SPECIAL OLYMPICS HOST SEE PAGE 6

Rick Cole takes his seat at City Hall

NEW CITY MANAGER RICK COLE is officially on the job in Santa Monica. The Daily Press spoke with Cole about his priorities, goals and plans.

DP:
What projects, topics, or ideas do you hope to embark on that are not already under way in the City?

Cole:
In addition to pursuing the City's ambitious policy goals and capital construction projects already under way, as the new City Manager I want to establish a few key strategic initiatives. Some may be new, some may simply be elevated in priority. I think the best way to do that, however, is not to start the job with preconceptions, but to spend the first weeks observing and listening - both out in the community and inside the city organization. Then I'm committed to sit down with the City Council, probably in a retreat format — which will, of course, be a public session. I want to work collaboratively with the Council to establish the City's most important priorities. Some I will take personal leadership on, others will naturally fall to others in the organization to champion.

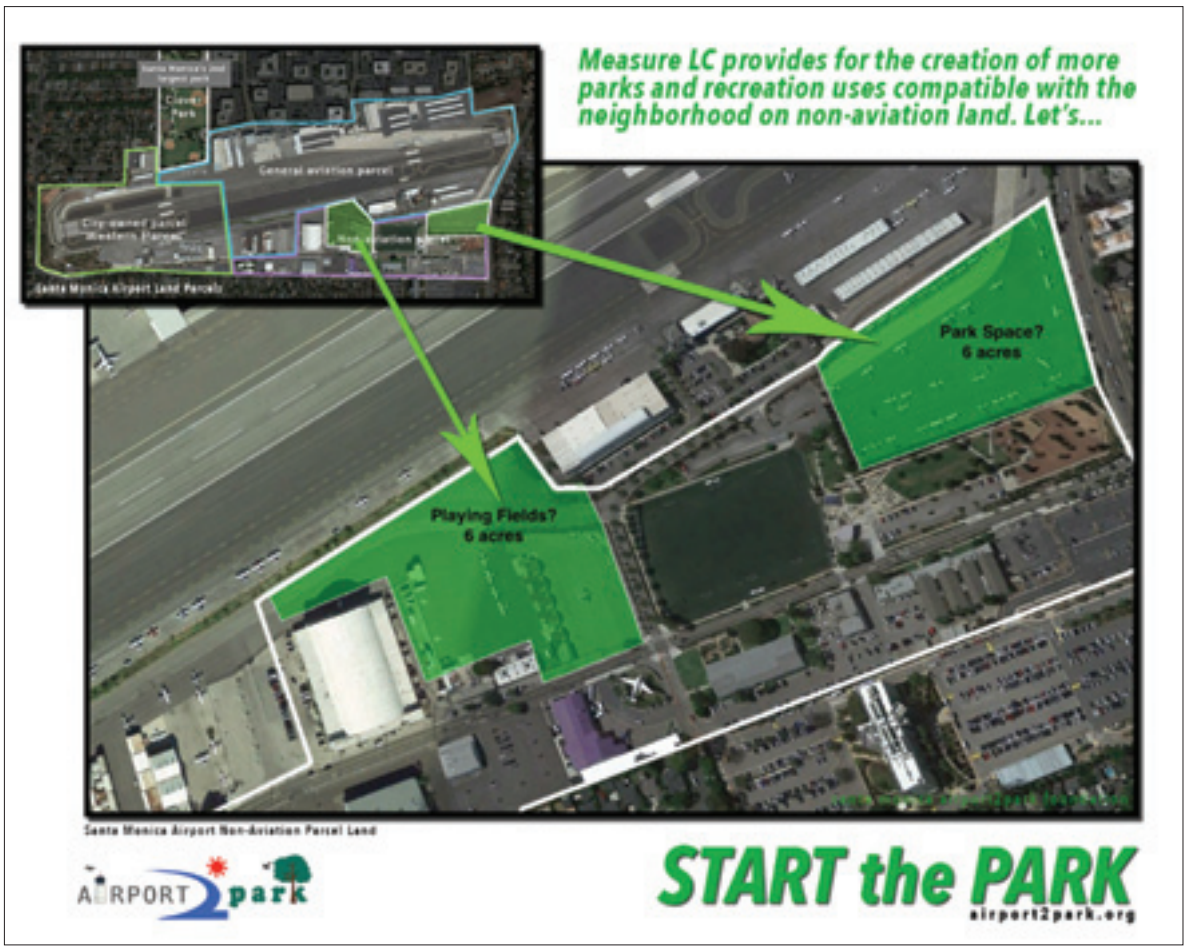

DP:
What will be the largest immediate challenge?

Cole:
I think it is pent-up energy to address a number of issues. Naturally after a long-term city manager retires and there is an interim period prior to a successor coming on board, the Council, the community and the staff are anxious to move forward on various concerns that they may feel need

SMO UPDATE:

Subtle changes as key agreement expires

PARK?: July 1 is an important date for anti-airport activists who hope to convert part of the property into a park.

BY DAVID MARK SIMPSON
Daily Press Staff Writer

SMO This is the way a key agreement over the future of the airport ends: Not with a bang but a barbeque.

On Wednesday, a key agreement between the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) and City Hall that dictates control over the Santa Monica Airport expires. Opponents of the airport have had the date circled on their calendars for years but don't expect empty skies on July 1.

Airport Commissioners had talked about shortening the runway with the coming of the expiration, or banning aviation tenants from airport land.

City attorneys warned, however, that this would invite litigation and City Council has opted for a measured approach.

Airport2Park, an organization whose goal is apparent in its name, is hosting a State of the Park barbeque from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Airport Park.

"There will be a barbeque and games for the entire family," Airport2Park Foundation President Neil Carrey said in a release. "We'd like everyone who wants to see the asphalt turned into green space to come along, and we hope all the members of the City Council who helped make this possible will join us too. We're looking to see the planes removed and work begun on the park as soon as possible."

In May, Councilmember Terry O'Day suggested that council review ways to reduce emissions at the airport.

The Airport Commission had previously recommended the passage of an ordinance that would ban models of aircraft that emit above a certain amount of pollution. Attorneys warned that this too would invite litigation.

"I'd like to offer a motion that we direct staff to, not regulate, as I think we heard that word come out earlier, but to consider strategies as an operator to reduce the air pollution from our airport," O'Day said in May. "Those strategies ought to be practical and we ought to look to examples in our community like some of the ones that we've heard

Feeding the homeless is a sweet act

Local candy company, theater center partner to support OPCC

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

MAIN ST. Apparently, once you p.o.p., you can't stop looking for ways to make a difference.

A local candy company is partnering with a Santa Monica performing arts organization to help feed hundreds of people in need every day.

The toffee treats that p.o.p. candy co. makes in small batches will soon be sold at Edgemar Center for the Arts on Main Street, and half of the proceeds will be donated to OPCC's food program.

"We've always wanted to contribute to a charity and give back to the community," said Bill Waiste, who founded the candy company eight years ago with his now-wife, Rachel Flores. "But we've never been able to do it in a way that we thought was meaningful."

That changed after Waiste started donating his company's treats to Samoshel, an OPCC-run homeless shelter, to boost the spirits of the clients.

He was inspired to learn more about the nonprofit agency, which provides food, housing and social services to homeless people, domestic violence victims, addicts, veterans and at-risk youth. So he met with officials and toured facilities, including a center for homeless women with developmental disabilities.

Waiste was particularly fascinated by the demand on the organization's food services. According to officials, OPCC serves more than 3,570 meals per week on a budget of about $2,300. That's

Santa Monica College's Hallmark Black Collegians Program Turns 25

1989 marked the beginning of the end of apartheid in South Africa, and at Santa Monica College, other revolutionary things were happening. The idea of a special program was born, which would provide smaller classes taught by phenomenal instructors with a focus on African-American culture where possible. This would be backed up by a "tough love" support system to empower students while pushing them to grow. That program - called Black Collegians - turns 25 this year.

Haley Coleman moved from Temecula to attend SMC two years ago. The self-confessed "shy, small-town girl" has morphed into a confident student leader who organizes campus events as president of the Black Collegians student club, and has attended intense summer research residencies at Loyola Marymount University and UCLA with other SMC students. She plans on a career in film and television, and is transferring from SMC to the University of Southern California this fall as a communication major.

"I don't know where I would be without Black Collegians," says Coleman, recalling how counselors would push her "just at the right time," seeing her as a leader when she herself did not, and how Black Collegians faculty leader Sherri Bradford became "Mama B": a mom away from home.

"We are the second family, the mentors, the mothers, the fathers, the sisters," says Bradford. "There is a support system waiting for you when you get here."

English professor Wilfred Doucet echoes Bradford's sentiment.

"I know it's true here at SMC from direct experience," says Doucet who teaches English classes set aside for students enrolled in the Black Collegians program. What he does in these classes is the same thing he does in all his classes: prepare his students so that they will not be overwhelmed when they transfer to a four-year college or university.

The only difference is something he calls "cultural familiarity," ensuring that the students in the program - who are largely African-American - find themselves represented in the material.

Muriel Walker Waugh is a chemistry professor at SMC who teaches Black Collegians classes and also for the SMC Science and Research Initiative's STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Math) program. This spring, she helped organize a number of weekend "boot camps" where Black Collegians and other students spend all day going over math and chemistry skills so that they can have a higher chance of succeeding in her introductory general chemistry class.

"I'm an African-American female from Southern Shreveport, Louisiana... I had to teach myself," says Waugh. "If I can do it, you can do it."

Aurelia Rhymer is a Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics (STEM) major at SMC majoring in biology - she wants to be a pediatrician.

"This is where I grew up," says Rhymer. Growing up meant starting over with prerequisites like precalculus and getting a "reality check" from professors who reminded her that she was now a college student who needed to be an adult and ask for help if it was needed.

"I grew emotionally and personally," Rhymer adds. "I was too proud to ask for help but I knew that I needed to find a program to help me succeed." That's why she joined Black Collegians, which led her to join the STEM program and become a leader in the Black Collegians club.

Rhymer was recently selected by the SMC Foundation to serve an eight-week Dale Ride Internship in Washington, D.C. this summer at the office of Congresswoman Janice Hahn, U.S. Representative from California's 44th congressional district, and also at international humanitarian agency CARE (Cooperative for Assistance and Relief Everywhere) USA.

Rhymer has some advice for fellow students who may think themselves incapable of fulfilling their dreams.

"First, don't give up. Just because you suck at certain things doesn't mean you can't do whatever it is," she says, offering her struggle with and conquest of math as an example. "Everyone struggles...work harder and build a community for yourself."

To find out more about the Black Collegians program at SMC, contact Sherri Bradford at Bradford_Sherri@smc.edu or call (310) 434-3635. Details are also available at www.smc.edu/studentservices/blackcollegians.

What's the Point?

David Pisarra — Send comments to editor@smdp.com

One man's courage is now the majority

SPRING 1995, I'M WRITING AN ARTICLE for my law school's Law Review — "Same-Sex Marriage Makes It To The Altar — Who's Got The License?" I laid out a constitutional argument for what was then a novel idea. Hawaii was on the verge of being the first state in the nation to allow gays and lesbians to marry. It was killed by the religious right — mostly the Mormons who have a strong foothold in Hawaii.

February 24, 2004 — I write for the Santa Monica Daily Press — One Man's Courage Could Become The Majority. San Francisco Mayor Gavin Newsom instructed the City Clerk to begin issuing marriage licenses to the gay and lesbian couples who apply for them. There's a Gold Rush of men and women who flock to San Francisco City Hall wishing to solemnize their love.

The actions taken by then Mayor Newsom are the spark that brought us through a rollercoaster ride of emotions in California. We had gay marriage, then we didn't, now we do. And we led the country in an awakening.

Yes other states accomplished this civil rights landmark before us, but that was a reaction to what was started here.

Before Newsom there was Harvey Milk. He led protests and demanded equality.

Before Harvey Milk there was Harry Hay and Frank Kameny. They led protests against police brutality, and demanded equality in the 1950s.

The road has been long, convoluted and painful.

As a budding lawyer in Santa Monica, I was hopeful that one day the Supreme Court would rule in favor of same-sex marriage along the philosophical lines that were drawn in the 1967 ruling of Loving v. Virginia which validated the marriages of blacks and whites. But I was also living in the shadow of AIDS.

The disease that took so many young, creative, amazing gay men casts a long shadow in my life. In the late 80s, early 90s there was a common "joke" going around, "Do you know what GAY stands for? Got AIDS Yet?" That's what being gay meant. It was a death sentence. There was no love; there was fear, anger, disgust, and mocking of gay people. It fueled hurt, self recrimination, and a sense of outsiderness that crept into my bones and soul and I am still rooting it out.

It was the source of much self-hatred, for me and for many in the gay community. So the prospect that an outlier state like Hawaii could change America was a welcome relief; alas it was not to be.

Times change and people grow wiser. The role that gay men played in the media changed, from subject of ridicule to leading man. As more people came out, more people came out. It was an unintended effect of the stigma of AIDS, hurt and anger became the fuel for change as organizations and service centers were built to take care of the dying, because our government could not be counted on to do so.

In 2008 when the nightmare of Proposition 8 was upon us, two other men stepped up, Ted Olsen and David Boies, considered by some to be the top lawyers in the country, these two had faced off in the 2000 Bush/Gore Supreme Court battle but joined to fight for the cause of gay marriage.

As Olsen and Boies prepared to fight at the Federal level using the same strategy that I thought of in 1995, it was with great hope that I watched them do battle with the advocates on the other side. Knowing that two of the greatest legal minds our country ever produced were fighting for our rights was very comforting. I watched the documentary and the play that was written about the Proposition 8 hearings with rapt attention. I listened to the audio of Supreme Court hearings over the Internet because I knew that history was being made.

It's been a long road on the one hand, 65 years in the making, and I've often felt that the task was too great, the forces against us were too strong, but today I thank Gavin Newsom, David Boies, Ted Olsen and the many, many litigants, advocates and participants in the battle for marriage equality.

Today I feel equal in a way that I've never felt before.

Thank you, thank you, thank you.

Gratitude

SANTA MONICA FORWARD IS GRATEFUL TO THE U.S. Supreme Court for their decisions in the past week. Thank you for legalizing gay marriage, affording equal rights to loving, committed relationships recognized under the law.

Thank you for safeguarding fair housing by upholding the Fair Housing Act, and confirming an individual's right to locational choices in deciding where they live regardless of their race, creed, color, orientation, gender, or identity.

Thank you for preserving affordable healthcare for millions of Americans, forcing fewer Americans to make the trade-off between paying their rent and investing in their health.

We have more to do locally, especially regarding fair housing, but the actions the Supreme Court took last week provide a foundation for progressive democracy in action.

Polluting Venice

AS VENICE STAKEHOLDERS OF 23 YEARS, we have noticed the increasing invasion, pollution and fear of SMO into our community. There are now six flight schools and the number and size of huge personal and corporate jets has increased dramatically! They are supposed to fly over Rose Avenue, but rarely seem to be on course ... and they are bigger than ever. We can see and hear them from our living room, which is way south of rose. You'd think they could read their instrument panels a little better by now. Jets should never have been allowed in this residential community, not only because the runways are 300 feet too short! And by the way, how does the FAA allow that? Meanwhile, the quality of life for all of us living around this enlarged prostate has diminished. And most of Santa Monica isn't even aware of the problem. Why?

Because the airport is on the SE edge of Santa Monica, the bottom edge that borders LA. The winds blow from NW to SE ... the pattern for the pollution to travel. The flight patterns are cleverly set up so that the majority of planes fly over Venice, Mar Vista and West LA. So while Santa Monica is not directly affected with the problems of air and noise pollution, they are the ones voting on whether SMO should stay or leave. We affected by it can't vote on it. Where's the democracy? All of the pollution (air and noise) travels into LA neighborhoods, not SM. Santa Monica: we need some compassion here! It's all about the rich people having their convenience at our expense. Small planes and big jets. Santa Monica is proud to be the green city ... but which green? The proportion of parks in SM is dismally low compared to other comparable cities.

With the fear of crashes (four in the last 1.5 years...) it becomes something like terrorism. Every take-off is, like, will this one make it? Same with the stalls they do over our own house. Other residential communities in America have successfully closed down airports for all of these reasons.

We personally don't live close to SMO ... probably two miles or so. It's very peaceful where we live, except for the small planes curving left directly over our house and creating a constant interrupting buzz that ruins our life.

And the jets are getting closer all the time. Sometimes we can't even have a conversation in our own garden! We are at the pilots' whims, 7 a.m. - 11 p.m. ... and they don't necessarily go by even those rules: try and prove it. Besides our own quality of life, we also care about our neighbors closer to the airport who are affected even more directly than us. In addition to all of this above, the small planes are also still allowed for some reason to use leaded fuel ... this is the sign of a backward nation. So their exhaust is spreading lead over our precious children on top of it all! Doesn't everyone know by now this is wrong? There have been many studies done by UCLA and other prestigious institutions that show how toxic an environment SMO is creating in our community. And let us now mention the Viagra falls: just out for a little noisy, polluting spin in his vintage aircraft, Harrison Ford couldn't get it up. Mr. Ford, a very experienced pilot, had a failure, needed to land and in a panic tried to head back to the airport.

And he could easily have killed the doctors on the golf course that saved his life. Since he is so experienced, what then can we expect from all those student pilots whose self-indulgence we must endure? The pilots and their Washington lobbyists are very self-righteous with their romantic notion of aviation, but guaranteed they and their families would not accept it in their own everyday lives. We've invited them to lunch in our garden, but no one has come. They are afraid they would have to admit that their romanticism is indeed ruining our lives. There is a museum at SMO to remind us all of the wonderful history of the airport in our community, which we all love. That's enough. Times have changed. Let's make a park there now. Helicopters can land for emergencies and we and our kids can breathe cleaner air. A much better legacy for the airport, don't you think? A really green community.

Santa Monica And Los Angeles Will Host Special Olympics Athletes Next Month For The 2015 World Games

THOUSANDS OF SPECIAL OLYMPIC athletes will arrive from all corners of the world this July to participate in the 2015 World Games, the largest event hosted in Los Angeles since the 1984 Olympic Games. Santa Monica will play a vital role in the occasion as Host Town for the Brazilian and Romanian delegations. For three days (July 21-24, 2015), Santa Monica will serve as the base camp for these Special Olympics athletes by providing an opportunity to visit iconic Santa Monica locations including Muscle Beach and Third Street Promenade as they prepare for the competition of a lifetime.

As a Host Town, Santa Monica is responsible for 100% of the costs of hosting the Romanian and Brazilian athletes, coaches and chaperones. The success of Santa Monica's Host Town experience truly depends on the commitment and support from our local community, leaders and organizations. The Host Town Santa Monica Committee would like to thank its generous sponsors for their support in providing these incredible athletes with a memorable experience in Santa Monica:

Platinum Sponsor: Santa Monica Place
Silver Sponsor: HBO
Bronze Sponsors: Irell & Manella LLP, Downtown Santa Monica, City of Santa Monica
Supporting Sponsors: Perry's on the Beach Café, Le Meridien Delfina, Pacific Park

If you are interested in supporting the Santa Monica Host Town Program, please visit: http://www.la2015.org/host-town/santa-monica

Los Angeles estimates that the 2015 World Games will provide over $400 million worth of economic impact to Los Angeles with 500,000 spectators and athletes, coaches and families traveling from 170 nations. As Los Angeles' beach city, Santa Monica is excited to welcome both the Brazilian and Romanian delegations along with all of the inspiring athletes who will come to Los Angeles this Summer for the World Games.

CULVER CITY GYMNAST WILL REPRESENT L.A.'S WESTSIDE AT SPECIAL OLYMPICS WORLD GAMES WITH HELP FROM A DEDICATED VOLUNTEER COACH

Many Southern Californians are looking forward to the start of the 2015 Special Olympics World Games, but perhaps none more so than 20-year-old Culver City resident Caelyn Griffith. Griffith is one of only 37 California athletes competing in the Games, and the only one representing the Westside chapter, which encompasses the area from Westchester to Malibu and as far east as West Hollywood.

Griffith, who won five gold medals at last year's Southern California Special Olympics Summer Games, will participate in four events-artistic gymnastics, floor routine, balance beam and vault. "My favorite event is the floor," she says. "It's like a performance and you're right there with the audience."

To prepare for her World Games debut at UCLA's John Wooden Center, Griffith, who has Down syndrome, has been working on her routines several hours a week with her longtime coach Natasha Burgos. The relationship between Burgos and Griffith goes back a decade to when Caelyn was enrolled in an after-school program at Broadway Gymnastics School, where Burgos worked at the time in addition to volunteering with Southern California Special Olympics - Westside.

"I told her mom about the Special Olympics program and said I thought she would be a great candidate," recalls Burgos. "So many people with intellectual disabilities don't have physical activity in their daily life or the opportunity to be challenged. Gymnastics challenges them individually and incorporates so many elements, including balance, strength and coordination."

Griffith's mother, Clausine Honda, was already familiar with the program and happily signed her daughter up. "I had a friend growing up whose brother was involved in Special Olympics," she says. "It was such a wonderful organization, I figured it would be perfect for her."

Over the years, Burgos and Caelyn's bond has evolved beyond that of coach and athlete. "I always tell her mom that Caelyn is like the second child I never had," says Burgos. "We go to each other's family events. Now, 10 years later I'm still coaching her and she's graduated high school and getting ready to go beyond that."

Burgos, who works full time as a special education teacher for LAUSD, also volunteers leading a social program for adults with intellectual disabilities through the city of Santa Monica. In addition to weekly dinners, activities include talent shows, game nights, movie nights and excursions to museums, sporting events, amusement parks and concerts.

"She's an amazing human being," says Honda.

But Burgos insists she gets as much as she gives as a Special Olympics coach. "It's one of the most rewarding things I've ever done," she says. "They've always got a smile on their faces. We always have fun. It brings you back to that feeling of joy and what life is all about."

To learn more about coaching and other volunteer opportunities for Special Olympics Southern California — Westside call (310) 458-8237. Because Special Olympics receives no federal aid and its programs are free to all eligible athletes, it is dependent on the generosity of local residents and businesses. If you're interested in making a cash or in-kind donation, call (866) 244-8464.

… I think we don't want to attempt to cross over our authority in this matter but we do want to try to take the actions that we can as an operator of the airport."

Council agreed with O'Day and the strategies are expected to come before council in July.

Also expected to come before council in July are a slew of airport leases, both aviation and non-aviation. Many of the non-aviation leases, like the one proposed for the Ruskin Theater, the Spitfire Grill, and Typhoon restaurant, are for three years. Several of the aviation leases will remain month-to-month.

City Hall is also cutting out the middleman on several of the airport properties, organizing profit-sharing agreements for tenants that are subleasing at a large profit.

Unrelated to the expiring agreement is the Southern California Metroplex, which the FAA is still crafting. It's meant to govern flight patterns up and down the coast.

In order to avoid conflicts between SMO and Los Angeles Airport, the FAA is proposing some changes to takeoff and landing patterns.

City officials expect that some of the changes, like a reduction in idling time on the runway, will be beneficial for residents.

They are concerned about a pattern that results in a turn around Fifth Street — between Lincoln Boulevard and the ocean — that could result in more flights over residential neighborhoods.

The plan is still in draft form and the FAA's plans are not final. More details are expected to be released later this year.

SMMUSD Announces New Grant Elementary School Principal

The SMMUSD Board of Education approved the appointment of Jezelle Fullwood as the new principal of Grant Elementary School at its June 24 regular meeting.

Fullwood is a California native and has served in various school districts in and around Los Angeles County for nearly 20 years. She began her career as a classroom teacher in the Los Angeles Unified School District, serving students in areas of high poverty. She became known for her ability to meet the diverse needs of all students, refining her expertise in the area of researched-based instructional strategies. She was a literacy coach within Los Angeles Unified School District and instructional specialist for Action Learning Systems, writing curriculum and delivering professional development to administrators and teachers across the United States.

For the past 10 years, Fullwood has worked in the Palmdale School District, where she served as director of curriculum and instruction, coordinator of staff development, assistant principal and principal of a Turnaround Intervention Model School, where she successfully managed a school improvement grant of $6 million. Her work in school improvement has been featured in the Texas Elementary Principal and Supervisors Association Journal and The National Center on Time and Learning.

Fullwood is a noted instructor, staff developer, and consultant. She is an adjunct faculty member for California State University, Dominguez Hills within the Graduate School of Education and in addition to local engagements, she is an international staff developer for Advancement Via Individual Determination (AVID).

She has chaired various committees including the Bridging the Achievement Gap Conference and the African American Advisory Committee for the Palmdale School District.

Fullwood is a member of the Association of California School Administrators (ACSA), National Association of Elementary School Principals (NAESP), and National Association of Black School Educators (NABSE).

"I am very excited to join the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District and the Grant Elementary team!" Fullwood said. "Successfully meeting the needs of a dynamic and diverse student population is what drew me to the district and specifically Grant. As a student, I attended schools in the area of Pacific Palisades and graduated from Pepperdine University. So, after being in the desert for 10 years, I feel like I'm coming home!"

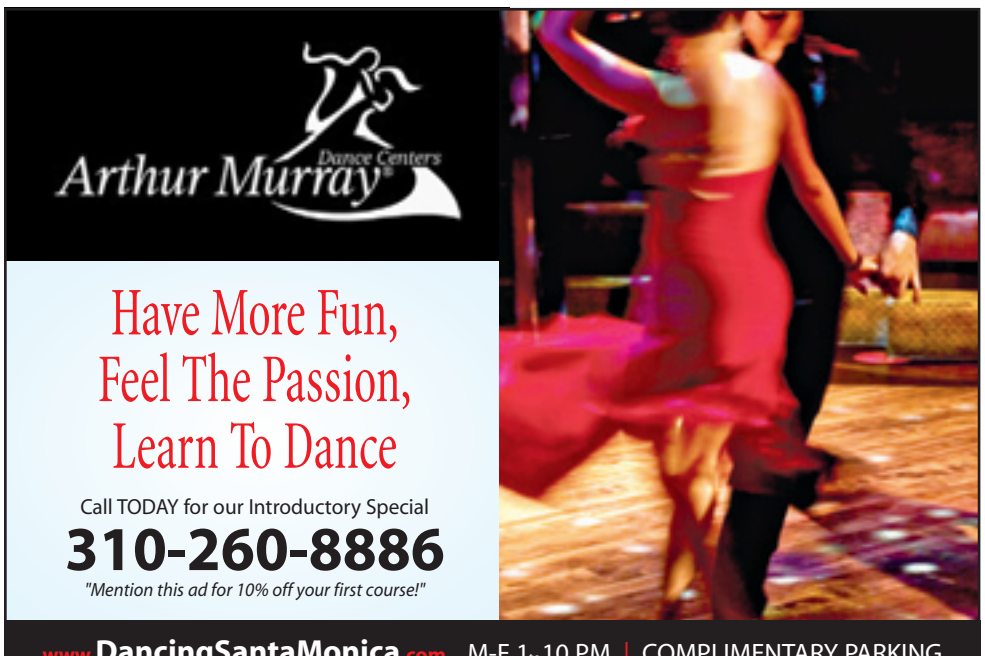

Fullwood received a Bachelor of Science in business and management from Pepperdine University, a Master of Arts degree in education with an emphasis in counseling from California State University, Dominguez Hills and is currently engaged in doctoral studies at Brandman University of the Chapman University System.

"Jezelle will be a valuable addition to our district leadership team," Superintendent Sandra Lyon said. "I would like to congratulate her on her new position."

urgent attention. But again, I think it is important to be strategic. We have plenty of work already underway, including big construction projects like the California Incline and the Colorado Esplanade - as well as policy challenges such as the opening of the Expo Line, implementation of a bike share franchise, consideration of a local minimum wage and strategies for implementing the will of the voters on the airport. I will also need to recruit and select two new department heads to lead Fire and Information Technology. Fortunately the adoption of both the budget and the zoning code were accomplished under the able leadership of the Interim City Manager Elaine Polachek.

DP:
Do you have an agenda for your first 100 days?

Cole:
That model is more applicable to a new elected leader than to an incoming chief executive officer. My job is not to launch my own programs, my job is to implement the clearly established policies of the City Council. I don't anticipate major changes in the months ahead. What I do expect is to intentionally identify the most important strategic priorities of City government - and to begin to mobilize the resources of time, funding and public consensus to get them accomplished.

DP:
Are there any Santa Monica specific activities that you want to experience now that you work here?

Cole:
Yes, I'm looking forward to being part of the rich cultural and community life of Santa Monica. I am holding off on an immediate move because my twin girls are in their last year of high school in our neighborhood in Los Angeles. But my family and I are close enough to partake in the kaleidoscope of events and activities that take place here year-round. Santa Monica already was one of our favorite places to visit. Now we'll be regulars. I will also be exploring the neighborhoods and housing options, looking for a place to settle. I've already introduced myself to Msgr. Torgerson at Saint Monica's Church. I'm looking forward to being an active member of that vibrant parish.

DP:
What are you most excited to begin work on?

Cole:
Three things. First, engaging with the community. I relish healthy civic discourse where citizens both express their opinions and actively partner with city government to improve our city. Frankly, the tenor of debate on development issues has sometimes taken on a polarizing tenor and I hope we can look for common ground. Second, technology. Santa Monica is fortunate to be an epicenter of tech innovation and I want to continue the pace-setting leadership of the City in using technology to deliver better, faster and more economical results as well as increase transparency and accountability to our citizen customers. Third, the public realm. Santa Monica has been one of the leaders of creative place-making in Southern California since it remade the Third Street Promenade three decades ago. Expanding memorable and attractive public spaces is a great opportunity for Santa Monica and I see that as a way to improve both the quality of life and the standard of living of residents. Beautiful and welcoming streetscapes, parks and public areas will also enhance the prosperity of the city as a whole.

more than 500 meals per day with just $330, which the agency augments with donations from food banks, businesses, community groups and the public.

"It's a basic human need, but it's a way of making a direct connection with people," OPCC director John Maceri said of the free food. "It's another resource that sustains life, and it gives us an opportunity to engage with people and encourage them to take advantage of the other services that are available to them."

Waiste's company doesn't have its own retail storefront, so all the partnership needed was a sales point.

Enter the Edgemar Center, a nonprofit that hosts theater productions and offers acting classes for adults and children.

Its managing director, Alexandra Guarnieri, said the center offers its own outreach programs but that it hadn't supported another local nonprofit group before.

"They approached us, and we thought it was a worthy cause," Guarnieri said of OPCC. "It's good to expand. It's a great organization, and it's always good to give to other outreach programs."

She added that the candy company's products will be on sale during intermission at its shows, which have been performed for sold-out audiences for much of the last year.

The plan is for p.o.p. toffees to be sold at Edgemar (2437 Main St.) throughout the end of July, at which point the involved parties will evaluate the partnership to determine how to proceed.

"We're hoping to expand on this idea exponentially," Waiste said. "We hope we can bring in a number of partners.

"Anywhere you go in Santa Monica, you're running into homeless people. What we had in mind was to sell our fresh butter crunch to people, and when they buy it they know that half their money is going to feed homeless people in Santa Monica."

Added Maceri: "We're so fortunate to have this collaboration. It's a great example of how local community members and businesses are partnering with us to make a difference in Santa Monica."

Heal the Bay is a nonprofit environmental organization making Southern California coastal waters and watersheds, including Santa Monica Bay, safe, healthy and clean. We use science, education, community action and advocacy to pursue our mission.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card℠ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A-F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from (easiest) to (hardest).

Difficulty Level ★★

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Gregory Reddick, 54, and his employer, SJQ Sightseeing Tours, filed a lawsuit in June against New York City for "harass(ing)" them and hampering their ability to rip off tourists, specifically, interfering with their "right" to sell tickets for $200 or more for trips on the Staten Island Ferry -- which is actually free to ride. Reddick was wearing an (unauthorized) "Authorized Ticket Agent" jacket when arrested, and according to a New York Post account, believes he operates legally because he misunderstands a technicality in a 2013 court case. Prosecutors, who described the waterfront tourist-exploitation scene as "the wild west," found Reddick with seven dates of birth, five aliases and six Social Security numbers.

■ Doctors at a hospital in Dongyang, China, removed 420 kidney stones from a single patient in June (a "Mr. He"). One of the surgeons told reporters that a soy-heavy diet of tofu was probably to blame. According to the Guinness Book of World Records, the most stones removed from one kidney during surgery (in India in 2009 in a three-hour operation) is (this is not a misprint) 172,155.

Each Tuesday, 'Roxy's Pet Peeves' gives voice to friends-in-need

Food has no place on my face

With Roxy Starfish

Hey dawg,

Thanks for turning those sparkling eyes back this way. Look and see which of my furry (and hairless) friends are still looking for new homes ... like yours! Props to Giive a (bleep) and The Santa Monica Daily Press for helping spread the word.

Together we can change lives in this space, sometimes nine lives.

But I got a peeve. You know that cupcake you want me to balance on my snout? Don't do that. Don't do any trick that involves balancing food on my nose. For one, I can't eat chocolate. Second, I'm not a dolphin. I venture to guess a dolphin wouldn't want to balance a cupcake (or apple or toilet paper roll) on their face either.

A little respect please.

Why Giive a (bleep)? Because our noses are for sniffing, not gripping.

I'm out.

MacKenzi

MacKenzi is a busy little 2-year-old, cream-colored, 13-pound Shih Tzu mix ... who is all puppy! Don't let those innocent eyes fool you — she is full of mischief. She LOVES to chew, so hide your shoes and books! She will need a home with another active, young, playful dog … she has energy to spare. She's a cuddler, kisser and just wants a buddy.

Johnny Cash

Johnny Cash is a handsome 3-year-old Doxie/Chihuahua mix. This sweet and playful boy can be nervous at first, but warms up quickly and will make a wonderful companion to someone ready to help train and adore him. Johnny is healthy, up to date on vaccinations, neutered and microchipped.

MORE ON THESE AND ROXY'S OTHER FRIENDS @ GIIVE.ORG/BLOG/

Return calls tonight, Sagittarius

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Everyone seems to be full of ideas that conflict with yours. You are likely to act and demonstrate the solidity of a particular approach. Your imagination will give you an edge that others don't have. It is natural for you to find solutions. Tonight: Try to be low-key.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ A partner will want to share many ideas that might startle you. In a sense, you won't know which direction would be more suitable for you to head in. The unexpected occurs when a roommate or family member decides to act out. Tonight: Let others take the lead.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ You speak and others listen. A situation could become more complicated than you would like. Understand your limits when it comes to trying to effect change. Don't push yourself to make a point when you know it will be a futile effort. Tonight: Let someone else treat.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ You will have a difficult time trying to make someone believe that you are right. Just go off and do your thing. Eventually this person will see the value in your choices. Sometimes you push hard, and it could be too much for some people. Tonight: Get some exercise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You might be very energized and going too fast for some people to follow you. If you are working independently, then that is a different story. You might want to rethink what you are doing if you have to work with others. Put on your happy face. Tonight: All smiles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Tame your extroverted side and become more observant of a domestic situation. Think in terms of reaching a compromise if you decide to get involved. You might see some upsetting and uncomfortable energy heading your way. Tonight: Go along with the program.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You are likely to hear quite a tale if you can take the time to listen. A partner seems to have the ability to shake up your universe. Sometimes this is for the better, other times, not so much. Zero in on a long-term goal. Know that you will succeed. Tonight: Catch up news.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Curb your spending, and be more appropriate about your limits. You tend to find ways to make excessive justifications when taking risks. You don't need to be a big spender. At the moment, a matter is likely to throw you into the limelight. Tonight: Return calls.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ You tend to be overly expressive, but no one minds -- you have only good vibes to offer those around you. The unexpected seems to occur when you least expect it. Your amusement will become obvious to others. Use caution with a family member. Tonight: As you like it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Much goes on behind the scenes. Listen to your feelings, but know that you don't need to express them just yet. Observe and gather information. You know what to do and when. Honor what is happening. Tonight: Relax at home, and curl up with a good book or watch a movie.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Your friends might be unusually observant of someone in your life. A relationship seems to be changing right in front of you. Accept this rather than reject it. Don't lose your focus, as you can achieve a lot right now. Your softer side could emerge. Tonight: With friends.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Be more in touch with what you want. Tension remains high, and you have choices to make. Clearly you can't please everyone all the time. Do not even try. An associate shows enormous caring. Examine what someone suggests. Tonight: Touch base with an older relative.

Tuesday, June 30, 2015

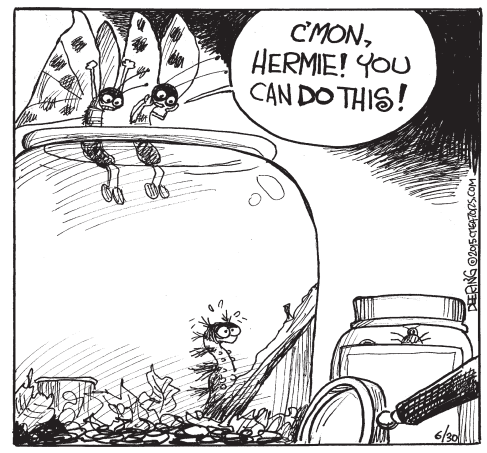

This year you often feel excited during your day-to-day life. Options appear from out of the blue. You will gain financially, but you also will spend a lot. You might want to put some money into savings. If you are single, you will find that you meet people with ease just going wherever you normally go. After mid-August, you could meet someone new, whom you will find to be very appealing. If you are attached, the two of you tend to go overboard and spend a lot. Develop a mutual hobby, if you haven't already. SAGITTARIUS can be very annoying.
