Budget, ballot measure, and parklet program on Council agenda

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

In a Tuesday night meeting, City Council prepares to pass a revised $665.3 million annual budget for Fiscal Year 2022 to 2023.

Although the budget appears large, the remainders of pandemic induced financial hardship combined with historically high inflation means that the rebound in revenue will not translate into a full restoration of City services.

Council first discussed the budget in a May 28 meeting. For the most part, recovering budget revenue streams will be allocated to needs that residents won't immediately see such as staff pay raises, the replenishing of reserves and the resumption of equipment replacement. More visible changes include funding to continue the Pier Vending Task Force for a year and limited capital improvements.

City says pause in PS3 demolition unrelated to neighbor complaints

EMILY SAWICKI
SMDP Staff Writer

The ongoing demolition of Parking Structure 3, which has accelerated over the past month after a slow start in the first half of the year, has been on a short pause over the past week while demolition crews await delivery of necessary equipment. But speculation that workers hit the brakes on the project due to the complaints of John Alle, a vocal opponent to the project, were unfounded, according to a statement provided by the City.

"The City of Santa Monica's Public Works team shared that construction at Parking Structure 3 has been paused while the contractor repairs demolition equipment and awaits the delivery of a new part," Santa Monica spokesperson Miranda Iglesias wrote in an email to the Daily Press on Monday, June 27. "The contractor plans to install the new part by tomorrow and demolition activities at Parking Structure 3 will resume on Wednesday, June 29."

Last Tuesday, June 21, an attorney representing Alle, a local property owner, wrote a letter to the City demanding demolition be paused due to what he claimed was dangerous cement dust. According to a copy of the letter shared with the Daily Press, Alle and his attorney, Pantea Yashar of Ervin Cohen & Jessup LLP, sent a similar demand a week earlier on June 13.

Metros with the most mortgage-burdened homeowners

DOM DIFURIO
Special to the Daily Press

Roughly half of all Americans agree a lack of affordable housing in their city is a major problem, according to a 2021 Pew Research Center survey. Pew also found a proportion of Americans concerned about dwindling housing affordability has grown in recent years—and for good reason.

Knowing this, Stacker analyzed U.S Census Bureau data to find where homeowners are spending the largest share of their income on mortgage payments. To be included, each metropolitan area had to have at least 100,000 mortgage holders in 2020, the latest data available.

Residents of some of the most populous metro areas in the U.S. are feeling the squeeze in their mortgage payments as home values continue to grow nationwide. For decades experts have used the same tried and true measure for housing affordability—when a person keeps their housing expenses within 30% of their annual income, it allows for spending on life's other necessities, such as food, transportation, and health care.

Analyzing how many homeowners are contributing more than 30% of their income to mortgage payments in any given metro can paint a picture of how financially stretched thin a population is. Experts call these homeowners "mortgage-burdened." Almost 49 million Americans have mortgages, and around 27% of them are considered mortgage-burdened, according to the most recent Census data available.

Stacker found metro areas in California ultimately topped the list of places with the most mortgage-burdened homeowners. The Golden State has become notorious for an affordable housing shortage, though metros in several other states also rose to the top of the rankings. Continue reading to see if your metro made the list.

#10. POUGHKEEPSIE, NEW YORK

- Total mortgage holders: 107,363
- Share that are mortgage burdened: 35.2%

Housing prices in Poughkeepsie have been rising steadily as the city situated on the bank of the Hudson River just north of New York City has gone through a revival of sorts in recent years. Victorian-style houses have been bought up and renovated, historic railroad infrastructure turned into tourist destinations, and sprawling parking lots have been cleared and replaced with multifamily apartment complexes.

The typical person living in Poughkeepsie earns around $47,000 per year, according to Census data. Meanwhile, the median sale price of a home in the city is $333,000, according to data from Realtor.com.

#9. STAMFORD, CONNECTICUT

- Total mortgage holders: 158,763
- Share that are mortgage burdened: 35.3%

Like Poughkeepsie, Stamford's proximity to New York has made it a magnet for wealthy individuals looking to move out of the crowded city. Stamford is considered part of the wealthy, majority white metro area that also includes the neighboring cities of Bridgeport, Norwalk, and Danbury, also known as Connecticut's "Gold Coast."

Between 2010 and 2020, Stamford's population grew its fastest since the mid-1900s, adding more than 10,000 residents. It's home to several Fortune 500 companies, including Charter Communications, United Rentals, and Indeed. The median income in Stamford is nearly $97,000 annually, per the most recent Census data, and the typical home in the metro area lists for $600,000, according to Realtor.com data.

#8. SAN FRANCISCO

- Total mortgage holders: 664,099
- Share that are mortgage burdened: 35.4%

More than a third of homeowners in many of California's most populous metros are considered mortgage-burdened, and homeowners in San Francisco must accept some of the most expensive real estate prices in the entire U.S. California's so-called Bay Area includes San Francisco, Oakland, and San Jose. It is home to an exceptionally wealthy tranche of Americans due to the concentration of high-paying tech jobs in the region.

The median annual income in San Francisco County in 2020 was nearly $120,000, and in San Jose, it's $117,000, according to Census data. Despite higher incomes, sky-high home values in the Bay Area still ensure that mortgage payments make up an outsized portion of residents' financial obligations each year.

#7. HONOLULU

- Total mortgage holders: 120,650
- Share that are mortgage burdened: 37.8%

In Honolulu, a greater share of homeowners are mortgage-burdened than even San Francisco. Faced with steep declines in tourism revenues, Hawaii's own government as well as local business CEOs worked to attract remote workers during the COVID-19 pandemic—a move that could have a lasting impact on the Aloha State's housing affordability.

In the capital city on the island of Oahu's south shore, the typical household earns around $87,000 annually and the median home is listed for $700,000, according to Realtor.com data. Experts in Hawaii have advocated that the rising cost of everything, housing included, has only lent more ammunition to the argument that the island state needs more affordable housing.

#6. NEW YORK

- Total mortgage holders: 2,298,350
- Share that are mortgage burdened: 38.1%

Most might figure New York City to be the most unaffordable place one could own a home in the U.S.—and its proportion of mortgage-burdened homeowners is high. The median home in New York is selling for $860,000 today, according to Realtor.com data. The city suffers from an acute shortage of housing, placing upward pressure on rental costs as well as mortgages. As housing costs are hitting all-time highs, elected officials are facing immense pressure to alleviate the shortage.

#5. RIVERSIDE, CALIFORNIA

- Total mortgage holders: 621,258
- Share that are mortgage burdened: 38.1%

Riverside sits an hour's drive east of Los Angeles and is part of the metro area known as the Inland Empire. Home prices in Riverside have nearly tripled in the last two decades. Some experts have suggested the growing remote work trend is pushing more workers to purchase homes in less population-dense portions of the state.

Each square mile of LA, on average, is home to more than 8,000 people. That level of density is much higher than in Riverside, where each square mile is home to around 300 people, according to Census data. The typical home in Riverside sells for around $625,000, according to Realtor.com, with Census data showing the median household income to be $70,000 annually.

#4. SAN DIEGO

- Total mortgage holders: 434,507
- Share that are mortgage burdened: 38.5%

San Diego Mayor Todd Gloria began an effort in March 2022 to spur new home building with the hopes of alleviating the shortage currently driving up housing costs for residents. The city boasts much of the same natural, oceanside beauty offered by LA but is about half as densely populated, according to Census data.

Real estate analysts who have watched locals leave the city in recent years for cheaper housing elsewhere argue wages haven't caught up with the San Diego area's high cost of living. The typical household in San Diego earns around $83,000 per year, and the median home sold for $911,000, per Realtor.com.

#3. OXNARD, CALIFORNIA

- Total mortgage holders: 122,724
- Share that are mortgage burdened: 38.8%

Oxnard, the childhood home of farm labor activist Cesar Chavez and training camp site for the NFL's Dallas Cowboys, sits one hour northwest of downtown LA. Oxnard is considered part of the metro area that includes Thousand Oaks and Ventura.

The region's economy is dependent on agriculture, manufacturing, tourism, and increasingly, the financial and tech sectors. The median household earns $77,000 per year, and the typical home in Oxnard sells for $760,000, according to Realtor.com.

#2. MIAMI

- Total mortgage holders: 760,044
- Share that are mortgage burdened: 40.4%

The coastal oasis of Miami is one of the country's least-affordable cities. It's even more densely populated than LA, and the Miami Herald's editorial board has moved from describing the lack of affordable housing in the metro area as a problem to dubbing it a full-blown "crisis."

Miami-Dade County itself officially declared a housing emergency in early 2022. Programs intended to spur the building of more affordable housing have been inadequate in remedying the situation over the last decade, according to The Herald. At roughly $44,000 per year, the median household income in Miami is staggeringly low compared to South Florida's housing costs. The typical home in Miami sells for $500,000, according to Realtor.com.

#1. LOS ANGELES

- Total mortgage holders: 1,498,220
- Share that are mortgage burdened: 41.8%

Rounding out the most unaffordable places to live is Los Angeles—easily the poster child for frighteningly high housing costs and homeless working people in the U.S. In LA, the typical household brings home $65,000 annually, according to Census data. Meanwhile, Realtor.com data shows the typical home sells for $1 million.

Los Angeles County, like other counties in California, has actually seen its population decline since the start of the pandemic. Experts say residents are being driven out, in part, by a need to find cheaper housing. And forget affordable homes for sale in LA — the Los Angeles Times has dubbed even finding a place to rent a "competitive sport" in today's economy.

Supreme Court's abortion ruling sets off new court fights

KEVIN MCGILL, AMY FORLITI AND GEOFF MULVIHILL
Associated Press

The fall of Roe v. Wade shifted the battleground over abortion to courthouses around the country Monday, as one side sought quickly to put statewide bans into effect and the other tried to stop or at least delay such measures.

The U.S. Supreme Court's decision Friday to end constitutional protection for abortion opened the gates for a wave of litigation from all sides.

Many of the court cases will focus on "trigger laws," adopted in 13 states in anticipation of the ruling and designed to take effect swiftly. Lawsuits could also target old anti-abortion laws that were left on the books and went unenforced under Roe. Newer abortion restrictions that were put on hold pending the Supreme Court ruling have also started to come back into play.

"We'll be back in court tomorrow and the next day and the next day," Nancy Northup, president and CEO of the Center for Reproductive Rights, which argued the case that resulted in the high court ruling, said Friday.

> "We'll be back in court tomorrow and the next day and the next day - Nancy Northup"

In Louisiana on Monday, a judge in New Orleans, a liberal city in a conservative state, temporarily blocked enforcement of the state's trigger-law ban on abortion, after abortion rights activists argued that it is unclear. The ruling is in effect pending a July 8 hearing.

At least one of the state's three abortion clinics said it would resume performing procedures on Tuesday.

"We're going to do what we can," said Kathaleen Pittman, administrator of Hope Medical Group for Women, in Shreveport. "It could all come to a screeching halt."

Also Monday, abortion rights advocates asked a Florida judge to block a new law there that bans the procedure after 15 weeks with some exceptions and is set to take effect this week.

The American Civil Liberties Union of Arizona and an abortion-rights group filed an emergency motion Saturday seeking to block a 2021 law they worry can be used to halt all abortions. Planned Parenthood in Utah has challenged a trigger law there that contains narrow exceptions.

Brigitte Amiri, deputy director of the American Civil Liberties Union's Reproductive Freedom Project, said the organization is looking at "all options" to protect access to abortion.

As of Saturday, abortion services had stopped in at least 11 states — either because of state laws or confusion over them.

In some cases, the lawsuits may only buy time. Even if courts block some restrictions from taking hold, lawmakers in many conservative states could move quickly to address any flaws cited.

That's likely to be the case in Louisiana. The plaintiffs in the lawsuit filed in state court don't deny that the state can now ban abortion. Instead, they contend Louisiana now has multiple, conflicting trigger mechanisms in the law.

They also argue that state law is unclear on whether it bans an abortion prior to a fertilized egg implanting in the uterus. And while the law provides an exception for "medically futile" pregnancies in cases of fetuses with lethal abnormalities, the plaintiffs noted the law gives no definition of the term.

Around the country, challenges to other trigger laws could be made on the grounds that the conditions to impose the bans have not been met, or that it was improper for a past legislature to bind the current one.

Laura Herner, a professor at Mitchell Hamline School of Law in St. Paul, Minnesota, said other challenges might call into question whether state laws sufficiently and clearly allow for exceptions to protect the life or health of a pregnant woman.

Now that the high court has ruled that the U.S. Constitution does not guarantee the right to an abortion, abortion rights supporters will make the case that their state constitutions protect such a right.

A judge heard arguments on that issue Monday in Florida, where attorneys sought an emergency injunction to stop a new law from going into effect Friday. The ban beyond 15 weeks has exceptions to save the pregnant woman's life or prevent physical harm or in cases where the fetus has a fatal abnormality. The ACLU of Florida has argued it violates the Florida Constitution.

In a separate lawsuit filed by a Jewish congregation in Florida, arguments over religious liberty and the separation of church and state will come into play.

Still other cases could be filed as states try to sort out whether abortion bans in place before Roe was decided — sometimes referred to as "zombie laws" — apply now that there is no federal protection for abortion.

For instance, Wisconsin passed a law in 1849 banning abortions except to save the life of the mother. Attorney General Josh Kaul, a Democrat, said he does not believe it is enforceable. Abortion opponents have called on lawmakers to impose a new ban.

In the meantime, Planned Parenthood of Wisconsin said it immediately suspended all abortions, though the district attorneys in Madison and Milwaukee have suggested that they would not enforce the ban.

Average US gasoline price drops 4 cents to $5.05 per gallon

The average U.S. price of regular-grade gasoline fell by 4 cents per gallon in the past two weeks to $5.05 for regular grade, it was reported Sunday.

It was the first drop in nine weeks and came with a drop in oil prices amid deepening global inflation fears, industry analyst Trilby Lundberg said.

"As lower gasoline prices make their way through distribution to retail, consumers will likely see further declines in coming days," Lundberg said.

The average price at the pump as of Friday was still $1.90 higher than it was one year ago.

Nationwide, the highest average price for regular-grade gas was in the San Francisco Bay Area, at $6.39 per gallon. The lowest average was in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, at $4.39 per gallon.

According to the survey, the average price of diesel rose 3 cents to $5.89 a gallon.

Big landowner closing California forests due to fire danger

Swaths of private California forestlands will be closed to the public starting this week due to extreme drought and risk of wildfires, the owner announced.

Sierra Pacific Industries said the closure will take effect July 1 and will remain in effect until further notice.

The huge lumber manufacturer owns more than 2.3 million acres of forests in California, Oregon and Washington.

The company normally allows the public access to its lands for recreational purposes in areas that are not actively being logged.

"Despite some of the late spring rains, California is experiencing the driest conditions it has had in 1200 years," spokesperson Andrea Howell said in a press release Friday.

Sierra Pacific said it will regularly evaluate the situation but anticipates the closure will remain in effect until fall.

The company closed its California forestlands last year from late June until early October..

Russian superyacht seized by US arrives in San Diego Bay

A $325 million superyacht seized by the United States from a sanctioned Russian oligarch arrived in San Diego Bay on Monday.

The 348-foot-long Amadea flew an American flag as it sailed past the retired aircraft carrier USS Midway and under the Coronado Bridge.

"After a transpacific journey of over 5,000 miles, the Amadea has safely docked in a port within the United States, and will remain in the custody of the U.S. government, pending its anticipated forfeiture and sale," the Department of Justice said in a statement.

The FBI linked the Amadea to the Russian oligarch Suleiman Kerimov, and the vessel became a target of Task Force KleptoCapture, launched in March to seize the assets of Russian oligarchs to put pressure on Russia to end the war in Ukraine.

The U.S. said Kerimov secretly bought the vessel last year through various shell companies.

The U.S. won a legal battle in Fiji to take the Cayman Islands-flagged superyacht earlier this month. The Amadea made a stop in Honolulu Harbor en route to the U.S. mainland.

"The successful seizure and transport of Amadea would not have been possible without extraordinary cooperation from our foreign partners in the global effort to enforce U.S. sanctions imposed in response to Russia's unprovoked and unjustified war in Ukraine," the Justice Department said.

Police: Man arrested with semi-automatic rifle at pizzeria

Authorities say a 20-year-old man was arrested after stealing food while carrying a handgun and a semi-automatic rifle at a Southern California pizza restaurant.

Police in Ontario, Calif. said in a statement that officers received a call Sunday about a man at a Little Caesars location displaying a firearm in the waistband of his pants.

Once officers arrived at the restaurant, the man went outside with stolen food and a large rifle seen under his shirt, the statement said.

Officers used a stun gun on the man after he refused to put his hands up, and arrested him, police said.

He was found carrying an AR-15-style rifle and a handgun and is being investigated for robbery and weapons charges, the police statement said.

Ontario is 40 miles east of Los Angeles.

COUNCIL

Other needs such as funding more affordable housing, restoring hours at the library, and hiring more public safety personnel remain unfunded.

The revised budget does reflect an additional $533,000 in expenditures, of which $400,000 will go to restoring supervised after school playtime programs at the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District's seven elementary schools. This was a priority highlighted by Councilmembers in the initial budget discussion.

This increase in expenditures will be funded in part by revenues from a new parklet program that is also on Tuesday's agenda. This parklet program will charge restaurants to rent parking spots and continue the popular outdoor dining spaces that have been provided on a free pilot basis since the start of the pandemic.

The parklet program is scheduled to begin on October 1 and estimated to generate approximately $241,600 in licensing and inspection fees for the City.

While this revenue boost will be very welcome, it is only a drop in the bucket compared to what the City needs to restore services to pre-pandemic levels.

In an effort to speed up the rate at which revenue grows, the City Council is considering placing several tax measures on the November ballot. Two of these potential measures are the pet project of specific Councilmembers, while the third is a staff suggestion.

The staff suggested measure—an increase in Transient Occupancy Tax—is on the Tuesday agenda for Council approval. The measure would increase TOT by one percent for hotels and three percent for home shares.

As a result, Santa Monica would have a 15 percent hotel TOT and a 17 percent homeshare TOT. If passed by voters, the City would have some of the highest TOT rates in the state, but would not be out of the range of rates in other major tourist destinations.

The measure would provide an estimated $4.1 million in annual revenue. Staff suggest this money be allocated towards expansion of the police department's Homeless Liaison Program and Downtown Services Unit; expansion of the City's homeless multidisciplinary outreach teams; and expansion of service hours at the SAMOSHEL homeless shelter.

There's also a request to study Santa Monica's history on the agenda.

Councilmembers Phil Brock, Oscar de la Torre and Christine Parra are asking for $10,000 to have the City Attorney's office conduct a legal review of an 1888 document establishing the rights of disabled veterans to access the coast.

Arcadia Bandini was a wealthy landowner and socialite who helped found Santa Monica with several land donations. She is also responsible for deeding 300 acres of land for a "soldiers home" in what became West L.A. and the request to Council this week is to determine if requirements for veteran services were also part of the donations to what became Santa Monica.

The request for action in the agenda includes

"Assess the need to issue an RFP to create a green, sustainable, complex for Veterans on the designated site or assess how funds generated from these properties might support much-needed services for our unhoused disabled veterans."

The meeting will begin with closed session at 5:30 p.m. and can be streamed live at https://www.youtube.com/user/Citytv16santamonica.

challenged a 1931 abortion ban ahead of last week's Supreme Court ruling. In May, a judge said the ban could not be enforced because it violates the state's constitution. Abortion rights supporters are now trying to get a proposed state constitutional amendment on the ballot in November to protect abortion and birth control.

Idaho, Oklahoma and Texas have adopted laws that allow people to seek bounties against those who help others get abortions. It is an open question as to whether that means people can be pursued across state lines, and legal challenges over those issues are likely to come up in cases of both surgical abortions and those using medicine mailed to patients.

The California Legislature, controlled by Democrats, passed a bill Thursday to shield abortion providers and volunteers in the state from civil judgments imposed by other states. In liberal Massachusetts, Gov. Charlie Baker, a Republican, signed an executive order Friday that prohibits state agencies from assisting other states' investigations into anyone who receives a legal abortion in Massachusetts.

The challenge filed in Arizona, where most providers stopped offering abortions, said the legal questions are urgent.

Even if abortions resume in weeks or months, the plaintiffs said, "patients may be at greater risk of medical complications or may lose access to abortion altogether as a result of the delay."

Forliti reported from Minneapolis and Mulvihill from Cherry Hill, New Jersey. Associated Press writers Anthony Izaguirre in Tallahassee, Florida; Scott Bauer in Madison, Wisconsin; Kate Brumback in Atlanta; Steve LeBlanc in Boston and Don Thompson in Sacramento, California, contributed to this report.

to catch the cement dust and other harmful particles that are being emitted in the air during the process," the letter stated.

Later in the letter, Yashar seemed to threaten a lawsuit against the City.

"This is an immediate and significant health hazard, and is causing ongoing damage to the HVAC systems and roofs of nearby property owners," the letter claimed. "My client is in the process of producing air quality tests and expert statements confirming the harm from the City's negligence in tarping Parking Garage 3 during demolition. The City must act swiftly and safely, or Mr. Alle will have no choice but to seek legal redress."

Within days, demolition had paused, leading to speculation that the City was acquiescing to Alle's latest demands to halt the project, which he has opposed since its inception. However, according to the City, that is not the case and asbestos abatement had been completed before demolition began more than three months earlier.

"Prior to the start of demolition in March 2022, asbestos abatement was completed by a third party contractor," Iglesias wrote.

The demolition of Parking Structure 3 (PS3), located on 4th Street between Santa Monica Boulevard and Arizona Avenue, began in March following a failed legal effort on the part of Alle and fellow neighboring property owners to stop the project. Since 2018, the City has been working on a plan to demolish the 50-year-old parking garage and replace it with a multi-level affordable housing project, which would include ground floor retail and subterranean parking.

Chandler Braxton

PS3: The demolition has paused for a few days while construction workers await a new part for their equipment.

Alle's final effort to stop demolition was thrown out on June 2, when a trio of Appellate Court Justices granted defendants the City of Santa Monica and California Coastal Commission's motion to dismiss that case.

Eleven days later, Alle and his legal team began contacting the City seeking to halt demolition, which by that point had already resulted in the majority of the structure being razed.

Pet of the Week

Treena

Martin Hernandez

PET: Treena is available for adoption.

Hi, I'm Treena ID# A062649! A 5-year-old female Cane Corso! You might know me as that legs for days beauty who struts it on leash like I'm burning the runways at Paris fashion week! A head turner for my exquisite physique and my seductive bedroom eyes, it's both my finesse when beckoning for attention, and the enchanting way I invite people to play that captures even the most apprehensive at heart. Still, in maintaining my Diva status, while long walks, sitting on cue, and running were among my gifts in my hay day, these days I take a hard pass. My hips don't lie, and in their dysplasia, they squeak "full replacement needed!" Behold my magnetism, to know me is to adore me! For those that can handle all 140 lbs. of me, and don't mind managing these old hips (or trading them in, but I'm not picky), there is plenty of tender love and majestic times to be had with me basking in the sun, taking slow strolls, and enjoying gentle play. Slobbery kisses not excluded! Located in Santa Monica at 1640 9th Street, adoptions at Santa Monica Animal Shelter are by appointment only by calling 310.458.8595, Tuesday through Saturday, between 8 AM and 5 PM.

PET TIP OF THE WEEK: TEACHING DOGS THE ABC'S AND 123'S

For dogs, skills in basic obedience cues are their ABC's and 123's. It enables them to reliably respond to cues, most commonly verbal, to perform specific actions like sit, stay, come, and leave-it. While these skills alone do not make for a well-adjusted dog, they play a vital role in behavior training as they are the fundamentals necessary to actualize manners and coping mechanisms.

Preparation is key in training obedience cues! Your dog must be healthy, and should be tired enough to manage their adrenaline, but not too tired to participate. To keep your dog motivated, determine, and use their preferred high value rewards like training treats or toys. If they are treats, your dog should be hungry, but not ravenous.

Training sessions should always be conducive to keeping your dog under their learning threshold. The level of difficulty should be easy enough for them to participate and challenging enough for them to learn. But not too difficult that they are unable to respond reliably (if at all), which may cause their proficiency to decline, and negatively impact their enthusiasm for training sessions because they are overwhelmed. Choose an environment with little, to no distractions. Practice no more than 10 to 15 minutes a day, up to 3 times a day. Make any adjustments as needed according to their learning threshold. Teach each type of cue separately.

To begin, your dog must first understand the action of the cue, and how to perform it. Without saying a word, guide your dog into the position by luring them with their high value reward. Once they perform the action, immediately capture it by giving them verbal praise like "yes," or "good," and give them the reward you lured them with. This will demonstrate to your dog that they earned the reward because they performed the action.

When your dog can perform the action 90% of the time during all training sessions, add your verbal cue. Always use the same word for each specific action. When your dog becomes fluent with the verbal cue 90% of the time during all training sessions, cognizant of their learning threshold, begin to generalize your sessions by having your dog perform the cue with different levels of distractions, in different environments, with different people, and real-life events outside of their training sessions.

Wean off high value rewards and their frequency to avoid your dog demanding a bribe. Use high value rewards frequently when your dog has little, to no proficiency. Downgrade the rewards and use them intermittently as their proficiency increases considerably and consistently. Then infrequently when they can perform the cues automatically. But always praise lavishly!

Some cues may be harder for your dog to learn and for you to teach because the progression of training cues from low to high distractions creates variables that may feel complicated. Or the demands of the cue may be comprehensive and may require a high-level impulse control from your dog that they do not yet have. Typically, these cues include your dog being able to leave something very exciting alone (leave-it), recalling your dog from a long distance when they are having fun (come), or letting go of something in their mouth that they love (drop-it). In these situations, the guidance of a qualified dog behavior professional can custom fit a training plan that will meet your dog's learning needs, create a curriculum that you can follow confidently, and implement regularly.

Be patient! There is no standard for when or how long it will take for your dog to acquire their ABC's and 123's. This is determined by how they learn, your ability to recognize and address it, and keeping training positive, motivating, rewarding, and consistent. To maintain your dog's proficiency over time, always use their obedience cues in their everyday lives, and offer intermittent training sessions throughout their lives.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (June 28)

Once you set your intention, your story flows with all the qualities you value in a good tale: continuity, style, poetry and fascinating characters entangled in interesting ways with you at the center of it all. Other highlights: the relief of an obligation fulfilled, and the unlikely turn that has you driving a foreign vehicle. Capricorn and Sagittarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 14, 6, 9, 3 and 12.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). It takes an amazingly long time to complete a project you happen to be ignoring. Once you get busy on it, the energy will come. If you decide it's not for you, this will also free up energy. It's the in-between that drains.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Strange visions will unfold as you sleep, but the best ones happen while you're awake. Sharing dreams of either sort can be tricky. Telling a journal or no one at all will be better than risking invalidation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). It takes time and conscious effort to cultivate a support system, but it's well worth the work. It's not that you need the fellowship of encouraging people to survive, but you certainly need it to thrive.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). People who want your attention and other precious resources you possess may try to convince you that you owe them. False. You get to choose how you engage with the world, which includes the choice not to engage at all.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Relationships get complicated, probably because they also get honest. You don't have to sort through it all in one night. It's better to act reasonably than to react emotionally. Let new information sink in over the next three days.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Just because you can solve what the others can't doesn't mean you should, at least not right away. Hold back for a minute. Pay attention to the power dynamics. This solution of yours is an ace up the sleeve.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Whether you're stuck in a rut or a trap, the answer is the same: wiggle. Wiggling will either show you where you're pinned or liberate you without you even needing to know. Move however you can; you'll get free.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You'll admit what you don't know and as a result become educated, leaving those who think they already know everything at a disadvantage. The intellectual delight of expertise is only made possible through humility.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). The mind doesn't generate every idea. It gets many of them from the voice and the body. You often don't know what you think until you start communicating. Your next good idea will be born in a conversation or journal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). It takes time to save time. The moments you spend prioritizing and ordering your efforts will ultimately give you back an hour or two. Efficiency is your strength and may soon be your wealth.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Ideally, the answers you seek will connect you with a power source that is already inside you. Beware of those who would rather you believe that answers can only be found through them, as this is the red flag of controlling people.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). A book can't change the world. It's a lump of paper and ink that can't even pour you a cup of coffee. But a person who acts on an idea can change everything. The concepts need you. You'll serve them well today.
