BEACH: Officers are patrolling local beaches during the summer.

MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

As the temperature rises in Los Angeles, thousands of eager Angelenos will try to beat the heat by heading west to local beaches and local law enforcement agencies are preparing to handle the influx of visitors.

Malibu and Santa Monica have increased the quantity of officers patrolling coastal hotspots and both cities said there are some simple steps anyone can take to improve beach safety.

In Santa Monica, the police department will station more officers on the beach, Pier and in the Downtown.

"Our officers are there to enforce any laws they see being violated," said Lieutenant Saul Rodriguez. "Whether it's drinking on the beach or vehicle crimes, they are going to tackle anything and everything that will come their way."

Rodriguez said increasing

Airbnb loses latest court battle over Santa Monica's strict rules

Home sharing sites Airbnb and HomeAway will have to verify hosts are properly registered with the City of Santa Monica before booking guests, after a U.S. District Court judge dismissed a legal challenge to local rules. The judge said the city has a right to keep the international websites from facilitating illegal business transactions here.

Santa Monica's strict home sharing ordinance prohibits the use of apartments, condominiums and houses for short-term rentals unless the host is present during the stay. Hosts must register with the City and obtain a business license. City leaders say the rules maintain the character of local neighborhoods and preserve housing in the midst of a statewide crisis.

"The City of Santa Monica has consistently dedicated policies to producing, protecting and preserving housing in our community," said City Attorney Lane Dilg. "Today's decision affirms that cities can take reasonable steps to preserve precious housing supply in the face of an ever-expanding vacation rental industry that threatens to convert homes, and particularly affordable rental units, into de facto hotels."

In the case, Airbnb and HomeAway complained the rules violate the Communications Decency Act, the First Amendment, the Fourteenth Amendment and

City begins negotiations for Gehry building

KATE CAGLE
Daily Press Staff Writer

World renowned architect Frank Gehry's signature Santa Monica project sailed through its final preliminary review Tuesday, as the City Council lauded the design as "iconic." The project's centerpiece, a curving 12-story hotel tower, will be wrapped in white metal to reflect the golden hues of the setting sun from its perch on Ocean Avenue and Santa Monica Boulevard.

"He wants me to make the greatest work of architecture ever possible for this site," Gehry said of developer Jeff Worthe. "I think it's a special opportunity for all of us."

The Council was the fourth board to review the latest design iteration, which removed ten stories from the central tower originally included in the 2013 plans. The project now includes a 115-room hotel, a 40,000 square foot museum, about 80 apartments including 19 rent-controlled units and 18 deed-restricted "affordable" units, 24,700 square feet of retail space, and a 5,000 square foot public observation deck.

"Our family has owned this site for over 40 years and we know it deserves something iconic that honors Santa Monica's past, present and future," Worthe told the Daily Press. "We are respecting that by restraining from overbuilding the site – in fact, this design has only 70 percent of the density allowed by the Downtown Community Plan. We look forward to the next stage of design to bring our vision to reality."

Worthe Real Estate Group will now begin negotiations for a Development Agreement, which will require an additional slate of community benefits in exchange for allowing the project to reach heights above 84 feet. The Council urged staff to negotiate for more affordable housing, a high level or energy efficiency and a robust transportation plan to offset car trips to the site. Worthe said designers are feeling positive as they move toward the next phase.

"We are thrilled with the unanimous votes we received from both the City Council and Planning Commission during our float-up process. The feedback from the community on this design has been very positive," Worthe said.

Historic Celebration of SMC's First-Ever Bachelor's Degree Graduates with Ring Creative Director John Modestine as Guest Speaker

On Thursday, June 7 from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the SMC Center for Media and Design, Santa Monica College (SMC) held a "SMC Interaction Design Grad Show," a celebration of the college's first 18 students to earn a Bachelor of Science degree in Interaction Design (IXD). The event showcased the students' portfolios and was also an industry mixer.

John Modestine, creative director of Ring — the global home security company owned by Amazon — addressed the students as guest speaker, imparting real-world advice especially relevant to succeeding in the design/tech industry.

SMC's Bachelor of Science degree was designed to impart fundamental skills in interaction design, a field that blends user experience (UX), design, and technology. The students spent their first two years studying graphic design, and the last two immersed in upper-division interaction design courses, as well as related coursework in Computer Science, Business, Cognitive Psychology and Media. It was the first baccalaureate degree of its kind to be offered at a community college. The Interaction Design program was launched after SMC was selected by the California Community Colleges Board of Governors in 2015 to be part of the historic pilot program. Under the pilot, the selected two-year colleges would offer four-year degree programs in a field where there was a local need and that were not offered at a California State University or University of California campus. Pier 360 Ocean Sports & Beach Festival

Bring on the paddle-battles. On Saturday, June 23 and Sunday, June 24, more than 350 athletes will storm the sands of the Santa Monica Pier for the Pier 360 Ocean Sports & Beach Festival. This two-day festival, going from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Saturday and 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday, will offer a complete 360° of California beach culture and a $15,000 prize pool to its elite roster of paddleboarders, swimmers and ocean sports athletes. In addition to a full slate of marquee ocean races and beachside tournaments, a spin around the festival grounds presents art, music, surf history and activities for all ages. Presented by CLIF and in keeping with the Santa Monica Pier Corporation's (SMPC) commitment to producing the best and most distinctive "cannot believe they are free events," there is no cost to attend.

The two-day festival begins with a 7 a.m. Hawaiian blessing on the sand before diving into the first of 13 competitions. Thousands of spectators will line the sand and the deck as lifeguards compete in dory races and elite stand-up Paddleboard (SUP) racers compete in a challenging course around the Pier. If that is not enough, spectators can catch skaters on the pop-up skate ramp or help construct a sand sculpture with the art collective.

On the Pier deck, live music will take center stage, anchored by music festival mainstay Brownies and Lemonade. Pier 360-goers can listen to the music with drinks in hand at the Beer and Spirits Garden, which will be pouring beer and cocktails from 10 a.m. to sunset on both days. For an educational surf safari, cruise the Museum of Beach Life and its collection of antique surfboards, paddleboards and lifeguard equipment celebrating the history of beach life at the Pier that dates back to the 1940s.

The Pier 360 event will showcase several award-winning athletes. San Clemente native and surfing champion Candice Appleby will be there alongside fellow surfers like Jade Howson, the 2018 winner of the Santa Cruz's Paddlefest who hails from Laguna Beach. In addition to them, first overall Pier Paddle winner Slater Trout of Redondo Beach, 4-time Santa Monica Pier Paddle Champion Carter Graves of Coronado Beach, two-time overall winner of Pier 360 Shae Foudy of Dana Point and ISA World SUP gold medalist Jack Bark of Palos Verdes will also be in attendance.

The event will be taking place on both surf and turf, and a full event schedule will be available online at: www.SMPier360.com. On the pier deck, people will have live entertainment and dining at their disposal. Music from Brownies & Lemonade as well as a Polynesian Band and Hula Dancing will be located on the deck. The Beer & Spirits Garden will be serving beverages and The Albright and Seaside on the Pier will have food available to festival-goers. Think Tank Gallery Art Installations and skate ramps presented by Red Bull will also be open on the pier.

On the sand, spectators can watch a Beach Volleyball AAU & 4-Man competition, they can take part in playing Beach Volleyball Doubles or participate in various Kids Activities.

In the water, the paddle battles will commence. The aquatic competitions offered will be the Stand Up Paddleboard (SUP) Surf Competition, a Paddle Cross Race, a Dory Sprint and 3-Lap Dory, a one Mile Ocean Swim, a Long Course Paddle Race, a Splash n' Dash and a Junior SUP Race.

What began in 2010 as the single-day Paddleboard Race at the Santa Monica Pier has evolved into one of California's largest ocean festivals, drawing thousands of spectators each year. With Pier 360, the SMPC is doubling down on summer's kickoff celebration by curating a weekend's worth of events and adding races, installations and historic activations.

"Pier 360 combines all of the beautiful things about beach life and rolls it into one epic happening," SMPC Executive Director Negin Singhs said.

The festival benefits The Surfrider Foundation and The Bay Foundation, two nonprofit organizations dedicated to preserving coastal access, protecting the environment and improving the health of the ocean environment. The event is presented by CLIF, The Albright, Seaside on the Pier, Boxed Water, Kona Brewing Co., Nekter Juice Bar, Pro SUP Shop, Red Bull, White Claw, ZICO Coconut Water, Aperol, Patron and Mezu.

Bringing back the bees

Dear EarthTalk:
What can I do to help bees back from massive die-offs in recent years?

Bill Gorman
Albuquerque, NM

MAJOR DECLINES IN POPULATIONS OF bees in North America and beyond is a big problem for farmers who depend on this free natural pollinator to help fertilize their crops that end up as food on our tables. According to the non-profit Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC), $15 billion a year in U.S. crops—including apples, berries, cantaloupes, cucumbers, alfalfa, and almonds among others—are pollinated by bees. Meanwhile, U.S. honey bees produce some $150 million in honey annually.

Simply put, fewer bees means less food on our shelves and a major economic hit to the agricultural sector. "The global economic cost of bee decline, including lower crop yields and increased production costs, has been estimated at as high as $5.7 billion per year," reports NRDC.

While we still aren't 100 percent certain what is causing the decline across the board for bees, most researchers believe a class of pesticides called neonics (short for neonicotinoids) are at least partially to blame. Designed to eliminate insect pests that most commonly afflict agricultural crops, neonics—which are now genetically engineered right into the crop seeds themselves—are wreaking havoc on so-called "non-target insects" like bees as well. And the shifting habitat zones and crazy weather that has accompanied global warming is only exacerbating the bees' survival issues.

But NRDC remains optimistic that we can bring back bee populations if we each do our part to create pollinator-friendly habitat. For starters, you can welcome bees to your backyard by laying off the intense landscaping and letting things go a little wild. A greater variety of plants—especially native ones—will encourage bees to set up shop nearby.

Researchers at Michigan State University (MSU) Extension report that bees especially love to forage on purple, blue, white, yellow, mauve or violet flowers that direct them via markings and patterns unseen by the human eye to a "landing pad" where they can get pollinating. Find more regionally appropriate plants that will work to attract bees and other pollinators by downloading the free Bee Smart Pollinator Gardener app, which helps users select pollinator-friendly native plants to use in landscaping projects large and small based on location, project scope, flower color and other options.

You can also encourage bees to move right in by creating habitats tailor-made for them. "Revisit how you approach a fallen tree or a dead limb: it's not an eyesore; it's a potential bee nest!" counsels NRDC. "Drill bee-inviting holes in that dead wood, build nest blocks, or simply buy a premade bee box."

And be careful about the plants you bring home from the garden store. A 2014 report by the non-profit Friends of the Earth (FOE) found that more than half of plant samples purchased at top garden stores across North America contained neonics. NRDC advises to only buy plants or seeds that aren't pretreated with pesticides, and to read the fine print on the label: "If a plant is marked 'protected,' that may mean it's chemically treated." Patronizing smaller, organic plant nurseries is the best way to avoid neonics.

City of Malibu to Hold Earthquake Preparedness Workshop and Provide Free Emergency Kits for Participants 55 and Older

The City of Malibu will hold an Earthquake Preparedness Workshop on Wednesday, June 27, from 2:30 to 4:00 p.m. at City Hall. Participants age 55 and older who bring an ID will receive a free comprehensive emergency kit in a wheeled travel backpack. The kits contain emergency food and water, a first aid kit, a hand-crank powered radio with built-in flashlight and cell phone charger and the Red Guide to Recovery – a Resource Handbook for Disaster Survivors.

"Since the entire City of Malibu sits on top of an earthquake fault and we are geographically cut off from the surrounding area, it's critical that everyone in Malibu be prepared for a major earthquake," Mayor Rick Mullen said.

The workshop on June 27 will provide information about the earthquake threat in Malibu, what to expect from the City and first responders, and how best to prepare. The emergency kits were made possible by a grant from the Los Angeles Urban County-Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) that was designed to increase earthquake preparedness among people age 55 and older.

The workshop and emergency kits are part of the 2018 Earthquake Resiliency Initiative as well as Malibu's ongoing efforts to increase their public safety and disaster preparedness in the community.

To register for the workshop, call Recreation Coordinator Lisa Crespo at 310-456-2489 ext. 279 or email lcrespo@malibucity.org. For more information, call Public Safety Manager Susan Dueñas at 310-456-2489 ext. 313 or email sduenas@malibucity.org or visit www.MalibuCity.org/earthquake.

other buildings in the city but considers the Worthe project his legacy achievement.

"I'm kind of old for this," Gehry said after waiting more than six hours for his agenda item at the City Council meeting. "It's a special project."

If completed, the parking lot on Santa Monica Boulevard would be replaced by a winding paseo of shops and restaurants. Locals and tourists will be able to walk along the paseo to the entrance for the observation deck, with 360 degree views of the Pacific Ocean, the Pier and the mountains.

Current plans preserve two landmarked buildings on Ocean Avenue, converting one of the former homes into a gift shop for the museum.

The so-called Ocean Avenue Project will likely be back before Santa Monica's boards and commissions for formal hearings in late 2019. It is one of three downtown projects that will require a Development Agreement, including a city-owned project at 4th Street and Arizona Avenue and the Fairmont Miramar on Ocean Avenue and Wilshire Boulevard.

the California Coastal Act. However, the judge ruled the ordinance does not penalize publishing activities, but seeks to prevent illegal business transactions. The Court followed a similar decision in Northern California over San Francisco's rules.

In that city, thousands of listings vanished after Airbnb promised to delete illegal properties. In Santa Monica, a city report estimated there were 950 apartments and homes listed on Airbnb here during peak tourism season, while only 187 were actually registered. Despite the threat of fines, the city estimated Airbnb and its hosts had collected $31 million from illegal and legal rentals since the ordinance began.

Airbnb did not respond to the Daily Press' request for comment.

Code enforcement officials complain Santa Monica's rules have been difficult to enforce without cooperation from the platforms. Hosts use an array of tactics to outwit investigators, including deleting illegal listings during City Hall business hours and manipulating addresses to appear to be in Los Angeles.

"We agree with the Court that the Ordinance is a constitutional exercise of the City's legislative authority to protect the health, safety, and welfare of residential neighborhoods," said Chief Deputy City Attorney Yibin Shen.

The home sharing sites also brought a claim the ordinance violates the California Coastal Act, which the Court declined to evaluate when it dismissed the federal claims. The websites could still pursue those claims in a different court. The City's current Land Use Plan does not address vacation rentals.

In 2017, the Council banned any new guesthouse from being used exclusively for short-term rentals.

patrols is a preventative strategy

"The visible presence does deter crime so we do increase patrols on weekends even more," he said. "We do add some officers on weekdays but on weekends you're going to see even more on the Pier, Promenade and the beaches themselves."

Rodriguez the local officers will be using every kind of patrol available to the department including on foot, bike, car, motorcycle, horse and ATV.

The increased police presence in Malibu is also focused on preventing crime with the start of their annual Summer Beach Team program that increases the number of Sheriff patrols in the area.

"From Memorial Day weekend until after Labor Day, the Beach Team patrols include additional patrol vehicles on PCH and other roads and quads and trucks that patrol on the beaches," said a statement released by the City of Malibu. "A primary focus of the Beach Team is to eliminate the consumption of alcohol at the beaches, which results in a significant reduction in the number of assaults, rescues made by Lifeguards, and injury accidents on the highways."

Malibu officials said visitors can use rideshare or taxis to prevent drunk driving and said alcohol on the beach is prohibited.

Additional reminders include forgoing cell phones in the care, driving slowly when pedestrians or cars exiting parking lots could cross the PCH, not leaving kids or pets in hot cars and sharing the road with all vehicles or pedestrians.

"Malibu is proud to have 21 miles of the iconic PCH and to have beautiful beaches that are famous around the world," said Malibu Mayor Rick Mullen. "We must do everything we can to keep them safe for residents and visitors alike."

Both agencies said vehicle break-ins can be prevented if drivers hide their valuables.

"Everyone should lock and secure your car," said Rodriguez. "Anybody and everybody that has a car out there, don't leave valuables in the car," he said.

To contact the Malibu Lost Hills Sheriff's Station for non-emergency matters, call (310) 456-6652. The Santa Monica Police Department can be reached at (310) 458-8491. To report drunk drivers or other emergencies, call 911.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 18)

Relationships bring out your creativity as they blossom in unexpected ways. You'll capture someone's imagination and heart — a responsibility you don't take lightly. Deft financial maneuvers will improve your situation in this six-week cycle. August brings an adventure you'll share with loved ones. Capricorn and Aries adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 10, 40, 13, 21 and 5.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

If you try to do good things — or beautiful or truthful or interesting things — then no matter what the outcome, at least you're spending your time doing something worthwhile.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

Is life random or planned? Some doubt the randomness. Others wholly reject it. And still others count on it completely. As for you, you'll do well not to gamble on randomness. Make a plan and stick with it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)

You're a designer looking for inspiration. You don't have to set sail to an exotic location to get there, because your daily commute — or even your bedroom — will provide all the inspiration you need.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)

There's a thread running through all of this, although you most likely won't see it now. Later you'll be able to follow the thread through the pattern, and it will all make a little more sense.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

The reason things wind up next to each other can be a function of random juxtaposition or the end result of a careful thought process. Either way, the way it lands will be lucky for you today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Like a slow-loading, video-laden website, if you try too desperately to entertain, people will get bored waiting for something interesting to happen, and they'll just leave. So keep it simple. Less is more.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

Cages take many forms. Even the most luxurious environments can be a prison if one cannot come and go at will. But you're not in a cage. What you're in is a maze. There's a way out. It takes a bit of work to find it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)

There are real people whose job it is to search for extraterrestrials in a scientific way. You may relate to them somewhat, as today you also happen to feel as though you're searching intently for a distant affirmation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

The first step to finding someone's secrets is having your own secrets and an intimate knowledge of the behaviors it takes to hide them. "It takes one to know one" is a sort of key today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Somewhere out there are glittering skyscrapers and technicolor trees and lakes that dazzle like a billion diamonds. Whether you prefer man-made glories or natural ones, seek them now!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

The truth is supposed to keep things simple. But whose truth? The other person isn't seeing it the way you do. Another way to keep things simple is to say nothing for now. Let everything settle in.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

If you can't get yourself to change a behavior, that's because the behavior is actually solving a problem you don't even realize you have. It's something to meditate on today. Don't worry; there's a simple fix once you get to the heart of it.

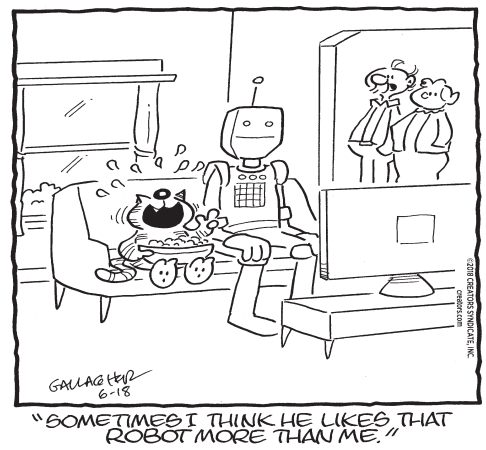

Neptune Calls for Soul Nutrition

"Panem et circenses" is the cynical formula of Roman emperors for keeping the masses content. Translation: "bread and circuses." But filling treats and easy entertainment will cease to be enough with Neptune screeching to a halt to begin a long retrograde. There will be a growing need for real soul nutrition in the weeks to come.

WELL NEWS BY SCOTT LAFEE

Stories for the Waiting Room

■ Do-it-yourself DNA kits are in the news these days, used for everything from tracing family genealogy to health assessments to helping track down alleged killers. In Chicago, a news station decided to see how the various online DNA sequencing services compared, but with a Sharpei wrinkle. A reporter submitted sets of DNA samples from himself and his pet Labrador retriever.

■ All but one of the services correctly differentiated between the human and non-human samples (basically by saying the latter was unreadable), but they diverged widely on conclusions about ancestry and ethnicity.

■ The service that failed to note the difference between human and dog DNA still sent back a 7-page report that brightly noted the owner of the DNA possessed remarkable strength and endurance and might want to work with a personal trainer.
