Wife of missing man doesn't believe he will make a return

BY KEVIN HERRERA
Editor in Chief

DOWNTOWN He went missing more than a year ago, and the person who should be the most concerned doesn't seem to be bothered by her husband's disappearance, and possible death.

"He was pretty mean to me at the very end," said Santa Monican Marcia Carter, wife for 46 years to Donald Carter, 77, who disappeared June 28, 2010 while hiking near Castaic Lake. "He either ignored me or insulted me. … I'm at peace with it."

Marcia Carter, 82, who lives alone in a Community Corporation of Santa Monica apartment on Fourth Street, has thought of declaring her husband dead, but according to the California Probate Code, she has to wait another four years before doing so.

She's almost certain her husband is gone because he hasn't used any of their credit cards and, as far as she knows, he didn't have much cash.

She's on a fixed income, collecting only Social Security benefits for herself. She said the federal government cut off her husband's Social Security checks after he went missing.

"It's a little hard because he used to do some things in the house like take out the

New England Mafia is weakened but still pursued after Bulger's arrest

LAURA CRIMALDI
Associated Press

BOSTON When James "Whitey" Bulger ruled the streets of South Boston, the New England crime scene was a battleground for a bloody turf war between the Italian Mafia and Irish street crews.

But some observers say the organized crime landscape that took shape during Bulger's 16 years on the lam — ending with his capture days ago in California — is a shell of its former self, hobbling along with "old men in diapers" at the helm.

"It's over," said Boston defense attorney Joseph J. Balliro Sr., who represented crime figures Vincent "Jimmy the Bear" Flemmi, an FBI informant believed to have killed at least eight people, and Henry Tameleo, the reputed consigliere of the New England Mafia.

Flemmi and Tameleo both died in prison decades ago.

A string of prosecutions, gang warfare and the march of time have sent many made men to prison or the grave. The ruthless crime syndicates powerfully depicted in movies including "The Godfather" and "The Departed" have seemingly lost much of their box office luster in real life. And even the chase of mobsters has been splintered by the terrorism focus put on law enforcement by the Sept. 11 attacks.

"They got their hands full with terrorism," said former Bulger associate John "Red" Shea. "These mob families have been taken apart."

Bulger, 81, was captured Wednesday in Santa Monica, where he apparently had been living for most of the time he was a fugitive. Bulger, who appeared Friday after-

Public art honored

It seems that Santa Monica's public art is drawing national attention.

Last week, City Hall's public art program was recognized by Americans for the Arts, the leading national professional arts service organization, for all three projects submitted for the "Year in Review."

The projects were among the 47 the jury selected as outstanding public artworks of 2010 from over 400 submittals from throughout the country.

The jury noted that both "Cradle" by Ball Nogues Studio at Santa Monica Place and "Wheels" by Anne Marie Karlsen on a Downtown parking structure were exceptional in how the artists played with scale and took risks in creating these signature pieces.

The Cultural Affairs Division was also lauded for Glow, Santa Monica's unique all-night art event, in the "Visionary Leadership" category. Cultural Affairs Manager Jessica Cusick expressed her excitement at the news: "We are delighted to have Santa Monica's ongoing commitment to artistic excellence credited in this fashion."

Held on Sept. 25, Glow 2010 built on the phenomenal success of the inaugural event in 2008; featuring 20 art installations with over 100 participating artists the event was attended by over 150,000 people.

"It is especially meaningful to be honored by one's peers. Knowing that Glow was singled out for 'Visionary Leadership' gives all of us on the team pride in our accomplishments and, more importantly, gives us the drive to create an even more spectacular event for 2013," said Glow Artistic Director Marc Pally.

Solar Alliance students earn national recognition

BY ASHLEY ARCHIBALD
Daily Press Staff Writer

SMMUSD HDQTRS When Charlotte Biren and Jenna Perelman approached the dais to accept a commendation from the Board of Education on behalf of the Santa Monica High School Solar Alliance for its work inspiring district kids to spare the air by biking, walking or busing to school, they were thrilled and honored for their work to be recognized.

The event, called Bike It! Day, takes weeks to get all of the players on board that are needed to receive the initial permissions from City Hall, which donates bike racks and other resources to make sure the day runs smoothly.

And, of course, there are the hundreds of students across the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District that participated, making this Bike It! Day the most far-reaching attempt since the event got off the ground in 2007 under the leadership of then-President of the Solar Alliance, Lulu Mickelson.

The club deserved the accolades, but there was another surprise in store for the two co-presidents, Biren and Perelman, who had devoted themselves to the cause for the past several weeks.

"We've received some late breaking news," announced Board of Education President Jose Escarce, who then invited club coordinator Richard McKinnon to speak.

'Cars 2' keeps Pixar in driver's seat with $68M

DAVID GERMAIN
AP Movie Writer

LOS ANGELES Pixar Animation remains undefeated at the box-office races.

The Disney unit's animated sequel "Cars 2" cruised to a No. 1 finish with a $68 million opening weekend, according to studio estimates Sunday. That makes 12 wins in a row for Pixar since the company's first feature film, 1995's "Toy Story."

"It couldn't be any better than that. What an unbelievable track record these guys have," said Chuck Viane, head of distribution for Disney.

"Cars 2" added $42.9 million in 18 overseas markets, giving it a worldwide total of $110.9 million.

Domestically, "Cars 2" nearly matched the $68.1 million debut of Disney-Pixar's "Up" two years ago, though it was well below the company's record of $110.3 million for last year's "Toy Story 3."

The original "Cars" had a $60.1 million debut in 2006, but factoring in today's higher admission prices, it sold more tickets than "Cars 2."

Saying one thing, doing another

Editor:

Everyday in Santa Monica someone says thank you for your service. I go to Starbucks on Montana, Whole Foods on San Vicente, everyone says thank you for your service. Does anyone ever think about asking a disabled veteran what could be done to assist disabled veterans? Mr. [Bobby] Shriver has joined a group of attorneys to assist disabled veterans at the Veterans Administration. Although, he does nothing about companies in Santa Monica that openly discriminate against disabled veterans in employment as well as housing. Why does Santa Monica's government say one thing but practice another?

To kindergarten with them

Editor:

I wish I could be wry and witty about Saint John's reneging on their contractual obligation to provide a parking structure. I'm sick at the stomach instead.

My philosophy is that whatever one needed to know about life one learns in kindergarten: clean up after yourself, keep your promises and share. The selfish owners of this behemoth organization are wantonly ignoring the continual needs of the residents to whom they give service and who, in turn, pay to keep them operating.

Send them back to kindergarten, please.

New SMMUSD motto: 'mum's the word'

ANOTHER CONTROVERSY IS BREWING AT the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District.

This time it concerns student wrestlers and racism at Santa Monica High School.

On May 4, two students on the wrestling team muscled an African-American teammate against a locker and locked him to it. A wrestling practice dummy "posed with a noose" was positioned nearby, according to news reports. The two wrestlers allegedly paraded around shouting, "Slave for sale."

The incident was reported to administrators that night, but the victim's mother, Victoria Gray, only found out about it from another parent while at work on May 31. School officials never contacted her. Her son hadn't told her, possibly not wanting to make a big deal out of it.

It also seems that H-House principal Leslie Wells may have coerced, perhaps inadvertently, the victim into silence by saying, "The incident could get the whole wrestling program canceled."

Because other parents had been informed, Gray claims administrators deliberately tried to keep the racial harassment of her son as quiet as possible, which is why she was never notified. She has also told the school board that there is no district policy that assures parents will be informed when their children are victims of harassment or bullying.

But, this isn't the first time actions of SMMUSD administrators have defied common sense, jeopardized both parents and students and invited criminal prosecution and civil liability.

In March, 2006, police were notified by the then Lincoln Middle School principal of a student complaint against teacher Thomas Beltran for "inappropriate touching." After investigating, police determined there was "insufficient evidence to pursue a case."

In 2008, additional victims came forward. Beltran was arrested, charged and is currently serving 14 years for numerous felonies involving underage female students from late 2004 through April, 2008 at Lincoln.

News coverage then disclosed there was no mention of the 2006 complaint in Beltran's SMMUSD file. When Lincoln parents found out, they went ballistic and asked for a comprehensive policy that would keep everyone better informed about criminal or improper incidents in the schools.

Earlier this year, notification problems came to light again with complaints of sexual harassment against Samohi math teacher Ari Marken. He had been suspended from the classroom and investigated by the district internally, twice. Marken was reinstated this last school year.

Concerned parents filed a lawsuit to force the SMMUSD to release information about the investigation. They won. Marken appealed. Parties are awaiting a new court date.

The SMMUSD has serious problems with this latest incident. Terrorizing people with a noose is a criminal offense (California Penal Code, Section 11411) and must be reported. Police were never called by district officials although they had collected student cell phones and deleted photos of the incident, according to news reports. Meanwhile, the two instigators were suspended for just three days each.

Not reporting the crime aside, destroying photos (or evidence) could be viewed as obstruction of justice and lead to criminal prosecution. And, the district could also face litigation for failing to protect the civil rights of its students.

Add this to the SMMUSD's continual fiscal problems, incoherent policies, cover-ups and other shenanigans and this revelation could generate enough bad press to turn our school district into a national disgrace.

LAST ROUND FOR SAINT JOHN'S

Tuesday night, the City Council will review and most likely approve an amendment to a Development Agreement (DA) Saint John's Health Center has with City Hall. Saint John's wants to continue a shared parking arrangement with the Yahoo! Center business park more than two blocks away, instead of building a promised garage on campus.

Planning staff and Planning Commissioners alike think this will give them oversight over Saint John's parking operations and somehow reduce traffic and congestion around the hospital. The "shared parking" concept is straight out of the newly adopted Land Use and Circulation Element (LUCE). This may sound reasonable to the Utopian air heads City Hall pays exorbitant consultant fees to, but in reality it puts more parking and traffic problems directly into neighborhoods.

There are numerous flaws with this proposal including the reluctance of visitors and others to use expensive valet parking or to park blocks away from their destination. People will still drive because it's ultimately more time saving and convenient. They'll park where its close or cheap rather then use impractical alternatives suggested by the dreamers from Fantasy Land.

Relying on City Hall to monitor the parking situation makes no sense as its record of monitoring DAs, variances and Conditional Use Permits for compliance is abysmal. In this case, City Hall's reliance on Saint John's to audit and monitor parking and traffic is kind of like having the fox guard the henhouse.

Another idiotic condition for granting the amendment is the $200,000 "contribution" Saint John's is expected to make to beautify a Colorado Avenue Expo Light Rail stop. I don't know who the moron is that came up with this "community benefit" prize, but why extort 200 grand from a hospital for transit use? It's a top-notch medical facility. Better to provide free health services to needy community members.

This whole thing smells to high heaven. Unless a miracle occurs, the amendment will pass and neighbors will continue to get screwed, developers and their high priced attorneys will celebrate another victory over residents and a majority of council members will remain on the "hot list" for big money campaign contributions courtesy of City Hall's favorite lobbyist, Kim Karie.

China eyes Canadian oil

ROB GILLIES
Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta In the northern reaches of Alberta lies a vast reserve of oil that the U.S. views as a pillar of its future energy needs.

China, with a growing appetite for oil that may one day surpass that of the U.S., is ready to spend the dollars for a big piece of it.

The oil sands of this Canadian province are so big that they will be able to serve both of the world's largest economies as production expands in the coming years. But that will mean building at least two pipelines, one south to the Texas Gulf Coast and another west toward the Pacific, and that in turn means fresh environmental battles on top of those already raging over the costly and energy-intensive method of extracting oil from sand.

Most believe that both will eventually be built. But if the U.S. doesn't approve its pipeline promptly, Canada might increasingly look to China, thinking America doesn't want a big stake share in what environmentalists call "dirty oil," which they say increases greenhouse gas emissions.

Alberta has the world's third largest oil reserves, more than 170 billion barrels. Daily production of 1.5 million barrels from the oil sands is expected to nearly triple to 3.7 million in 2025. Overall, Alberta has more oil than Russia or Iran. Only Saudi Arabia and Venezuela have more.

Alberta is one of the few places where oil companies can invest, as the majority of the world's oil reserves are controlled by national governments. Only 22 percent of the total world reserves are accessible to private sector investment, 52 percent of which is in Alberta's oil sands, according to the Canadian Association of Petroleum Producers.

Canada's only major oil export market is the U.S. But with the product of oil sands and pipeline delivery to the U.S. under perennial clouds of environmental objections, and with Asian demand growing, this country wants to diversify its market, and China is eager to oblige.

Sinopec, a Chinese state-controlled oil company, has a stake in a $5.5 billion plan drawn up by the Alberta-based Enbridge company to build the Northern Gateway Pipeline from Alberta to the Pacific coast province of British Columbia. Alberta Finance Minister Lloyd Snelgrove met this month with Sinopec and CNOOC, China's other big oil company, and China's largest banks.

"They are sitting there saying if you need money, we've got money; if you need expertise, we've got that; whatever you need we've got," Snelgrove said.

Alberta Premier Ed Stelmach said American government officials have expressed concern about a pipeline to the Pacific. They have raised it in terms of "Well, are you still going to be able to supply us?" he said.

That fear may already have fallen aside.

"There are people who still feel that one barrel of oil going from Canada to China could be one more barrel going to the United States. But those are people in the minority. It is a concern but it is not a big concern," said Wenran Jiang, a professor at the University of Alberta and a senior fellow of the Asia Pacific Foundation.

Stelmach said the U.S. will remain Canada's primary oil customer.

But aboriginal and environmental opposition to the Pacific pipeline is fierce. The opponents fear it will leak. The local member of Parliament, Nathan Cullen, says accidents are inevitable in the rough waters around Kitimat, British Columbia, where the pipeline will end. And no one has forgotten the Exxon Valdez oil spill of 1989, some 1,300 kilometers (800 miles) north of Kitimat.

However, Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper, freshly and convincingly re-elected, is an oil man who has suggested he supports building the pipeline. Also, Calgary-based Kinder Morgan has plans to expand an existing pipeline route to Vancouver so that oil can be shipped to Asia.

Critics dislike the whole concept of oil sands, because extracting the oil requires huge amounts of energy and water, increases greenhouse gas emissions and threatens rivers and forests. Keystone XL, the pipeline that would bring Alberta oil to Texas Gulf Coast refineries to serve the U.S. market, compounds the issue.

Pipeline leaks can affect drinking water and sensitive ecosystems, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency warns. In a letter to the State Department this month, it cited major pipeline spills last year in Michigan and Illinois, as well as two leaks last month in the Keystone pipeline, a 1,300-mile line owned by the same company that wants to build Keystone XL. The U.S. pipeline safety agency briefly blocked Calgary-based TransCanada from restarting the Keystone pipeline this month because of safety concerns.

But Keystone XL could substantially reduce U.S. dependency on oil from the Middle East and other regions, according to a report commissioned by the Obama administration. It suggests that the pipeline, HOLD IT? The Environmental Working Group recommends avoiding spray sunscreens entirely. With so little known about the effects of sunscreen chemicals on the body when rubbed into the skin, they say, we may never know how much worse the effects may be when they are inhaled.

Think twice about spray sunscreens

Dear EarthTalk

Isn't spray sunscreen a health and environmental nightmare when it seems that more of the sunscreen ends up going up my nose than on the kid at the beach next to me?

Lillian Robertson
Methuen, Mass.

SPRAY CANS OF SUNSCREEN MAY NO longer contain chlorofluorocarbons (also known as CFCs, which were phased out in the 1990s for causing holes in the stratospheric ozone layer), but many contain other chemicals that are no good for our health or the environment. Researchers have found that the chemicals and/or minerals in the vast majority of commercially available sunscreens — even the rub-in creamy or oily varieties — can cause health problems just from ordinary use; inhaling them only magnifies the risks.

And just what are the risks? According to the non-profit Environmental Working Group (EWG), there are two major types of sunscreens available in the U.S. "Chemical" sunscreens, the more common kind, penetrate the skin and may disrupt the body's endocrine system, as their active ingredients (e.g., octylmethylcinnamate, oxybenzone, avobenzone, benzophone, mexoryl, PABA or PARSOL 1789) mimic the body's natural hormones and as such can essentially confuse the body's systems. Quite a risk to take, considering that the chemical varieties don't even work for very long once applied.

Meanwhile, "mineral" sunscreens are considered somewhat safer, as their active ingredients are natural elements such as zinc or titanium. But "micronized" or "nanoscale" particles of these minerals can get below the skin surface and cause allergic reactions and other problems for some people. EWG recommends sticking with "mineral" sunscreens whenever possible but, more important, taking other precautions to avoid prolonged sun exposure altogether. "At EWG we use sunscreens, but we look for shade, wear protective clothing, and avoid the noontime sun before we smear on the cream," the group reports.

As for spray varieties, EWG recommends avoiding them entirely: "These ingredients are not meant to be inhaled into the lungs." With so little known about the effects of sunscreen chemicals on the body when rubbed into the skin, we may never know how much worse the effects may be when they are inhaled. But suffice it to say: When your neighbor at the beach is spraying down Junior, it's in your best interest to turn away and cover your nose and mouth.

The root of the problem, according to EWG, is failure on the part of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA), despite repeated requests from public health and consumer advocates, to implement sunscreen safety standards, some of which were proposed by government scientists more than three decades ago.

EWG only considers a small percentage of the sunscreens on the market — none of which come packaged in spray cans — safe for human use. Some of the top rated varieties come from manufacturers including All Terrain, Aubrey Organics, Badger, Blue Lizard, California Baby, La Roche-Posay, Purple Prairie Botanicals, thinksport, and UV Natural. None of the mainstream drug store variety brands appear on EWG's recommended list. The full list is available on the sunscreens section of EWG's Skin Deep website. With summer now upon us, stock up on good sunscreen before it's too late.

Whales, plankton migrate across Northwest Passage

ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press

AMSTERDAM When a 43-foot (13-meter) gray whale was spotted off the Israeli town of Herzliya last year, scientists came to a startling conclusion: it must have wandered across the normally icebound route above Canada, where warm weather had briefly opened a clear channel three years earlier.

On a microscopic level, scientists also have found plankton in the North Atlantic where it had not existed for at least 800,000 years.

The whale's odyssey and the surprising appearance of the plankton indicates a migration of species through the Northwest Passage, a worrying sign of how global warming is affecting animals and plants in the oceans as well as on land.

"The implications are enormous. It's a threshold that has been crossed," said Philip C. Reid, of the Alister Hardy Foundation for Ocean Science in Plymouth, England.

"It's an indication of the speed of change that is taking place in our world in the present day because of climate change," he said in a telephone interview Friday.

Reid said the last time the world witnessed such a major incursion from the Pacific was 2 million years ago, which had "a huge impact on the North Atlantic," driving some species to extinction as the newcomers dominated the competition for food.

Reid's study of plankton and the research on the whale, co-authored by Aviad Scheinin of the Israel Marine Mammal Research and Assistance Center, are among nearly 300 scientific papers written over the last 13 years that are being synthesized and published this year by Project Clamer, a collaboration of 17 institutes on climate change and the oceans.

Changes in the oceans' chemistry and temperature could have implications for fisheries, as species migrate northward to cooler waters, said Katja Philippart, of the Royal Netherlands Institute of Sea Research who is coordinating the project funded by the European Union.

"We try to put the information on the table for people who have to make decisions. We don't say whether it's bad or good. We say there is a high potential for change," she said.

OIL

coupled with a reduction in overall U.S. oil demand, "could essentially eliminate Middle East crude imports longer term."

The U.S. imports about half its oil. The biggest foreign supplier is Canada, at 23.3 percent, followed by Venezuela at 10.7 percent. The biggest Mideast supplier is Saudi Arabia, 10.4 percent.

The report was made public ahead of President Barack Obama's meeting in February with Harper, who is urging Obama to endorse it.

Environmental groups want him to reject it, seeing it as a test of Obama's will to fight climate change.

The State Department, which must approve any pipeline entering the U.S. across an international border, has promised a decision by year's end. But Republicans on the House Energy and Commerce Committee want it by Nov. 1.

Committee chairman Fred Upton, R-Mich., said the pipeline will create at least 100,000 jobs and that the U.S. needs Canadian oil.

Michael A. Levi, the senior fellow for energy and the environment at the U.S. Council on Foreign Relations, said environmentalists are exaggerating the impact on the oil sands.

"A lot of people have been convinced that this is the cutting edge of the climate change fight," he said. "In the end this is the equivalent to half a percent of U.S. emissions."

He said the choice of pipeline was a critical decision in U.S-Canada relations and that turning down the Texas route would go over very badly in Canada.

But David Goldwyn, a former State Department energy official who left this year to work as a consultant, said he's confident the pipeline to Texas will be approved, especially considering the potential for Middle East turmoil to disrupt supplies in the future.

"I think it would be a huge waste of a great opportunity to provide supply security. We don't often get the choice of where we can get our oil from. In this case we get to choose Canada. That's an opportunity we shouldn't miss," he said in an interview.

He saw no threat from Chinese inroads into Canada because there is more than enough oil for all concerned.

By investing to boost Canadian production the Chinese "are growing the pie to meet their own demand. That's a whole lot better than mopping up supply from the existing pie and creating competition for resources," Goldwyn said.

But China would almost certainly react badly to a rebuff. Alberta Energy Minister Ron Liepert fears Chinese investment will dry up should Canada not approve a pipeline to the West Coast.

Zhang Junsai, China's ambassador to Canada, said his country is willing to invest heavily in Canada. He told The Associated Press that the fact that China's $300 billion sovereign wealth fund, China Investment Corp., chose Toronto as the venue for its first overseas office is a "very good sign." The fund invested $800 million in Calgary-based Penn West Energy last year and $1.5 billion in Canadian mining company Teck Resources in 2009.

Apart having a stake in the $5.5 billion in the Northern Gateway pipeline plan, Sinopec paid $4.6 billion for a nine percent stake in Syncrude, Canada's largest oil sands project. And in 2009 PetroChina, Asia's largest oil and gas company, bought a $1.7 billion stake in Athabasca Oil Sands Corp.

William Cohen, who was secretary of defense in the Clinton administration, said any Chinese-Canadian oil partnership must be done "with some diplomacy and care," in a way that isn't "a threat to the United States."

Canada can do whatever it wants, but "Canada knows it has a very close and vital relationship with the United States. I'm sure there will be discussions," he said in Toronto after a public debate about whether China will dominate the 21st century.

Eddie Goldenberg, chief of staff to former Prime Minister Jean Chretien, said in an interview that Canada should care less if some American officials are leery about Canada selling oil to China.

"We're not the 51st state. It's not the business of the United States to decide where Canada sells its resources," he said.

noon inside a heavily guarded federal courthouse in Boston to answer for his role in 19 murders, told a judge he could pay for a lawyer if prosecutors would give him back money seized from him.

Carmen "The Cheeseman" DiNunzio, the reputed former underboss of the New England mob, pleaded guilty to federal bribery charges and is serving a six-year federal prison sentence. Another former boss, 83-year-old Luigi "Baby Shacks" Manocchio, is locked up awaiting trial on charges he extorted thousands of dollars from strip clubs in Providence, R.I. Manocchio, who has denied the charges against him, was among 120 suspected mobsters and associates arrested in January.

Gennaro "Jerry" Angiulo, who ran the rackets for the Patriarca crime family in Boston from the 1960s to the early 1980s, died in 2009 at age 90. The site of Marshall Motors in Somerville, which served as the headquarters for the Winter Hill Gang once led by Bulger, is now a church.

"They keep chasing old men in diapers," said Rhode Island defense attorney and former Drug Enforcement Administration agent Raymond Mansolillo, who briefly represented Manocchio. "I think it's a waste of taxpayer resources."

The Italian crime operation La Cosa Nostra, however, remains the top organized crime threat in New England, said FBI supervisory senior resident agent Jeffrey S. Sallet. The Rhode Island-based Sallet heads up organized crime investigations for the FBI's Boston division.

MISSING

garbage, help me a little bit with the shopping," she said of her husband, whom she met while working in Chicago. "He changed a lot. I think he might have had some mental illness or Alzheimer's."

His mother, Dorothy, spent much of her life institutionalized because of mental health problems, said Toby Terrar, 66, a friend of the Carters who lives in Washington, D.C. and works part-time as a public defender.

"Don was what you would call a working class intellectual," Terrar said. "He grew up pretty much a poor boy."

While Marcia Cater and Terrar have a strong feeling that Donald Carter is dead (Terrar going so far as to write an obituary, which he e-mailed to the Daily Press), he is still considered missing by the Santa Monica Police Department. Detective Larry Nicols with the Cold Case Unit is investigating, but he said he has no leads to pursue and hasn't received many phone calls from friends or relatives pressing him to find the man.

"A lot of missing persons cases you go to an apartment and something's there that leads you to expect foul play or whatever," Nicols said. "In this case, nothing came up during the investigation. It wasn't like there was a hair sticking up on anyone's neck, or anything like that. It's like he went completely off the grid."

Marcia Carter said her husband loved to go hiking once a week and would typically rent a truck to bring back rocks he collected along the way. He collected many other things as well, like old telephones, tools and typewriters.

"Our apartment is full of the stuff," she said.

On the day he went missing, Marcia Carter said her husband dropped her off at the YMCA, went back home and wrote her a note saying he was going for a hike and expected to be back later that day. When he didn't return home, Marcia Carter notified police and sheriff's deputies in Santa Clarita searched an area near Warm Springs, about 11 miles east of Interstate 5, by Lake Hughes Road.

That's where deputies found Donald Carter's 1979 Honda Civic parked with no signs of foul play. After searching overnight and into the morning, deputies gave up.

Nineteen people from three different search and rescue teams, eight dogs and an aerial squad combed the area.

"We couldn't find him," Lt. Mark Hershey of the Santa Clarita Valley Sheriff's Station said at the time.

When he disappeared, Donald Carter was described as a white male, standing 5 feet, 7 inches and weighing 140 pounds. He had gray hair, brown eyes and a slight build. He was in good physical shape.

"We wasn't a drinker and never smoked," Terrar said. "He was a pretty clean liver."

Donald Carter was born on March 3, 1933 in Cincinnati, Ohio. His father was run over by a train when Donald Carter was only 3, Terrar said. Because his mother was in and out of mental institutions, he was sent to live in an orphanage. He never finished high school and would often criticize the public school system, saying it was designed to keep certain people locked into a permanent subclass.

Later in life, he would become a devout communist, Terrar said, who when not working several odd jobs as a mechanic, glass blower or machinist, would write fiction; most stories had proletarian plots where the main character rises up against the oppressive elite.

In 1972 he and his wife moved to Santa Monica where Marcia Carter was active in local politics. She worked at the Credit Bureau on Fifth Street and Arizona Avenue while Donald Carter worked at a machine shop.

The two seemed to live separate lives in recent years, Marcia Carter said. They used to travel often throughout California and into Canada, but old age put an end to that. "I can barely walk, but he could walk very fast," she said.

The two never had children.

"She made a commitment to be married to the guy for better or worse and she stuck it out," Terrar said. "I got the idea that she did not want to migrate to California in the 1960s. She came because Don was going to come with or without her.

"Marcia says he was crazy — in a clinical way. I never got that idea, but I was not living with him," Terrar added. "If Marcia is right, she was a long-suffering hero."

Toward the end, Marcia Carter said her husband spent a lot of time alone, and would often play chess by himself. She found herself relying more on friends to help her run errands. It was almost as if he disappeared long before that hike.

"I don't believe he's coming back," she said.

and Parks commissioner, helps the club with the technical aspects and used his professional expertise as a marketing consultant to create the promotional materials for the day.

He informed the assembled students, parents and officials that the event had garnered more than local attention — it had gone straight to the top.

"They are to be recognized for their environmental leadership through a commendation by the President of the United States," McKinnon announced.

The girls were shocked.

"I couldn't believe that I had something in my hands that President Obama had signed," Perelman said.

Bike It! Day evolved from humble beginnings in 2007, when it first got off the ground.

Somewhere between 80 and 100 of the 3,600 students at Samohi participated, a number which was doubled this year at Samohi alone despite lower enrollment numbers.

It was the first year that other schools have participated in the event, achieved partially through outreach to John Adams Middle School on the part of Perelman and Biren, but also as a result of an organic movement among younger children to join in on the action.

District wide, 600 kids got out of their parents' cars and onto their bicycles, with another 800 taking the bus and 500 making the effort to walk to school.

According to some analysis conducted by Advanced Placement chemistry students, a single Bike It! Day, with only the high school participants, removes thousands of pounds of carbon from the environment, massively reducing the negative impact by removing those trips to and from school from the equation.

That's in line with numbers put forth by the Environmental Protection Agency, which estimates that each mile in a car produces 19.4 pounds of carbon.

"This is one of those solutions that everyone can take part in," Biren said.

It's also one of the cheapest ways to make an impact — even with the promotional materials, food, rentals and other costs, the two or three Bike It! Days that occur every year need only $4,000 in funding from the Parent Teacher Student Association.

The girls and other members of the Solar Alliance, a popular club on campus which was originally formed to advocate for solar cells on the Drake pool at Samohi, work hard to make sure it's a solution that students want to be a part of.

It's hard to break habits ingrained over years of hopping in a car and getting to school the "easy way," so Bike It! Day comes with incentives.

All over the district, from elementary schools to Samohi, volunteers handed out stickers and Clif Bars to kids who declared themselves part of the movement, and a Bike It! Day breakfast with pastries, fruit, juice and music took over part of the Samohi campus before classes began.

A bike valet service at the high school and extra bike racks donated by City Hall made it easier for students to say "yes" to the cause.

Perelman and Biren, who will be seniors and continue their co-presidency in the next school year, hope to get a similar amount of participation in the October version of the event, which is usually easier to organize because there are fewer end of the year activities that conflict.

They also plan on starting to work with the various school site administrators much earlier to get the event off the ground with minimal stress.

The commendation, both from the board and federal government, lets them know they're on the right track, the two said.

"It confirms that what we did was worth something, that it was something exceptional," Biren said.

WET -- grades for days of recorded rainfall and the following 3 days
ns -- no sample taken

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card®is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

No wild spending tonight, Aries

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Understand the expense of not handling your anger in an acceptable fashion. You don't realize the behavior you trigger when you don't express yourself. Communication flourishes, especially about expenses, great ideas and what you have to offer. Tonight: No wild spending.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Your high energy could provoke some reactions. At the same time, you gain a sudden insight into your own actions and spending. You could be expressing some good ideas, but are others hearing you? Try another route to make your point. Tonight: As you like it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Know when to say little and listen. Friends act in the most unanticipated manner. You have a hard time sorting out what is important. You get a strong hunch as to which way to go on a key issue. Tonight: Make it OK to vanish.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You might want to juggle your schedule in order to accommodate a meeting or get-together. Evaluate what is happening with others, especially if you see that an element of confusion or the unexpected runs high. Tonight: Where the action is.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ A must appearance -- whether it is unrelated to work or not -- could be critical. Unexpected news marks your decisions. You might want to rethink a situation. Use your instincts if you have a strong feeling. Tonight: Out late.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ Keep reaching out for others. You might want to brainstorm with others for another, more effective approach on a key issue or project. Read between the lines with an unpredictable partner. Tonight: Get past rigid thinking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ You might want to do whatever is necessary to motivate a partner. This person might be stuck in rigid thinking. Once he or she gains a key insight, the situation will change, in a fashion you might not expect. Tonight: Say "yes" to an offer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Continue to defer to others. Feel no need to pursue the path you have chosen. Watch what occurs when others have a similar situation or responsibilities as you. Lying back serves you in many ways, even if you don't see it immediately. Tonight: Sort through offers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Know what your objectives are before you get started. Someone might be pushing you beyond your normal levels. Think positively about an unexpected offer. You could be quite surprised. Tonight: Call it a night when you get tired.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Creativity allows greater options and opens you up to a new idea. Listen with care to news that involves real estate, a family member or some other domestic matter. Don't shy away from asking necessary questions. Someone might not grasp what you are saying. Say it differently. Tonight: Put your feet up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ You could be a bit more feisty than you realize. You create options when you think outside the box. Although, an idea could be overwhelming to others. Find an easier way of explaining your ideas. Tonight: Happily mosey on home.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Keep conversations active. Refresh a situation with a new idea. You might be careless, as you are in your head. As a result, observe a tendency to be accident-prone. Do use good sense handling machinery or a car. Tonight: Join a friend.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS
The stars show the kind of day you'll have:

Happy birthday

This year, you might react to others and their choices often. It is also the same for others -- they will have a similar reaction to you! You often act in a quirky manner, causing a strong reaction, especially publically. You might make a swift change professionally that could draw some strong comments. Learn to express your temper in a more effective manner. Otherwise, you could have problems with authority figures. If you are single, you could meet someone through your friends. Note the amount and quality of communication around this person. If you are attached, the two of you will make some unanticipated decisions. Spend more downtime together to bond more deeply. You can count on TAURUS.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Giddyup! When a strain of equine herpes led to a temporary quarantine at horse farms in central Utah, the sponsors of the Davis County Mounted Posse Junior Queen contest in May had a dilemma, but instead of canceling the competition in which the cowgirls show their skills on horseback, they decided to conduct the show except with the girls "riding" stick "ponies" to get style points. Former queen Savanna Steed told KSL-TV the change would be good because it would better test riders' knowledge of the routines instead of their relying on their horses to make the moves.

■ Unclear on the Concept: India's Ganges River has become famously polluted, in part by reverent Hindu pilgrims who toss "offerings" (such as clothing, statues and the cremated ashes of loved ones) into it in hope of prosperous lives and holy afterlives. Hindu immigrants in New York City, without access to the Ganges, have called upon Jamaica Bay as a stand-in. The formerly quiet waters adjacent to JFK International Airport now ebb and flow with similar offerings that ultimately litter the bay's federal recreation area shoreline. Hindu community leaders in New York, with only mixed success, constantly urge greater environmental sensitivity.
