NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ After a 10-year study with a global positioning satellite system (reported in February), researchers at England's Oxford University concluded that homing pigeons do not get their bearings from the sun, as previously thought, but rather just follow roads and highways home.

■ Mr. Jian Feng, of Hegang in northern China, suspicious when his wife gave birth to a baby he regarded as seriously ugly, got her to admit that, though she was not adulterous, she had herself been seriously ugly before she met Jian, but had had major plastic surgery in South Korea and now did not much resemble her genetic look. (Even so, Jian divorced her and in May sued her for fraud.)

■ In April, a New York appeals court ruled that Leon Caldwell was entitled to a $50,000 state worker-compensation death benefit on behalf of his son, Kenneth, who died at age 30 at the World Trade Center on Sept. 11, even though Leon had abandoned Kenneth shortly after birth and had seen him only twice since. The court said that Leon "met the legal definition of a parent" (but ordered him to pay Kenneth's mother her long-overdue $20,000 in child-support).

Farmer's Market report to be released

Lawyers for victims say they should have had the 914-page law enforcement document six months ago

BY JOHN WOOD

Daily Press Staff Writer

SM COURTHOUSE — Victims of the July 16 Farmer's Market crash deserve access to a 914-page accident report prepared by the California Highway Patrol, a judge ruled Thursday.

Prosecutors had kept the report confidential while a criminal investigation continues to build against Russell Weller, 87, the Santa Monica man who drove through the market nearly a year ago, killing 10 and injuring dozens of people. Weller has been charged with 10 counts of vehicular manslaughter and is scheduled to stand trial this fall.

Lawyers for the victims have argued for months that the CHP report should be viewed as a public document and be released by authorities. Santa Monica Superior Court Judge Valerie Baker agreed to order the report released, but said she will wait to do so until Tuesday, when she also will decide whether to limit access to it.

"Given the passage of time since the Farmer's Market tragedy, preservation of testimony in the civil case is crucial," Judge Baker told more than a dozen lawyers involved in the case. "And further delay ... would very likely prejudice the plaintiffs in the civil cases, who have suffered considerable injury."

A preliminary criminal trial against Weller, a retired grocer, is scheduled for Oct. 12. Jim Bianco, one of several lawyers representing Weller, said Thursday the elderly man's failing health has continued to deteriorate since the crash. Weller has remained secluded in his house on 25th Street north of Montana Avenue.

Meanwhile, at least 13 civil cases have been filed against Weller, the city of Santa Monica

City officials choke on designated smoking areas

BY JOHN WOOD

Daily Press Staff Writer

CITY HALL — Smoking areas on the 1,600-foot-long Santa Monica Pier will measure 5 feet by 15 feet, be striped and have signs in both English and Spanish to help them stand out. Just one question remains — where to put them.

Three months after local leaders attracted headlines worldwide for making it a crime to smoke on local beaches and the pier, they still can't agree on how many smoking areas should be set aside, or where they should be placed. Discussions on the matter fell apart at this week's City Council meeting.

Staffers at City Hall recommended nine areas be set aside, from one end of the pier to the other. They also suggested an exception in the law be made for film actors on camera, and that it be left to pier restaurants whether they want to join the ban.

Members of the council disagreed on how many spots should be set aside, and also split over where the smoking zones should be located.

One used the forum to voice her fundamental opposition to the law.

"We're talking about the reasons we're doing this were health risks, but we say, 'Hey, let people park SUVs, where there (are) no emission standards on the pier,'" said City Councilwoman Pam O'Connor. "We don't talk about that. We don't talk about the health risks of the food that's served on the pier. We're not banning that. We're not jumping into that and delving into that and regulating that. But we've singled out this health risk — not the others, but this health risk."

The nine spots that staff proposed be designated smoking areas include a gazebo on the southeast corner of the pier; a temporary area for events on the south rail in the pier parking lot; a spot in the center of the pier near the restrooms; on the south rail next to the amusement area called Pacific Park; another area near the restrooms in Pacific Park; along the south rail on the lower fishing deck; on the upper deck near another set of restrooms; and on the upper and lower fishing decks on the north side. Each area is located 135 to 450 feet from the next, staffers said.

Santa Monica asks for $1M in terror funding

DOWNTOWN LOS ANGELES — Santa Monica will be more prepared in the event of a terrorist attack if a multi-million dollar budget proposal submitted Thursday is approved by the federal government.

Mayor Richard Bloom met with public safety officials and mayors from the Los Angeles area on Thursday to announce that they expect to receive more than $28 million in security grants from the Department of Homeland Security. The grants will provide funds for equipment, training and planning in the area, LA Mayor Jim Hahn said.

Santa Monica will receive just less than $1 million under the proposed budget, according to Bloom. The city will use those funds to contribute to a greater cooperative system that includes 16 cities in the LA area.

"If (there) was a major event, then many jurisdictions would respond at the same time," Bloom said. "So, the idea here is to equip an appropriate number of fire departments with

Pisces, be a duo tonight

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS The stars show the kind of day you'll have:

★★★★-Dynamic ★★★★-Positive ★★★-Average ★★-So-so ★-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★★ Others seek you out, and you respond. Emphasize social dynamics and let your personality take over. Your ability to complete a job and make money colors your mood happy. Others reach out for you. Tonight: Where your friends are.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★ Pace yourself, and you'll get the job done. You might get some interference from a family member. You deal with his or her questioning well. Let your creativity flourish. Others respond in kind. Listen to a child or new friend. Tonight: Get some exercise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★★ Allow your imagination to flourish. Add a touch of humor and laughter to the lives of those you come across. Your ability to see through problems and come up with answers comes out. Your humor helps others get into the weekend mood. Tonight: Celebrate the weekend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ Speak your mind, especially concerning real estate and other investments. Jump into action and reach out for a friend. Help make a long-term goal real. Involve family or a roommate in a discussion about property. Tonight: Bubbles and munchies at your place.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★★ Your words jolt others into action. Knowing when to use these motivational skills could be important. A softer touch with those in charge helps you gain professionally. Make calls and clear out all your messages. Tonight: Allow plans to be spontaneous.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ Emphasize your detachment and you'll gain a perspective on what might be going on within yourself. Don't act out by spending money carelessly. Use your innate skills to gain more of what you desire. Use care with anger. Tonight: Treat a friend or co-worker to an after-work dinner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★★ Investigate options that surround a friendship or long-term goal. A friend makes a suggestion. It is your decision whether to roll with it. Your personality helps you jump past problems. Others cannot resist you. Tonight: Choose from many different alternatives.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★ Your instincts guide you with a boss or superior. You might not know what drives this person, but you can respond accordingly. This person could be stormy and bossy at times. Never forget your goal here. Success will follow shortly. Tonight: Add a touch of mystery. Vanish.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★★ Aim for what you want, trusting your ability to read between the lines. Sometimes you might not get the whole picture, but right now your vision helps you zero in on success. Get together with friends. Tonight: Where the gang is.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ A must appearance could stress out an associate or partner. He or she might make more out of it than really exists. Sometimes a cigar is just a cigar and nothing else. Lead others by sharing your perspective. Tonight: Paint the town red.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★★ Do needed research and/or reach out for those at a distance. You might have something or some idea on the back burner that you want to make a reality. Listen to someone else's feedback. He or she demands to be heard. Make it your pleasure. Tonight: Take off ASAP.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ You have enough energy to carry more than your share of work. Complete as much as you can, but also make time to make other plans. A special friend wants your time and attention. Make it your pleasure. Start the weekend well. Tonight: Be a duo.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

A few verses could fill up a few purses

By Daily Press staff

A free poetry contest sponsored by Celestial Arts will give Santa Monicans the chance to win $4,000 in prizes.

"If you have never entered a competition before, this is your opportunity to win big," said poetry editor Michael Thomas. "Even if you have written only one poem it deserves to be read and appreciated. Beginners from the Santa Monica area are especially welcome."

The grand prize winner will receive $1,000 and more than 50 people will receive a share of the remaining $3,000. A poem of 21 lines or less should be sent to Celestial Arts, PO Box 1140, Talent, Ore., 97540 by July 31. The writer's name and address should be included on the page of the poem. Alternatively, there is an online entry form at www.freecontest.com.

A list of winners will be sent to everyone entering the contest, and the winning poems may be published or posted online.

Controlling compulsive overeating

By Daily Press staff

Overeaters Anonymous is holding meetings for youths up to age 18 to combat the nation's increasing weight problem. OA meetings are held every Monday from 6:45 p.m. to 7:45 p.m. at the UnUrban Coffeehouse at 331 W. Pico Blvd.

OA is a nonprofit 12-step fellowship patterned after Alcoholics Anonymous. It offers a three-fold recovery program focused on the physical, emotional and spiritual aspects of the disease of compulsive overeating.

Officials said the program is not affiliated with any public or private organization, political movement, ideology or religious doctrine, and there are no dues or fees. Members are pushed to abstain from compulsive overeating and help others to do the same.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, there are nearly twice as many overweight children and almost three times as many overweight adolescents today than there were in 1980.

There are roughly 80 different OA meetings in the Los Angeles area for people of all ages. For more information, go to www.oalaintergroup.org, www.oa.org, or call (323) 653-7652. For specific information on the Monday meetings held at the UnUrban Coffeehouse call (310) 392-1130.

New homes need a fresh eye

By Daily Press staff

City officials are looking for experienced and professional public artists to help enrich grounds of the new housing development, "The Village" at the Santa Monica Civic Center. Interested artists from around the United States, the world and Santa Monica are asked to submit their qualifications for review by a panel of arts professionals. Since the chosen artist will have a chance to provide input in all aspects of developing the site, previous experience in the creation of a public park or housing development is a desired qualification. The artist will receive $50,000 for his or her collaborative work and designs for The Village.

The Santa Monica Cultural Affairs Division Web site (<http://www.arts.santamonica.org>) has additional information about the contest and the entry forms. The deadline for applications is July 22.

The Q Line

A group of citizens in Santa Monica is launching a campaign in favor of converting a portion of Santa Monica's beach into a leash-free zone where dogs would be allowed to run and play under the supervision of their owners. The idea has sparked debate among city residents. Some argue that a dog beach would be an important addition to Santa Monica's community. Others worry that allowing dogs to run free on a portion of the beach would bring serious safety and public health concerns with it.

So this week, Q-Line wants to know, "Should a portion of Santa Monica's beach be designated an off-leash zone for dogs? Why or why not?"

Call (310) 285-8106 with your responses before Friday at 5 p.m. We'll print them in the weekend edition. Please limit your comments to a minute or less. It might help to first think about the wording of your response.

NTSB to publish findings on Farmer's Market crash

and the Bayside District Corp., a nonprofit organization that manages downtown. Lawyers for the victims argue City Hall and Bayside also were responsible for the accident because they didn't erect barriers like the ones on the Third Street Promenade which would have prevented Weller's 1992 Buick LeSabre from entering the market.

Civil proceedings have taken a back seat to the ongoing criminal cases thus far, but lawyers are pushing to have that changed. Some of the plaintiffs in the case are elderly and want resolution, while others are worried too much time has passed since the crash and key witnesses need to be interviewed now.

A temporary restriction barring lawyers in the civil case from interviewing Weller and witnesses expires this summer, before the criminal trial begins.

Prosecutors indicated Thursday they would fight against giving lawyers access, adding they might even fight Judge Baker's decision to release the CHP report.

Deputy District Attorney Ann Rundle, who's prosecuting Weller, said if access is granted next week as expected, it's crucial to restrict the report to lawyers involved in the case and their experts. Otherwise, information could be widely distributed and influence jury selection in the criminal case, added Rundle, who said she already has been contacted by several major media outlets, including the television news magazine, "60 Minutes."

The National Transportation and Safety Board acquired an edited copy of the CHP report with witness names deleted. Officials from the government agency studied it and plans to publicize their findings in the middle of July, Rundle added.

While some lawyers for the victims agreed the report should be kept under a protective order, others said the document should be considered public and released to all interested parties.

West-LA based litigator Michael Piuze — who is representing victims in the civil cases — told Judge Baker he thought the CHP report, as well as documents from the Santa Monica Police Department's own investigation, ought to have been released months ago.

"I don't know why there has to be a big deal with a protective order. I don't know why this document can only be given to the attorneys here," Piuze said, breaking the quiet mood in the courtroom. "I can't imagine why the District Attorney's Office ... would want to keep this information from the people."

In the end, Judge Baker put over a decision on the protective order until next week and invited parties on both sides to make further arguments, both in writing and orally. She also is expected to decide at that time whether portions of the CHP report should be deleted to protect the names, addresses, medical records and other information of victims or witnesses not involved in the lawsuits.

Attorney Stan Jacobs said in his 44 years as a lawyer, he had never seen a police report censored.

"They're witnesses to an accident," he said. "They're witnesses to a tragedy. What reason do we have to withhold their telephone numbers? They're written down in every CHP report I've ever read."

The push to have the lengthy CHP report released was spearheaded by attorney Steven Archer, and later joined by lawyers representing other victims. Archer represents Melissa Greenstein, a pediatric nurse who was visiting Santa Monica when Weller drove through the market and struck her. The crash broke Greenstein's foot and back, as well as her hips and several ribs, Archer said.

"She hasn't been released from care," Archer said after the hearing, adding Greenstein underwent multiple surgeries and has been flown home to the East Coast. "She's still receiving therapy. She's not returned to work. She'll probably never return to the type of work she was doing."

Asked if Greenstein harbored any resentment towards Weller for the fatal crash, Archer replied, "It's a car accident. Car accidents happen."

Securing smoking sections on pier no laughing matter

Councilman Ken Genser both agreed that nine designated smoking areas were too many for the pier, but split with City Councilman Kevin McKeown over which spots made sense.

"Space No. 8 is right above space No. 9," Genser said. "Those are probably the most, at least in my view — I was there alone, so don't laugh at me here — romantic view of the city, I mean when you look back at the city from those spaces. And to have those be smoky is, I think, just kind of wrong."

Bloom responded by saying, jokingly, "Maybe we can go together next time," to which Genser replied, "Well, fine. I'd love to Mayor Bloom."

Not all were laughing over the designated smoking areas. McKeown was adamant that the gazebo section in the southeast corner of the pier may end up affecting volleyball players on the beach below, adding he was against moving a mid-pier smoking zone to the north end of the pier — something O'Connor suggested.

O'Connor said she wanted at least one smoking area on the north side of the pier.

"I guess, if you're a smoking couple, you can't have a romantic view ... on the pier," O'Connor said. "That's limited only to people who are not smokers, the purer people in society — that's what we're saying here."

McKeown, on the other end of the spectrum, echoed comments from one citizen who spoke during the meeting.

"Let's not forget that those smoking patios, if we leave them in, are additional smoking places," McKeown said. "So, by the time we're done with nine designated

"I think we're getting into some level of detail that probably is not worthy of the amount of time that we've put in into it."

Mayor Richard Bloom

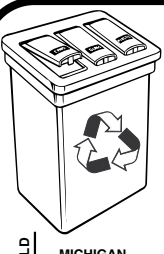

spots and the patios of all the restaurants, I'm not exactly sure what we've accomplished by making it a supposedly non-smoking pier."

Then there was City Councilman Bob Holbrook, who accused his colleagues of micro-managing a decision that was carefully thought out by staffers. In the end, without Holbrook's vote to approve moving one of the smoking sections to the north side of the pier, O'Connor wouldn't agree to a compromise hashed out between Bloom, Genser and McKeown, and the motion failed.

City Councilmen Herb Katz and Mike Feinstein were absent.

It was for that reason that Bloom made a motion to table the matter until there was a full council. Afterward, he said he was eager to make progress.

"I'm flexible," Bloom said. "I think we're getting into some level of detail that probably is not worthy of the amount of time that we've put in into it ... The devil is in the details and it seems as though there were three different sets of possibilities working their way around the dais."

the appropriate equipment. This is going to help us reach the level of preparedness that we need to have."

The Department of Homeland Security offers financial assistance to address the equipment, training, planning, exercise and operational needs of large, high threat urban areas. Hahn said the grant should enhance Los Angeles' capacity to prevent, respond to and recover from threats or acts of terrorism. The funds will be used to establish regional response teams, enhance emergency operation centers and reimburse cities for costs related to orange alerts.

"Keeping Los Angeles safe is my top priority, and this would not be possible without the coordinated efforts and participation of our local and federal partners," Hahn said. "Urban Area Security Initiative (UASI) funds will help further prepare our city and our neighboring cities, and help us move forward so that we can remain vigilant and ensure that Los Angeles is prepared in the event of an emergency."

Santa Monica public safety forces will primarily be used as a decontamination unit in the event of a terrorist attack, Bloom said. The UASI funds allocated for the city will be used to buy more hazardous material vehicles and decontamination equipment, he said.

The LA area was designated for funds based on a combination of factors including population density, critical infrastructure and its vulnerability, LA city officials said. Only the New York and Chicago areas will receive more funds from UASI. In total, the Los Angeles area has received more than $60 million through UASI.

Bloom stressed that Santa Monica's participation was by choice.

"We don't know where terrorism will happen or if it will happen," he said. "The object is to have the right number of properly equipped people so that we can respond if it does."

STATE BRIEFS

Future homebuilders forced to go solar

By The Associated Press

SACRAMENTO — A bill that would make homebuilders install solar energy systems on 15 percent of new homes built in California starting in 2006 narrowly passed a key committee in the Assembly Wednesday.

With a 5-4 party-line vote that saw Democrats in support and Republicans in opposition, the Assembly Housing and Community Development Committee approved the bill that could quickly put California on par with Japan and Germany, home to thousands of new solar home systems. By 2010, the bill requires that 55 percent of homes have the units.

But if it passes the full Assembly, the bill could put Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger in a jam between two interest groups — environmentalists and the state's large building industry — that have claimed his allegiance. During last year's recall election, Schwarzenegger campaigned for incentives that would install solar systems on half of new homes starting in 2005.

Spokeswoman Ashley Snee said Wednesday that Schwarzenegger has no position on the bill, but remains committed to "opportunities for solar technologies."

Opponents of the bill said the solar systems will add $20,000 to home costs and price thousands more Californians out of the housing market, which is among the nation's most expensive.

State health insurance system approved in Assembly

By The Associated Press

SACRAMENTO — Long-dormant legislation to create a state-run health insurance system that would cover all Californians has been approved by an Assembly committee, but the author acknowledges that it won't reach the governor's desk this year.

Sen. Sheila Kuehl, D-Santa Monica, said Wednesday there were several reasons the bill would not make it out this year, including the lack of a final report on its cost. She said she would reintroduce measure in 2005.

The bill was approved Tuesday night by the Assembly Health Committee, 12-5, more than a year after it passed the Senate.

Kuehl said the vote showed that health committees in both houses of the Legislature support the idea of a universal, state-run health insurance system.

"I see an opportunity in the next two years to fully flesh out" remaining issues, she said.

Anit-drug official testifies against random testing

By The Associated Press

SACRAMENTO — Saying universal random drug testing of students stops illegal drug use, a federal anti-drug official testified Wednesday to oppose a bill with bipartisan support that would ban the practice.

Drug use, said White House deputy drug czar Andrea Barthwell, is like a tuberculosis outbreak at a school and that if officials can catch early drug users, they can stop the spread.

"Imagine the response of parents if they learned that school administrators knew of a case of TB in the school and did nothing to prevent its spread," Barthwell told the Assembly Education Committee. "Drug testing is an extremely inexpensive way to prevent drug use."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Shooting spree on Pico overlooked

Editor:

I'm disappointed that your paper failed to do a story about the serial shootings along Pico Boulevard Sunday morning. While the damage to each business was only the costs involved in cleaning up the shattered glass, securing the property until the glass could be replaced, and the cost of new glass and its installation, the total of (the last I heard) 17 such incidents runs into several thousand dollars.

The shootings started, I was told by an LAPD reserve officer on the scene, across town where the sniper took out the Verizon and Walgreens windows. The jerk(s) then proceeded to Pico Boulevard and at about 10 a.m., started at the "EGGS" restaurant at 1701 Pico Blvd. and continued east, sniping at various plate glass windows well into East Los Angeles.

Thank goodness the jerk(s) chose Sunday to ravage the small businesses along Pico. Had it been a weekday when most of the businesses along the street are open and there is heavy pedestrian traffic, someone might have been seriously injured either by the flying projectiles or flying glass.

These small businesses, already under assault by the City Council, can ill afford the time, energy, and money involved in repairs. Example of the city's attacks on small business: A nearby small business owner recently suffered the indignity of a raid by the city's "fire extinguisher inspector" who took a few seconds to check the certification of her fire extinguisher and then billed her $60 for the inconvenience.

Since these shootings took place on Sunday when most businesses are closed, it may have turned out that at least some found damage when they came to work Monday morning.

The SMPD was overwhelmed by the number of incidents. It took them about a half-hour to reach the EGGS location. Fortunately, an off-duty Los Angeles Police reserve officer arrived almost immediately to secure the site and warn pedestrians away from the broken and falling glass.

I hope this story wasn't ignored because "there are always shootings in Pico" and that you will at least report the final outcome: Did the cops ever catch the sniper?

Pico people not criminals

Editor:

Mr. Ries, you seem to do disservice to the Pico neighborhood residents "living at or around (the) 17th Street" vicinity, (SMDP, June 22, page 4). You criminalize the good neighbors in the area by depicting their residence as a war zone. No doubt, the area you refer to in your commentary has had its share of violence, but don't forget that violent crime has also occurred in other sectors of the Pico neighborhood, as well as other parts of the city. Most of the people in the area that you refer to are law abiding citizens who in fact have been quite vocal throughout the years in condemning the violence in our neighborhood. Lastly, sure we can point fingers and blame individuals for not doing more to help suppress the violence in the Pico neighborhood. Interestingly, however, those same individuals often like to take the credit once the situation in the neighborhood settles down.

City Hall needs a cover-up

Editor:

Is our city government and its agencies so incompetent that it wouldn't have the sense to immediately apply a non-graffiti coating on a mural it had just restored? (SMDP, June 24, page 1). This is indicative of the disregard for "quality of life" issues that our city government has throughout the city. I suggest we cover the wall on Ocean Boulevard with squirrel skins.

City budget provides huge benefits for political allies

There's a reason why the city of Santa Monica's recently approved 2004/2005 budget of $377 million is many times the budgets of similarly sized cities. It boils down to two words: Political favors.

About half of the city budget is set aside for retirement and other city employee benefits. Santa Monica has one of the most generous employee benefits package available anywhere. Then, there's the millions of dollars spent on social services. Most other cities spend a fraction of what we spend on social services, including affordable housing.

Ever since Santa Monicans for Renters' Rights came into power 25 years ago, City Hall spending has doubled and doubled and doubled again. Much of city spending is specifically designed to keep SMRR politicians in power.

SMRR relies on labor unions as its main source of campaign manpower and financial support. And, SMRR politicians reciprocate with political favors that cost us lots of moolah — such as living wage laws and affordable housing projects for Santa Monica's low income hotel workers.

In the case of the police, fire and municipal employees unions, their election year endorsements are rewarded with very generous wage and benefits packages. While one can argue that happy, well compensated city employees provide better services, what do outside labor unions contribute?

A couple of years ago, SMRR City Council persons rewarded the big, international Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees Union for their support by passing a "Living Wage" ordinance that mandated a $12.25 hourly minimum wage, (without health benefits) increasing to $13 the second year, for those predominantly employed by the private sector hotel and dining businesses along the coast.

Voters repealed this "Living Wage" two years ago, yet the economic geniuses behind that failed measure are back, again. Now, they want the city of Santa Monica and its subcontractors to pay their employees a minimum of $11.50 an hour — union contractees excluded. And, once again, the driving force behind this is Vivian Rothstein, the local organizer for HERE.

Rothstein ignores the fact that the city is a business, not a charity. It's irresponsible for City Hall to pay more for goods and services than it needs to. Somehow I don't think Rothstein would pony up any more for something than she has to, however that's exactly what she and her socialist cronies expect the city to do. All because she's decided the city doesn't pay enough for labor.

Unfortunately Rothstein's proposal has the SMRRs on City Council salivating to support this self-indulgent crap. And, as with all their leftist proposals, most of the cost comes at out of our pockets, not theirs.

SMRR Mayor Richard Bloom, and Councilmen Michael Feinstein and Ken Genser are facing re-election this fall. Support from HERE and other labor organizations is vital if they're to be re-elected. They'll vote for this in a heartbeat even though this boondoggle will cost taxpayers (you and me, again) over $300,000, annually.

Speaking of giveaways, did anyone notice the City Council approved $485,120 on Tuesday for more improvements to Samoshel, the city's "temporary" homeless shelter? Even though Councilman Bob Holbrook wisely pulled the item from the consent calendar for discussion, four SMRR members — Genser, Feinstein, Bloom, Kevin McKeown and Pam O'Connor fell all over themselves to vote for it. Feinstein was absent for the vote.

This is in addition to $245,000 appropriated in November 2001 for Samoshel upgrades; $10 million just handed to another homeless services provider for expansion of its shelter; millions more in annual funding for 22 programs and the tens of millions more in yearly hidden costs for police and paramedic services. So, what's the political connection here?

How about hundreds of voting transients who maintain their legal address at OPCC's Seventh Street drop-in center? Or, is it a "pay back" for the financial donations and campaign workers from the service providers and their supporters? "Homelessness" is a cottage industry here in "Skid Row by the Bay" and, like it or not, some are profiting handsomely. As they say, "If it doesn't make sense, it must make dollars" for someone.

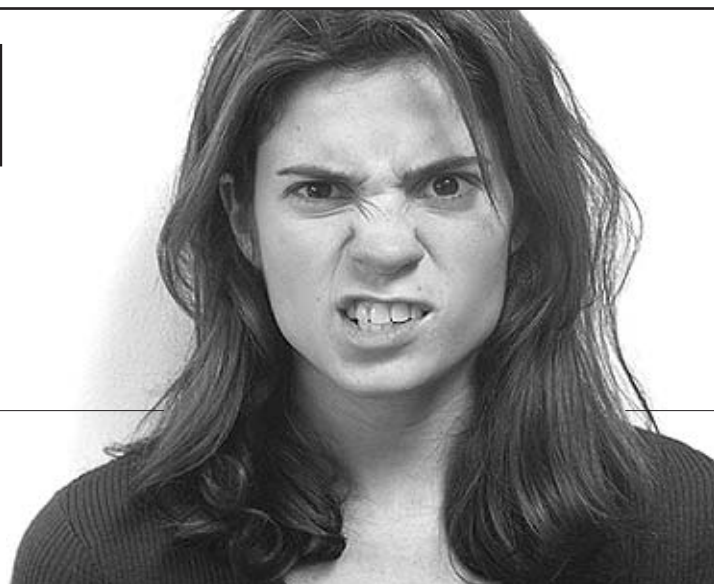

In either case, all this altruism is money down the drain to the detriment of most of us who live, work and vote in Santa Monica. But, it sure helps keep 'em in power for another four years so they can keep coming back and continue screwing us.

Graffiti is not art

Editor:

This morning I read your paper entitled "Save it, don't spray it" (SMDP June 24, page 1). I think your description on the people who perpetrated the crime on the "Whale of a Mural" is completely misrepresented. You described the criminals as "amateur graffiti artists" rather than as "vandals," which is much more appropriate. These people are destroying property. For you to categorize them as "artists" is not only insulting, it is inaccurate.

When I walk to work in the morning there is a hard working man at his body shop. He gets to his shop before I wake up in the morning and he is usually still working when I come home. Some days, when his garage doors are pulled down they are covered in spray paint, which by your description is art. By looking at the destruction, I can't tell whether it is "amateur graffiti artists" or "members of the more skilled graffiti-art community" but I can tell you it is destruction of private property and not art.

Walk up and down the streets of Santa Monica. This ugly vandalism called graffiti has ruined much of our private and public property. Don't justify crime by calling it art.

Cartoon hits reality head on

Editor:

Congratulations are in order to cartoonist Dave Whammond, whose syndicated panel "Reality Check" appears daily on your comics page. His drawing today (SMDP, June 23, page 12) revealed a particularly brilliant take on the war in Iraq. Whammond pictures a man, hands tied behind his back, about to have his head cut off, while the executioner stands set to take his photo.

In this way, Whammond comments on both the enemy beheadings making news, as well as the photography efforts of the Abu Graib prison guards. Talk about a reality check. (Here's hoping this helps you fend off the protests).

GUEST COMMENTARY GLEN FRANKLIN KOONTZ AND STEVEN G. CHURCHWELL

Feinstein attorneys refute 'lies' over financial dealings

Ms. Donna Warren's June 18 guest commentary Mike Feinstein needs to come clean is a regrettable compilation of misconceptions, half-truths and outright fabrications. The legal term for this diatribe is "libel." Please allow us to rebut Ms. Warren, and to educate the casual follower of this Green Party soap opera.

First, Ms. Warren demands that Michael Feinstein "come clean" after "three years of delay and evasion." Mr. Feinstein has come clean, Ms. Warren, and in a most public way. Following the unfounded and politically motivated criminal charges lodged by Ms. Warren's predecessor, Michael Feinstein directed us to contact the Santa Monica Police Department and the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office. Michael further directed us to cooperate fully with these authorities in their investigation, and to waive any privileges as to information and testimony. We did this, turning over volumes of bank records and other documents, and offering Michael's willingness to be interviewed by the authorities. The District Attorney's office confirmed the accuracy of many of the documents by issuing subpoenas for Michael's bank records — subpoenas to which he (Michael) lodged no objection. At the conclusion of the months-long investigation, the Los Angeles District Attorney's Office declined to proceed, having found no evidence of criminal wrongdoing.

Second, Ms. Warren accuses Michael of threatening legal action. As his attorneys, we can confidently state that at no time did Michael Feinstein direct us to threaten or undertake any legal action against anyone; this despite our determination that legal causes of action did indeed exist against several individuals who have pursued this vendetta against him.

Third, the Green Party of Los Angeles County's (GPLAC) small claim action was never designed to "bring into daylight the bank records of political donations." Rather, it was a cynical ploy to embarrass Michael after the District Attorney's office announced there was no basis to proceed against him. There are serious questions about its authorization, but there is no question as to its fate if it had continued to trial. Michael Feinstein would have prevailed for the simple reason that he has done nothing wrong.

Fourth, Ms. Warren posits her demands as "asking for our (GPLAC) money (and) our (GPLAC) records." That is blatantly false. Michael Feinstein possesses no records other than his own.

Additionally, Michael Feinstein never took any money belonging to the GPLAC, nor did he engage in any unauthorized activities.

Moreover, Michael Feinstein did offer on numerous occasions to sit down with state and local Green Party officials in order to answer any concerns and questions. He also offered to provide records to document this information. At no time did such a meeting take place. However, due to the insistence of these state and local Green Party officials on various preconditions — for example, a condition for meeting never retracted was that the GPLAC wanted Michael to unconditionally pay them the disputed funds, but insisted that he was to be responsible for the funds' accounting to the California Fair Political Practices Commission ("FPPC"), as well as any fines for the GPLAC's failure to report and document the funds. Ms. Warren, if it truly is "(your)" money, why is Michael Feinstein responsible for its reporting to the FPPC? Also, if it truly is "(your)" money, why is it disputed? And why did the District Attorney find the criminal charges to be without merit?

The answer is clear. Michael Feinstein is being attacked — not by the Green Party on either the state or local level — but by a few cranks who are more interested in pursuing a political vendetta than in pursuing the party's public policy agenda. This is a shame.

At great personal expense — financially and emotionally — Michael Feinstein addressed and resolved the specious charges lodged against him by the petty few. He has put aside any feelings of bitterness, and moved on to more constructive pursuits, seeking to serve the city of Santa Monica, and to advance the Green Party's public policy agenda in this crucial election year. It is time for Ms. Warren and others to do likewise.

LAUSD teacher absences costly

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Teacher absenteeism costs the nation’s second-largest school district more than $432 million in lost time and substitute pay each year with south district teachers calling in sick the most — an average 10.43 days annually.

Nearly a quarter of teachers and administrators and 35 percent of office staff, custodians and others use more than 10 sick days a year. Last year, teacher absences cost the district nearly $300 million and other employee absences cost nearly $133 million.

The state Education Code guarantees full pay for the first 10 to 15 days of employee absences due to illness, bereavement and personal necessity. Employees are eligible for a half-day of pay for each additional absence.

“That’s an extensive benefit, considering most of our certificated (teaching and administrative) employees are working only about 163 days a year. It lends itself to abuse,” district chief operating officer Tim Buresh said.

Employees in Local District 8, which stretches from San Pedro to Gardena and includes some schools in South Los Angeles, had the worst record with an average 10.43 days absent while Local District 1 in the west San Fernando Valley posting the best with an average 8.57 days in 2002-2003.

The Los Angeles Unified School District released employee absentee figures Thursday, with officials stressing the vast majority of school employees take significantly fewer days off. The average is driven up by a handful who misuse the district’s liberal attendance policy.

More than 11,000 district employees have averaged more than 20 days of absence annually over the past five years, district figures showed. Many are due to illness or injury that should be reclassified as workers’ compensation claims, Buresh said.

An estimated $200 million could be saved next year by cracking down on abusers of the system, and by tackling the “culture of entitlement” surrounding days off, Buresh said.

Airport argument reaches truce

By The Associated Press

BURBANK — The city and Bob Hope Airport officials reached a tentative agreement that creates a truce in the battle over growth at the airfield.

The deal, which ends a decade of costly lawsuits between the airport and Burbank, places a 10-year moratorium on building a new terminal.

Airport Commissioners also agreed Wednesday to end a parking price war with the $41.5 million purchase of Star Park, a 2,200-space lot near the airport terminal. Cutthroat parking prices have caused the airport and the private parking operator to lose millions of dollars.

“Everyone was getting hurt. The city was. The airport was. (Star Park) was. It’s a nice time to put some of the divisiveness in the past,” said Charles Lombardo, president of the Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena Airport Authority.

The Star Park purchase still needs City Council approval. The authority plans to use the Star Park lot for the airport’s valet parking and to consolidate rental car operations.

Shortly before Star Park opened in January 2003, the airport slashed its rates, with long-term fees at $4.55 a day. But the rates cost the airport millions in lost revenue and contributed to a budget deficit last year.

“Parking is about 40 percent of our operational revenue, so it’s a big-ticket item,” Gill said.

Fire plan targets illegally parked

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A new Hollywood Hills fire evacuation plan targets illegal parking on narrow streets.

Calling Hollywood Hills one of the city’s highest-risk brush fire areas, officials said Wednesday that the evacuation plan is part of a three-year citywide effort to update emergency scenarios.

As part of the plan, the city Department of Transportation will tow away cars that are parked illegally on narrow hillside streets on high fire danger “red flag days.”

When fire conditions reach the red flag level — 25 mph wind and humidity levels below 15 percent — illegally parked vehicles that restrict access will be ticketed and towed.

“We want to let people know we’re going to be aggressive. DOT is going to give tickets and tow cars away,” Mayor James K. Hahn said.

The new plan also covers high-risk zones that include the Santa Monica Mountains, Santa Susana Mountains, Mount Washington and Baldwin Hills in South Los Angeles. The Police Department will post fliers in targeted neighborhoods warning residents about the increased enforcement plan.

Inmate’s family files suit

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The family of a county jail inmate strangled while waiting to testify as a key witness in a murder case filed a $35 million federal civil rights and negligence lawsuit against the Sheriff’s Department.

Convicted car thief Raul Tinajero, 20, was found dead at the downtown jail on April 20, five weeks after a judge ordered the sheriff to keep him in protective custody. The man Tinajero was testifying against was in the same jail and he allegedly strangled Tinajero.

The federal lawsuit accuses Sheriff Lee Baca and his department of violating Tinajero’s civil rights, failing to properly supervise the jailhouse staff, negligence and other acts of official misconduct. The suit seeks $30 million in damages on behalf of Tinajero and his estate, and $5 million for his mother, Silvia.

The Sheriff’s Department declined comment.

Santiago Pineda, 23, of Long Beach was charged with killing Tinajero.

State's population continues to shift inland, Census figures show

BY BEN FOX

Associated Press Writer

MURRIETA — Four years ago, Daryl Collier sold his 1,300-square-foot home in Orange County and bought a house twice the size for two-thirds the price at the edge of this booming city to the east.

The move came with a cost: Collier must now spend more time in the car to reach his job in Newport Beach, but he likes the space, the weather and the less stressful atmosphere of his new hometown, near Murrieta in Riverside County.

"It's not the hustle and bustle you have in Orange County. It's just a slower lifestyle," he said. "You trade off the commute for the buy you get on the house. But it's worth it to us."

Thousands of people across California are making the same calculation, according to U.S. Census figures released Wednesday. Inland areas, particularly in Riverside County and the Sacramento region, are growing fast while pricey coastal regions are holding steady or losing population.

Lincoln, a bedroom community of Sacramento, had the highest rate of growth from 2002 to 2003, at more than 17 percent. Its population had more than doubled since 2000, to 23,080.

It was followed by Brentwood in Contra Costa County and Wheatland in Yuba County. Seven of the top 20 were in Riverside County, including Beaumont, fourth at 12.3 percent, and Murrieta, the sixth fastest at 10.1 percent.

Cities recording negative growth were clustered in the San Francisco Bay area, including San Francisco, Piedmont and Berkeley. High-priced Santa Barbara also was among the cities where population was down slightly or holding steady.

In May, the state Department of Finance released population estimates as of Jan. 1, 2004, that differ somewhat from the Census figures, which reflect the estimate as of July 1, 2003.

But the data reflect the same ongoing shift: Californians are fleeing coastal areas, where open land is scarce and home prices are stratospheric, for inland regions that still have the space, if not the water and roads, for large, new developments.

Sacramento-area cities have witnessed an explosion of suburban home building. Freeway congestion has followed, but planners have added two light-rail line extensions within 10 months.

Elk Grove, Yuba City, Lincoln and other once-rural towns have become landscapes of relentless construction, crowded schools, new churches and shopping centers.

Demand for new houses has grown so quickly in the six-county Sacramento region that land prices have tripled in two years, said Alan Newman, vice president for sales at Beazer Homes. The Atlanta-based builder expects to build 1,400 of the 20,000 new homes and apartments expected to rise this year in the region.

"In certain areas, we're seeing 35 to 40 percent of the people coming from the Bay area," Newman said. "Even though our prices have gone up a lot, you're still looking at almost double in the Bay area for a comparable home."

Murrieta, which draws many people who commute an hour or more to jobs in San Diego, Orange County or Los Angeles, incorporated in 1991 with less than 20,000 people. The new census figures put the 2003 population at 66,729, but a calculation by the state Department of Finance estimates that it's already above 77,000.

In any case, the city will grow much more. A general plan adopted last year envisions Murrieta with an eventual build-out population of 111,000.

"Over the next couple of years, we're probably looking at 1,000 units a year," said city Planning Manager Jim Mackenzie, who notes that the precise figures will depend on market conditions and the economy.

The boom is obvious in the city, which is named for a 19th century businessman and rancher named Juan Murrieta and not the legendary bandit Joaquin, as many suspect.

Construction crews are busy everywhere, while the roads are not yet adequate to handle the increased number of drivers — a common complaint that officials insist they are working to resolve. The local government also is trying to encourage more commercial development to bring more jobs to the region.

"Some of the old-time locals, unless they're selling their property to a developer, they hate it," real estate agent Kathy Slavin said of the housing boom. "They came out here for wide open spaces ... and it's just not that way anymore."

Still, many insist that Murrieta still has small-town appeal, or at least a smaller town.

Collier, who works as a driver for a church after-school program in Newport Beach, said his neighborhood features views of nearby horse ranches. Janet Chute, who moved 18 months ago from the city of Orange, praised Murrieta's relative lack of crime and other urban woes.

"It's still a small enough town that you don't feel like you're just one of the masses," Chute said.

Other attractions include good schools, a dry climate moderated by coastal breezes that come through the Santa Margarita River Canyon and a growing number of Temecula Valley wineries.

"Now that the area has come into its own, it's a really nice place to live," Slavin said.

"When we retire, then we are where we want to be. We made the sacrifice for the end result," said Chute, 63, whose husband drives more than 200 miles each day as a sales representative. "It allowed us to ... keep a little nest egg for the future."

Western governors look at regional primary in 2008

BY BARRY MASSEY

Associated Press Writer

SANTA FE, N.M. — Several governors of Western states, who want their fast-growing region to flex more political muscle in picking presidential nominees, said this week they will explore the possibility of a regional primary in 2008.

Gathering in New Mexico for the annual Western Governors Association meeting, the group also decried the lack of a reliable federal drought policy. Drought-aid packages can't always be counted on and low-interest loans don't help with a problem that recurs yearly for farmers and ranchers, said Nebraska Gov. Mike Johanns.

As for a Western regional primary or caucus, the governors endorsed a resolution to create a working group to develop a proposal for as early as 2008. The governors will aim at finding a common date early in presidential nominating season.

"It's critically important that the entire West be a battleground region, not individual states," said New Mexico Gov. Bill Richardson, who is head of the WGA.

Colorado Gov. Bill Owens said states would need to act within the next two years to approve changes in their laws if a Western primary or caucus is to be held for the 2008 presidential election.

"It's so clearly in our best interests that hopefully we can overcome the challenges of getting it passed by a number of state legislatures," Owens said.

A Western presidential primary isn't a new idea. Former Utah Gov. Mike Leavitt tried to organize a Western primary of eight to 10 states in 2000, but there wasn't enough interest. Utah and Colorado held primaries on March 10, 2000, and Wyoming held party caucuses.

Utah Gov. Olene Walker said she's optimistic there will be broader support for a Western primary in 2008.

"I have a feeling we've got the force with us — that we are going to come together, unite, come up with a plan and we are going to make a difference," she said.

One of the difficulties, the governors agreed, will be coming up with a common date.

Traditionally, the presidential primary and caucus season begins in Iowa in January for both parties, is followed by the New Hampshire primary and continues into June even though the party nominations are locked up by then.

In a presentation to the governors, Larry Sabato, director of the Center for Politics at the University of Virginia, recommended Iowa and New Hampshire be replaced as the initial contests on the presidential campaign calendar. He said those states were not representative of the demographics or interests of the nation.

"Why shouldn't the fastest-growing, dynamic, ethnically diverse states of the West have a much greater voice in the election of a president than the lily-white states of Iowa and New Hampshire?" Sabato said.

Richardson and other governors said a Western primary or caucus would force candidates to address the region's interests and problems.

"The issues of the West — agriculture, water, energy, drought, immigration, environment — will take center stage and that's the way it should be," said Richardson. "The West is the most rapidly growing region in the country. It's becoming the most diverse and for that reason we need to have a say in presidential politics dramatically more than we have in the past."

Richardson and Arizona Gov. Janet Napolitano pointed to their states as examples of how early presidential contests pay political dividends. Arizona held its primary Feb. 3, and New Mexico Democrats held a presidential preference caucus on that date. By moving up the dates of those elections, the governors said, their states received more visits from Democratic presidential candidates.

"The earlier you go, the more influence you have," said Napolitano.

The governors also complained that while the drought that grips the West is just as devastating as other natural disasters — like tornadoes or hurricanes — there is no predictable federal response.

Johanns said drought-aid packages sometimes arrive too late and that low-interest loans to farmers and ranchers aren't a solution.

"Quite honestly, somebody who is in a drought needs another loan like they need a kick in the pants — especially when you have multi-years," Johanns said.

The WGA endorsed a proposal for an early warning system for monitoring and forecasting that also could provide a close-up look at drought impacts. The governors proposed the system as part of a comprehensive federal drought policy they say is needed to replace Congress's current "hit and miss" response.

Every western state except Alaska and Hawaii is experiencing some degree of drought, and most of the states are several years into it, participants at the WGA's annual meeting were told.

Montana Gov. Judy Martz called it "one of the most challenging issues that we face — and can't fix." What can be done, she said, is to provide more precise drought calculations so that water managers and users can better plan for dry years.

Over the weekend, the group heard from a U.S. Forest Service official, who said the agency is reconsidering the grounding of decades-old heavy air tankers to fight wildfires. But Corbin Newman, the agency's national fire plan coordinator, said maintenance and other records need to be carefully scrutinized, and that the chances of using the planes are slim.

NATIONAL

Immigration law remains in limbo for fall ballot

BY PAUL DAVENPORT
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX —Whether an immigration initiative will qualify for the Arizona ballot remained in doubt this week as national groups said they will turn over nearly 100,000 voter signatures to the campaign.

The Washington-based Federation for American Immigration Reform said it and other groups will turn over signatures collected by paid gatherers to the Protect Arizona Now campaign's leaders on Tuesday, two days before the July 1 deadline to turn in signatures to qualify initiatives for the Nov. 2 general election.

The initiative campaign's leader previously estimated its volunteers had collected up to 30,000 signatures.

It takes 122,612 voter signatures to qualify an initiative for the ballot, but initiative organizers generally like to have a substantial signatures in case many are invalid.

"We stand a good chance of qualifying," said Rick Oltman, FAIR's western field director. "I don't want to be misleading. I feel that the collection of signatures is going well and that if we work real hard in the remaining week, we just might have a chance."

Kathy McKee, PAN's director, could not be reached for comment after FAIR's announcement.

The initiative is aimed at preventing illegal immigrants from receiving government services not required by the federal government and it also would require proof of U-S citizenship to register to vote.

FAIR and other groups paid $400,000 to a California political consulting firm to collect signatures after the Protect Arizona Now group's volunteer effort faltered.

The initiative has caused controversy since it was first proposed in July 2003, with backers saying it would curb law-breaking by illegal immigrants while opponents saying it is rooted in racism.

A judge last week ordered PAN's former treasurer, Phoenix businessman Rusty Childress, to turn over records, money and signature petitions to McKee, and McKee said Tuesday she had received some material.

WHAT'S PLAYING...

THE TERMINAL
It's easy to relate to the main character, who is stuck somewhere awfully boring (when was the last time anyone had fun at an airport?) for what feels like an eternity.

DODGEBALL: A TRUE UNDERDOG STORY
It's inane, implausible and at times very funny. Anyone who shows up expecting high-brow humor deserves to get whacked in the noggin by a red rubber ball.

THE STORY OF THE WEEPING CAMEL
The soul of this magical, simplistic film is as stirring as the visuals.

THE CHRONICLES OF RIDDICK
A fine return to action-hero form by Vin Diesel, but film suffers from excess and a convoluted storyline.
Starring: Diesel, Thandy Newton, Judi Dench

NAPOLEON DYNAMITE
Boasts enough humdingers to qualify as a winner in what has thus far been a hum-drum year for comedies.
Starring: Jon Heder, Jon Gries,

GARFIELD
What abhorrent sin did humankind commit to deserve Breckin Meyer?
Starring: Meyer, Bill Murray, Jennifer Love Hewitt

HARRY POTTER AND THE PRISONER OF AZKABAN
Not only more visually appealing than its forebears, it is decidedly more mature and interesting. A momentous motion picture that effectively evokes author J.K. Rowling's bookish magic.
Starring: Daniel Radcliffe, Emma Watson, Rupert Grint

THE DAY AFTER TOMORROW
Hampered by galumphing human interest stories, but filled with enough edge-of-the-seat action to make it worth the price of admission.
Starring: Dennis Quaid, Jake Gyllenhaal

RAISING HELEN
In the wake of a recent spate of similar slush — “Jersey Girl” and “Uptown Girls” come to mind — I offer this: Give it a rest, please.
Starring: Kate Hudson, John Corbett

SAVED!
This cheeky indictment of religious fundamentalism is at times engaging, but suffers from an almost fanatical aversion to subtlety.
Starring: Mandy Moore, Jena Malone

BAADASSSSS!
A film that really lives up to its name. Has the raw look and feel that marked the coolest flicks the blaxploitation era had to offer.
Starring: Mario Van Peebles

SOUL PLANE
The soundtrack kicks, the Cristal flows and crass comedy is in full effect in this urbanized take on the “Airplane” spoofs.
Starring: Snoop Dogg, D.L. Hughley

SHREK 2
There are oodles of gut-busting gags for all ages in a sequel that not only does its predecessor proud, but ranks among the funniest animated features ever.
Starring: Mike Meyers, Eddie Murphy, Cameron Diaz

A spirited throwback to the sprawling war epics of yesteryear. Brad Pitt's muscular performance as Achilles is nearly unassailable.
Starring: Brad Pitt, Eric Bana, Orlando Bloom

BREAKIN' ALL THE RULES
A mediocre WB sitcom disguised as a big screen sex farce; wastes decent talent on pabulum that relies far too heavily on unlikely coincidence and lots of mistaken identity.
Starring: Jamie Foxx, Gabrielle Union, Morris Chestnut

COFFEE AND CIGARETTES
A thoughtful collection of eleven deadpan comedic vignettes from indie icon Jim Jarmusch. A black and white gallimaufry of talent and abstraction.
Starring: Bill Murray, Cate Blanchett

VAN HELSING
The most extortionate B-movie ever produced; a ghoulish goulash of CGI overkill peppered with stilted dialogue and a host of historical inconsistencies.
Starring: Hugh Jackman, Kate Beckinsale

NEW YORK MINUTE
Girls, boys and — no doubt — dirty old men are invited to Mary-Kate and Ashley's big screen sexual awakening and, ugh!, is it ever unseemly.
Starring: Mary Kate Olsen, Ashley Olsen, Eugene Levy

Documentry adds fuel to the burning bush of politics

BY DAN DUNN
Special to the Daily Press

There's a telling line in Ray Bradbury's classic cautionary novel “Fahrenheit 451” that reads, “You can't make people listen.

Review

They have to come 'round in their own time, wondering what happened and why the world blew up under them.” Michael Moore may have borrowed the book's name for his explosive new film, but not so much the sentiment. America's most polemical documentarian seems determined to make people listen to what he has to say, and never has he argued a position so loudly as he does in the rousing “Fahrenheit 9/11.” Moore is convinced that George W. Bush and his ruling class cronies are recklessly leading the country's working stiff s down a treacherous path, and he damn sure isn't going without a nasty fight. To that end he's made a scathing movie that — true to the hype — the Bushies most certainly do not want you to see. As presented convincingly by Moore through news footage and interviews (primarily with Bush detractors), Dubya is the definitive Fortunate Son who presides over a dangerous administration hellbent on protecting the financial interests of an elite few and carrying out personal vendettas to the detriment of the great unwashed.

Bush's supporters will no doubt see an objectionable incongruity in the president being offered up as both a bumbling rube and a crackerjack conniver. But in actuality Moore, who does nothing to mask his bias, clearly is underwhelmed by Bush's intellect and repeatedly makes the case that the president is being controlled by a wily old group of right-wing ideologues led by Dick Cheney, Donald Rumsfeld and Bush Sr. No matter which side of the political fence you choose to stand on, it's impossible not to be moved by the film's most powerful images. Among them: a Michigan woman reading a letter from her son written days before he was killed in combat in Iraq; a glassy-eyed Bush remaining in an elementary school classroom photo-op a full seven minutes after learning of the World Trade Center attack; the charred bodies of Americans being dragged through the streets by joyous Iraqis. There also are several laugh-out-loud segments that serve to quell, at least momentarily, the prevailing discomfort. How you'll digest the damning evidence against Bush, ala Moore, no doubt depends largely upon your own leanings. One thing's for sure, this controversial film is generating plenty of heat, and audiences — ready or not — are bound to come 'round in droves. It says here that “Fahrenheit 9/11” is well-deserving of the attention.

Were I keeping a written record of memorable events in my life, as James Garner's Duke does in this cloying sap-fest, it's a safe bet nary a word would be dedicated to the two hours spent enduring “The Notebook.” The tear-jerked clichés begin with an opening “On Golden Pond”-esque tableau — a lone oarsmen rowing a serene river as a guitar

Rachel McAdams: An old soul living the Hollywood dream

BY DAN DUNN
Special to the Daily Press

The hot chick from “The Hot Chick” has arrived. Just over two years ago, Rachel McAdams was an unknown theater actress living in her native Ontario, Canada. In the fabled tradition of Hollywood's overnight successes, she was plucked from obscurity to play the mean-spirited cheerleader who would become Rob Schneider, then appeared opposite Lindsay Lohan in the hit comedy “Mean Girls.” Today, the 27-year-old McAdams is one of a handful of “It Girls” whose name seems to be attached to every project in development. Her latest film, “The Notebook,” is a romantic tear-jerker from director Nick Cassavetes set in the 1940s American South, which co-stars Ryan Gosling, Gena Rowlands and James Garner. The suddenly celebrated siren sat down recently with a group of reporters for a tete-a-tete about the film, and offered her take on matters of the heart.

QUESTION: There's real chemistry between you and Ryan Gosling. Would you attribute that to your both being Canadian?

RACHEL McADAMS: (Laughs) I don't know what it is. Chemistry is such an elusive thing, isn't it?

Q: There's a pretty intense love scene in the movie. Given it was your first, was it uncomfortable to shoot?

RM: The thong was uncomfortable, yeah. (Laughs). But no, Ryan is a real gentleman, and all the guys on set were very classy about the fact that we were working. It was very dimly lit as well, which always helps.

Q: Your character, Allie, is a bit of a hopeless romantic. Are you?

RM: Oh yes. I'm a sucker, in every way. If it's about love and soulmates, yes.

Q: So you believe in the notion that there is one true love out there waiting for you?

RM: I think you can fall in love with more than one person, but ... I don't know yet. I'm not sure.

Q: What's the most romantic thing a guy's ever done for you?

RM: An ex-boyfriend of mine had a dress made for me — a little black cocktail dress. He got my measurements and everything. I thought it was very sweet.

Q: Must have been a special occasion.

RM: I think it was, but we never did get around to going, though.

Q: What sort of direction did you get from Nick Cassavetes?

RM: Nick forced me to be brave. There was no way around it. I had to attack everything head on. He described it as being a car without brakes. What a gift to give an actress — that kind of freedom. Even when I wouldn't take it, he'd make me take it.

Q: Your wardrobe for “The Notebook” was quite impressive. Do you like that 1940s style?

RM: I have a real appreciation for the class those women had. Just the little delicate additions — gloves or a veil. The little touches that made everything (better). Very sexy, in a controlled way. I find that more sexy than all that fleshy stuff, because when you finally get to the love scenes and peel off all those layers, there's a payoff.

Q: What do you think it would have been like to grow up back then as part of the so-called Greatest Generation?

RM: I would have loved to have lived then. Half of me always feels like I should have been born a long time ago.

The only thing noteworthy in ‘The Notebook’ is McAdams wise limp flick.

The plot device for which the film is named is reread daily by kindly old Duke — AKA Noah — to his inamorata Allie (Gena Rowlands) a lovely lady lost in the advanced stages of a memory-depleting Alzheimer's-like illness. Allie doesn't remember much, but Duke certainly does, and as we flash back to their courtship (McAdams and Gosling play young Allie and Noah) we find two kids from different sides of the tracks whose ill-advised summer fling develops into so much more. Problem is, not a single development feels fresh: Not the rich gal's parents disapproval of the mill worker's pedigree, nor the obstacles placed (World War II, another man, mawkish dialogue) before our star-crossed lovers en route to the predictable denouement. McAdams is the find here. The rest of it isn't worth a teardrop.

(Rated PG-13 for some sexuality. Running time: 121 minutes)

Break the gloom with 'Something's Gotta Give'

PISTACHIO PERSPECTIVE

BY SUSAN ANN CONNOR

With June gloom slugging its low clouds upon us, not to mention the constant parade of unconscionable events in the news, I needed an escape — immediately. So I voted for romance. Since I was the only one voting, I won. Being single, I concluded the quickest way to get a dose was to dash to Blockbuster.

"Bridget Jones' Diary" was on my mind. But as I swept through the door, receiving my requisite "hello" from the Blockbuster dude, another film was flirting with me. The DVD of "Something's Gotta Give," big poster staring at me, was on sale for $12.95. It offered not only the movie, but a commentary by both Jack and Diane. What a deal!

I jumped in line, hesitating only for a moment that I would miss the dance between Bridget, Hugh and Colin. Tough call. But I was sure that "Something's Gotta Give" was gonna give me what I wanted to get. And just to lock in the quixotic fix I lusted after, I bought plenty of chocolate.

I have to admit I've seen this movie a few times on the big screen and knew it would be a sure shot for a dim day. Besides which, scientific research shows that romance raises our level of dopamine, a brain chemical which produces feelings of satisfaction and pleasure. I was counting on my virtual romantic experience to make a direct dopamine connection. And it did.

I would think it might have the same effect on you. Last December when "Something's Gotta Give" came out, I reviewed it and have included my review in this column.

SOMETHING JUST SIZZLES

"I loved it," was the echo I heard again and again from the theatre lobby and women friends who saw Nancy Meyer's entertaining romantic comedy, "Something's Gotta Give." Details were not important. You forgive any implausibilities, the handful of cheap (but pretty funny) jokes and the predictable yet dreamy finale. Who cares? It felt good. Like an endorphin rush a girl (or even a guy) might get if her lover sent a bouquet of Gerber daisies for a change. Sweet, colorful, amusing!

Sizzling Diane Keaton plays Erica, mother of the beautiful Amanda Peet's Marin, who falls for Jack Nicholson's Harry, Marin's Medicare-ready boyfriend. She is pursued by the dashing competent Keanu Reeves' Dr. Julian (easy, girls) and is assisted by the "not seen enough" Frances McDormand. This successful playwright (Erica) has writer's block until her heart is refurbished, thanks to the younger (cute Keanu) and the older (oh, that Jack). And she quickly remembers sex is like riding a bike ... and oh, what a ride it is!

On the other hand, Harry's heart is playing havoc on him, causing multiple hospital visits and complicating his use of erectile remedies. Meanwhile his soul wonders what visionary problems could be causing this attraction to the 50ish mother of his 20ish girlfriend, and actually enjoying the intimacy of it all. Could Jack, I mean Harry, be seeing the light?

Jack and Diane shine together. Like Hepburn and Tracey. Meg and Tom. Will and Grace. We may have seen this act before, but it's as appealing as ever, especially with the chemistry between these masterful performers who fill up the moments. Reminding us that love is sexy at any age, Ms. Meyers provides smart witty dialogue and hilarious opportunities to laugh-out-loud ... like the bird's eye view of Jack uninhibitedly baring his Botoxless buttocks, and his fear of viewing Diane's.

So, if you want to sneak out of an everyday milieu into a playground of romance and unabashed fun, then see this irresistible movie. It is a solid good start to something Hollywood's gotta give us more of. And doggonit, I just may go down the slide one more time and see it again — just for the lark of it!

Ahhhhh, the wonderful world of romance ... Lalalala!

'White Chicks' is a painful film experience

BY DAN DUNN
Special to the Daily Press

Sitting in the theater, a $4 Coke pressed against my temple in an effort to stave off brain-swelling, I wondered if at any point, given the sheer number of them involved, any of the Wayans brothers (Keenen directed, Shawn and Marlon star, and all three share writing credit) experienced even a single pang of regret about all that money they were wasting making this relentlessly unfunny dud. It's doubtful anyone cared because "White Chicks" if nothing else is a model of carelessness — from the nonsensical script to the listless performances and slapdash direction. Trust me, folks, diarrhetic house pets produce better crap than this. "White Chicks" is fit for the Pooper Scooper.

Marcus and Kevin Copeland (Marlon and Shawn) are incompetent FBI agents assigned to baby-sit two wealthy blonde bimbos (ostensibly modeled after the Hilton sisters) who are targets of some half-crooked kidnapping plot. A series of improbable events — damn near everything that happens in this movie is exasperatingly improbable — lands the Copelands in whiteface and drag at a high society shindig in the Hamptons. With the exception of their faux blond locks, the guys look and sound nothing like the rich girls they're pretending to be, begging a near impossible level of suspension of disbelief that only people being paid to do so (the cast, for instance) might achieve. Is it too much to ask, even in this dumbest of dumb comedies, for a modicum of plausibility? From there, the Wayans roll out the hackneyed reverse-racist humor — white people can't dance or screw right, and they ain't very funny — along with stale sex and social class gags that consistently fail to register laughs. Flatulence gets plenty of play too, and there's even a dance-off, because apparently audiences didn't suffer enough of those in "Along Came Polly" and "American Wedding."

(Rated PG-13 for crude and sexual humor, language and some drug content.)

Insurgents launch series of attacks in Sunni Muslim-dominated Iraq

BY HAMZA HENDAWI

Associated Press Writer

BAQOUBA, Iraq — Insurgents launched coordinated attacks Thursday against police and government buildings across Sunni Muslim areas of Iraq less than a week before the handover of sovereignty. The strikes killed 89 people, including three American soldiers, and wounded 318 people, Iraqi and U.S. officials said.

Twelve American soldiers were wounded.

Most of the deaths were in Mosul, where 44 people were killed and 216 injured in attacks that included a string of car bombs. Clashes also occurred in Baqouba, Ramadi, Baghdad and other areas.

The extent of the attacks was a clear sign of just how powerful the insurgency remains.

Iraqi police appeared outgunned and unable to hold positions in most of the cities under fire. American troops raced to offer support, using aircraft, tanks and helicopters to repel the guerrillas.

Saad al-Amely, an official at the Iraqi Health Ministry, said hospitals were flooded with the wounded.

The military wing of Abu Musab al-Zarqawi's group, the Tawhid and Jihad movement, claimed responsibility for the attacks in a statement on an Islamic Web site. The statement said that members of the "martyrs' battalion" had carried out a number of "blessed operations."

President Bush, who is appealing to NATO to help quell the escalating violence, updated members of Congress about the situation in Iraq during an hour-long meeting at the White House.

The heaviest fighting raged in Baqouba, 35 miles northeast of Baghdad, where two American soldiers were killed and seven were wounded, the U.S. 1st Infantry Division said.

U.S. aircraft dropped three 500-pound bombs against an insurgent position near the Baqouba soccer stadium, said Maj. Neal E. O'Brien, a U.S. 1st Infantry Division spokesman.

Insurgents roamed the city with rocket launchers and automatic weapons, seized two police stations, and destroyed the home of the police chief of surrounding Diyala province.

A man dressed as an Iraqi policeman detonated a car bomb near a checkpoint manned by Iraqi and American soldiers in the southern Baghdad district of Dora, killing four Iraqi soldiers. Three U.S. soldiers tended a wounded American soldier as he lay on the road, his helmet nearby. Black smoke and flames rose from a burning pickup truck.

Attackers also set off an explosion as a military convoy passed in Baghdad, injuring one soldier.

Also in Baghdad, insurgents attacked four Iraqi police stations using mortars, hand grenades and AK-47s on Wednesday and Thursday. Police fought back, defending the stations with minimal assistance from coalition forces, a U.S. statement said.

At Baqouba's main hospital, doctors standing in pools of blood struggled to deal with a steady stream of wounded. Civilian cars, including pickup trucks, raced to the emergency ward, bringing people with gunshot and shrapnel wounds.

"May God destroy America and all those who cooperate with it!" screamed one man in the corridor. Another who drove up outside the hospital screamed, "Oh God, Abbas is dead." He later carried in the body of a young man with a bullet hole in the back of his head.

The city was almost deserted by late morning. U.S. gunships flew low over the city, some swooping down on suspected rebel hideouts in palm groves. Some motorists flew white flags from atop their cars to ensure their safety. U.S. tanks, some firing their machine-guns, moved into the city center by the afternoon.

There was no sign of police on the streets, but targets attacked by the rebels in the early morning hours were heavily guarded by police.

Guerrillas also targeted security forces in the northern city of Mosul, where car bombs rocked the Iraqi Police Academy, two police stations and the al-Jumhuri hospital. Security forces lost control of the Sheikh Fatih police station following a car bombing, but U.S. forces recaptured the station after subduing insurgents firing from a nearby mosque.

One American soldier died in Mosul, U.S. officials said. Mosul's governor imposed a 9 p.m.-6 a.m. curfew, and the city television station urged people to stay home for the "general good."

In Baghdad, U.S. officials projected calm. They had been predicting a surge in attacks meant to derail next week's transfer of sovereignty, which marks the formal end of the American-run occupation.

Iraq's interim prime minister, Iyad Allawi, said the attacks were an attempt to harm the Iraqi people and "to foil the democratic process." He said the situation was under control.

"We are going to defeat them. We are going to crush them," he said at a ceremony marking the transfer of the final 11 government ministries to Iraqi control. "We expect more escalation in the days ahead."

To the west of Baghdad, explosions and shelling shook Fallujah, believed to be the nexus of the Sunni Muslim rebellion. Armed men ran through the streets, and Iraqi police and insurgents appeared to be working together, witnesses said. U.S. forces clashed sporadically with insurgents at the edges of the city, but did not try to enter the center.

U.S. forces have launched two airstrikes on Fallujah since Saturday against what they said were safehouses for al-Zarqawi, whose group claimed responsibility for beheading American hostage Nicholas Berg and South Korean hostage Kim Sun-il, whose body was found Tuesday.

U.S. Marines besieged Fallujah for three weeks in April after four American civilian contractors working for the Blackwater USA security company were ambushed and killed, and their bodies mutilated.

The city has been relatively calm since Marines announced a deal to end the siege that created the Fallujah Brigade, commanded by officers from Saddam Hussein's army.

Although the Fallujah Brigade patrols the city, hard-line clerics and fighters who held off the Marines are still in control.

NOTICE TO READERS:

California law requires that contractors taking jobs that total $500 or more (labor or materials) be licensed by the Contractors State License Board. State law also requires that contractors include their license number on all advertising. You can check the status of your licensed contractor at www.cslb.ca.gov or 800-321-CSLB. Unlicensed contractors taking jobs that total less than $500 must state in their advertisements that they are not licensed by the Contractors State License Board.
