Another tax for schools possible

BY NICK TABOREK
Daily Press Staff Writer

SMMUSD HDQTRS Despite the failure of Measure A at the polls last month, school district boosters have not ruled out the possibility of placing another local funding measure on the ballot this November, members of a committee studying the issue said this week.

Measure A, a proposed $198 per parcel tax that would have raised $5.7 million per year for five years for the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District, received 64.25 percent of the vote in a May 25 mail-in election, falling just short of the two-thirds it needed to pass.

While the Santa Monica Malibu Education Foundation has been seeking private donations since the measure's failure to

'Family friendly' council meetings

BY NICK TABOREK

CITY HALL Newly appointed by his City Council colleagues to serve as mayor, Bobby Shriver is using at least some of his newfound clout to pursue a longtime goal: holding shorter meetings.

That's probably not exactly how he would put it.

"I would say it's about making the meetings more family friendly and efficient," he said on Friday.

His proposal, which the full council will consider on Tuesday, is to "streamline the rules" at meetings by holding each council member to a fixed amount of speaking time on each item and eliminating time-consuming staff reports from the agenda.

The staff reports, which provide background information and explanations about recommended courses of action, would be exclusively available ahead of time. Instead of

Two arrested in 2008 murder

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

DOWNTOWN A woman and a man from Camarillo were behind bars Friday in connection with the murder of aspiring model-actress Juliana Maureen Redding, whose body was discovered in March 2008 in her Santa Monica apartment.

Kelly Soo Park, 44, and Ronnie Wayne Case, 34, were arrested Thursday in Camarillo by Santa Monica police. No motive was given for the killing. Park and Case face charges of murder with special circumstances and conspiracy, according to Santa Monica police Sgt. Jay Trisler.

They were both locked up Thursday in Santa Monica and were being held without bail, Trisler said.

Detectives worked "thousands of hours" on the case, in cooperation with law enforcement in Torrance and Oxnard and the FBI, Trisler said.

"The Santa Monica Police Department is continuing to investigate this crime and there is the possibility of additional arrests," Trisler said.

Redding's body was found in the evening of March 16, 2008 at her home in the 1500 block of Centinela Avenue, Assistant Chief Ed Winter of the coroner's office said.

"It appears the victim died as a result of an assault," police said in a statement at the time.

The body was discovered after the woman's mother called authorities to report she had not been able to reach her daughter, who moved to Santa Monica from Tucson to pursue her acting and modeling career.

Venice locals still searching for solution to overnight RV parking

BY REBECCA KHEEL
Special to the Daily Press

VENICE A scraggly man with a missing front tooth and a gruff, gray beard sits in the back of a late 1980s Dodge Ram conversion van parked on Rennie Avenue just south of the Santa Monica border with Venice.

For the time being, the retired, custom motorcycle painter is living in the van as he makes his way from San Diego to San Francisco, stopping at choice coastal towns along the way. He has been in Venice for about a year and said he hasn't had any trouble with residents or the law for living in and parking his van in Venice.

"As long as you move your vehicle every three days, you're fine," said the man who wished to remain anonymous, referring to a current law in Los Angeles that prohibits street parking for more than 72 hours at a time.

But that lax attitude toward parking could change. Some permanent residents are continuing to search for alternative ways to prevent RV dwellers from parking on the street, following a recent decision by the California Coastal Commission to deny a settlement that would have barred RVs from parking on the street overnight.

"I don't think this issue is going to go away for the folks who live in Venice," said Richard Bloom, a Santa Monica councilman and a coastal commissioner who supported the settlement. "This is still something that needs to be addressed, and the community is becoming very polarized."

Venice residents have long complained about those who live in RVs, saying they dump sewage in the streets and create late-night noise. There are approximately 200 to 300 RVs that mainly populate the Rose Avenue corridor and Venice Boulevard, taking parking from residents, said Stuart Oscars, co-chair of the Venice Neighborhood Council's Ad Hoc Committee on Overnight Parking.

One proposed solution was to create overnight parking districts (OPDs), which establish permit-only parking for residents on streets between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. But the Coastal Commission denied the permit needed to establish the OPDs one year ago.

The Venice Stakeholders Association brought a lawsuit, which the city later joined, against the Coastal Commission after it denied Venice the permits. The suit called for, among other things, taking the power to establish OPDs out of the hands of the Coastal Commission and giving the jurisdiction to the city.

The three parties crafted a settlement that would have required Venice to create over-sized vehicle restrictions for vehicles taller than 7 feet and longer than 22 feet for six months. If that did not solve the RV problem, Venice would have been allowed to create the OPDs.

Despite the Coastal Commission staff recommending the settlement's approval in a closed session a month ago, commissioners voted 6-3 to deny the settlement at a public hearing June 10.

The Coastal Commission voted against the settlement because it thought creating permit parking would limit public access to the beach, said Sara Wan, a commissioner who was against the settlement. Wan said the other coastal towns the commission has approved OPDs for have shown there is enough parking outside of the permit areas so there is little to no impact on public access to the beach.

Wan also said she believes Venice was using the commission to solve its social problems, which is not the commission's responsibility. Some Venice residents said they agree.

"Overnight parking districts essentially create gated communities, which is not at all the tone of Venice," said Karen Wolfe, a member of the Venice Action Alliance, which opposes OPDs. "The real issue people have is visual blight. Existing laws can be enforced to solve these problems such as laws against dumping, laws against noise and laws against public urination."

Brandon Wise brandonw@smdp.com

IN A ROW: Motorhomes line Third Avenue in Venice on Friday afternoon. Residents of the funky beach community are struggling to find a solution to the influx of people living in their RVs on residential streets.

But Oscars said the social issue has been forced onto Venice because other coastal towns in California have OPDs.

"The hearing was ridiculous because it made Venice this little island that's supposed to solve this whole problem by ourselves," Oscars said. "Why are we not being given our equal rights?"

RV dwellers, some of whom said they feel their needs have largely been ignored, said they are pleased with the commission's decision.

"There's a group of people harassing [us] out of a place to sleep," said an RV dweller who wished only to be identified as X.I. "But Venice is trying to stay free and weird."

The Venice Stakeholders Association will now continue with its initial lawsuit, members said.

> "THERE'S A GROUP OF PEOPLE HARASSING PEOPLE OUT OF A PLACE TO SLEEP. BUT VENICE IS TRYING TO STAY FREE AND WEIRD."
> X.I.
> RV dweller

Meanwhile, the neighborhood council and city officials will pursue other options to curb the RV issue. Councilman Bill Rosendahl, whose district includes Venice, is trying to get over-sized parking ordinances passed. He is also looking to create a safe parking program that takes RVs off the street, puts them into parking lots and provides social services to the dwellers with the ultimate goal of getting them into permanent housing.

The program is modeled on one in Santa Barbara and one in Eugene, Ore. The Santa Barbara program uses 21 locations that are either churches, government properties or nonprofits to house 105 campers. The Santa Barbara program has a 20 percent success rate in finding permanent housing for participants, while the Eugene program has a 50 percent success rate, Oscars said.

Rosendahl is searching for organizations interested in participating in the safe parking program. Rosendahl said he hopes to have the program in effect within the next six months. He has set aside $750,000 in city funds over the next three years to help start the program.

The VNC will also continue working toward OPDs, and Oscars said no single idea is taking precedence as they all have the potential to solve the problem.

Whether the city will also continue to work toward OPDs remains to be seen, Rosendahl said. He said he believes the Coastal Commission's stance on Venice creating OPDs is unfair.

"This isn't just Venice's issue," he said. "This is America's issue."

Calling for transparency

Editor:

I am 55 and now have my last of five children in Santa Monica High School. I grew up in Santa Monica and attended local schools, then UCLA. What I have noticed over the past 25 years is the administrators' salaries rising disproportionately to teachers' salaries. I believe not one administrator has offered to cut any of their pay to help any janitor or teacher. Instead the administrators have bombarded the parents with e-mails trying to convince us to "Save the Teachers" by voting and donating. Does the public realize how much money is currently donated to Santa Monica schools? Everything form art to sports, and usually you can never find any documentation on how the money is spent. The federal and state governments now have their budgets online for all to view, yet not one of the myriad of programs at Santa Monica schools provides any access to accounting of money donated. That does not seem right to me, especially since I have donated plenty! We are not talking about underfunded schools, but over-funded administrators and wasteful spending. Recently our dear Norm Lacy, the athletic director at Samohi, died. So what did the administration do? They canceled the two house awards ceremonies for students at Samohi and sent out an e-mail to the parents asking us to attend his wake at St. Monica and to donate to Samohi athletics! That was 100 percent wrong and bordering on perverse as most of the students that had their awards ceremony canceled were not athletes.

Out of touch

Editor:

Responding to the June 11 letter to the editor on Jews being better off without Israel ("Israel's policies are hurting Jews"), this is a hallucination. While fighting a war against very serious adversaries has certainly not brought out the best in Israel or her enemies, the Jewish people deserve a state of their own as much as any other people. While it is fair to disagree with particular policies or actions of both Israel and the Palestinians (Hamas' bloody takeover of Gaza?) those who support a state for Palestinians are showing their bias when they deny a homeland to the Jewish people. Those who think all will live together in harmony are out of touch with reality.

You guys suck

Editor:

Poor Daily Press. You started with such promise back in 2001, with such high hopes for your new journalistic enterprise. And you produced results. For a time. Back in 2007 you carried as your lead article an extended piece by Gerry Shih entitled "No direction home." In my opinion (for what it's worth) it is the best piece of on-the-ground investigative-descriptive journalism that you have ever published. What you now have is mostly wire service filler and the airheaded, self-involved postpartum ramblings of someone like Meredith Carroll. Come on guys, give us some journalistic meat to sink our teeth into!

Conspiracy theories and the open primary

SINCE I COME FROM CHICAGO, PEOPLE out here often tease me about the politics of my home city and state. South Carolina is starting to take the heat off my homeland when it comes to scandals.

First there was Gov. Mark Sanford who claimed he was hiking the Appalachian Trail while he was actually on a trail to his Argentinean mistress. Then Nikki Haley, a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor in the recent election was accused of having an extra-marital affair with a "conservative blogger." Who accused her? The conservative blogger. The latest shocker came when a complete unknown with no ties to powerful politicians, who had not waged a smear campaign, and who made no campaign promises won the Democratic nomination for governor. Naturally, the professional politicians were outraged.

Alvin Greene, an unemployed veteran, beat Vic Rawl, a former judge and state lawmaker, 59 percent to 41 percent. Greene said that he ran because he had turned to the office of Republican incumbent (and candidate) U.S. Sen. Jim DeMint for help in dealing with his disability, but got nowhere. When you listen to Greene talk, you certainly believe that he could have some sort of disability, so your heart goes out to him. When I first heard the story, it sounded like an old Frank Capra movie in which a non-politician, a man of the people who lives with his elderly father, whips the political insider. It was just too good to be true.

And it might be. In the movie version of this story, Greene would've made rousing speeches to the common man. Other veterans would have marched to protest the way in which they are mistreated all too often. He would've won debates with his simple, but honest talk. However, none of this happened. So how did he get elected? Also, he's currently facing charges of showing pornography to a college student. Of course, usually college students are showing pornography to the rest of us.

One theory is that South Carolina holds "open primaries." See the kind of thing we Californians have to look forward to now that we'll have open primaries? Anyway, this theory suggests that plotting Republicans were behind Greene's election so that Sen. DeMint would face an easy foe in the fall election. However, this cynical plot would only work if the bad guy politicians had put Greene's face in front of the voters, if they got throngs of people to show up for rallies, and if they had organized a huge grass roots movement to help him win the election. None of these things happened. So even if you believe that some untrustworthy Republicans got his name on the ballot, how did they make him win while keeping him a secret?

Race has been a staple of political scandal, and it has come into this story. State Sen. Robert Ford said that he thinks Greene won because he's an African American. (He's not the same Robert Ford who killed Jesse James). Ford theorized that the reason Greene won was that even though nobody knew who he was, he got a huge percentage of African-American votes because his name ends in an "e." According to Ford, "No white folks have an 'e' on the end of Green. The blacks after they left the plantation couldn't spell, and they threw an 'e' on the end."

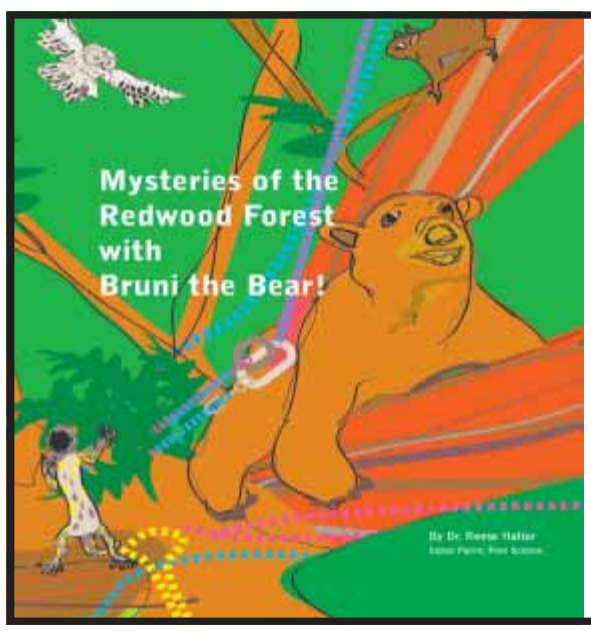

So, he's saying that when African Americans see "Greene," they think black. I don't know. When I see "purple," I don't think "orange."

Besides, what about Revolutionary War hero Nathaniel Greene, writer Graham Greene, and, of course, "Bonanza's" Lorne Greene? They were all "white folks." To make Ford's definitely bizarre and seemingly racist statement all the more interesting is that Ford is black.

If we learn that Greene is a seriously disabled man who really is unqualified for the job, it will be a sad situation. But the question will still be there: how did he get elected?

I hope it turns out that Greene is legit. I hope it's the movie plot in which the simple American defeats the professional politicians just because he's a simple American. On the other hand, if it turns out that chicanery has taken place, none of us will be surprised. As I said before, South Carolina is replacing the Windy City and the Land of Lincoln as the home of weird politics. In fact, this replacement might have already taken place. After all, I can't remember the last time I heard a newscaster or a late night host utter those two famous words: Rod Blagojevich.

Protecting your kids from online predators

Q: WITH ALL OF THESE NEW SOCIAL networking websites I am worried about the safety of my kids. I am specifically worried about who they are meeting on the Internet and what they are being exposed to. What can we do as parents to protect our children?

A: We now live in a generation of great technological advances. I can recall being 8 years old and not knowing or thinking about owning a cell phone or browsing the Internet. Now any 8 year old you encounter cannot imagine a life without these emerging technologies. Our children literally have the world at their fingertips. However, with the introduction of this amazing electronic resource comes responsibility, not just from our children, but from us as parents, teachers, mentors, and guardians.

There are many social networking sites available and free of charge to anyone that can access the Internet. A couple of clicks of the mouse and you are the newest member of a social site that can connect you to people from around the world in a split second.

It can be a frightening experience for a parent not knowing who your kids are communicating with and what they are being exposed to. Here are some tips on how to enhance your Internet security at home and how to monitor your children's Internet activity.

• Access the parental controls for your family computer and adjust the setting according to your desired security preference.

• Clear, simple, easy-to-read house rules should be posted on or near the monitor. Create your own computer rules. The rules can be signed by adults and children and should be periodically reviewed.

• Look into safeguarding programs or options your online service provider might offer. These may include monitoring or filtering capabilities.

• Web sites for children are not permitted to request personal information without a parent's permission. Talk to children about what personal information is and why you should never give it to people online.

• If children use chat or e-mail, talk to them about never meeting in person with anyone they "meet" online.

• Talk to children about not responding to offensive or dangerous e-mail, chat, or other communications. Report any such communication to local law enforcement. Do not delete the offensive or dangerous e-mail; turn off the monitor, and contact local law enforcement.

• Keep the computer in the family room or another open area of your home.

• Let children show you what they can do online, and visit their favorite sites.

• Have children use child-friendly search engines when completing homework.

• Know who children are exchanging e-mails with, and only let them use chat areas when you can supervise.

• Be aware of any other computers your child may be using and if their cell phones have Internet capabilities.

• Internet accounts should be in the parent's name with parents having the primary screen name, controlling passwords, and using blocking and/or filtering devices.

• Talk to children about what to do if they see something that makes them feel scared, uncomfortable, or confused. Show them how to turn off the monitor and emphasize that it's not their fault if they see something upsetting. Remind children to tell a trusted adult if they see something that bothers them online.

• Consider using filtering or monitoring software for your computer. Filtering products that use white listing, which only allows a child access to a pre-approved list of sites, are recommended for children in this age group.

• If you suspect online "stalking" or sexual exploitation of a child, report it to your local law-enforcement agency. The National Center for Missing & Exploited Children (NCMEC) has a system for identifying online predators and child pornographers and contributing to law-enforcement investigations.

Q: How do I become a Santa Monica Police Officer?

A: The department hosts several recruiting events throughout the year to provide interested candidates with more information and an opportunity to meet and speak with some of our officers. Testing dates are also scheduled throughout the year for those candidates who fulfill all requirements of the initial application review.

There are five basic steps that one must successfully pass for consideration to become a police officer in Santa Monica. They are:

•Written examination

The written P.O.S.T. examination will test applicants' skills in vocabulary, spelling, reading comprehension, and also tests the applicant's general knowledge and may have some reference to law enforcement principles. Test examples may be found on the P.O.S.T. website under "Selection & Recruitment."

•Application review

All applicants are required to complete a city application. When submitting your application, you must provide clear, concise, and complete information regarding your qualifications for the position.

• Physical fitness qualifier

This examination consists of four timed-exercises that are designed to measure strength and endurance. The exam includes pull-ups, sit-ups, push-ups and a 1.5-mile run.

• Psychological and medical exam

Applicants will be evaluated for their suitability for employment as Santa Monica police officers. All applicants must also successfully complete a city medical examination, including a drug screening, to determine if they meet the city's medical standards for the position of police officer.

• Background investigation

Applicants who have successfully completed all prior phases of the selection process are required to undergo a thorough background investigation. The investigation is used to determine an applicant's moral character and suitability for employment in law enforcement. The investigation shall include, but is not limited to, the following reviews: criminal record, polygraph examination, driving record, credit history, military record, current and previous employment history and references.

You can obtain information on future testing dates and hiring information from our department website santamonicapd.org under "Employment" or by contacting the Recruitment Unit.

The Q Line

Blowing in the wind

This past week, Q-line asked:

Some members of Santa Monica's City Council would like to change the law to make homeowners liable for gardeners using leaf blowers, which are illegal, in their yards. Do you think homeowners should pay the price for the infraction, or should the gardener be responsible?

Here are your responses:

"I DO NOT FEEL THAT IT IS RIGHT TO HAVE homeowners or gardeners pay for using leaf blowers. Water cannot be used because of the conservation issue. Rakes can be used on grassy areas, and brooms can be used on paved areas. But neither are effective in or around flower beds and other landscaped areas. The law should be removed from the Santa Monica records, especially since the noise from leaf blowers is actually negligible when compared to the noise by lawnmowers and grass- and tree-trimmers."

"THOSE THINGS ARE A NUISANCE, THE best thing to do would be to make both of them pay a fine, both to the owners and the gardeners. That way we soon will be rid of those noisy machines."

"REGARDING THE LEAF BLOWERS, I THINK the owners should have to pay half and the gardener pay the half, and if the gardener gets caught the second or third time it should go up a little bit. But each time the homeowner pays half, the gardener pays half."

"AS A FORMER LANDLORD IN THIS CITY OF San Malicious, several weeks ago I saw a fellow, a gardener, blowing his thing in the wind, so I don't know about making the homeowner or landowner liable. Maybe it should be 50/50 or maybe we should have a meeting for gardeners and maybe set up signs all over the city. That's my recommendation, maybe it's good, maybe it ain't. But that's what it is."

"COUGH! GASP! THE NEXT DOOR GARDENER just blew all their dust and dirt in my window. The property owner hired the gardeners and should be supervising them. Many gardeners don't know our laws so it must be up to the owner to tell them what to do on their property. A warning first should be given to both the gardener and the landlord before giving a citation and a fine."

"THE PERPETRATOR OF THE CRIME SHOULD be punished or cited or whatever they plan to do. Homeowners aren't even at home when these infractions take place. If you do a crime, you should pay the price — you, the individual."

"ONE HUNDRED PERCENT THE GARDENER'S responsibility, due to the homeowner often being away from home or at work and unable to oversee the gardener's standard of performance. One way to curb the use of leaf blowers would be to have a special officer whose only duty would be to ride a bicycle in plain clothes around the streets of Santa Monica citing weed blower offenders. I personally do a great deal of bike-riding and I see leaf blowers being used in every nook and cranny."

"I AM CONFUSED. LEAF BLOWERS ARE A product that can legally be bought but are illegal to use especially on your own property. This is just like the 'seat belt, helmet, no smoking, plastic bag laws,' all curtailing a public's right to function on its own ability. None of you want to make the homeowner or business responsible for a contracted employee. Again, our elitist brethren have struck at the common working man. Impudent in dealing with the airport noise and pollution and the many other more important forms of noise in this town, they drag the posh neighborhood homeowner into an 'it takes a village' mentality Today, you rat on the humble gardener. Tomorrow it's reporting the ungrateful neighbor who insults our political commissars. Where have I read this before?"

"BOTH GARDENERS AND PROPERTY owners should be notified and fined for the use of illegal leaf blowers. The fine for gardeners should be higher because they are the perpetrators, and most of them are already aware of the illegality but deliberately choose to defy the law. The property owners should be fined as motivation to act and to punish their indifference to laws and the environment."

"OF COURSE THE GARDENERS SHOULD be responsible. It is their responsibility when the are cleaning the yard. The homeowner may not even be at home when it happens."

"WHY PICK ON LEAFBLOWERS. THERE ARE lots of annoyances in life, including chainsaws, lawnmowers, carpet cleaners, motorcycles in the middle of the night. I could go on and on. This is just another irrational ruling by the City Council in an attempt to regulate peoples lives and to satisfy a few chronic complainers."

"THE CITY SHOULD NOT PICK ON gardeners. They are working, they are doing their jobs keeping the place nice."

"I THINK BOTH THE OWNER AND THE gardener should be responsible because we all need to keep the environment correct, but some of the gardeners do not speak English so I think homeowner and gardener should share equal responsibility for keeping our environment together. If everyone did their part it would be a better Santa Monica all the way through."

"HOMEOWNERS AND BUSINESSES SHOULD be responsible for directing their employees to obey the law. The current system is not working. Police respond too late or not at all to leafblower reports. In one case we had to make multiple calls to the building manager and the gardening company to stop using leafblowers as early as 6:45 a.m., which is a violation of the noise ordinance. And after a month or so, it starts back up again."

SHRIVER

addressing the council, staff members would videotape their presentations beforehand so they could be viewed on CityTV or online ahead of the bi-weekly meetings.

Another of Shriver's ideas is to publish the expected times when agenda items will be discussed, so members of the public would have a better idea when they should show up to speak about a particular topic.

"One of the things that really happens a lot is you see people come in to speak on an item and when it comes around to their item, they've left," he said.

The mayor would also like City Hall staff to research practices that other cities with similar forms of government use to run council meetings and report back with suggestions for other possible changes.

Council members Bob Holbrook and Terry O'Day have endorsed looking into Shriver's time-saving ideas, but other council members this week indicated they were skeptical about making changes.

"I would be very, very reluctant to set up a situation where at the stroke of a certain hour the dialog is cut off and were done," said Councilman Richard Bloom. "I believe that we benefit from having a full, vibrant discussion where everybody feels like they've been heard."

He said he's not necessarily opposed to making procedural changes — during his mayoral term in 2004, Bloom said he supported the council's decision to reduce the amount of time members of the public are allotted to speak from three minutes to two minutes — but said placing a limit on each member's speaking time could lead to "incivility amongst council members."

Councilman Kevin McKeown said "shortening meetings has been a goal for decades," but added that he'd be "cautious about any actions to reduce information for the public, or to force premature conclusions on complex issues."

"Part of our job in doing the public's business is to help the public understand what we're doing," he said. "As public representatives we then must discuss our options fully, coming to the best resolution for the community as a whole."

Shriver, who consistently casts the lone vote in favor of cutting off council meetings at 11 p.m., on Friday denied his goal for proposing new rules was to go home earlier.

Streamlining the meetings, he said, could lead to more public involvement. Many people, especially those with children at home, would like to attend council meetings but are unable to because they can't set aside several hours to speak on a single agenda item, Shriver said. Cutting out the staff reports, he added, could open up more time for public comment and council deliberation.

Though adjourning before midnight, he admitted, could be an important side benefit.

"A seven-hour meeting is not, to me anyway, likely to be an efficient thing," he said.

A majority of council members would have to agree Tuesday night in order to take the first step toward adopting new rules for council meeting procedures.

prevent some of the district's cuts, it's clear fundraising won't provide anywhere near the amount of funding Measure A would have raised.

A district committee that recommended the SMMUSD school board place Measure A on the ballot met on Tuesday to discuss the election and make plans to consider a possible future funding measure.

While no decision has been reached, the committee's chair, Neil Carrey, said members will be holding meetings on a "tight, expedited schedule" in order to come up with a recommendation about a possible new parcel tax in time for November's election. He said a recommendation to the school board would have to be made by early August in order for a tax to qualify for November's ballot.

As the committee meets, he said one topic of discussion will be whether to consider proposing a parcel tax that would assess property owners different amounts based on the value of their properties. Some critics of Measure A, which would have charged property owners $198 per parcel regardless of size, called the proposed tax regressive and said large commercial property owners should pay more than homeowners.

Whether or not a parcel tax makes it onto November's ballot, Carrey said it's likely the committee will recommend attempting to pass a new funding measure in the near future.

"I think the feeling is that at some point, we're going to need another one," he said. "The money is just not going to be there and Sacramento is in such a mess there's no prospect that it's going to get any better."

Rebecca Kennerly, a committee member and chair of the group Community for Excellent Public Schools, said despite an ambitious fundraising effort, a new funding measure will be needed to maintain the district's quality.

"The only possible way to provide the stable, ongoing funding that the state has cut is through public funds," she said. "That's the only way to go. There's no other option, so we have to look at that option."

Cal State to increase student fees by 5 percent

TREVOR HUNNICUTT
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO California State University officials voted Friday to raise student fees this fall by 5 percent in response to deep cuts in state funding for the 23-campus system.

The CSU Board of Trustees voted 10-2 to increase tuition for in-state undergraduate and graduate students at a special meeting in Long Beach.

The increases mean a $204 jump to $4,230 a year for resident undergraduates. Teacher credential students will see their fees increase $234 to $4,908 annually, while graduate student fees will go up $252 to $5,214.

In a separate vote, trustees decided to raise fees on education doctorate students 10 percent, or $870, to $9,546 a year.

The board also voted to eliminate an annual cap on tuition that benefited a small number of out-of-state students who take a large number of classes each year.

State funding for the university system remained uncertain.

A proposal by Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger to restore more than $300 million in state support assumed there would be a fee increase of 10 percent — twice as high as the hike passed Friday.

A similar state Senate proposal assumed a higher increase as well, said Robert Turnage, CSU's assistant vice chancellor for budget.

An Assembly proposal also reflected a 5 percent increase and would provide more state revenue for the CSU budget.

"None of these three plans, I think, if they were put to a vote tomorrow in the Legislature, could secure the two-thirds vote that is necessary to pass a budget act," Turnage said.

If funding is not restored, enrollment could decline by an estimated 9.5 percent. Even the larger 10 percent fee increase would not be enough to balance the budget, according to a report by senior CSU administrators.

About 433,000 students were enrolled in the CSU system in 2010.

The California State Student Association supported the 5 percent fee hike as a reasonable increase given the dismal budget situation. Still, some students were disappointed by the trustees' decision.

"They really aren't working hard enough to find a different solution," said Claudia Ramirez, a 23-year-old Cal State Long Beach student. "What this means is that they'll be doing more fee increases for the upcoming semester in January."

Lillian Taiz, president of the California Faculty Association, said the trustees were unwilling to fight eroding state support of higher education.

"People seem to be pulling back from that commitment," said Taiz, a history professor at Cal State Los Angeles.

Officials with the university system said they have been left no choice.

"We're facing an unprecedented budget crisis," CSU spokesman Michael Uhlenkamp said.

Last year, trustees increased fees by 32 percent from the prior year following cuts in state funding.

Those cuts contributed to reductions in enrollment and courses, and to furloughs for faculty members at CSU and the University of California, the state's other university system.

San Francisco judge says no to strike by nurses

SUDHIN THANAWALA
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO Nurses at the University of California's medical centers cannot go on strike while labor negotiations are under way, a judge said Friday.

Superior Court Judge Peter Busch extended a restraining order issued last week that barred the nearly 11,000 nurses from a planned one-day strike.

If the nurses were to go on strike as contract talks got under way, it would be an unfair pressure tactic to influence negotiations and likely violate state labor laws, he said.

The nurses and UC officials are at odds over salaries and staffing levels.

Nurses said staffing often falls below state-mandated levels during breaks or shift changes. UC officials said they are complying with state staffing requirements.

UC officials commended Friday's decision by the judge.

"We're very pleased this threat to public health has been stopped," said Gayle Saxton, UC's director of labor relations. "We hope (the union) gets the message and turns its attention to fostering productive labor-management relations and conducting expedient contract negotiations."

The judge's strike prohibition will stand until Sept. 30, when the current contract expires, or the expiration of the post-impasse proceedings, whichever is later.

The California Nurses Union had argued that the Public Employees Relations Board, which requested the court injunction, exceeded its legal authority in intervening to block a strike.

Embattled BP CEO removed from oil spill oversight

RAY HENRY
Associated Press Writers

NEW ORLEANS BP removed Chief Executive Tony Hayward from day-to-day oversight of the Gulf oil spill crisis a day after he was pummeled by lawmakers in an appearance on Capitol Hill, the company's chairman said Friday.

Carl-Henric Svanberg told Britain's Sky News television that Hayward "is now handing over the operations, the daily operations to (BP Managing Director) Bob Dudley," overshadowing news that after many setbacks BP was finally making real progress in siponing and burning off oil from the underwater gusher.

Coast Guard Adm. Thad Allen announced earlier Friday that a newly expanded containment system is capturing or incinerating more than 1 million gallons of oil daily, the first time it has approached its peak capacity. And the system will soon grow. By late June, the oil giant hopes it can keep nearly 90 percent of the flow from hitting the ocean.

Allen also said the Coast Guard is ramping up efforts to capture the crude closer to shore with the help of private boats. As of Friday morning, between 65 million and 121.6 million gallons of oil have gushed into the Gulf of Mexico, based on federal daily flow rate estimates.

The optimistic news about the containment plan was tempered by Hayward's removal, which follows a June 4 announcement by BP that Dudley, and American oil executive, would lead the long-term response to the oil spill once the leak had been stopped. Svanberg's statement appeared to accelerate that timeline, as millions of gallons of crude continue to gush into the Gulf.

A BP spokesman in Houston, Tristan Vanhegan, says the "board still has confidence in Tony."

The company also continues to struggle to compensate Gulf Coast residents and business owners who have been economically devastated by the spill. On Friday, the House Judiciary Committee said data it has collected shows that BP has paid less than 12 percent of the claims submitted, by dollar value. BP, however, said the number was higher.

The committee said in a statement that data it collected showed only $71 million out of an estimated $600 million had been paid as of Tuesday. In addition, the panel said that BP didn't make any payments in the first two weeks following the April 20 explosion and oil spill, and that it hasn't made a single payment for bodily injury or diminished home property value.

BP spokesman Scott Dean said in an e-mail that the company had paid out $95 million as of Friday, and it had written about 30,000 checks to settle about half of the 63,000 claims it has received.

Dean said it was streamlining its process for dealing with large commercial claims.

Michigan Democratic Rep. John Conyers said he's concerned that BP "is stiffing too many victims and shortchanging others."

The chief of the new independent office to pay claims said a plan to handle the remaining damage claims will be in place in 30 to 45 days. Kenneth Feinberg, who's overseeing the Independent Claims Facility, said he also hopes to have a program going forward that would provide payment within 30 to 60 days of someone submitting a new claim.

"The challenge here is going to be to evaluate quickly, eligible claims, legitimate claims and get them paid," said Feinberg, who was chosen by President Barack Obama and BP for the role.

Senate fails to spare doctors from Medicare cuts

RICARDO ALONSO-ZALDIVAR & STEPHEN OHLEMACHER
Associated Press Writers

WASHINGTON After a week of partisan wrangling, the Senate on Friday passed legislation to spare doctors a 21 percent cut in Medicare payments looming for months. But the last-ditch effort came too late.

Moments after the Senate acted, Medicare announced it would begin processing claims it has already received for June at the lower rate. The reason: the House cannot act on the fix until next week.

That means doctors, nurse practitioners, physical therapists and other providers who bill under Medicare's physician fee schedule will have to resubmit their claims if they want to be made whole, with added paperwork costs both for the providers and for taxpayers.

"Congress is playing Russian roulette with seniors' health care," Dr. Cecil B. Wilson, president of the American Medical Association, said in a statement. "This is no way to run a major health coverage program."

AARP, the seniors' lobby, called the cut "unprecedented" and "dangerous" even if it's only temporary. Nancy LeaMond, the group's executive vice president, warned it would undermine confidence in the stability of the giant health care program for 46 million elderly and disabled people.

"This cut creates a dangerous atmosphere for seniors and their doctors, and will contribute to more doctors making the decision already made by some physicians to stop taking Medicare patients," she said.

The billings affected by the cut cover the early part of this month. An earlier congressional reprieve expired May 31. Medicare had been holding off on processing claims in the hopes lawmakers would act, but the agency said it can no longer do that without hurting doctors' cash flow.

The Medicare cuts are required under a 1990s budget-cutting law that Congress has routinely waived. This time, lawmakers' concerns about adding to the deficit held up a deal to allow an exception to enforcement of the law.

The bill passed by the Senate delays the cuts until the end of November — after congressional elections — when lawmakers hope the political climate is better for passing a more permanent, and expensive, solution.

The bill would also increase payments to providers by 2.2 percent. The legislation, which costs about $6.5 billion, is paid for with a series of health care and pension changes that both Democrats and Republicans agreed to.

The Senate approved the measure by voice vote Friday after failing the night before to pass a larger package that included the funds.

The larger package included jobless benefits for the long-term unemployed, aid to cash-strapped states and the extension of dozens of popular tax breaks for businesses and individuals that expired at the end last year. The package failed to generate enough votes Thursday evening to end a Republican filibuster.

Vice President Joe Biden, speaking before the Senate acted, blamed Republicans for being unwilling go along with a permanent fix to the doctor cuts — which would cost tens of billions more. He said the underlying physician payment formula is unworkable, and should be repealed.

"The failure to deal with this problem adds to the anxiety of seniors...and complicates the planning for medical practice," Biden said. "It's just not fair to keep this anxiety level constantly in play here."

He called it "a shameful example of business as usual."

The political gridlock has angered doctors. The AMA says continuing financial uncertainty may lead some doctors to stop taking new Medicare patients, and others may drop out of the program altogether.

"It is astounding that Congress has let seniors down through their inability to deal with this problem on time and in a responsible fashion," Wilson said.

Jubilant celebration over Lakers' win turns rowdy

DAISY NGUYEN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES A jubilant celebration over the Los Angeles Lakers' dramatic win in the NBA championship game turned rowdy in scattered sections of the city, with raucous revelers hurling rocks and bottles at police, setting fires and jumping on vehicles.

Police spokesman Cleon Joseph said Friday 38 people had been arrested, most for public intoxication and others for vandalism and inciting a riot.

Television news footage showed one man being beaten and a car set on fire. Broken glass and burnt debris lined the streets.

Several people were seen jumping on a taxi as it attempted to leave the area near the arena after the Lakers beat the Boston Celtics 83-79.

Someone opened a rear door of the vehicle while others rocked it back and forth. The taxi eventually made its way through the crowd and out of the area.

Some men ran shirtless in the streets, while other people revved car engines and honked their horns in celebration. Some people set off fireworks.

Hundreds of officers massed around Staples Center before Game 7 of the NBA finals Thursday night, aiming to prevent a repeat of the violence after the Lakers' championship win last year.

Despite the massive deployment, pockets of violence erupted in neighborhoods near the arena, and there were reports of windows being broken at businesses.

No major problems were reported in the rest of the city.

Jazmine Rodriguez, 24, lives in an apartment building not far from Staples Center. She said every car on her street had its windows smashed.

"When we came down here, only one window was smashed. The cops told us to go back inside, and (revelers) smashed the other one," Rodriguez said.

Delmi Ramos tried to salvage what she could from her car, which was filled with shards of broken glass.

"It's these young people who don't know how to behave," she said. "They cause damage to people, to the community, because they don't know how to celebrate in a healthy way."

Los Angeles firefighters responded to 37 incidents within a half-mile of the arena in three hours, spokesman Brian Humphrey said. There were 15 rubbish fires, three vehicle fires, one vegetation fire and 18 medical aid requests.

Eight people were transported to hospitals. Humphrey didn't know the nature or extent of the injuries, but said some were serious.

One police officer suffered a broken nose after someone threw an object at him, Police Chief Charlie Beck said.

Police were bracing for another crowd-control challenge Monday, when the Lakers will hold a victory parade from Staples Center to the edge of the University of Southern California campus. A team statement estimated 500,000 to 2 million people might line the two-mile route.

WET -- grades for days of recorded rainfall and the following 3 days as -- no sample taken

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

Woods struggles while McDowell soars at US Open

BY EDDIE PELLS
AP National Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. On another frustrating day at Pebble Beach, Tiger Woods fought with his swing as much as the greens. Graeme McDowell, on the other hand, had that all figured out and gave Woods a distant target to shoot at for the weekend.

McDowell made six birdies on the way to a 3-under-par 68 Friday to enter the weekend at 3 under. That was two shots ahead of Dustin Johnson, 18-year-old Ryo Ishikawa and Ernie Els, who also shot 68 to position himself for a run at his third U.S. Open title.

"You're always surprised to be under par at a U.S. Open golf course," said McDowell, who has won five times on the European tour, including a victory in Wales this month.

Players returned to Pebble for a second round played under cloudy, cool and more benign conditions than on Thursday, when sunny skies and drying winds had Woods calling the greens "awful" after a birdieless round of 74.

Opening on the back nine Friday, he chipped in on No. 11 for his first birdie of the tournament, but if things were looking up, it was only for a brief while. He bogeyed both the par 3s on the back, missed an 8-foot putt for birdie on No. 18 and lost a pair of tee shots on Nos. 2 and 3. It added up to a 1-over 72 and a slide down the leaderboard — seven shots behind McDowell.

Anything, of course, is possible with Woods, but clearly this is not the same player who won the last U.S. Open at Pebble, in 2000, by a record 15 shots.

After opening the tournament by hitting 10 straight greens in regulation, Woods got wild. Since that start, he has gone 13 for 26, and though the greens were better during a morning round Friday, he missed a series of makable putts, including the one on 18 and a 12-footer on 6 that slid by.

Els tied for second at the U.S. Open in 2000 but didn't finish any higher than fifth the rest of the decade. He's now playing some of his best golf in years, though, winning twice and in serious contention at Pebble, which he said resembled "links golf on steroids."

"It's been such a long time since I won one of these, and we've got a long way to go," Els said. "I needed a round like today to get back into the tournament, which is nice."

Tom Watson found himself waiting to see if he's played what would possibly be his final U.S. Open round. The 1982 champion, a heartbreaking runner-up at last year's British, shot a 71 to finish at 7-over 149. That's within 10 shots of McDowell and would be good enough to make the cut if nobody in the afternoon goes lower.

But he knows Pebble as well as anyone, and he knows what he saw Friday.

"I suspect with the course playing the way it is today, it may be a little easy and some of the 1-under pars might surpass Graeme," Watson said.

K.J. Choi, Mike Weir and Ian Poulter were among the "1 unders" playing in the afternoon, along with Phil Mickelson, who was trying to improve on a 75 in the first round.

Time to vanish, Scorpio

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Others dominate your plans. You are happy to be there for them, but on the other hand, you could be surprised by your own response. You might have had enough talk, and want action. Perhaps you need to take the first step and act, too. Tonight: Surrounded by people.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Sometimes the Bull has to wonder about what lands on his or her plate. You might want to toss it all in the air -- not a normal behavior pattern. At this point, you might want more space and freedom. Tonight: Don't do anything you don't want to do.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Your creativity might be put to the test as you seek to include various, very different friends in your plans. You might have taken on a task that could be close to impossible. A significant other could be in a tumultuous mood. Tonight: Let good thoughts and great music float through your head.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ New responsibilities could appear out of the blue. You want to step up to the plate, while on the other hand, you would like to take off and be as free as the wind. Which voice will you listen you? Tonight: Happy close to home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Don't forget a special someone. Make plans for a lengthy meal and lots of sharing. You both feel great when together. If you are single, someone quite special could stroll into your life. Try to take off your rose-colored shades when with this person. Tonight: Out and about with friends and loved ones.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Your ability to read between the lines might help you some with another person. You also might want to share more. Your instincts could be correct with an investment and/or risk. Tonight: Just know your limits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You often put a child or loved one on a pedestal. The misfortune is that this person only has one way to go -- down. Take responsibility for this, rather than be hard on this person. A change in plans might be upsetting at first. Tonight: Let your imagination rock and roll.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Much goes on behind the scenes that you might choose not to share. However, keeping so much in might not be the best for you ultimately. A partner keeps hitting the same issue over and over. Decide your course of action by the results desired. Tonight: Mysteriously vanishing ... let others wonder!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ You scarcely would consider saying no to joining friends, wherever they are. A party could happen at any time. Your intuitive ability is in high gear; use it. You might not want to share all your thoughts with others. Tonight: Where people are.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Invite others over for a fun barbecue, where each person is encouraged to bring something totally unique or their favorite junk food. Laughter just seems to happen. Others naturally feel at home. Tonight: Indulge a little.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Wherever you are, you will want intellectually challenging company and/or great music. Consider taking off for the day or go visit a friend or two. An escape of some sort proves to be relaxing. Tonight: Let your imagination come into play.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ A partner plays a significant role in your decisions. Plan on some personal time together. If you are single, there is still a good friend or family member whom you would love some one-on-one time with. Tonight: Light a candle or two. Add atmosphere.

Happy birthday

This year, embrace new vistas, whether through travel, books, foreigners or education. You will want to grow past present limits. In the next few months and Spring 2011, you will attract a very different type of friend. Enjoy this person's vibrancy, even if he or she is a touch unpredictable. If you are single, you might think you have met Mr. or Ms. Right, only to find out otherwise. Worry less about the end results. Enjoy what is happening between you. If you are attached, the two of you benefit from travel together or perhaps pursuing a mutual hobby. Count on LIBRA's charm.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

ARITHMO™ CrossMath

• Fill the grid with the set of given numbers (1 to 12) to satisfy the Equa demands (7 to 24) in the shaded boxes. The Equa demands represent the sum of the digits that you will insert into the empty squares.
• Each horizontal row has one Equa demand to satisfy; each vertical column also has one demand to satisfy. Each empty square in the grid dictates the math operation (addition +, subtraction -, multiplication X, and division ÷) that must be performed to meet the demands.
• You must follow the given math operations for each square and you must make sure all the numbers satisfy the demands in the shaded boxes when connected in adjacent threes and calculated together from left to right, and top to bottom.
• The numbers you insert into the grid must satisfy the Equa demands both horizontally and vertically.

Fill in the empty fields with the given numbers so when calculated together they satisfy all Equas in the gray boxes:

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Not Ready for Prime-Time Crime: (1) Jacob Collins, 28, was arrested in April and charged with burglary of Matlack's Hometown Pharmacy in Landisville, N.J., despite the fact that the medicine he stole was probably by mistake. Police said they were almost certain Collins was after the painkiller "Oxycontin" but instead swiped a supply of "Oxybutynin," which treats overactive bladder. (2) On the other hand, Sean Almond, 43, was charged on the same day as Collins for allegedly robbing the Kangaroo Mart on Wilroy Road in Suffolk, Va., and could have used some Oxybutynin. Almond was caught immediately after the robbery because his getaway was delayed. He was spotted in a nearby alley, where he had been overcome by a sudden urge to relieve himself.

■ In March (1995), after the president of the Puerto Rico House of Representatives accused him of illegal drug use, Sen. Freddie Valentin denied the charge and led reporters into a restroom in the Capitol building in San Juan, where he yielded a urine sample that he later submitted to the Senate leadership. A TV cameraman shot over Valentin's shoulder, and journalist Sonia Salgado's play-by-play radio report ended, "I have just transmitted, for the first time ever, a senator taking a pee before the media."
