Local finds ways to help the movement through music

BRENNON DIXSON
SMDP Staff Writer

After receiving an invitation to perform at Santa Monica's Pride event last Saturday, local music artist DEVMO was ecstatic to share her tunes with the thousands of viewers who were expected to attend.

But with the cancellation of this year's celebration now official, DEVMO is trying to keep spirits high with her new song titled, "Santa Monica."

"I'd written half of it a while ago. But once I found out I was going to be part of Santa Monica Pride, I thought, 'You know what? I'm going to finish that song and put it out on the day of Pride in dedication of the city and people that I love,'" DEVMO said in an interview Wednesday.

Of course, the young artist finished her song in time to debut it at the virtual Pride celebration originally scheduled for Saturday, June 20, but with the festival canceled, she decided she would wait to release it.

"I was hesitant to put up a song, because I didn't want to interfere with the movement. But then I thought there's so much going on in the world right now, and I'm not working so why don't I just take the proceeds from this song and donate it to an organization that's going to help," DEVMO said, mentioning all proceeds received from iTunes purchases will be donated to Colin Kaepernick's Know Your Rights Camp. She also intends to make a matching donation up to $500.

"I think art is super important right now and this was a chance

Budget discussions focus on "defunding the police" movement

MATTHEW HALL

The Santa Monica City Council fully funded the local police department during a budget decision Tuesday night but officials said they are actively working with local advocates to develop a plan for long-term changes to police funding that acknowledge the national calls to reinvest municipal money into other departments.

As of Tuesday night, funding for the Santa Monica Police Department is down about three

California uses funding as threat over virus measures

DON THOMPSON
Associated Press

As California sees a worrisome rise in the number of coronavirus cases and hospitalizations, Gov. Gavin Newsom threatened Wednesday to withhold up to $2.5 billion in the upcoming state budget from local governments that fail to comply with state mandates on wearing masks, testing and other measures meant to slow the virus.

"There are some that have made rhetorical comments about not giving a damn," Newsom said in some of his most strident comments to date. "That's exactly why I look forward to signing this budget that will afford me a little bit of leverage in that conversation."

The money is intended to help local governments pay for services needed because of the pandemic. But it is contingent upon counties following emergency orders to enforce the safety measures as they gradually reopen the economy.

Newsom's warning came as the state recorded a 69% increase in new cases this week, and set several daily records for new cases. Officials reported corresponding increases in the rate of people testing positive and hospitalizations.

Still, Newsom said the state is prepared to handle the trends.

The Democratic governor said he views the $2.5 billion fund in the budget that lawmakers are expected to approve this week as a reward, not a punishment for local government. He implored individuals to practice safety measures — at one point even demonstrating proper hand-washing techniques.

"This is not a closed fist, this is an open hand," he said of the money.

"When people simply thumb their nose and do not come with a collaborative spirit ... then by all means the state of California has a responsibility, an obligation — legally and otherwise — to enforce those laws and to utilize the tools that are afforded us," he said.

Newsom said he plans to hand out the money monthly, based on counties' compliance. The bulk of the funding is expected to come from the federal government.

However, the budget bill before lawmakers leaves it up to local governments to certify to the state that they are complying.

It includes $550 million for local governments to house people who are homeless or at risk of losing their homes due to the coronavirus pandemic.

Another $500 million is earmarked for cities and $1.3 billion for counties to be used toward homelessness, public health, public safety, and other services related to the pandemic.

Organizations representing cities and counties did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

Associated Press writers Adam Beam and Kathleen Ronayne contributed to this story.

for me to make a contribution," she said. "It is summer and we're all fighting this battle for revolution, and I think that's really amazing and impressive. At the same time, I wanted to give everybody a chance to enjoy some music, take a breather and relax."

"It's a fun summer song at the end of the day that I feel like everybody can enjoy," DEVMO added. "The song itself is a sort of time capsule into my young adult life in Santa Monica, and I try to capture the essence of many beautiful memories spent growing up here," and it's hard not to daydream about the Westside when you hear the beachy, summery vibes of "Santa Monica."

"I wanted this to be a song for the people of Santa Monica," DEVMO said. "Although it's a strange time to put out music given the political and social climate of the world, I truly think art is what is needed right now."

Santa Monica's Travel and Tourism Industry Begins Journey to Recovery

The current public health pandemic has brought personal tragedies and economic hardships to communities around the world, and our beloved beachside city has been no exception, leaving many of our residents, employees and local businesses feeling the devastating impacts of COVID-19. Adding further tragedy to the crisis, widespread acts of vandalism at the end of May following peaceful protests derailed the first step in our business community's recovery.

Bringing light to the darkness, Santa Monica Travel & Tourism (SMTT) is pleased to share that economic recovery is now back on track with the hospitality industry reaching an important milestone as Los Angeles County public health officials announced that leisure travel and hotel stays are now safely permitted.

The success of our local tourism industry will be crucial for the City of Santa Monica's economic recovery as a whole. Tourism has long been a main economic driver for the city. In 2018, visitor spending injected nearly $2 billion into the local economy and overnight visitors contributed $58.6 million to the city's general fund through the Transient Occupancy Tax. Prior to the pandemic, tourism also accounted for nearly 13,000 jobs.

The decimation of travel demand has resulted in a profoundly negative impact particularly on employees, small businesses, local restaurants, attractions and many other tourist-serving businesses. However, we are a resilient community and seeing our residents and businesses pulling together over the last few weeks has provided hope. If we make it a point to continue that support by making our purchases and booking overnight visits here at home, we can each positively contribute to rebuilding Santa Monica's economy. Every dollar spent will help to propel the economy forward. Please, buy local and help to save our beloved businesses, they need your support more now than ever.

The travel industry is hard at work providing peace of mind with a safe and clean experience for all with special care and increased procedures and guidelines for cleaning and sanitation. Santa Monica's plethora of outdoor spaces, from the 3.5 miles of coastline to many parks and wide-open public space encourages residents to come and re-explore their city while enjoying a nearcation with an overnight hotel stay.

"There's nothing more important to us than the health and safety of all our guests and staff so we've taken extra care to increase our safety policies," said Chef Susan Feniger who owns neighborhood hotspot Socalo along with Chef Mary Sue Milliken. "We'll offer contactless payment options, digital menus, tables spaced six feet apart for social distancing, frequent sanitation of high touch surfaces and dining areas, and expanding our outdoor patio so we can seat more guests al fresco."

While enjoying all that our beachside city offers visitors and residents are reminded to do their part to stay healthy by social distancing and wearing a face covering while outside. Hotels have also increased their focus on safety and sanitation measures to meet the demands of the moment.

"The safety, health, and happiness of our guests and colleagues is our top priority – and we have been working hard to establish new health and safety standards across all properties that are strictly in place as we open our hotels," said Julien Laracine, Managing Director at Santa Monica Proper Hotel.

"These include extensive cleaning and sanitizing measures, social distancing in all areas of the hotel, limited number of room reservations accepted each night, keyless guest room entry option, no-touch payment options, no-contact food ordering and delivery, and much more."

"The staff at Sea Shore Motel is ready to welcome everyone back and as a welcome back treat to our Santa Monica neighbors, the Metz family invites you back with a special rate," said Sonia Metz, owner of Sea Shore Motel.

"As a family owned and run business, we are taking sanitation concerns with the utmost attention to detail and personally sanitizing all common areas three times a day. Rooms are now being kept open at least 24 hours between guests. We've also enhanced our cleaning service and just before check in a family member personally walks through the room giving it an extra touch of sparkle."

Area hotels are coming together to serve their community by offering Santa Monica residents access to deeply discounted hotel room rates at 14 properties across the city's world-famous hotel collection. Residents can secure exclusive discounted hotel rates by simply mentioning they are a resident while making the reservation over the phone or online, then showing proof of Santa Monica residency (California ID or drivers' license) at check-in.

Please note that rates are subject to availability and blackout dates may apply. For a complete list of offers available to Santa Monica offers, see below or visit santamonica.com/local-hotel-offers/.

‘Coming back and biting us’: US sees virus resurgence

NOMAAN MERCHANT AND JUAN A. LOZANO
Associated Press

A coronavirus resurgence is wiping out two months of progress in the U.S. and sending infections to dire new levels across the South and West, with administrators and health experts warning on Wednesday that politicians and a tired-of-being-cooped-up public are letting a disaster unfold.

The U.S. recorded a one-day total of 34,700 new COVID-19 cases, the highest level since late April, when the number peaked at 36,400, according to the count kept by Johns Hopkins University.

While newly confirmed infections have been declining steadily in early hot spots such as New York and New Jersey, several other states set single-day records this week, including Arizona, California, Mississippi, Nevada, Texas and Oklahoma. Some of them also broke hospitalization records, as did North Carolina and South Carolina.

“People got complacent,” said Dr. Marc Boom, CEO of the Houston Methodist hospital system. “And it’s coming back and biting us, quite frankly.”

Stocks slid on Wall Street as the news dampened hopes for a quick economic turnaround. The Dow Jones Industrial Average lost over 700 points for a drop of 2.7%. The broader S&P 500 fell 2.6%.

The virus has been blamed for over 120,000 U.S. deaths — the highest toll in the world — and more than 2.3 million confirmed infections nationwide. On Wednesday, the widely cited University of Washington computer model of the outbreak projected nearly 180,000 deaths by Oct. 1.

California reported over 7,100 new cases, an all-time high. Florida’s single-day count surged to 5,500, a 25% jump from the record set last week and triple the level from just two weeks ago.

In Texas, which began lifting its shutdowns early on, on May 1, hospitalizations have doubled and new cases have tripled in two weeks. Gov. Greg Abbott told KFDA-TV that the state is facing a “massive outbreak” and might need new local restrictions to preserve hospital space.

The Houston area’s intensive care units are nearly full, with coronavirus patients filling about 1 in 4 beds, and two local public hospitals are running at capacity, Mayor Sylvester Turner said.

“We need everybody to behave perfectly and work together perfectly” to slow the infection rate, Houston Methodist’s Boom said. “When I look at a restaurant or a business where people ... are not following the guidelines, where people are just throwing caution to the wind, it makes me angry.”

In Arizona, emergency rooms are seeing about 1,200 suspected COVID-19 patients a day, compared with around 500 a month ago. If the trends continue, the state will probably exceed its hospital bed capacity within the next several weeks, said Dr. Joseph Gerald, a University of Arizona public health policy professor.

“We are in deep trouble,” said Gerald, urging the state to impose new restrictions on businesses, which Gov. Doug Ducey has refused to do.

Infectious-disease expert Dr. Peter Hotez of the Baylor College of Medicine in Texas said he worries that states will squander what time they have to head off a much larger crisis.

“We’re still talking about subtlety, still arguing whether or not we should wear masks, and still not understanding that a vaccine is not going to rescue us,” he said.

The Texas governor initially barred local officials from fining or penalizing anyone for not wearing a mask as the state reopened. After cases began spiking, Abbott said last week that cities and counties could allow businesses to require masks. Both Abbott and Ducey are Republicans.

Some business owners are frustrated that officials didn’t do more, and sooner, to require masks.

“I can’t risk my staff, my clientele, myself, my family and everybody else in that chain just because other people are too inconvenienced to wear a piece of cloth on their face,” said Michael Neff, an owner of the Cottonmouth Club in Houston. He closed it down this week so staffers could get tested after one had contact with an infected person.

North Carolina Gov. Roy Cooper, a Democrat, ordered people to wear masks in public as the daily count of hospitalizations and new cases hovered near records. In Florida, several counties and cities recently enacted mask requirements and cracked down on businesses that don’t enforce social distancing rules.

In a sign of the shift in the outbreak, New York, Connecticut and New Jersey announced they will require visitors from states with high coronavirus infection rates to quarantine themselves for 14 days. That is a turnaround from March, when Florida issued such an order for visitors from the New York City area, where cases were soaring.

Cases are also surging in some other parts of the world. India reported a record-breaking one-day increase of nearly 16,000 cases. Mexico and Iraq hit new highs as well.

But China appears to have tamed a new outbreak in Beijing, once again demonstrating its ability to quickly mobilize its vast resources by testing nearly 2.5 million people in 11 days. China on Wednesday reported 12 cases nationwide, down from 22 the day before.

In Europe, countries are easing or increasing restrictions as the outbreaks evolve.

John Nkengasong, chief of the African Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, said the outbreak on the continent is “picking up speed very quickly” as more countries loosen lockdowns.

Worldwide, more than 9.2 million people have been confirmed infected, and close to a half-million have died, by Johns Hopkins’ count.

Santa Monica Reads All Summer!

Santa Monica Public Library is excited to invite the community to participate in a new virtual summer reading program for all ages: Santa Monica Reads All Summer, from June 22 - September 7, 2020.

This year, we’re offering our summer reading program through a fun, virtual platform called Beanstack that allows participants to keep track of the reading and activity challenges they complete. There are online challenges that include activities you can do from and around your home, including reading, to earn points towards being entered in a prize drawing. Kids and teens who complete the program will also be entered into a drawing for book packs. To register for this free program, go to: smpl.beanstack.org.

Attending library programs counts towards your Santa Monica Reads All Summer points, too! Adults and teens are invited to attend one of the virtual book discussions of this year’s Santa Monica Reads title, The Library Book, by Susan Orlean, or the special Author Talk with Susan Orlean herself on Saturday, July 25 at 2 p.m. via Zoom. In this best-selling book, Orlean re-opens the unsolved mystery of the Los Angeles Central Library fire, the most catastrophic library fire in American history. Programs for kids and families start with a bilingual musical concert Kickoff with Baila Baila on Wednesday, June 24 at 1:30 p.m. Other kids’ programs include making 3D selfies using upcycled materials with the reDiscover Center and exploring our Santa Monica Bay with the Santa Monica Pier Aquarium. For all program listings, including monthly bilingual story times, go to smpl.org/onlineprograms.

Santa Monica Reads All Summer is provided with funding from The Friends of the Santa Monica Public Library and the California State Library. MO' AUSTIN (NOT MO OSTIN) MEMORIES

Last week I revisited my adventures at the glorious Austin City Limits (ACL) Music Festival in 2007, because I was writing about 79-year-old Bob Dylan's recent explosion of creativity, and how I had to back off some from my assessment then, 13 years ago, that he was washed up, not worth seeing, fuhgeddaboudit. But, Dylan once again has proven himself to be one of those rare transcendent artists; never count him out, I reminded myself, after listening to three songs from his new album.

I can't comment on his live performances because I haven't seen one in quite a while, but he has not given up live shows. He was scheduled for a tour of Japan last April but was forced to cancel, also several festival appearances for this summer, because of coronavirus concerns. But he promises, on his website, to be back at it as soon as it's safe. I would say now, go see him, if you can. How many artists can start out at his heady level and nearly 60 years later still be worth your attention and applause?

He may have been reduced to a croak in '07 and that ACL performance was pretty lame, but on his brand new double album, "Rough and Rowdy," released Juneteenth in two-LP gatefold vinyl, two-disc CD, and digital, he sings in a lively, expressive and even tuneful croak. It's his first album of original material in eight years. I'm listening to it as I write this, and liking it a lot. The music is mere background, but Dylan has often been fascinating and successful presenting himself as a poet, with musical accompaniment.

I may get back to Bob (who maintains a home, coffeehouse and temple here in Santa Monica), this week or next, he's got so much going on that's good, but the reason my mind wandered back to Austin was a recent event — The Juneteenth 2020…

TULSA BLOCK PARTY

Virtual, streaming online still available. Presented, of course, as a counterpoint to Trump's crass, disrespectful, medically dangerous, spectacularly failed indoor campaign rally there, in a city with spiking coronavirus infection. Tulsa was home to the famed Greenwood District, the "Black Wall Street," a renowned, thriving self-contained black community that was very economically successful, until one of the worst race massacres in U.S. history destroyed it 99 years ago. Trump's choice of city and date was an obvious thumbed nose to the history of pain of black Americans.

This year's celebration brought together music and celebrity speakers, including CA Sen. Kamala Harris (still in consideration as a Democratic VP pick), NBA MVP and nine-time All-Star Russell Westbrook (who left UCLA to play his first 11 pro years in Oklahoma), former Attorney General Eric Holder, actresses Alfre Woodard, Sophia Bush and Amber Valletta, former MA Gov. Deval Patrick, "Watchmen" creator Damon Lindelof and many others including … singer-songwriter Danielia Cotton. I doubt that very many knew that name, far down the list, but I did.

Danielia Cotton. Still around, still rockin'. Not a star or even a well-known name... yet. But here she is, age 52, 14 years after she caught my ear on a small side stage at ACL, still making music, good, worthwhile music, still pursuing the dream. Good. For. Her.

I can tell you, from then in Austin and from now, on her new album, she's worth your attention. Excellent songs, from soul to ballads to the hardest rock, and the woman can thrash an electric guitar with the best of them. When she grabbed my attention at ACL in 2006 she was doing AC/DC covers, with as much magnetism as the Scottish boys from down under themselves.

GNARLS BARKLEY

Remember them? The superstar duo of Ceelo Green and Modest Mouse. (The name makes me chuckle because I love NBA legend/announcer "I'm not a role model" Charles Barkley.) I was on my way across Zilker Park to see them, a huge act in 2006 (they broke up in 2010), not to be missed. But I never got there.

I walked past a small side stage, really tucked away, and heard this monstrous screaming and guitar wailing. AC/DC, coming out of a tornado in the form of a small Black woman. Her singing, playing and personna stopped me in my tracks.

OK, let's hear the next song, then on to Gnarls. Um, one more. My brain told me to head on over but my ears and heart told me to stay put. Why would I leave something so good? Could Gnarls Barkley be any better? Maybe. Maybe not.

I wound up staying until the last note, introduced myself and got a business card. Maybe I still have it somewhere. I think I reviewed her next album. But I never forgot her. Great to see she's still at it.

Obviously I have no regrets over that choice to miss Gnarls over some "unknown" rocker. I see a couple of music takeaways there: the biggest isn't always the best, bragging rights don't outweigh pure art, trust your ears not the hype, and appearances can be deceiving.

It's possible that Gnarls Barkley show could have been the best thing I'd ever heard. I'll never know, will I? Same as for the hundreds of thousands of concerts I've missed, versus the 3,000 I've caught. So maybe another takeaway is, the old bird in the hand, grass is greener. And I may get another chance because Green announced in February that GB is getting back together.

TOPANGA! BANJOS! FIDDLES!

And tons of great singers and swoon-worthy harmonies. The results are in for this year's virtual competition ('Gimme Shelter/In Place") and the viewing is varied and compelling (for the most part), but I can't wait to get back in the pines for next year's, where some of the best music making happens between the stages. Congrats to all involved for pulling this off. The 59-year-old festival can't be stopped by devastating fires or pandemics, and is one of the reasons living in SoCal is so rich.

rules that require physical distancing in public spaces.

"We know that the community has long awaited the reopening of our beloved Santa Monica Pier. This slow, phased reopening is structured to ensure the health and safety of all who visit," said Interim City Manager Lane Dilg. "As we reopen, it's important for the public to remember that face coverings and physical distancing are required. We look forward to businesses reopening on the Pier and are committed to do all we can to support their efforts."

The Pier has been closed for the past three months to prevent the spread of coronavirus. In the past few weeks, health officials have released guidelines for reopening public spaces that has allowed cities to increase economic activity. Locally, Santa Monica has been reopening beach parking lots since June 12 but the Pier's parking lots will remain closed. The parking area on the pier itself will be temporarily repurposed to allow for expanded pedestrian uses.

The Pier will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. with limited and monitored access points to ensure capacity allows for proper physical distancing and safety.

Rules for accessing the pier include:

Those who are sick, have COVID-19 symptoms or diagnosis, or have been exposed to someone with symptoms or diagnosis within the last 14 days should stay home.

Guests are required to wear a face covering at all times while visiting the Santa Monica Pier and must try to maintain six feet of distance between individuals who are not from the same household.

To help ensure physical distancing, the Pier will have limited capacity and controlled access.

Increased frequency of cleaning and disinfecting public areas and surfaces will be conducted, focusing on high-touch areas.

Guests should also wash hands regularly and utilize the hand washing stations provided on the Pier.

New guidelines for dining and amusement on the Pier will be implemented once the City moves into the next phase of Pier reopening.

Pier restaurants and businesses, including Pacific Park and the historic Carousel remain closed.

BUDGET

percent over two years but remains stable compared to recent requests for decreases in police spending triggered by efforts to promote racial justice.

Staff and council members said the city intends to alter the police budget in the near future but didn't want to make a hasty decision this week before hearing specific proposals from members of minority communities who should have input on any changes.

City Hall has been in the midst of a budget emergency for several months as the city struggles to contend with massive decreases in revenue caused by the Coronavirus crisis. While some departments lost significant funding resulting in layoffs to librarians, planners, traffic engineers and almost every other position, services were added to the police department with a corresponding increase of about $5 million to their budget.

Up to Tuesday night, the city's emergency dispatch center was scheduled to become part of the police department. Those employees are currently located under the City Manager's office and the budget passed Tuesday halted the dispatch move. The decision removed the $5 million increase from the police budget but Interim City Manager Lane Dilg said the decision wasn't just about costs.

"I can address that there didn't appear to be a more significant increase to the police department budget because we had moved the Office of Emergency Management into the police department," she said. "As I mentioned earlier, we have reversed that move because we do see the proposals are changing the ways in which we dispatch in order to make public safety reforms so more specifically, there are people who are saying you should not be dispatching sworn officers to all calls, we want to review that and take that seriously."

Even without the organizational shuffle, SMPD's budget still increased year on year by about half a percent due to increases in healthcare spending and other infrastructure costs. However, funding for the department decreased by about 3.3% over a two year period.

Cities across the country have started to cut budgets to police agencies as part of the move for social equity sparked by the recent deaths of Black Americans at the hands of police officers. Many residents were opposed to adoption of the budget and demanded additional cuts to police services. City officials said they were legally required to pass a budget by June 30 and Dilg said during the meeting that she did believe "there is work to be done" but that she was unable to present a plan before the budget was due.

"I was not able, in the amount of time we had, to determine exactly what that looks like and what the best path forward is," she said. "You can direct a cut tonight and you can direct the shifting of funds, when I tried to do that myself in terms of where we take the money and how we allocate it, I was not persuaded that we would be making the long term systemic reform that we are looking for by taking one vacancy and moving it to one program."

She said other communities that are engaging in the process are taking a more long-term approach to the redistribution of their funds and she said the city will be working with community members to establish a plan to divest from police services and invest in other areas.

"I have announced a process for a committee to advise me on that," she said. "I do think there are proposals out there that merit real consideration, both in terms of how we police and in terms of are we answering with police where police may not be the answer. And so I just want to be clear with you in the community that I very much believe we should and can be part of that conversation."

Councilwoman Gleam Davis said changes should be made with the input of impacted residents.

"It doesn't take a genius to see there's not a Black person on the city council and I would hate to start reallocating resources without the input of the very community that we're trying to benefit," she said.

Dilg said she is recruiting individuals to provide advice.

"I am seeking a group of community members to advise me on two sets of proposals," she said. "One would be looking at proposals for changes to use of force policies within the Santa Monica Police Department and the second would be looking carefully at proposals to divest and invest, or to as it is sometimes called defund the police which I believe a caller earlier stated is not about defunding the police department, it is about taking seriously the question of how we provide public safety. Where do we use sworn officers, where we use unsworn police personnel and where should we actually be investing in something entirely different to provide public safety for all."

She said she has reached out to Black community leaders who are working on the Black Agenda for Santa Monica to make sure efforts are coordinated and she said it would take 60 - 90 days to come up with long-term proposals.

Staff said the city can make changes to the budget anytime or at one of their regularly scheduled updates that occur roughly in October and January.

Council did make some changes to the budget to address racial inequity including a $200,000 allocation from the general fund and $25,000 from discretionary funds for the Black Agenda and earmarking 10 percent of the We Are Santa Monica Fund for the Black Agenda.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (JUNE 25)

Spiritual investigation and development will lead you to make some very practical improvements. In the next 10 weeks, your interests shift and friendship circle widens. The influence of new people will lead to lifestyle upgrades. The start of 2021 has a romantic feel. Big projects bring big money. Pisces and Sagittarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 40, 22, 17 and 30.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Because of the interconnectedness of body, mind and soul, the fitness of one area will be communicated through the other two. For vibrant benefits, breathe energy into your weaker modality.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You will either commit completely to the task or will pretend that you are completely committed to the task, recognizing how important it is to everyone on the team that you appear unified and "all in."

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). It doesn't matter if it's a boss, loved one or complete stranger — when someone asks you to do something, you naturally default to "yes." This agreeableness will be the start of an adventure.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Just like crunches build stomach muscles, emotional stability can be exercised and built, giving you a core of strength that is even more attractive than a six-pack of abs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You've known both introversion and extroversion and are currently an "ambivert," as some situations make you feel outgoing and others make you feel closed up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). What the others want may not be desirable, possible or convenient to you, but you'll hear them out anyway. This act of kindness and respect has repercussions of healing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). There is little in life more valuable than the unconditional support of a true friend. You'll experience the pure love of an exchange that is without motive or expectation of reciprocity.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). In uncertain circumstances, it is only human to rely on assumptions. Be superhuman instead. Let go of what you know and reserve judgment as you try to absorb the truth in front of you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). For most people, if they know how to start, then they'll dive right in. Not knowing where to start leads to procrastination. You'll have the opportunity and privilege of leading the way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Too many choices can be overwhelming, not enough is boring. You'll find your own sweet spot of options, but don't assume it's the same for all. Some people can handle three, others 23.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Some thought patterns are like riptides. It's easy to get carried away and fighting them head-on can be futile. Relax and be carried. Wait for the break — it's coming — and then you can swim to the shore.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). This is the time to relax your expectations and accept that your best is always relative to the moment. You can push yourself, but be kind about it. There is no need to punish yourself, ever.

Notice To Potential Bidders: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. Notice To Property Owner: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may visit the website below using the file number assigned to this case. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale.
