September 2011 between 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday, and in L.A. from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. For questions regarding this project contact Expo Light Rail Line Community Relations at (213) 922-EXPO or www.BuildExpo.org.

Alley Resurfacing Project

The city will resurface alleys with asphalt in the Alley at 1000th block of Sixth Court, from Washington to California Avenue. Daily work start time is 7 a.m. and end time is 4:30 p.m.

Water Main Installation

In order to improve water service in the city of Santa Monica, the Water Division is installing a new, larger water main on Princeton Street from Wilshire Boulevard to Washington Avenue Place South. Work will take place until approximately August 2011.

Borderline Neighborhood Improvement Project

New water main installation, new various street pavement finishes, new landscaped areas, trees, and pedestrian lighting. Wilson Place between Lincoln Boulevard and 11th Street will be closed to through traffic until late July. Please observe posted detour signs. Project is anticipated to be complete in August of 2011.

Street & Park Lighting Project

The work consists of modifying existing high-voltage series streetlight circuits to low-voltage multiple circuits. Work will take place citywide through September 2011. Work will be taking place on 26th Street between Montana Avenue and San Vicente Boulevard and 26th Street between Wilshire Boulevard and Broadway. Partial roadway closures or detours are expected but impact to traffic should be minimal.

Transit Priority Systems Project

Installation of the Transit Priority System (TPS) at 80 traffic signals along major corridors within the city of Santa Monica. Work requires installation of wireless detectors to sense the approach of buses on routes. Work is currently taking place at the following intersections: Wilshire Boulevard and 14th Street; Wilshire Boulevard and 20th Street; and Arizona Avenue and 20th Street. Partial roadway closures or detours are expected

Utility Undergrounding

Various alleys will be temporarily closed for underground work on utilities in the following locations: 18th Court between Pearl Street and Pico Boulevard; 20th Street between Pearl Street and Ocean Park Boulevard; 18th Street between Ocean Park Boulevard and Ashland Place North; on Ashland Place North between 18th and 16th Streets. Work is taking place until approximately July of 2011.

before the sun comes up. Sometimes with a friend, but mostly by himself, Hoenigschmid carefully draws geometric shapes like triangles, ovals and hexagons in hypnotizing patterns that disappear as the waves roll in.

It's an outlet for his creativity, as well as a meditative "and beautifully pointless process" and one that he hopes will attract others, eventually spawning a social network of creative minds who can connect, advise and inspire.

"I just want people to come out and experience it, the calm and serenity of the low tide and connecting with nature," said the 33-year-old German who lives with his wife, Anaswara, a yoga instructor at Bryan Kest's Santa Monica Power Yoga, and their 11-month-old son, Mason. "I always invite people, but it's 4 in the morning so for most people, it's not feasible."

(Half of the year Hoenigschmid draws in the afternoons to catch the low tide. Tides change based on the season and the sun and moon's gravitational pull.)

Hoenigschmid borrowed the idea from a friend in San Francisco, Andres Amador, a fellow sand artist. When he moved to Mar Vista, he was close enough to the ocean to create his own pieces, which Hoenigschmid photographs from the rollercoaster at Pacific Park on the pier.

Security and maintenance workers at the amusement park are intrigued by Hoenigschmid's commitment and creativity. It can take as long as three hours to complete one design.

"They're very intricate," said Dana Wyatt, the director of maintenance and operations at Pacific Park. "They're amazing. To see the full picture when it's completed is remarkable. I thought at first that they were cheating somehow. But after watching him a few times I realized he was just using a string, maybe some measuring tape, and a rake. Just fascinating."

Wyatt was also impressed with Hoenigschmid's knowledge of the tide and his dedication, given that the designs are washed away after only a few hours.

"It looks like the piece is coming out of the ocean," said Hoenigschmid, explaining why he draws so close to the water. "Sometimes you can have a freak wave and that washes the piece away, but that's just part of the creative process. In the end, it makes one smile so one cannot complain."

Hoenigschmid's passion may be hard for some to understand, but not his wife. The two met in British Columbia while at a retreat centered around the performance art of fire dancing, which involves the manipulation of objects on fire, kind of like juggling or baton twirling but more intense. While there, the two instantly became friends and felt like they had a deeper connection, as if they were soulmates.

The two went their separate ways, but stayed in touch. Hoenigschmid knew he had met the love of his life and vowed to return to the U.S. following his travels to spend time with Anaswara.

COOL VIEW: Daily Press reader James Korb snapped this shot recently of a pattern drawn in the sand just south of the Santa Monica Pier by artist Andreas Hoenigschmid.

"He said he loved me and that he would be back. I didn't believe him," she said. "I told people I had met my soulmate but that we would never be together."

Three years after they first met, Hoenigschmid came out west to visit and see if their chemistry was real. Seven months later they were married.

"He's truly a visionary," Anaswara said of her husband. "His work ethic and his dedication are extraordinary. He's really like no other person I have met. What you see on the beach comes after hours and hours of working on these very detailed sketches that may look the same to me, but when you look closer, they are new and different depending on certain numbers, higher or lower. It's stuff I don't understand. He explains the differences to me, but it's usually over my head."

Nevertheless, she is completely supportive, even when the alarm clock rings at 4 a.m.

"I'm definitely not a morning person," Anaswara said. "But not Andreas. He's up after the first ring [of the alarm] and out the door. He always comes back smiling and that's just him. He walks to the beat of a different drummer and that's what makes him amazing. He's always in it for the experience and will try just about anything."

Hoenigschmid plans to keep the work going for as long as he is inspired to do it. He plans to create a new design Wednesday morning, same time, same place, and he wants others to join him.

"It's free," he said. "All you have to do is show up."

To learn more about Hoenigschmid's work, visit his Facebook page, "Santa Monica Beach Art," and check out some of his designs in action. He can also re reached at smbeachart@gmail.com.

really wanted to do was find a place where the movie could open, find its audience and hopefully play for a long time."

"Super 8" bumped off the previous weekend's No. 1 movie, 20th Century Fox's comic-book prequel "X-Men: First Class," which slipped to second-place with $25 million. "First Class" raised its domestic total to $98.9 million.

After a string of blockbuster debuts in May and early June, Hollywood's overall revenues dipped for the first time in a month. Domestic receipts totaled $140 million, down 7.5 percent from the same weekend last year, when "The Karate Kid" led with $55.7 million, according to box-office tracker Hollywood.com.

The weekend's other new wide release, Relativity Media's family flick "Judy Moody and the NOT Bummer Summer," opened weakly at No. 7 with $6.3 million. The movie follows a young girl's wacky summer adventures.

"Super 8" started with $1 million in sneak-peek screenings Thursday, giving it a domestic total of $38 million.

The movie added $6.7 million in nine international markets, including $2.7 million in Australia. It expands to about 15 more countries next weekend, among them Russia, Greece and Turkey.

Two sequels passed the $200 million mark domestically this weekend.

The Warner Bros. comedy "The Hangover Part II" came in at No. 3 with $18.5 million to become the year's top-grossing domestic release at $216.6 million.

Disney's action tale "Pirates of the Caribbean: On Stranger Tides" was No. 5 with $10.9 million, raising its domestic haul to $208.8 million.

Both movies topped Universal's "Fast Five," which had been the year's biggest moneymaker domestically. "Fast Five" finished at No. 10 with $1.7 million, lifting its domestic total to $205.1 million.

Worldwide, "On Stranger Tides" is the year's top earner, pulling in $886.8 million.

Overall business likely will be down sharply this coming weekend compared to the same period a year ago, when "Toy Story 3" had a huge debut of $110.3 million.

But revenues should rebound in late June and July as Hollywood delivers hotly anticipated sequels to the "Cars," "Transformers" and "Harry Potter" franchises.

"Summer may turn out to be a roller-coaster," said Hollywood.com analyst Paul Dergarabedian. "May was so incredibly strong, and we're going to step back a little bit in June, then come back really strong in July."

Domestic revenues so far this year total $4.4 billion, down 7 percent from 2010 receipts.

Estimated ticket sales for Friday through Sunday at U.S. and Canadian theaters, according to Hollywood.com. Where available, latest international numbers are also included. Final domestic figures will be released Monday.

BY THE NUMBERS

1. "Super 8," $37 million ($6.7 million international).
2. "X-Men: First Class," $25 million.
3. "The Hangover Part II," $18.5 million ($38.3 million international).
4. "Kung Fu Panda 2," $16.6 million ($56.5 million international).

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

"We'd like this sooner rather than later," Betsy Hiteshew, the former director of the early childhood education program at SMC, told commissioners. "We've been waiting 20 years."

The center is a joint project between SMC and City Hall that was included in the Civic Center Specific Plan, which was adopted in 2005. It will be designed, built and operated by the college as a lab for the early childhood education certificate program.

To date, SMC is one of only two colleges in the state that have such a program but do not have a lab to educate students, said Don Girard, director of government relations and institutional communications for SMC.

"This will be an instructional facility that will fill a need for both the college and the community," Girard said.

One hundred pre-school age children will learn and play at the facility, which will also be equipped with a conference room and other amenities, according to a staff report.

City Hall is expected to commit $5.63 million in general fund money to get the project off the ground, and the remaining $7 million will come from Measure S bond money.

The government funding will need to be approved at the June 21 City Council meeting when the proposed budget gets adopted.

For the most part, commissioners had no problem with the changes, but safety concerns were raised about the width of the sidewalk — the minimum 15-foot width wasn't enough, worried Commissioner Hank Koning — and about how the project would integrate with the numerous other developments occurring within yards of the proposed center.

Putting 100 preschool students near a busy street with a thin sidewalk that will be populated by boisterous Santa Monica High School students walking to and from classes and the proposed bike path mere feet away could be a problem, commissioners said.

"I'm not sure 15 feet is adequate given the joint use project and the bike path going in here," Koning said. "I wonder if it should be expressed in the language in here."

Parking, a never-ending source of complication in Santa Monica, also reared its ugly head. The center would take away surface parking right next to the Civic Auditorium, right when City Hall is preparing to invest nearly $46 million in revamping the aging landmark to become a world-class performance venue.

The management company involved, the Nederlander Group, required 1,000 parking spaces as part of its contract, either in the surface parking lot at the Civic Center, or in the adjacent structure.

The Early Childhood Education Center will take up the corner at Fourth Street and Civic Center Drive, removing 107 parking spots from the surface lot that's there now. An additional 50 spaces will be taken up during construction for staging, said Karen Ginsberg, assistant director for community and cultural services for City Hall.

On top of that, the center will need parking for its employees, as well as a drop-off/pick-up point for parents to transport their small children to and from the center.

A parking study presented to the City Council in March showed that parking wouldn't be a problem, Ginsberg said after the meeting, but staff told commissioners Wednesday that as surface parking is removed or demand for parking increases, the question of a subterranean parking structure might need to be reconsidered.

Exercise your stress away, Cancer

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ A situation where you have to give more than you are comfortable giving might trigger some frustration, if not anger. You are not a sign people like to be around when you lose your temper. Some of your insights or judgments could be off. Tonight: Detach. How about some yoga to relax?

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Your temper is close to the surface, and you find someone to be provocative. Ask yourself whether you are projecting your stuff onto this person. Knowing when to back off could be very helpful. Tonight: Defer to a close friend or loved one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Funneling your temper into your work might be best for now. The side effect could be carelessness when dealing with machinery, tools or glass. Later today, when you can express your feelings, jump on the occasion. Tonight: Touch base with a friend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ You might not realize how pushed you are by a situation or how triggered a friend might be until the fireworks start. Though your instinct might be to duck, you are better off just going with the moment. Tonight: Exercise your stress away.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You are perhaps more anchored than you are aware. Putting so much energy into your work might be good, but it also could make a boss or associate feel pressured. Tap into your great imagination to find other ways to express this energy. Tonight: So what if it is Monday?

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ New information or news from someone in the know or at a distance comes forward. Try to detach and absorb what is being said. You continue to put a key person in your life on a pedestal. Tonight: Burning the midnight oil.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ Honor what you want, and be more in touch with your needs. Curb a need to have things your way, especially as that attitude today could lead to a lot of flak. Open up a discussion late today if you want it to be successful. Tonight: Hang out.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Though you might judge that everything is copasetic, you have a surprise on the way. Someone else is of the opposite opinion. Boy, is this person going to let you know it, too! Try to pass a peace pipe later in the day. Tonight: Make a gesture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Lying back during the earlier part of the day clearly works best. A co-worker, family member or friend starts acting as if you are competitors. Don't play into this scenario. Tonight: Do what you want.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ A meeting or get-together also could be a source of friction and jealousy. Try not to get into this adversarial position with others. Detach and listen. Plan on distancing yourself late afternoon. Tonight: Not to be found.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ You might want to discuss a situation with far more color and flair than you need to. A boss or supervisor also could push you very hard. Focus on the positive elements in this situation. Tonight: Hang with your friends.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Reach out for others at a distance or someone with greater knowledge than you. You will want their feedback, but at the same time become contentious. Use your differences to strengthen an idea. Tonight: Head home.

Happy birthday

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS
The stars show the kind of day you'll have:
★★★★★Dynamic ★★ So-So
★★★★ Positive ★ Difficult
★★★ Average

This year, you will need to channel your energy well in order to prevent unnecessary volatile situations. Don't suppress your feelings; rather, express them before they hit the point where you lose self-discipline. Your daily life draws more of your attention. You might want to make some changes that involve health and stress. You need an outlet for tension. If you are single, relating also assumes an active role. You might meet someone very special close to your birthday next year. If you are attached, if open, the two of you could work through a lot of previously hot issues. SAGITTARIUS and SCORPIO can test your patience!

Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from ★ (easiest) to ★★★★★ (hardest).

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ British welfare benefits are being reduced in two years, but for now, work-shunning parents who blithely navigate a series of government "support" payments can make a nice living for themselves. Kathy Black, 45, of East Hanningfield, Essex, with 16 children by six fathers thus qualifies for the equivalent of at least $1,000 a week (the take-home pay of someone earning the equivalent of $68,000 a year), and child support from one of the fathers adds even more to her account. Black's second husband, her 17-year-old son and her 22-year-old daughter spilled secrets of her irresponsibility to a Daily Mail reporter in February.

■ In May, a man exploring rural property in Lebanon, Ore., came across what appeared to be a classic World War II-era bomb, but, unfamiliar with the ordnance, he became only the most recent person to make the completely unwise decision to load it into his vehicle and drive to a police station (in Corvallis). Officers at the station reacted predictably and logically: They fled the room, closed down the streets around the station, and called the nearest bomb squad (which later detonated it safely).
