City Council moves ahead with expanded protections for SM renters

BY NICK TABOREK
Daily Press Staff Writer

CITY HALL A plan that would strengthen rules that protect against evictions and extend protections to tenants who live in non rent-controlled units got the City Council's initial approval last week, a step that could pave the way for the proposals to appear on a citywide ballot in November.

The proposals would extend basic eviction protections that tenants in rent-controlled buildings receive to all tenants in Santa Monica and would afford added eviction protections to senior citizens and those who are disabled or terminally ill.

Each of those proposals would require an amendment to the Rent Control Agency's charter, said Deputy City Attorney Adam Radinsky, which means they'll have to receive support from a majority of voters to take effect. The City Council this summer will consider precise language for the amendments and is expected to approve placing them before voters in November's election.

If adopted, the protections that would be extended to all Santa Monica tenants would affect the eviction process in cases where a landlord alleges a tenant has breached a contract, created a nuisance, refused to execute a written lease extension, damaged the premises or denied the landlord access to the rented unit.

The council also tentatively supported two other proposed changes to the rent control law last Tuesday that would not require charter amendments.

Those changes, which Radinsky said the council could enact by adopting new ordinances, would increase the amount tenants receive in relocation payments after an eviction and increase the amount of time tenants receive to correct lease violations before

Budget cuts mean fewer fingerprints for L.A. Sheriff

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES The Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department is collecting fewer fingerprints because of budget cuts, leading to delays in scores of criminal investigations.

Sheriff Lee Baca cut overtime expenses in March for 59 fingerprint specialists in an effort to help fill a $128 million budget gap, The Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

As a result, more than 65 homicide probes have been held up and potential leads in a number of other crimes have been destroyed.

There's now a backlog of more than 100 prints waiting to be analyzed and compared against a statewide database.

The collection of evidence in crimes such as burglaries has been delayed by as much as a week or more. Burglary victims have had to stay away from parts of their homes or temporarily close their businesses to avoid smudging prints and destroying evidence, according to the Times.

Lt. Leonard McCray of the Compton Sheriff's Station said he has received calls from burglary victims upset that no one from the department had shown up to take prints.

"There are often times when the citizen opts to not wait," he said. "And that impacts our ability to solve crimes."

Sheriff's officials estimate that since the cuts went into effect, 10 percent of burglary victims have simply cleaned up and moved on with their lives because they couldn't afford to wait.

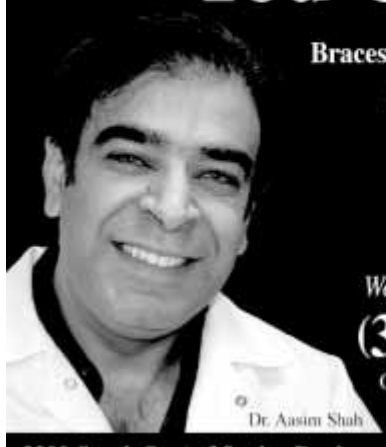

Officials wouldn't predict how many crimes could have been solved but weren't as a result of the delays. Fingerprints are known to be one of the most reliable pieces of evidence in solving crimes.

MINOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

Tyler Skaggs an all-star

Former Samohi hurler impresses in Angels organization

BY DANIEL ARCHULETA
Managing Editor

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa Tyler Skaggs has gone from the baseball diamond at Santa Monica High School to being a minor league all-star.

In his second season of professional ball, Skaggs, a starting pitcher, has been named to the Midwest League All Star team, it was announced last week. Skaggs, playing for the Los Angeles Angels' double A affiliate the Cedar Rapids Kernels, is one of seven teammates who will appear in the game on June 22 in Fort Wayne, Ind.

"Everything is good," Skaggs said of his season. "This is what I expected, but I didn't' think I'd do this well, this fast."

Skaggs, who graduated from Samohi in 2009, has started the season strong, going 5-2 with a 2.55 earned run average. He attributes the strong showing to the development of a change up, adding to his arsenal of pitches.

He also gave credit to his team, which has a 41-21 record as of Sunday, good for first place.

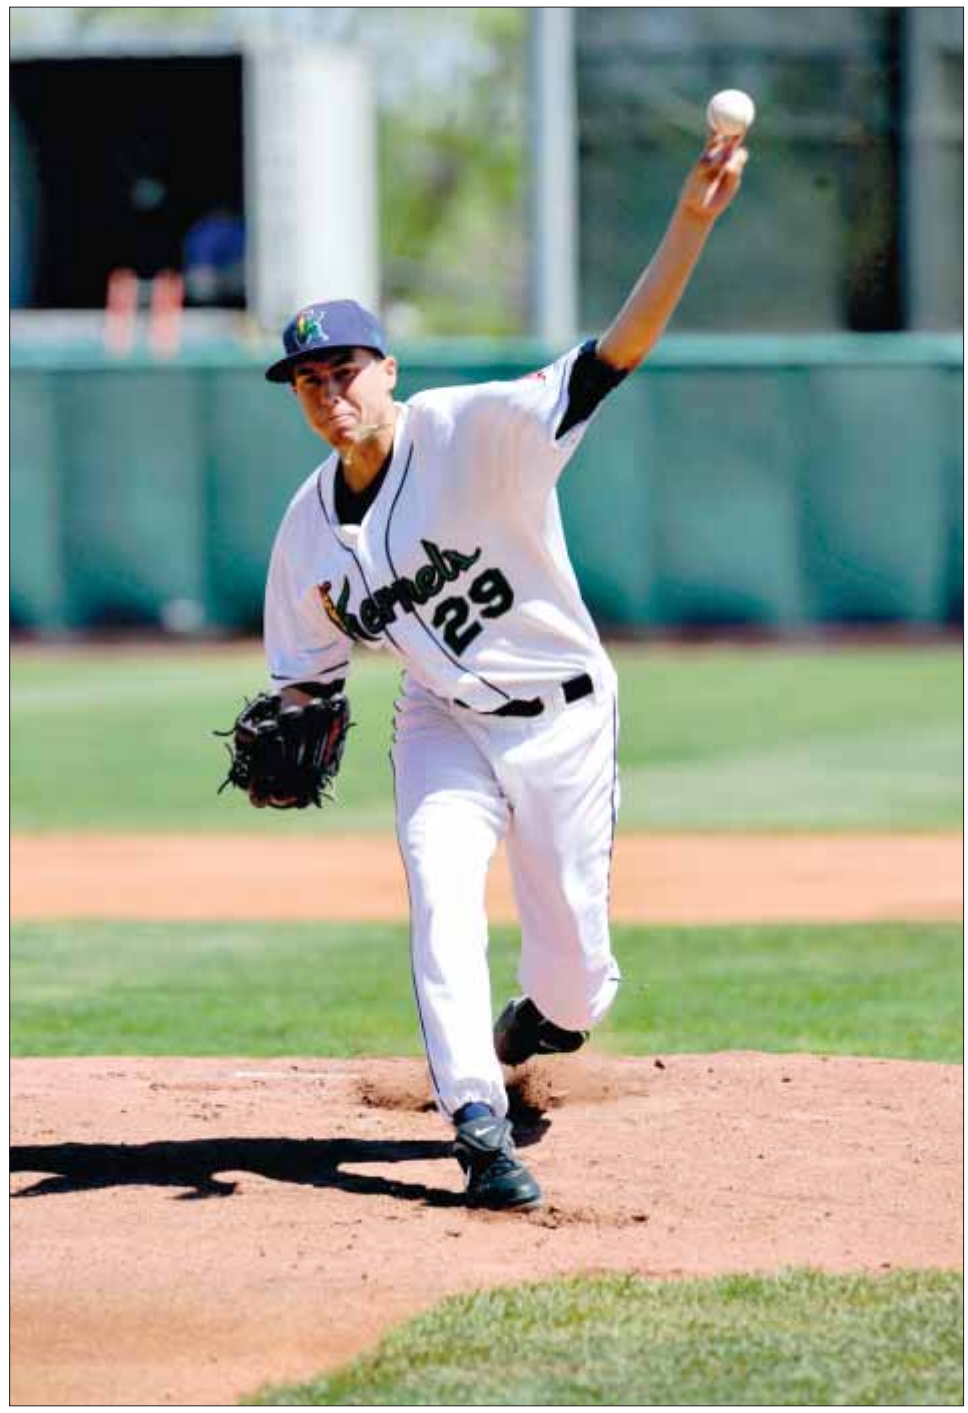

Since being drafted with the 40th pick in the 2009 Major League Baseball Draft, Skaggs has made a good impression on the Angels' front office. Some already have him among the organization's top 10 prospects.

"I'm working my way up there," Skaggs said of his progress.

While being tagged a top prospect acknowledges his progress, Skaggs said he doesn't want that to get to his head. Rather, he just wants to continue to make his way toward the big leagues.

"I just have to go out there and win," he said.

Making noise for transplants

Editor:

As a recipient of a life-saving bone marrow transplant, I recently traveled to Washington, D.C. to ask my federal legislators to reauthorize funding for two vital health care programs – the C.W. Bill Young Cell Transplantation Program and the National Cord Blood Inventory (NCBI). Through my personal experience with transplant, I understand how critical these programs are for patients suffering from life-threatening blood disorders such as leukemia.

I was diagnosed with aplastic anemia when I was a junior in high school. At one point, I was so sick, I did not think that I was going to be able to finish high school. I received a cord blood transplant in 2006 when I was 21 years old and am now perfectly healthy, living in Los Angeles and pursuing my acting career. I am excited to be a part of legislative day so that I can be an inspiration to others and encourage people to sign up for the national registry.

I was honored to join dozens of donors, recipients and family members with the National Marrow Donor Program (NMDP) to share my story and tell my lawmakers how their support can help expand a program that is saving lives. Every year, 12,000 patients in the United States, like me, search the national registry, publicly known as the Be The Match Registry, in hope of finding a match. Because of the national registry, I was able to find a match and I am alive today. But unfortunately, not everyone is as lucky as I was.

These programs must be reauthorized this year so the NMDP can continue to grow and diversify the national registry of adult marrow donors and publicly available cord blood units. With Congress' help, the NMDP can reach its goal of ensuring that all Americans in need of transplant have access to a match. I encourage everyone to support others in need of potentially life-saving transplant by urging their elected officials to reauthorize this important program.

ACLU lawsuit a blunder and a waste

THE LAWSUIT FILED BY THE SOUTHERN California ACLU against the city of Santa Monica and the Santa Monica Police Department has been dismissed by a federal judge. City Hall and the ACLU agreed on a set of general principals in coming to final a settlement that culminated in dismissal.

The settlement "requires no monetary payment of any kind, no change in any city law, policy or practice and no admission of any fault whatsoever," said a press statement issued by the City Manager's office last Tuesday.

The ACLU ballyhooed its ill-advised complaint at a splashy press conference at City Hall last July when it accused the city and the police department of violating the constitutional rights of chronically homeless people by arresting and harassing them. Their complaint asked for an injunction, a jury trial, legal fees and expenses.

According to ACLU Legal Director Mark D. Rosenbaum, the suit was filed on behalf of a half-dozen plaintiffs and claimed the SMPD was waging a war against poor persons and "operating a deportation program" by driving them out of the community.

However, the complaint was riddled with errors, spurious facts and tortured reasoning. For example, claims of "a cap on funding" were totally untrue. Arrests for "loitering" were alleged, but there are no "loitering" statutes on Santa Monica's books.

The suit accused the city and the SMPD of trying to drive homeless people out of the community. But if that were the case, why does City Hall providing so many services including an outreach team for the police department's Homeless Liaison Program (HLP) unit and more recently, a mental health evaluator?

It's obvious the ACLU and its pro-bono legal firm Munger, Tolles & Olson LLP parroted hearsay from alleged "victims" and disgruntled homeless services case workers — failing to do even basic research or investigation on their own. Even more problematic for the ACLU was the disappearance of many of the plaintiffs (including one who left the country) and others who refused to continue with the lawsuit because they were getting "assistance" from City Hall and the police department.

Desperate to put a positive spin on a major faux pas, Rosenbaum told the Daily Press last week, "We noticed upon filing this suit that the arrests under this ordinance immediately stopped. We went back out and spoke to the homeless and learned that in fact they weren't being arrested anymore."

Had Rosenbaum done his due diligence, he would have checked the "Arrest and Bookings" reports posted daily on the SMPD's website and found out that enforcement of ordinances regarding trespassing, park closures, public encampments and other violations have been continually and consistently enforced. More amazingly, he's still relying on street gossip for information.

The claim by the ACLU that Santa Monica doesn't do enough for the homeless or have enough homeless resources was particularly aggravating to City Hall's human services staff, police personnel and many residents. The truth is that Santa Monica does more to end homelessness than virtually any other governmental agency in the country.

The press release noted that Santa Monica has "over 450 shelter beds available to homeless individuals, much more than most other cities in the region." In addition, there is a Homeless Community Court, Eviction Prevention and Rapid Re-Housing program that assists 70 local low-income households, a Service Registry that directs resources to over 400 chronically homeless individuals and Project Homecoming which has reunited over 650 homeless individuals with family and services in their home towns since 2006.

Santa Monica's taxpayers also fund over 20 non-profit programs to serve the homeless population — spending $5.7 million annually. This substantial investment in ending homelessness has generated a strong return for the community such as "a 19 percent reduction in its homeless population from 2009-2010, and a 25 percent reduction from 2007-2010."

Mayor Bobby Shriver said that valuable time and resources could have been better spent on more useful litigation and the ACLU and Munger, Tolles & Olson squandered opportunities and resources in pursuing this complaint.

Shriver (who has been fighting for homeless veteran housing on the Brentwood Veterans Administration property for years) suggested that the VA should have been sued "because they have existing housing that's empty and unused while tens of thousands of homeless vets live in dumpsters and on streets all over the county. The VA is the 800 pound gorilla and much more deserving and worthy of the ACLU's attention and Munger-Tolles' talent and abilities. Litigating there will get a better outcome," Shriver told me.

Even though his lawsuit was a major misfire and a complete embarrassment for all involved, the myopic Rosenbaum still has no clue. He recently told the press, "The ACLU will continue to monitor Santa Monica's treatment of the homeless and could bring a future action based on new evidence if it learns homeless people's rights are being violated."

Unbelievable!

Sensors deployed to better track oil spill in Gulf of Mexico

HARRY R. WEBER
RAY HENRY
Associated Press Writers

SCHRIEVER, La. Undersea sensors were deployed to a ruptured well in the Gulf of Mexico on Sunday in an effort to better track the amount of oil gushing into the sea as pressure mounted on BP to create special accounts that would set aside billions of dollars to pay for spill-related claims.

New estimates say the blown-out well could have been spewing as much as 2 million gallons of crude a day before a cut-and-cap maneuver earlier this month started capturing some of the flow. That means more than 100 million gallons may have leaked into the Gulf since the start of the disaster in April.

BP has struggled with several efforts to contain the oil. The federal government has given the energy giant until the end of Sunday to respond to a demand that the oil giant find ways to better contain the oil spilling into the Gulf.

Scientists also haven't been able to pin down just how much oil is spilling into the Gulf, and the government has stressed that the larger estimates were still preliminary and considered a worse-case scenario. The Obama administration's point man on the oil spill, Adm. Thad Allen, on Sunday said government officials think the best figures are from a middle-of-the-road estimate, which would put the spill at around 66 million gallons of oil.

Allen said the sensors were to be deployed Sunday and will start taking pressure readings to validate the estimates. BP spokesman Jon Pack said undersea robots were attempting to install the sensors within the containment cap that sits over the well.

"I've told everybody from the start these are only estimates. We will only know what is flowing out of that well when we have it completely capped, control the flow, can actually measure," Allen told CBS' "Face the Nation" on Sunday.

It's not known just how much oil started to leak after the riser pipe was cut on June 3, a step that BP and government officials said could increase the flow by 20 percent. The pipe cut was necessary to install a cap over the well; the cap has captured an estimated 5 million gallons so far.

Meanwhile, the White House and at least two Gulf states demanded that BP create special accounts that would set aside money to pay for the mounting claims related to the spill.

President Barack Obama wants an independent, third party to administer the escrow account and compensate those with "legitimate" claims for damages, Obama's top political adviser said Sunday. The amount of money set aside will be discussed during talks this week between the White House and BP, but Axelrod said it should be "substantial."

"We are aware of the request," said BP spokeswoman Sheila Williams in London. She declined to comment further.

Gulf states also were putting the squeeze on BP. The attorney general in Florida and the state treasurer in Louisiana want BP to put a total of $7.5 billion in escrow accounts to compensate the states and their residents for damages now and in the future amid talk of the possibility that BP may eventually file for bankruptcy.

"At the end of the day, my concern is Louisiana," state treasurer, John Kennedy, told The Associated Press on Saturday. "BP ultimately will do what BP thinks is best for BP."

Alabama doesn't plan to take such action, and Mississippi and Texas haven't said what they will do.

But even with Florida and Louisiana, BP might have a hard time complying, and if it did, it could hasten the company's spiral downward. That's because as of March 31, BP had $6.8 billion in cash and cash equivalents available.

The company said in a statement to the AP that it's considering the Florida request. It didn't address the comments by Kennedy.

On Saturday, the Coast Guard made public a testy letter sent to BP demanding the energy giant pick up its pace and present a better plan to contain the spill by the time Obama arrives at the beleaguered coast for a two-day visit on Monday. BP's chief operating officer, Doug Suttles, said the company would respond to the letter by Sunday night.

Tensions between BP and the federal government have ramped up as the public outrage over the spill has grown. Obama has come under increasing criticism for his response to the disaster, with even some of his strongest admirers feeling his response at times has been aloof.

The president will meet BP executives, including the company's chairman, on Wednesday, a day after he returns from the Gulf. The president also plans an Oval Office address to the American public on Tuesday night.

Along the Gulf Coast, beaches in Orange Beach, Ala., where large amounts of crude and tar balls washed ashore a day earlier, were mostly clean on Sunday after crews worked through the night and in the early morning clearing the oil.

Clear plastic bags sat in piles, full of sand and tar balls, and some empty stretches of beach were still littered with grapefruit sized tar patties.

The Q Line

Blowing in the wind

Some members of Santa Monica's City Council would like to change the law to make homeowners liable for gardeners using leaf blowers, which are illegal, in their yards.

So, this week's Q-Line question asks:
Do you think homeowners should pay the price for the infraction, or should the gardener be responsible?

Call (310) 285-8106 before Friday at 5 p.m. and we'll print your answers in the weekend edition of the Daily Press.

Creating distance

Dear EarthTalk

OK, so are cell phones emitting dangerous radiation or not? If so, which phones are safer that others and what do we do to minimize exposure?

SAFETY FIRST: The jury is still out as to whether or not the radiation emitted by cell phones is dangerous, but some manufacturers are working to reduce the radiation emissions of the phones they make. Though it may make you look bionic, a safe bet is to use a headset or ear piece to create distance between the phone and your head when calling.

THE JURY IS STILL OUT AS TO WHETHER or not the radiation emitted by cell phones can cause negative health effects for callers. Mobile phones emit signals to communicate with cellular towers via radio waves, which are comprised of radio-frequency (RF) energy, a form of electromagnetic radiation.

The U.S. Federal Communications Commission (FCC) limits the amount of radiation any phone sold in the U.S. can emit to what it considers a safe level of 1.6 watts per kilogram of body weight (a measure of the energy absorbed by the body when using a wireless device). But some health practitioners are concerned that even this level of exposure may be too high, resulting in people unwittingly exposing themselves to potentially harmful radiation every time they make or take a call.

Such radiation is known to heat up living tissue it comes into close contact with by a fraction of a degree, but this level of temperature increase is less than that caused by exposure to direct sunlight, and the brain's blood circulation typically disperses this excess heat quickly by increasing local blood flow.

Some recent studies have found higher risks for brain and salivary gland tumors among people using cell phones for 10 years or longer, while other research has found little if any risk. Other research has looked at the reproductive, cognitive and sleep effects of RF energy at levels similar to what cell/smart phones emit. Results have been mixed. More studies are now underway to resolve whether or not cell phones are safe for people to use, but some electronics manufacturers aren't waiting around to cut down on the radiation emissions of the phones they make and sell.

If you are in the market for a new cell phone, check out the nonprofit Environmental Working Group's (EWG's) rundown on which of the thousand or so popular cell/smart phone models give off the most and least radiation. Levels vary widely, from as little as 0.3 to the legal limit of 1.6 watts per kilogram of body weight. Sanyo's Katana II, Samsung's Rugby, Nokia's 7710, and the Blackberry Storm, among others, get top marks from EWG for giving off lower amounts of radiation (in the 0.3 range). Meanwhile, more than a dozen different cell/smart phones (including some of the most popular models such as Motorola's Droid, Blackberry's Bold 9700, LG's Chocolate Touch and HTC's Nexus One by Google) are categorized as "worst" by EWG for giving off larger amounts of radiation (pushing the 1.6 limit). Apple's iPhone 3Gs is in the middle of the spectrum, leaking between 0.52 and 1.19, depending on usage.

Regardless of which cell/smart phone you use, you can minimize your exposure to RF radiation by taking a few simple precautions. For one, using a headset (these give off significantly less radiation) or speaker phone keeps the phone itself away from your head. Also, your phone emits far less radiation when used to text instead of call — and the phone isn't next to your brain when texting — so the more you tap (just not while driving, please!) instead of talk the better. Also, a poor signal (fewer bars) means that your phone has to work harder — and emit more radiation — to connect up to a wireless tower, so wait to make that call until you are somewhere with a stronger connection.

JIM KUHNHENN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON They are the sticking points that would gum up the Wall Street overhaul.

From big banks' exotic trades to the plastic in people's wallets, it only takes a few of the most contentious issues to upend a careful political equilibrium as lawmakers try to blend House and Senate bills into a single rewrite of banking regulations.

The final measure, which President Barack Obama wants by July 4, is intended to prevent another financial crisis like the 2008 meltdown, which triggered a deep recession.

Rep. Barney Frank, chairman of a panel resolving differences in the two bills, and Sen. Chris Dodd, who shepherded the Senate's measure, must fend off industry efforts to dilute the final legislation. And they will need to hold together a fragile Senate coalition that included only four Republicans.

Typically, legislation gets watered down in the Senate. This time, the Senate version emerged tougher than the House bill. Frank, D-Mass., agreed to make the Senate bill the base, with some minor House modifications.

There's momentum behind the Senate version.

"Throughout this process you have seen a desire by members not wanting to be seen voting with the banks," said Edward Mills, a financial policy analyst at FBR Capital markets.

The financial industry is no stranger to the lawmakers working on the legislation.

At least 56 industry lobbyists have served on the personal staffs of the 43 Senate and House members who will have a hand in shaping the bill over the next two weeks, according to an analysis by Public Citizen and the Center for Responsive Politics, two government watchdogs.

What's more, the center found that lawmakers on the committee settling differences between the competing House and Senate versions have received more than $112 million over two decades from political action committees or employees of industries affected by the legislation.

"It's going to be very difficult to stop special interests, working through some members of the conference, from inserting weakening provisions," said Travis Plunkett, legislative director of the Consumer Federation of America.

A look at the main issues to be settled:

Derivatives:

These are the complex, unregulated securities that many corporations typically use as a hedge against market fluctuations. For instance, an airline may try to soften the cost of a potential rise in fuel prices by betting in the derivatives market that fuel prices will rise. But derivatives have become instruments for risky speculation. The legislation would require that they be traded in regulated exchanges.

The toughest Senate provision would force banks to shed most of their lucrative derivatives business — the trades they conduct for themselves and the markets they create for clients would have to be spun off into separate subsidiaries.

The proposal's chief advocate is Sen. Blanche Lincoln, D-Ark., who survived liberal and labor attacks during a hard-fought primary runoff largely by spotlighting her anti-Wall Street stance.

The Obama administration and bank regulators, including Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke, have said her proposal goes too far. Advocates say it would limit the type of risky bank behavior that led to the financial crisis.

Large banks are simply apoplectic, watching as it gains strength over time.

Lincoln's political success had two effects: It boosted her strength as a member of the House-Senate conference committee working on a compromise and it showed other Democrats that her Wall Street criticism worked in a tough political year for incumbents.

With seven Senate Democrats and five Senate Republicans on the conference committee, Frank and Dodd, D-Conn., can't afford to lose her vote.

Volcker Rule:

After the Great Depression, depository banks and investment banks had to be separate and independent enterprises. Congress and the Clinton administration changed that in 1999. Now, huge financial institutions such as Goldman Sachs, Morgan Stanley, JPMorgan Chase, Bank of America combine commercial and investment banking operations.

> IT'S GOING TO BE VERY DIFFICULT TO STOP SPECIAL INTERESTS, WORKING THROUGH SOME MEMBERS OF THE CONFERENCE, FROM INSERTING WEAKENING PROVISIONS."

A Senate plan known as the Volcker rule, after former Fed Chairman Paul Volcker, would prohibit banks from betting on the markets with their own money. It would give regulators the authority to determine the best way to put into place that prohibition, which would apply to all securities trades, not just derivatives.

Unlike Lincoln's plan, it would not stop banks from creating trading markets for their clients.

Volcker is the proposal's leading champion. But he and several Democratic lawmakers want to strengthen the Senate bill by giving regulators less latitude to modify the prohibition. The idea has been pushed by Democratic Sens. Carl Levin of Michigan and Jeff Merkley of Oregon.

Prompted by a Securities and Exchange commission case against Goldman Sachs, their plan also would prevent financial firms from betting against securities they assemble for their clients.

Large banks see billions of dollars in trades slipping away. They prefer a House plan that merely says regulators could ban such trades. But Frank last week dashed those hopes.

"The general direction that Sens. Merkley and Levin were moving in is a direction that a lot of people are supportive of," he said. "The final version, we'll see. But it will be tougher than the House."

Debit card fees:

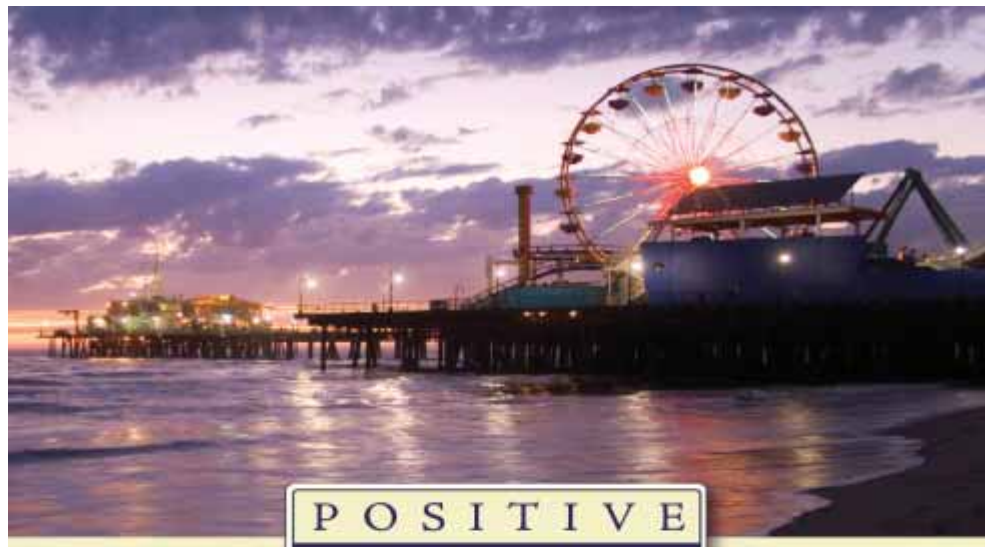

People in the U.S. use debit cards more frequently than credit cards. But their use costs merchants money: For every swipe, merchants pay 1 percent to 2 percent to banks and credit card networks such as Visa and MasterCard.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

Big Blue Bus Campus Expansion Project (1620 Sixth St.)

No parking along the west sidewalk of Seventh Street between Colorado Avenue and Olympic Boulevard until June 2010.

Santa Monica Boulevard Resurfacing – Phase I & II

Sidewalk replacement, gutter and alley construction is scheduled to take place on Santa Monica Boulevard between Lincoln and Cloverfield boulevards, resulting in intermittent lane closures and temporary access restrictions to alleys connecting to Santa Monica Boulevard. The construction schedule is subject to change without notice based on weather conditions.

Parking Structure No. 2 Seismic Retrofit

The parking structure will remain open throughout construction, however the work requires temporary closure of up to 50 parking spaces per day. From approximately Tuesday, June 15 to July 15, traffic leaving Parking Structure No. 2 will not be able to exit onto Second Street. Instead, all exiting traffic will be re-routed through the alley behind the structure. Estimated project completion is December of 2010.

Parking Structures at Santa Monica Place

Parking Structure 7 will be completely closed until August 2010 for construction improvements. For construction questions, please contact Dan Griffin at (310) 394-6000. For alternate parking location questions, contact Frank Ching at (310) 458-8295.

Annual Street Improvement Project

Striping and adjusting utilities on various newly paved streets around the city. The contractor will also be repairing sidewalks at various locations. Traffic may be impacted during the striping and utility adjustments, but impacts are expected to be minimal.

Parking Structure 2 Seismic Retrofit

The parking structure will remain open throughout construction, however the work requires temporary closure of up to 50 parking spaces per day. There will also be intermittent re-routing of traffic at the exits of the structure and, at times, the garage will exit through the alley behind the structure instead of onto Second Street. Estimated project completion is December 2010.

RENT CONTROL

an eviction notice could be issued.

Though the landlord group Action Apartment Association has said it opposes the changes and may sue to block them, the proposals were considered non-controversial by the seven member City Council.

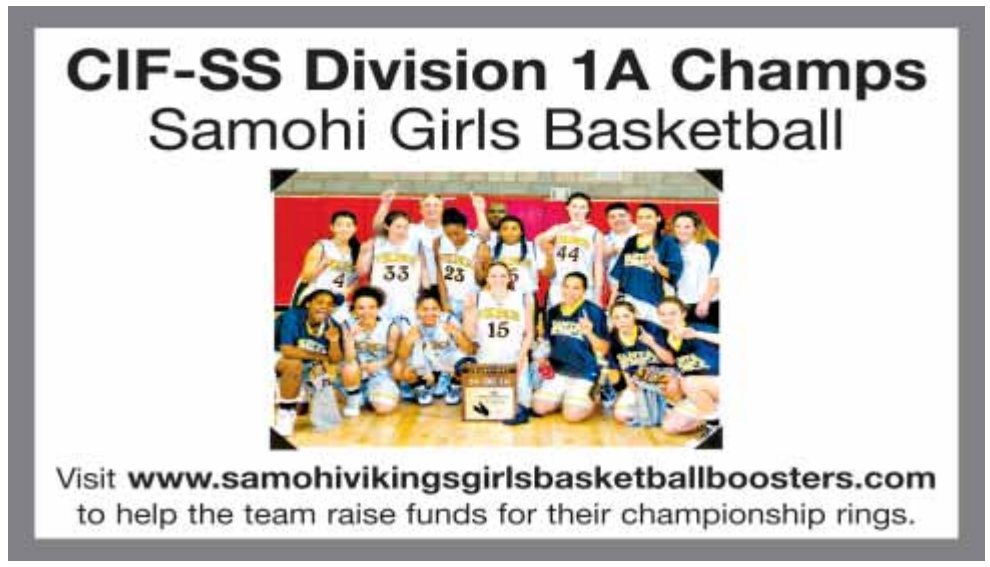

Councilman Kevin McKeown said while Santa Monica has a strong rent control law, it has fallen behind other cities in some areas of tenant protection.

"We have the best rent control law and will continue to have [the best law] of any city, but in many ways we're just catching up to other cities on some of these other protections," he said.

MINOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

‘Knuckle Princess’ gets first K, but no win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICO Eri Yoshida added another first to her resume, but the 18-year-old “Knuckle Princess” from Japan is still looking for a win.

Yoshida, the first female to play professionally in the United States since 2000, pitched four strong innings and recorded her first strikeout of the season but left with a no-decision in the Chico Outlaws’ 8-4 win over the Yuma Scorpions on Saturday night.

The right-hander gave up two runs and allowed the leadoff batter to reach base in every inning she worked, needing 79 pitches in her second start of the year.

“I wanted to throw one more inning, but the manager has the ideas, he has the strategy, so I respect that,” Yoshida said through an interpreter. “I just want to improve more and more. I prepared to pitch like usual, so I could relax more than last time.”

Yoshida has created quite a stir in this college town since signing with the Outlaws earlier this year. Long lines of fans snaked through the stadium parking lot 30 minutes before the game, with the first 1,000 receiving an autographed picture of Yoshida. Team officials delayed the start briefly to allow people to get inside.

The 5-foot right-hander, who already has a spot reserved in Cooperstown, was much more relaxed than in her debut May 29 despite hitting Yuma leadoff hitter Eric Scriven with her second pitch.

Yoshida’s knuckleball, which she learned from watching tapes of Boston Red Sox pitcher Tim Wakefield, dipped and danced nicely at times and prevented the Scorpions from doing much offensively.

She struck out Timothy Rodriguez on three pitches in the third inning, drawing a roar from the Chico fans, and got a double play in the fourth before allowing an unearned run on an error by Chico shortstop Alex Prieto. The strikeout was Yoshida’s first of the year.

“She’s really getting confident, and when she’s confident and throwing all of her pitches across the plate, she’s tough,” Chico catcher Robby Alcombrack said. “When she really lets the knuckler go and she’s not trying to aim it, she’s good. It’s a knuckleball and you really never know how it’s going to be, but tonight it was heavy and it was late.”

During pregame introductions, Yoshida received the loudest cheers as she jogged from Chico’s dugout to the mound for her second start in front of the Outlaws crowd.

It’s already been a whirlwind month for Yoshida. She became the first woman to play pro baseball in the United States since Ila Borders in 2000 when she pitched three innings against Tijuana. That prompted the Baseball Hall of Fame to ask for the jersey and bat Yoshida used in the game.

Yoshida is also gaining a following in the majors. She has met and spoken to Wakefield multiple times, and this week Hideki Matsui of the Los Angeles Angels acknowledged he is a fan of the teen sensation.

“I saw that on the Internet and I am very glad that a major leaguer, like I want to be, is thinking of me like that,” Yoshida said. “That makes me happy.”

Yoshida rebounded nicely and pitched a scoreless second inning before running into a jam in the third after giving up a leadoff walk and a one-out double. Yoshida stayed calm, though, and struck out Rodriguez. Deleon flew out to center to end the threat.

Johny Celis walked leading off the fourth but was erased when Yoshida got Ruben Sanchez to ground into a 6-4-3 double play. Masjid Khairy followed with a single to left, stole second, then scored when Prieto failed to catch Bubba Garcia’s popup and was charged with an error.

Yoshida, who singled in her only at-bat during her debut two weeks ago, struck out looking in the second.

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

Heal the Bay

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Join a friend or two tonight, Cancer

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Unexpected demands come in from out of left field. Stay on top of your responsibilities, even though you could be busy and overwhelmed. Know when enough is enough. Let your creativity float later today. Tonight: What would prove to be most fun?

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Keep communication flowing. You are often associated with the calm and staid, and are able to respond to some unanticipated behavior better than many people. Maintain a sense of humor. Tonight: Happy at home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Take a strong stand. Understand what is happening financially. Don't allow a current of unexpected events to hit your checkbook. Avoid putting yourself in the position of losing funds. Tonight: What begins as a chat could go way into the wee hours.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Keep reaching out for more information, even if you don't enjoy the answers. How you handle an issue and what happens could be most rewarding in the long run. Tonight: Join a friend or two.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★ If you feel off, maintain a low profile. You might wonder which way to go with a difficult situation. The unexpected keeps coloring a relationship. Get to the bottom, to the essential issue, to see if it is resolvable. Could dominance or control be an issue? Tonight: Doing your thing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Use the daylight hours for key projects, meetings and interactions. Still, what becomes apparent is that those around you express an unpredictability. Your exceptionally grounded manner is a high-ticket item right now. Tonight: Vanish if you can.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Others count on you appearing on time. You might not like the end results if you don't surface as agreed. What becomes apparent at this point is that associates just won't put up with anything other than the expected. Tonight: Out with friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ You come up with solutions out of the blue, so much so that you might even surprise yourself. Your caring does count, even if someone doesn't respond as you would like. Don't make it a big deal. Remember, people express caring as they want to receive caring. Tonight: It could be a late night.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Associates, partners and others in general seem determined to have it their way. The smart Sag will let others have their way while going off and pursuing another interest. Tonight: Be imaginative.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Others come forward with new ideas, which might even be better ones. Loosen up and worry less about what is going on around you. Your sense of humor comes out when plans get tossed in the air. Work with the unexpected. Tonight: Someone wants your time and attention.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Pace yourself, though an opening might occur for extra work or making money in a new fashion. You will be able to incorporate this extra demand into your life. A friend or loved one needs some personal time. Tonight: Go with a different suggestion.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You might feel lucky. Certainly you pull the wild card financially. Understanding the plusses and minuses of a risk could be very important. A brainstorming session provides many more options than you are aware of. Tonight: Slow down, for your sake.

Happy birthday

This year, increasing your security becomes a very high priority. Understand that an element of the unexpected runs through your life, especially professionally. You can harness this energy and use it. Become more creative and dynamic in your ideas. Some of you might want to forge a new career or one that is home-based. If you are single, your charming ways and wit draw many potential suitors. Choosing the right one for you is important. Don't commit until you are sure you are with the right person.

Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from ★ (easiest) to ★★★★★ (hardest).

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

ARITHMO™ CrossMath

• Fill the grid with the set of given numbers (1 to 12) to satisfy the Equa demands (7 to 24) in the shaded boxes. The Equa demands represent the sum of the digits that you will insert into the empty squares.
• Each horizontal row has one Equa demand to satisfy; each vertical column also has one demand to satisfy. Each empty square in the grid dictates the math operation (addition +, subtraction -, multiplication X, and division ÷) that must be performed to meet the demands.
• You must follow the given math operations for each square and you must make sure all the numbers satisfy the demands in the shaded boxes when connected in adjacent threes and calculated together from left to right, and top to bottom.
• The numbers you insert into the grid must satisfy the Equa demands both horizontally and vertically.

For more games, go to www.arithmo.com

Fill in the empty fields with the given numbers so when calculated together they satisfy all Equas in the gray boxes:

3, 4, 6, 9, 9

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ It's clear, based on a May Time magazine dispatch, that Norway's felons and miscreants are of a superior class than America's. When Norway's brand-new Halden prison opened in April, the country's King Harald V headlined a glitzy gala that celebrated what has been called the world's "most humane" lockup. Among the facilities: a sound studio, jogging trails, a guest house for inmates' visitors, and a scrumptious-smelling "kitchen laboratory" where murderers and bandits can learn to cook. Guards are unarmed (half are women) and intermingle with the rapists, drug dealers and others, dining with them and joining them in intramural sports. The recidivist rate for Norwegian prisoners in general is only 20 percent (versus 50 percent to 60 percent in the United States), but it is still early to tell whether Halden's prisoners will find life behind bars so pleasant that they don't mind risking another stretch there by returning to crime.

■ Cutting-Edge Products: (1) A Portland, Ore., inventor recently began offering a colorful patch designed to cover the area just below a dog's tail. The "Rear Gear" is featured on the handmade-crafts' site, Etsy.com. (2) Tyrone Henry and Fermin Esson, of Opa Locka, Fla., near Miami, told reporters they were recently granted a patent for "saggy pants" that they say will satisfy young men's street-fashion sense yet not run afoul of municipal laws around the country banning exposed underwear.
