Two unrelated but significant fires in one week keep SMFD busy

MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

A Pico-neighborhood man was injured this week when his apartment caught fire.

On June 16, the Santa Monica Fire Department responded to a report of a structure fire on the 2300 block of Kansas Ave. with multiple callers reporting fire blowing out of multiple windows of a two-story apartment building.

Several engines responded to the scene and found a fully involved fire in an upstairs unit.

According to SMFD, the resident was home at the time but was able to escape despite suffering burns that required treatment at a local hospital.

In addition to the fully-engulfed unit, the neighboring apartment suffered minor damage. Firefighters had to rescue two cats from the

Signatures indicate Mayor's property transfer tax measure likely headed to ballot

CLARA HARTER

Mayor Sue Himmelrich says "save an act of God," her property transfer tax measure is heading to the November ballot based on the number of petition signatures collected.

Himmelrich made this declaration during a June 14 City Council meeting when Councilmembers voted to have staff prepare a report on her ballot measure.

> A similar initiative just qualified for the City of Los Angeles' ballot

On June 16, City Clerk Denise Anderson-Warren sent a letter to Himmelrich and her fellow initiative proposers informing them that based on a prima facie count, the petition has approximately 10,227 Santa Monica registered voter signatures. This surpasses the approximate 7,000 signature benchmark required to place a local measure on the November ballot, making the measure's qualification appear a fait accompli.

The measure, which is entitled "Funding for Homelessness

FDA authorizes 1st COVID-19 shots for infants, preschoolers

LINDSEY TANNER
AP Medical Writer

U.S. regulators on Friday authorized the first COVID-19 shots for infants and preschoolers, paving the way for vaccinations to begin next week.

The Food and Drug Administration's action follows its advisory panel's unanimous recommendation for the shots from Moderna and Pfizer. That means U.S. kids under 5 — roughly 18 million youngsters — are eligible for the shots, about 1 1/2 years after the vaccines first became available in the country for adults, who have been hit the hardest during the pandemic.

There's one step left: The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends how to use vaccines. Its independent advisers began debating the two-dose Moderna and the three-dose Pfizer vaccines on Friday and will make its recommendation Saturday. A

FAITH FOUNDATION

CAROLYN BASKIN-BELL

As an African American, Christianity has provided a strong foundation for my life. Born into the civil rights movement and parents who promoted faith tradition as an instrumental way of life embeds my core being. Both parents brought strong faith principles to their marriage and our family practiced Christian values within our home. Our household was influenced by a strong work ethic as well as participation in the life of the local church.

As we celebrate Father's Day, I am blessed to reflect on my dad who advocated education and service to the Lord. We were instructed to obtain as much education possible; love God, our neighbor and love ourselves. My Dad was one of the first to affirm my call to preach and become an ordained minister. It was comforting to experience a father's stamp of approval in a world where the gifts of women are often ignored and oppressed. In today's climate, there is a clarion call for individuals to affirm the children of the world regardless of the relationship. The call is for those who will advocate love of God, neighbor and self. This Father's Day stretches beyond a biological connection but a spiritual connection to model and express the importance of love, respect and compassion for one's self and humankind.

While growing up, I observed the faith community motivating the civil rights era. Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King moved on the wings of prayer. As a child, I remember my uncle allowing me to sit on his shoulders to see this prolific preacher proclaim, "We shall overcome!" That was my first participation in a peaceful demonstration promoting civil rights of humankind. The participants were of all races and faith traditions. Our church sponsored a bus to the march and it was full to its capacity because the pastor advocated the importance of equality in this nation. Micah 6:9, "What does the Lord require, but to do justice, love mercy and walk humbly with God," still resonates within me as a result of the teachings of the faith community with the influence of the civil rights movement.

As an African Methodist Pastor, this faith foundation and the principles of equality and justice offer strength to the ministry I am called to fulfill. The African Methodist Episcopal Church (AME) is the oldest black faith denomination in the United States. The journey began in 1787 as Richard Allen, a 26-year-old minister, and a group of free African slaves were forced from the altar while praying in order to allow the white worshipers to kneel in that space. Rev. Allen responded, "allow us to pray and we will trouble you no more."

As a result of this act of racial discrimination, Rev. Richard Allen and the black worshipers left St George Church and launched the African Methodist Episcopal Church. After 235 years of evolving and developing, the AME Church is a faith tradition that continues to contribute to the spiritual, relational, intellectual, social, political and denominational life of the global church.

The foundation of the faith community often influences those who observe and become aware of the history of African Americans in this nation. Knowledge of history also develops understanding of a culture. On June 19, African Americans celebrate Juneteenth. This is a holiday which commemorates the end of slavery in the US. It is also known as Emancipation Day, Freedom Day and Jubilee Day. The first celebration occurred in 1865 in Texas when the information became known to that region. Today, Juneteenth is a bittersweet commemoration in the lives of many. While we continue to observe the racism, discrimination, injustice and hatred of individuals based upon their ethnicity and background, many pose the question, "what are we celebrating?" The brutal murder of George Floyd awakened and aroused the reality of racism still plaguing the African American community. The tragic attack of Mother Emmanuel AME Church in Charleston continues to grieve our hearts; the recent massacre in Buffalo, NY, Uvalde, Texas and the list of tragic and inhumane circumstances increases. In the midst of this struggle to commemorate and celebrate, the faith community offers strength to persevere.

The faith community and the foundation of hope and love ushered

Re: David Pisarra's June 14 column:

EXCELLENT Father's Day article in [Tuesday's] SMDP. Everything you wrote is spot on! In fact, I'm adding a clipping to go inside my dad's card this Sunday. I just turned 52 and my daddy is the most important man in my life. He taught me everything while growing up from working on cars, fishing, camping, morality, integrity, and hard work! I thank God every morning for one more day with Mom and Dad.

Your article stood out because there has been a trend in our culture to demean men and their role in society. Strong men and fathers are ESSENTIAL for the future development of this country. Thank you for stating it so eloquently. And hip hip hurray to all the Dads!!!

Sincerely,

Kristin Jacobson, Santa Monica

California bill would reduce single-use plastic products 25%

KATHLEEN RONAYNE
Associated Press

An ambitious California proposal aims to reduce plastic production for single-use products like shampoo bottles and food wrappers by 25% starting next decade, part of an effort to rein in pollution from the ubiquitous material.

A bill introduced late Thursday aims to bring environmental and business groups together to avoid a similar ballot measure slated to go before voters in November. But at least two of the ballot measure's three proponents aren't yet on board.

Democratic Sen. Ben Allen, the bill's author, said that if passed the proposal would make California a leader in reducing plastic waste by focusing on eliminating plastic at the source, not just recycling it once produced.

"The truth is we just need less crap out there — less plastic out there in general," Allen said Friday.

> "The truth is we just need less crap out there — less plastic out there in general - Sen. Ben Allen"

Plastics have long been a target of environmental groups. Most plastic is not recycled and millions of tons are polluting the world's oceans, hurting wildlife and showing up in drinking water. Various efforts are underway to rein in such pollution, with states attempting to reduce the use of plastic grocery bags, straws and other products. This month the federal government said it will phase out the sale of single-use plastics like water bottles at national parks.

Under the bill, the 25% reduction in plastic from single-use products would start in 2032. It would apply to producers of products like laundry detergent, toothpaste and food wrappings, as well as companies like Amazon that package products for mailing. They would have to replace the plastic with other materials, reduce their packaging or market the products as reusable and make it easy for consumers to do so. It wouldn't apply to water or other beverage bottles, which are regulated by different recycling laws.

Beyond plastic, producers of all single-use products, even those made of paper or glass, would need to ensure that 65% are recycled by 2032. It's estimated that less than 10% of plastic in the United States is recycled now.

Makers of single-use products would have to join "producer responsibility organizations" that would implement the rules with state oversight. The organizations would have to collect $500 million annually for a state plastic pollution mitigation fund. Producers that don't follow the rules could be fined $50,000 a day.

The legislation was the product of long negotiations between Allen's office, environmental and business groups. Allen said he doesn't expect the plastics industry to support the bill. But he hopes they won't lobby against it because it may be more acceptable than the ballot measure and would mean they don't have to spend money trying to defeat it.

"While California businesses both large and small face a maze of environmental regulations as a result of this bill, we believe that this proposal ensures long term policy certainty around recycling and packaging," Jennifer Barrera, president of the California Chamber of Commerce, said in a statement.

Still, there was no immediate commitment from backers of the ballot measure to withdraw it. Ballot measures can be removed until June 30, meaning the bill would need to win quick passage.

"We will pull the initiative if/when the bill that the Governor signs merits the sacrifice. Not a day sooner. We are nowhere close to that," Linda Escalante of the Natural Resources Defense Council and a proponent of the measure said in a statement.

Caryl Hart, vice chair of the California Coastal Commission, and Michael Sangiacomo, former president of the waste management company Recology, are the other two backers of the ballot measure. Sangiacomo said in a statement the legislation doesn't do enough for him to support pulling the ballot measure. He didn't elaborate further.

The ballot measure requires a 25% cut in plastic production, but starting two years earlier. It would ban the use of Styrofoam and similar products by food vendors. The legislation wouldn't do that; instead it would require 20% of such products to be recycled. Anja Brandon, U.S. Plastics Policy Analyst at the Ocean Conservancy, said that amounts to a "de facto ban" because the material can't be recycled.

The ballot measure puts more regulatory power in the hands of the California Department of Resources Recycling and Recovery and puts a 1-cent fee on all single-use plastic products. The measure's proponents say the legislation gives the industry too much power to regulate itself.

The Ocean Conservancy is one of the environmental groups backing the bill. Brandon called it the strongest plastics legislation in the country. Her organization estimated the bill would reduce plastic in the state by 23 million tons over 10 years.

"Walk down a grocery aisle, anything you see (that's plastic) is going to be affected by this," she said.

Annual Juneteenth Celebration

The City of Santa Monica will host the 30th Annual Juneteenth Celebration on Saturday, June 18, from 1 to 7 p.m. at Virginia Avenue Park. Known as America's 2nd Independence Day, Juneteenth has been celebrated in Santa Monica since 1992 thanks to LaVerne Ross when she approached the City to commemorate the holiday that her family celebrated in Texas.

Over the years, thanks to LaVerne's dedication and leadership, the event has grown into an important annual tribute that brings together Santa Monica's Black community. In March 2022, Santa Monica City Council designated Juneteenth as an official City holiday. In observance of the holiday, City facilities will be closed, and City programs will be canceled on Monday, June 20.

my journey to maintain strength in this struggle not only against racism but sexism as well. I am grateful for the foundation of faith that was laid by my parents. My family and affiliation with the faith community encouraged me to stay afloat and continue to soar above racist and sexist experiences that attempted to block my journey. I maintained 30 years in my first career as a Speech Language Pathologist, where African Americans are a minority. It is with joy that I celebrate 26 years in ministry and 16 of those as a pastor in an arena where the leadership is predominantly male. A strong foundation of faith in God sustains and navigates my destiny.

I accept the challenge to promote respect and acceptance of all humankind regardless of their race, gender, faith tradition, lifestyle or background. Christianity is a "whosoever will" experience based upon unconditional love. Prayer continues to order my steps in order to allow the Light of the Lord to shine in dark places. I embrace my calling to minister to the marginalized; advocate for women and children and to develop individuals as disciples of Jesus Christ. It is a blessing to celebrate a faith foundation that allows me to find strength in the struggle and foster hope for all humankind.

October 10th, 1949-April 30th, 2022

Ms. Linda Harris of Germantown, WI, formerly of Milwaukee, WI and Santa Monica, CA, passed away Saturday, April 30, 2022. She was 72 years old. Linda was born in Milwaukee on October 10, 1949, daughter of Owen and Georgianna Simpers Harris.

She is survived by her niece Erin Harris of Wisconsin, cousin Susan Fisher of Illinois, cousin Susan Linton of New Jersey, cousin Karen Bashista of Michigan, cousin Alan Kerr of Costa Rica (formerly Michigan), and many friends. A memorial tribute and group blessing was held via Zoom on June 16. Erin will later sprinkle Linda's ashes, and Linda's sister Louanna's ashes, in the Andes of Ecuador, a country the sisters loved.

Prevention, Affordable Housing, and School Ballot Measure," seeks to establish a third tier of local property transfer tax, which would charge a 5 percent rate for properties worth 8 million or more in value. Santa Monica already has two tiers of real estate transfer tax charging 0.3 percent on transfers under $5 million in value and 0.6 percent on transfers over $5 million in value.

Himmelrich's measure is being placed on the ballot via a citizen initiative, which means that Council does not have the power to alter the measure text or to use the funding the measure would raise at its own discretion. The measure is being co-proposed by Himmelrich's husband Michael Soloff and President of the Santa Monica Democratic Club Jon Katz.

Measure proposers estimate that it would raise $50 million annually and require that the first $10 million raised go to local schools and the remaining revenue go into a fund for affordable housing construction and rental subsidies to protect residents from falling into homelessness.

On June 16, the Los Angeles City Clerk Holly Wolcott announced that a similar citizen ballot initiative qualified for the City of Los Angeles' November ballot.

The Los Angeles ballot measure is titled "Funding For Affordable Housing And Tenant Assistance Programs Through A Tax On Real Property Transfers Over $5 Million Initiative Ordinance."

This measure would charge a 4 percent tax on property transfers exceeding $5 million and a 5.5 percent tax on properties exceeding $10 million. Similar to Himmelrich's proposed measure, the Los Angeles measure would provide funding for affordable housing and resources for tenants at risk of homelessness.

Councilmember Phil Brock believes that Himmelrich's proposed 5 percent tax rate is too high and that her measure's revenue allocations do not align with resident priorities. As a result he is seeking to place an alternative property transfer tax measure on the ballot via a Council vote.

Brock's proposed measure would establish a more modest 1.5 percent tax on properties sales over $8 million and the funding would be used at Council's discretion for a variety of priorities including crossing guards, libraries, after school childcare, public safety and homeless response services.

Staff are already in the process of preparing a report on Brock's proposed measure, after which point Council will vote on whether to place it on the ballot. In a June 14, meeting Councilmembers Lana Negrete, Kristin McCowan Christine Parra submitted a request to have staff also prepare a report on Himmelrich's proposed measure.

"There's been a lot of confusion about what the tax may or may not do. I'm equally confused, as are the people that have been calling and asking me about it, and so I thought it made perfect sense for us to ask our staff and City Attorney's Office to prepare a report so that we are all better informed on it," said Parra.

Initially, Councilmembers Phil Brock and Oscar de la Torre questioned the point of the study, given that the ballot is citizen initiative and Council cannot alter it. However, they later voted along with the rest of the Council to support the study on the basis that more publicly available information will help voters make an educated decision.

smoke-filled unit and both were reunited with their owner. The apartment below the main unit had minor water damage. The fire is currently under investigation.

The apartment fire is the second serious incident this week following a grass fire on the bluffs.

SMFD responded to the 500 block of Palisades Beach Road on Monday and found an approximate 50' x 100' fire in heavy vegetation on the bluffs that was being spread uphill by prevailing onshore winds. A coordinated fire suppression effort was made from both the top and bottom of the bluffs to confine and suppress the blaze.

After about an hour, firefighters had the fire out but residual heat and hot spots required additional work through Tuesday morning.

SMFD said the fire appears to have originated within an unattended encampment, however the cause was undetermined.

final signoff is expected soon after from CDC Director Dr. Rochelle Walensky.

At a Senate hearing Thursday, Walensky said her staff was working over the Juneteenth federal holiday weekend "because we understand the urgency of this for American parents."

She said pediatric deaths from COVID-19 have been higher than what is generally seen from the flu each year.

"So I actually think we need to protect young children, as well as protect everyone with the vaccine and especially protect elders," she said.

The FDA also authorized Moderna's vaccines for school-aged children and teens; the CDC will review those next week. Pfizer's shots had been the only option for those ages.

For weeks, the Biden administration has been preparing to roll out the vaccines for little kids, with states, tribes, community health centers and pharmacies preordering millions of doses. With FDA's emergency use authorization, manufacturers can begin shipping vaccine across the country. Vaccinations are expected to start early next week.

Los Angeles County Director of Public Health, Dr. Barbara Ferrer said the local rollout could happen very quickly.

"If they are approved the vaccines will become available as soon as June 21 in LA County," she said on Thursday. "Once the vaccines are approved, LA County will have over 900 locations prepared to begin distribution to our youngest residents. Most of that will start up early next week. Vaccines have already been ordered and they should begin shipping once there's final approvals. This would include almost 180 healthcare provider facilities, over 200 pharmacies and over 500 mobile sites and our seven DPH sites."

Without protection for their tots, some families had put off birthday parties, vacations and visits with grandparents.

"Today is a day of huge relief for parents and families across America," President Joe Biden said in a statement.

While young children generally don't get as sick from COVID-19 as older kids and adults, their hospitalizations surged during the omicron wave and FDA's advisers determined that benefits from vaccination outweighed the minimal risks. Studies from Moderna and Pfizer showed side effects, including fever and fatigue, were mostly minor.

"As we have seen with older age groups, we expect that the vaccines for younger children will provide protection from the most severe outcomes of COVID-19, such as hospitalization and death," FDA Commissioner Robert Califf said in a statement.

In testing, the littlest children developed high levels of virus-fighting antibodies, comparable to what is seen in young adults, the FDA said. Moderna's vaccine was about 40% to 50% effective at preventing infections but there were too few cases during Pfizer's study to give a reliable, exact estimate of effectiveness, the agency said.

"Both of these vaccines have been authorized with science and safety at the forefront of our minds," Dr. Peter Marks, FDA's vaccine chief, said at a news briefing.

Marks said parents should feel comfortable with either vaccine, and should get their kids vaccinated as soon as possible, rather than waiting until fall, when a different virus variant might be circulating. He said adjustments in the vaccines would be made to account for that.

"Whatever vaccine your health care provider, pediatrician has, that's what I would give my child," Marks said.

The two brands use the same technology but there are differences.

Pfizer's vaccine for kids younger than 5 is one-tenth of the adult dose. Three shots are needed: the first two given three weeks apart and the last at least two months later.

Moderna's is two shots, each a quarter of its adult dose, given about four weeks apart for kids under 6. The FDA also authorized a third dose, at least a month after the second shot, for children who have immune conditions that make them more vulnerable to serious illness.

Both vaccines are for children as young as 6 months. Moderna next plans to study its shots for babies as young as 3 months. Pfizer has not finalized plans for shots in younger infants. A dozen countries, including China, already vaccinate kids under 5, with other brands.

> "Today is a day of huge relief for parents and families across America - President Joe Biden

In the U.S., it remains uncertain how many parents want their youngest vaccinated. By some estimates, three-quarters of all children have already been infected. And only about 30% of children aged 5 to 11 have been vaccinated since Pfizer's shots opened to them last November.

The FDA officials acknowledged those low rates and said the government is committed to getting more older kids vaccinated and having better success with younger kids.

"It's a real tragedy, when you have something free with so few side effects that prevents deaths and hospitalization," Califf said.

Roughly 440 children under age 5 have died from COVID-19, federal data show.

Dr. Beth Ebel of the University of Washington School of Medicine in Seattle, said the tot-sized vaccines would be especially welcomed by parents with children in day care where outbreaks can sideline parents from jobs, adding to financial strain.

"A lot of people are going to be happy and a lot of grandparents are going to be happy, too, because we've missed those babies who grew up when you weren't able to see them," Ebel said.

Laura Ungar, Carla K. Johnson and Matthew Hall contributed to this report.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 18)

There's no GPS for the emotional landscape, but you're a brave explorer anyway, hungry for the treasure to be found in new territory, and your discoveries will hit on many levels. More highlights: a mentor from another field, a publicity opportunity and the chance to fix a situation from way back. Aquarius and Scorpio adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 40, 3, 33 and 15.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). People tend to come to you to vent when they're frustrated or lament when they get their feelings hurt. So much complaining! But at least you can appreciate the meaning of it: You're a trusted friend.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). The goal needs a plan; the plan needs a ritual. The rituals you establish will become your support beams for building your life to plan and reaching your goals.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You've a gift for catering your communication specifically to the one you're with. It's happening on an intuitive level. Amazing, but it's as though each relationship represents a totally unique language.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Your favorite people to be around are the ones you can talk to about things other than superficialities. You feel lucky to be able to share ideas, problems, solutions and your thoughts about the future.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You'll be praised for your talent, even though you don't see it as anything extraordinary. This gives you a confident footing on this uphill climb of a day. These are the challenges that keep you in shape.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). There are many who will be happy to see you finish what you started. When you don't feel like doing it for you, do it for them. Imagine their smiles when you cross the finish line.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Strong emotions are signals there's something in need of expression. It will take a moment to figure out an effective and appropriate means, and you'll be rewarded for pausing to determine the best choice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). The magician's trick is to produce a bunny from a hat. Something happens when the audience isn't looking... then it's all cuteness and awe. Relatedly, watch out for the gift meant to control people's attention.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). If you don't ask for what you want, you might still get it, especially if you're around mind-readers, but the odds are slim that you will be in that kind of company. So go ahead and ask. This will go well for you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You're looking for something to like about people and you'll find it. You love people for who they are, not for how they fulfill your needs or for what they might become.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You're no chameleon. You don't change or blend in for anyone, but you will act in a way that's different from your normal pattern -- not to blend, but because you're a lifelong learner, willing to try new things.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). People will do things you don't approve of, and it may be smarter to ignore, tolerate or work around these actions than to take them on directly. In trees and attitudes, the ability to flex prevents a snap.
