Emergency officials prepare for fire season

BY MCKENZIE JACKSON
Special to the Daily Press

MALIBU As fire season approaches, emergency officials are warning of an increased potential for wildfires this summer due to dry weather and an abundance of brush.

That brush has grown in recent years, as Malibu has dodged major wildfires, said Brad Davis, emergency services coordinator for the city of Malibu.

"Every time a season goes by and the brush doesn't burn that means there is more brush for the following season, so this season is one to be concerned about," Davis said. "Not necessarily one to panic about or anything, but it is a concern."

Representatives from all the major firefighting authorities in the Southland held a press conference June 18 and warned that dry weather this summer increases the danger of brush fires this year.

Rainfall has been below normal so far this year, Los Angeles County Fire Department Chief Daryl Osby said. That means there is dead grass, trees, bushes and other plants from 2011 and this year still present in wooded areas that could help ignite fires. It could be more problematic if weather predictions for the rest of the summer hold true.

"This year our projection for the fire season is that we're going to have a warmer, drier summer," Osby said.

The dry weather and available fuel already appear to be having an effect. Although he could not provide a specific number, county fire department spokesman Quvondo Johnson said there have been twice as many fires in the first six months of 2012 as compared to last year.

The last major blaze in Malibu was the 2007 Corral Canyon Fire. That inferno destroyed 53 homes, damaged 35 residences and burned 4,900 acres.

Davis said fire season used to be considered "toward back end of the year to, say, January," but now it is recognized all year. He said on any hot, dry, and windy day there are fire concerns in urban interface

Teacher steers students toward London Olympics

BY SEAN FITZ-GERALD

WALGROVE AVE He thought the phone call was a scam, a travel outfit scouring the country for performers like a vulture.

After hanging up, Santa Monica resident Ron Theile was convinced that he wouldn't hear from KIconcerts again, and he'd go back to Walgrove Avenue for a regular day of teaching.

They must be canvassing choirs and schools, he thought. They've probably called dozens of others.

But it wasn't a scam. The agent from KIconcerts was calling to invite Theile and the Mark Twain Ringers to perform at five venues for the 2012 Olympics. After the phone call, he received a follow-up e-mail from the Greater London Authority, confirming the offer and asking for Theile and his ensemble to perform at Exhibition Road, the Weymouth Bayside Festival, Southwark Cathedral, London Live (Victoria Park) and Potters Fields Park.

Born in Chicago, he grew up hungry for music. He started ringing English handbells at 10, and after corporate stints, began a teaching career at Chester W. Nimitz Middle School in 1994. Five years later, at Mark Twain Middle School, he embarked on a musical journey that would lead to his astounding accomplishment.

Theile has worked with children for years, getting his start in church choirs and as a Little League coach in Santa Monica. At mid-

Predicting crime before it occurs

GREG RISLING
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES Los Angeles police are aiming to beat suspects to the scene of a crime by using computers to predict where trouble might occur.

The Los Angeles Police Department is the largest agency to embrace an experiment known as "predictive policing," which crunches data to determine where to send officers to thwart would-be thieves and burglars. Time Magazine called it one of the best inventions of 2011.

Early successes could serve as a model for other cash-strapped law enforcement agencies, but some legal observers are concerned it could lead to unlawful stops and searches that violate Fourth Amendment protections.

In the San Fernando Valley, where the program was launched late last year, officers are seeing double-digit drops in burglaries and other property crimes. The program has turned enough in-house skeptics into believers that there are plans to roll it out citywide by next summer.

"We have prevented hundreds and hundreds of people coming home and seeing their homes robbed," said police Capt. Sean Malinowski.

Crime mapping has long been a tool used to determine where the bad guys lurk. The idea has evolved from colored pins placed on a map to identifying "hot spots" via a computer database based on past crimes and possible patterns.

Over the past decade, many large police departments, including Los Angeles and New York City, have used CompStat, a system that tracks crime figures and enables police to send extra officers to trouble spots.

The new program used by LAPD and police in the Northern California city of Santa Cruz is more timely and precise, proponents said. Built on the same model for predicting aftershocks following an earthquake, the software promises to show officers what might be coming based on simple, constantly calibrated data — location, time and type of crime.

The software generates prediction boxes — as small as 500 square feet — on a patrol map. When officers have spare time, they are told to "go in the box."

The goal is not to boost the number of arrests, a common police benchmark to reflect crime reduction. Officers want to either inter-

'Ted' outstrips 'Mike' with record weekend numbers

DAVID GERMAIN
AP Movie Writer

LOS ANGELES It's both a bear and bull market for Hollywood.

The bear is "Ted," Mark Wahlberg and Seth MacFarlane's comedy for Universal Pictures about a talking teddy bear, which opened as the No. 1 movie with $54.1 million, according to studio estimates Sunday.

And the bulls are baring it in the Warner Bros. release "Magic Mike," Channing Tatum and Steven Soderbergh's male-stripper tale that debuted a strong No. 2 with $39.2 million.

The two new movies were backed by a deep bench, with Pixar Animation's Disney fairy tale "Brave" holding up well at No. 3 with $34 million in its second weekend. "Tyler Perry's Madea's Witness Protection," the latest from the dependable breadwinner for Lionsgate Films, opened solidly at No. 4 with $26.4 million.

The four movies combined to keep Hollywood in the money compared to the same weekend last year, when "Transformers: Dark of the Moon" launched with $97.9 million.

"Ted's" opening was the third-highest R-rated comedy debut, behind last year's "Hangover 2" ($85.9 million) and 2010's "Sex and the City 2" ($57 million), but it was the biggest ever R-rated non-sequel comedy opening.

It was an equally big weekend overseas, where two huge franchises got a head-start on their U.S. openings.

The 20th Century Fox animated sequel "Ice Age: Continental Drift" opened with $78 million in 34 international markets, while Sony's "The Amazing Spider-Man" debuted with $50.2 million in 13 markets. "Amazing Spider-Man" opens domestically Tuesday for the Fourth of July weekend, while "Continental Drift" has its U.S. debut July 13.

Domestic revenues totaled $207.7 million, up 3 percent from the same weekend in 2011, according to box-office tracker Hollywood.com. That was quite an accomplishment, considering the Fourth of July fell on Monday last year, making it a long holiday weekend.

"It was absolutely astonishing that we're beating the same weekend a year ago given the enormity of the film, the big sci-fi block-

Pipe dreams make bad policy

ON NOV. 28, 2011, I WROTE (My Write, "Nothing to like about this development") about a proposed apartment complex at 401 Broadway (at the corner of Fourth Street) in Downtown.

It's bad enough the proposed project was five floors high and contained 48 tiny, single room apartments, eight one bedroom units and 4,159 square feet of ground floor retail space with 657 square feet of additional outdoor space — presumably for patio dining. All this was shoehorned onto a standard 50 by 150 foot lot now occupied by a car repair business.

The icing on this foul-smelling concoction was the lack of vehicle parking. In fact, folks, there wasn't one parking space in the plans. However, developer Fourth and Broadway, LLC, thoughtfully included one bicycle parking spot for every unit plus 15 extra retail bicycle spaces. The Land Use and Circulation Element (LUCE) gods were beaming while the rest of us were scratching our heads.

In Santa Monica, this is considered a progressive development. The developer, their architect, politicians, city planners, consultants, the Planning Commission and City Council all gave this project a big thumbs up.

"It sets a new standard for future sustainable development," they boasted. Their distorted perception somehow envisions us as a populace that can't wait to abandon personal vehicles in favor of alternate, less convenient transportation.

I haven't done a scientific poll — and I'm guessing that neither has City Hall — but it's obvious that personal vehicles are overwhelmingly preferred for shopping and getting to and from work or school by 98 percent of the people in Santa Monica — something that city planners and unrealistic politicians ignore while they pursue their own idealistic agendas.

Between allowing insufficient or no onsite parking, removing and narrowing traffic lanes and worst of all, approving deeply flawed developments with the lame excuse that they won't generate "any net new trips" because they contain bicycle racks and electric vehicle charging stations is pure hokum.

"Traffic" comes up consistently as our number one complaint which is proof that City Hall is making more bad mistakes than Lindsay Lohan.

Like the leprechauns and unicorns the dreamers believe in, a vehicle-free, 401 Broadway where tenants don't own or need vehicles is a fantasy and only sets a new standard for unnecessary and incompetent social engineering.

Most likely, the reason there was no parking in the project there was because limited space available for a garage and the developer didn't want to spend the money to build multiple level underground parking. City Hall visionaries were quick to capitalize on this and declare vehicle-free 401 Broadway as their first utopian planning success.

Once approved (including the usual nonsense such as traffic demand management schemes, street beautification fees, transit subsidies, solar panels and other so-called public benefits), all the developer had to do was line up financing and begin construction. Screeeech. Ka-chunk!

Five months later, the unicorns succumbed when Fourth and Broadway, LLC, filed for a Development Agreement amendment to add at least 50 on-site parking spaces because, without them, financing wasn't forthcoming. Images of fairies in walking shoes and sprites on bicycles frolicking and cavorting in a Downtown devoid of motor vehicles took a major hit.

Never fear. There are those who still believe in myths — and unicorns. Take Councilman Terry O'Day who told our Ashley Archibald ("'No parking' model doesn't sell," June 27) "Southern California lenders are not always in the vanguard of community design and trends."

O'Day was an enthusiastic supporter of this mess because it didn't include the usual parking requirements. He said he "believes it's a matter of time before financiers fall in line with new thought in city planning." In my book, that "matter of time" is 20 or 30 years down the road, or way down the bicycle path.

In the real world of dollars and sense (no pun intended), practicality trumps illusion. Lenders and banks deal in reality. O'Day and those who share his unfounded ideas that garage-less developments will attract tenants and won't generate traffic are peddling pipe dreams.

You can bet your Schwinn that lenders know prospective tenants will avoid projects without on-site parking and where it'll cost extra to park off premises. It's a reality that city planners, bureaucrats and wishful thinkers like O'Day ignore because they're blinded by delusion.

It may be months before Fourth and Broadway, LLC, returns to City Council for approval of new plans — assuming they can even add a garage and still have a financially viable project.

In the meantime, if O'Day is serious when he says he wants to "encourage walkability" and "reduce traffic impacts," he needs to wake up, stop hallucinating, and quit supporting every traffic generating, proposed development that crosses his path. Fat chance of that happening.

For parts of the nation, a fireworks-free Fourth

CHARLES WILSON & STEVEN K. PAULSON
Associated Press

DENVER Drought and wildfire fears are snuffing out some Fourth of July festivities this year.

From Utah to Indiana, state and local governments are calling off annual fireworks displays out of fear that a stray rocket could ignite tinder-dry brush and trigger a wildfire. They're also warning residents not to use fireworks, sparklers or Roman candles in backyards.

The worry is especially acute in the West, where crews are already battling out-of-control blazes in several states. Parts of the Midwest are affected, too, after weeks without any significant rain.

"We usually have a fireworks barge and a huge gala that attracts thousands of people," said Bill Appleby of the Grand Lake Area Chamber of Commerce, which represents the lakeside resort town about 90 miles northwest of Denver in the Rocky Mountains. The display is usually safe out on the water, but "we just can't risk an errant ember."

It's not uncommon for communities to delay or cancel fireworks shows because of drought conditions, but this year, the practice is more widespread.

Last year, about a third of the country was in drought. Now nearly three-quarters is, according to the latest U.S. Drought Monitor map, a weekly analysis of dryness across the nation. The parched conditions have been aggravated by a dry, mild winter and above-normal temperatures.

Fires have charred more than 1.8 million acres this year in the U.S., and much of Utah, Colorado, Wyoming and Montana have been under red-flag warnings for extreme fire danger.

In Colorado, where hundreds of homes have been destroyed by flames in the past month, firefighters have said they don't have the time or resources to stand watch over public events. At least nine public fireworks displays have been called off.

Montana hasn't called for an end to big displays yet, but Gov. Brian Schweitzer is urging people not to set off their own fireworks and has left the door open to canceling public shows.

Officials have also canceled displays or issued warnings restricting private fireworks in Arkansas, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Missouri, Utah and Wisconsin.

"Nobody wants to not have fireworks," said Chris Magnuson of Albion, Ind., a town of about 2,300 that postponed its annual July 4 fireworks show to Labor Day weekend after county officials banned outdoor burning. "It's just not safe enough."

The danger is real: Fireworks were blamed for more than 15,500 blazes and $36 million in property damage in 2010, according to the National Fire Protection Association in Quincy, Mass.

States have also clamped down on all kinds of outdoor fire hazards, including campfires, smoking and use of portable grills.

Paul Forman, who owns Independence Fireworks and Forman Blasters Pyrotechnics in Peru, Ind., said he understands the safety concerns, but his business has been devastated. Four customers called off fireworks shows this week, and he anticipated more cancellations before the holiday. He said his business had dropped from about 50 customers a day to a total of 11.

"This emergency order hit me like a two-by-four," Forman said.

Forman was going to deliver the fireworks in Bunker Hill, Ind., which had scheduled a show Saturday night following a parade, a picnic and the local Little League championships. Instead, Little League officials in the town of 900 about 60 miles north of Indianapolis canceled the show because of the fire risk.

Carol Russell had been looking forward to taking her family to the fireworks show. Her kids — three teens and a 9-year-old — are growing up, and she said this might be the last year they thought the display was cool.

"Tradition is a big deal for us. It's like a big bubble burst," Russell said.

Some states are grappling with just how far they can go in issuing bans. New Mexico Gov. Susana Martinez said she considers fireworks a risk that can be avoided, but state law allows cities and counties to ban only certain classifications of fireworks and where they can be used. More than half of the state's 33 counties and its largest cities have already imposed restrictions and urged residents to attend organized events instead of setting off their own.

Leaders of the fireworks industry, which brought in nearly $1 billion in sales nationally in 2011, question whether firework bans are legal. Steve Graves, executive director of the Indiana Fireworks Association, said people should be given credit for common sense.

Indiana law allows fireworks from June 29 to July 9 regardless of whether local burn bans are in place. Some communities have declared drought disaster emergencies to enact bans in an attempt to get around the law.

Watching the waves

Dear EarthTalk:
Is there any environmental risk from all that Japanese tsunami debris that is starting to wash up on the U.S. west coast?

– Bailey Thigerson,
Seattle, Wash.

The Japanese government estimates that some 1.5 million tons of debris is afloat in the Pacific Ocean as a result of the March 2011 earthquake, tsunami and nuclear disaster. No one knows exactly how much of this debris will wash up on American shores or end up absorbed by the water column or trapped in mid-ocean gyres, but state coastal authorities from California to Alaska are readying response plans.

One certain threat is invasive species. Scientists from Oregon State University's Hatfield Marine Science Center confirmed the presence of dozens of species native to Japanese coastal waters-including barnacles, starfish, urchins, anemones, amphipods, worms, mussels, limpets, snails, solitary tunicates and algae-that were on a large floating dock in Japan that washed ashore at Agate Beach near Newport, Oregon in June 2012. According to researchers, the 66 foot long dock contained some 13 pounds of organisms per square foot, and an estimated 100 tons of living matter overall. While there is no evidence to date that anything from the float has established on U.S. shores, researchers fearing the worst but hoping for the best are continuing to monitor the situation.

Of course, what worries researchers more is that the dock may just be the tip of the iceberg, so to speak, in regard to what else might wash ashore. "I think that the dock is a forerunner of all the heavier stuff that's coming later, and amongst that heavier stuff are going to be a lot of drums full of chemicals that we won't be able to identify," says Chris Pallister, president of the non-profit Gulf of Alaska Keeper, a group dedicated to cleaning marine debris from Alaska's coastline. He worries that the onslaught of debris will be "far worse than any oil spill ... or any other environmental disaster we've faced on the West Coast" as a result of the sheer amount and variety of debris and the wide geographic scope it is likely to affect.

Officials at the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) believe the Japanese tsunami debris has already spread over an area of the Pacific Ocean roughly three times the size of the contiguous United States. While some of the debris has already made landfall in the U.S., the bulk of it will take several more months to make it across the Pacific. Seattle-based oceanographer Curtis Ebbesmeyer, who has been tracking huge gyres of trash in the ocean for two decades and runs the Beachcombers' Alert website, thinks the majority of tsunami debris will reach U.S. shores as early as October 2012.

Another concern: Researchers were "startled" to find detectable levels of radioactivity from the Fukushima nuclear disaster in bluefin tuna, a favorite sushi fish, off the coast of California. While the levels of radioactive cesium were some 10 times higher than the amount measured in tuna off California in previous years, it is still below safe-to-eat limits in both Japan and the U.S. The researchers are continuing to study more bluefin tissue samples to see if elevated radiation levels persist, and are also looking into radiation levels in other long distance migratory species including sea turtles, sharks and seabirds.

cept a crime in progress or deter would-be criminals.

"I want to disrupt an activity before an arrest is made," Malinowski said. "You can't arrest your way out of some of these problems."

Jeff Brantingham, an anthropology professor at the University of California, Los Angeles, said the data also is derived from criminal behaviors — repeat victimization and the notion that criminals tend not to stray too far from areas they know best.

"If you are victimized today the risk that you'll be a victim again goes way up," said Brantingham, who co-founded a software company tapped by LAPD for its program.

So far, the program has been implemented in five LAPD divisions that cover 130 square miles and roughly 1.3 million people. In the valley's Foothill Division, where more than half of the crimes committed are property-related, about 170 patrol officers are spending a total of about 70 hours a week working in the boxes.

In one instance, a police captain questioned sending officers into a box that was on the edge of his coverage area. Officers went out and didn't find anything, but returned several nights later and found a guy breaking a window.

The division leads the department in crime reduction, Malinowski said. Crimes were down in the area 13 percent following the rollout compared to a slight uptick across the rest of the city where the program wasn't being used.

"If you had told us a few years ago you could get an algorithm to perform as the same as a crime analyst, we would think you were crazy," Malinowski said. "Even the most skeptical people are now coming up to me and saying, 'I think this is working.'"

Other police departments across the nation are using similar approaches. Tech titan IBM has teamed up with police in Memphis and Charleston, S.C., to provide analysis; Minneapolis police are breaking down crime statistics and factoring in geographic locations to determine future crimes.

Andrew Guthrie Ferguson, an assistant law professor at the University of the District of Columbia, has written about predictive policing and how it may impact Fourth Amendment protections from unlawful searches and seizures.

Ferguson said the trend is "a seductive idea" for law enforcement agencies that carry a lot of power. He believes the LAPD has done a good job with the data but he's concerned that other departments could abuse the process with racial profiling or stereotyping a neighborhood or an area.

"There are real pressures to expand this nationally and see it succeed," Ferguson said. "I think it's an important innovation. But like any innovation, it's not foolproof, and looking closely at the data is important to ensure it doesn't harm the civil liberties of the people living in those areas."

buster that opened then," said Hollywood.com analyst Paul Dergarabedian. "This played out like a holiday weekend without it really being a holiday weekend. It speaks volumes about the importance of having a wide variety of films in the marketplace."

The only one that didn't work among new wide releases was the sibling drama "People Like Us," which tanked at No. 10 with $4.3 million. A DreamWorks release distributed by Disney, the movie features Chris Pine (Captain Kirk of "Star Trek") as a man who gets himself into an awkward relationship with the half-sister (Elizabeth Banks) he never knew he had.

"Ted" stars Wahlberg as a guy whose stuffed bear magically came to life when he was a boy, the two growing up together to become slacker, party-boy roommates. Writer-director MacFarlane, the creator of TV's "Family Guy," provides the voice of the bear, while "Family Guy" voice co-star Mila Kunis plays Wahlberg's girlfriend.

The idea of a cuddly teddy bear combined with a foul mouth and MacFarlane's wicked sense of humor caught fire with audiences, who lifted "Ted" far beyond the opening of $35 million or less that Hollywood generally expected.

"In my heart of hearts, I just felt that everybody was starting to talk about this talking bear, and everyone loves Seth MacFarlane, people love his show," said Nikki Rocco, head of distribution for Universal. "And the marketing campaign did a great job of telling people how fabulous this picture is for an R-rated audience."

"Magic Mike" also far outstripped industry expectations. The weekend was a rare instance where two R-rated movies opened at Nos. 1 and 2, and it followed another unusual weekend where two PG-rated movies ("Brave" and "Madagascar 3: Europe's Most Wanted") led the box office.

Directed by Soderbergh, "Magic Mike" is inspired by Tatum's early career as a male stripper and features him as a veteran dancer who takes a newcomer (Alex Pettyfer) under his wing.

The beefcake factor of Tatum, Pettyfer and co-star Matthew McConaughey strutting their stuff had women packing theaters in a way that distributor Warner Bros. had not seen since its "Sex and the City" flicks. Female fans made up 73 percent of the "Magic Mike" crowds.

"'Magic Mike' just didn't have the brand that 'Sex and the City' had for so many years," said Dan Fellman, Warner's head of distribution. "The fact that it performed in the same vein was a great surprise."

"Brave" raised its domestic haul to $131.7 million and has added $26.8 million in its slow rollout overseas for a worldwide total of $158.5 million.

Filmmaker and star Perry's latest features outspoken Southerner Madea taking in a Wall Street guy (Eugene Levy) whose family is placed in witness protection.

The first Perry release in summer, "Madea's Witness Protection" earned 70 percent of its revenue from black audiences, down from the filmmaker's usual 80 percent, as funnyman Levy and co-star Denise Richards gave it more appeal among whites.

Like "Ted" and "Magic Mike," "Madea's Witness Protection" did better than Hollywood anticipated. David Spitz, head of distribution for Lionsgate, said movie-going just seems to be in the air, especially considering the 100-degree heat gripping much of the nation.

"People don't want to be outside in a heat wave, so it's one of those weekends where benefited from the weather," Spitz said.

In limited release, Fox Searchlight's Louisiana story "Beasts of the Southern Wild" opened strongly with $169,236 in four theaters, for an average of $42,309 a cinema. That compares to an average of $16,705 in 3,239 theaters for "Ted."

dle schools, he started with chorus and dance, saying he fell in love with teaching. He's worked his way from chorus and dance to English, math, history, science and bells.

But the 60-year-old polymath has always had his eyes on London's Southwark Cathedral. He says it's a ringer's dream — something on his bucket list. Come August, Theile gets to cross it off.

FOR WHOM THE BELLS TOLL

In 2011, filmmakers Aleksandra Wolska and Eric Thiermann produced "It Tolls for Thee: Bells and Their Stories," a documentary that gave audiences a look at bells and their cultural and religious implications.

The concept of bell ringing is an age-old tradition, one that has survived and evolved since medieval times. Bells have been steeped in superstition and have been long associated with religious significance. Their uses have gone from consecrated passing bells — rung to drive away spirits during times of death — to large church tower bells to small hand-held bells.

Tuned handbells, first developed by English brothers William and Robert Cor in Aldbourne, Wiltshire during the early 18th century, became popular in churches as a form of liturgical accompaniment.

And it was through Theile's church in Chicago that he got his start. His parents kept him involved in the church, and his friends encouraged him to join the bell choir. Like his students at Mark Twain, Theile said he enjoyed being part of a second family, of an interdependent team.

One of the groups featured in Wolska and Thiermann's documentary is the Mark Twain Ringers.

There's roughly seven minutes of footage dedicated to the ringers, and in that small amount of time a lot of ground is covered: everything from the ringers' sacred repertoire to their hardships at home to their strength as an on-campus refuge.

"[Thiermann] really found the true nature of our choir," Theile said. "The bottom line is: For us it's not about the music …. [The ringers] stick together, they help each other, they love each other and we go through these really tough middle school years together. If they have a tough time with their family at home, they turn to their family here."

THE WRONG BUSINESS

After graduating from Fenger High School in 1970, Theile matriculated at Western Illinois University, where he majored in forestry.

"I'm not going to pay for school if you're going to major in music … musicians don't make jack," Theile's father had said. "They're wanderers."

If you're studying something you're not interested in, it's never going to turn out well, said Theile, who put his studies on pause to join the Navy. In September of '72, he left Chicago — with his high school sweetheart Cathy — when he was stationed in Long Beach, Calif. Theile was honorably discharged in '74 and moved to Santa Monica, where he's lived ever since.

Starting work as a machinist for Hughes Helicopters, Theile bounced around to make ends meet. Next he worked as a purchasing agent for Dean Industries — only because he liked working with people.

Then he got lucky. He was hired by Gem Instruments Corporation — a wholly owned subsidiary of the Gemological Institute of America, a nonprofit specializing in diamonds, colored stones and pearls — where he would become a member of the executive branch.

After learning about the corporate world for a few years, his time at the institute came to an end. Gem's then-CEO got axed, and Theile went down, too.

He took one year — "the best of my life" — to focus on raising his two kids, Sean and Kelly, and immersed himself in Santa Monica Little League teams, where he said they played ball for fun, but didn't like to lose, and church choirs at First United Methodist Church of Santa Monica.

No matter what job Theile had, he was always an active member of the church. He directed and sang in choirs, and throughout it all, kept ringing.

One night at choir, a fellow churchgoer asked Theile if he wanted to be an engineer for May Company California, the chain that would later merge with JW Robinson's to form Robinsons-May. He said yes.

"I was carrying a tool belt around for May Company, and I was having a blast, making more money than God," Theile said with a grin on his face.

Though he was busy with his new job, Theile kept coaching. And it was during Little League season that Lupe Simpson, then-principal at Nimitz, approached Theile.

"You're in the wrong business," Simpson said. "You need to be a teacher."

Simpson offered up a deal: If she could match Theile's pay at May Company, he would have to get his teaching credentials and make the switch. After finishing up a bachelor of science in business at the University of Redlands, Theile received his credentials from Cal State Dominguez Hills. He was ready to take his music skills to the classroom.

A NOBLE OFFER

As a teacher at Nimitz, Theile sought to use music as a means of enriching his students' lives and steering them in the right direction. The only problem was that handbells were a costly passion.

"It's not like [the Los Angeles Unified School District] could just throw out 37 grand," Theile said. "Simpson and I had to raise enough money to buy the first set of bells. So we sold a heck of a lot of candy."

But the handbells were a hit. Theile and his ringers quickly started making a splash, especially in Santa Monica. He cites the generosity of Santa Monica residents for helping his ensemble get the exposure and support they needed to perform at local venues.

Theile said he and the ringers are most indebted to Dr. James Smith, director of music ministry at First United, who gave the ringers their first big break. Theile and his ringers forged a long-standing relationship with the church, a venue where they have performed numerous times.

One powerful moment stands out, Theile said. During one performance — a song about the angels announcing the birth of Jesus — the ringers walked down the middle aisle of the church to the sounds of a swelling orchestra.

"These big bronze doors just opened and the kids came in one step at a time," Theile said. "There wasn't a dry eye in the place."

After that, Theile and his ringers were all over SoCal and at rock-star venues like Las Vegas' Circus Circus. Everybody was getting handbell fever, including Yvonne Noble, the principal from Mark Twain. Soon, she made Theile an offer he couldn't refuse.

"You live 60 seconds away from Mark Twain," she said, "and you're traveling all the way to East L.A. to teach."

Why not come to her school?

Theile took the bait in '99, and brought the bells with him.

TAKING ON THE WORLD

At Mark Twain, handbells isn't a club; ringing is a rigorous part of the curriculum. On top of homework and extracurricular activities, the ringers practice five days a week.

Theile believes that the music complements his students' education. Studying music theory coupled with hands-on music making enforces the children's other skills, such as math, critical thinking and problem solving.

By the time a ringer graduates, they're not just walking out with music experience, Theile said, they're ready to take on the world.

On Aug. 1, Theile and his students will do just that. Currently, they're preparing to answer their call to London.

During the month of July, the ringers will meet for three two-hour rehearsals. They will practice their repertoire — which includes sacred music and popular music covers, such as songs by artists Adele and Taylor Swift — for one hour and talk for the other.

He wants to be there for them and answer any questions they might have. The kids have a real sense of anticipation, said Theile, and he can relate: When Theile was 10-years-old he performed with his bell choir at the Washington Cathedral.

Theile said his main objectives are to be a guide for the children — to pay it forward as his bell choir director once did for him — and to uplift the spirits of everybody watching. Be it rock or sacred, Theile and his ringers have the unique opportunity to broadcast their musical message on a universal stage.

Potters Fields Park was removed from their original itinerary, so Theile and the Mark Twain Ringers will perform Exhibition Road on Aug. 3, Weymouth on Aug. 4, Southwark on Aug. 7 and London Live (Victoria Park) on Aug. 7. After that, the ringers end their Olympic journey.

Though performing at Southwark is thus far the pinnacle of his career, Theile said it's not over. He's retiring from teaching in two years, and he's up for exploring.

He looks forward to spending more time with his wife, Cathy — who he attributes some of his success, thanks to her patience, generosity and encouragement — and his grandchildren, Connor and Carly.

"It's not the end of the road," he said. "There's so much more after I retire. It's that fork in the road, where you look for something new."

areas.

"The wind is definitely the determining factor, particularly the Santa Ana winds," he said. "When you put a Santa Ana wind behind a fire there is nothing anybody can do to stop it."

Davis said the speed of the Santa Ana winds, which blow in from the Great Basin and Mojave Desert, is one of the factors along with low humidity and high temperatures, that determine whether the National Weather Service will issue a red flag warning in order to alert people about potential fire danger.

"We have not had a red flag declaration recently, but that could change," he said.

Both Johnson and Davis said to expect more fire warnings.

Johnson said LACFD has lots of equipment, including nine helicopters, at its disposal to fight fires. But he said home and business owners that have property near brush areas are the best defense.

Davis said in case of a fire people need to have a plan, get supplies, and have an emergency kit ready.

Residents can call the Malibu Emergency Hotline at (310) 456-9982 to get the latest hazard or disaster information concerning Malibu. Davis also said citizens can register their cellphones with the city of Malibu's mass notification system through the city's website in order to receive information whenever there is an emergency.

"People that have lived in Malibu for some time are aware of how things work, but there are new people coming in all the time, [who] need to be told and they need to be reminded," he said. "Even though we continue to be aware of these things there are people that need to know about having a plan, knowing what you are going to do and having disaster supplies ready."

Looks like a knee to waist high day most everywhere.

Long Range Synopsis

Looks similar in the AM, but with wind swell building later in the afternoons, reaching at least chest high at west facing breaks by sundown.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card™ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Kings re-sign forward Penner to 1-year deal

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES Forward Dustin Penner has agreed to a one-year, $3.25 million contract to remain with the Los Angeles Kings.

Penner's deal was announced Sunday with the Stanley Cup champion Kings, who have retained every significant player from last season's run to their first NHL championship.

Penner is a two-time Stanley Cup champion who has been with the Kings since midway through the 2010-11 season. He struggled during the regular season last winter, managing just seven goals and 10 assists in 65 games, but emerged as a big contributor in the postseason on a line with Mike Richards and Jeff Carter.

Penner scored the series-winning overtime goal in the Western Conference finals against the Phoenix Coyotes, sending Los Angeles to just the second Stanley Cup finals in franchise history.

City of Santa Monica

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING BEFORE THE SANTA MONICA CITY COUNCIL

SUBJECT: California Incline Bridge Replacement Project
(between the California Ave/Ocean Ave intersection and Pacific Coast Highway)
PROPERTY OWNER: City of Santa Monica

A public hearing will be held by the City Council to consider the following:

The California Incline Bridge Replacement Project would replace the existing California Incline bridge structure and roadway which traverses a steep coastal bluff with a new 750 foot long by 52 foot wide reinforced concrete bridge between Ocean Avenue and the existing pedestrian overcrossing near Pacific Coast Highway. The existing bridge was constructed in the 1930's, with an existing roadway width of 40' and a 5' sidewalk. Its condition is poor and deteriorating beyond the capabilities of what routine maintenance can repair. The purpose of the proposed project is to correct deficiencies in the existing bridge and make it safer for vehicular, bicycle and pedestrian use.

The proposed project is subject to federal, state and City of Santa Monica (City) environmental review requirements because the City proposes the use of funds from the Federal Highway Administration. To comply with the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) and the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) the City prepared a joint environmental document - Environmental Impact Report/ Environmental Assessment (EIR/EA). In order to proceed to the final design phase of this project, it is requested that the City Council certify the Final EIR/EA, adopt a Statement of Overriding Considerations and a Mitigation Monitoring and Reporting Plan (MMRP), and authorize staff to proceed with the development of bidding documents in accordance with the Final EIR/EA.

DATE/TIME: TUESDAY, JULY 10th, AT 6:30 p.m.

LOCATION: City Council Chambers, Second Floor
Santa Monica City Hall
1685 Main Street, Santa Monica, California

HOW TO COMMENT

The City of Santa Monica encourages public comment. You may comment at the City Council public hearing, or by writing a letter. Written information will be given to the City Council at the meeting.

MORE INFORMATION

If you want more information about this project or wish to review the EIR/EA, please contact Zach Pollard at (310) 458-8721, or by e-mail at zach.pollard@smgov.net. The EIR/EA is available at the City Clerk's Office, the Planning Counter, all City of Santa Monica Public Libraries, the LA Public Library at 861 Alma Real Drive, and on the City's web site at www.smgov.net/engineering.

The meeting facility is wheelchair accessible. For disability-related accommodations, please contact (310) 458-8341 or (310) 458-8696 TTY at least 72 hours in advance. Every attempt will made to provide the requested accommodation. All written materials are available in alternate format upon request. Santa Monica Big Blue Bus Lines numbered 2, 3, 9 and Rapid 3 serve City Hall.

Pursuant to California Government Code Section 65009(b), if this matter is subsequently challenged in Court, the challenge may be limited to only those issues raised at the public hearing described in this notice, or in written correspondence delivered to the City of Santa Monica at, or prior to, the public hearing.

Up late tonight, Aries

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★ Follow your instincts. You actually know what you want, even if others don't. Let friends or loved ones slow you down, but only for a limited amount of time. If you find yourself getting angry, go for a walk or take a break. Tonight: Up late.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★ Realize what is going on behind the scenes with a child or loved one. You need to slow down and understand what is going on with a partner. Work through an issue rather than ignore it. You need to resolve the matter and bridge the gap. Tonight: Let your imagination lead.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ A child or loved one cares enormously but cannot express his or her feelings that easily. Your energy level could be too high for some people. A partner or associate could be aggravating at best. Try to get clarity when someone you look up to comes up with an idea that seems vague. Tonight: A long-overdue talk.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ Clear out as much work as possible. You could be overtired and dragging until later today, when you suddenly have a surge of energy. Reach out for someone at a distance. You have a lot to say. Share -- but listen, too. Tonight: Just do not be alone.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ A serious conversation opens up your creativity. You have a way that attracts many people and, at the same time, controversy. Your imagination takes someone's ideas and makes them even more workable. Tonight: Dinner for two.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ Getting going takes extra energy and drive. You might want to be more centered than others before making an important decision. You see its importance. Use care with your finances; you easily could overspend. Tonight: Why not add some summer fun?

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ You have many opinions and might be challenged not to share them today. Ultimately, you could tumble into a problem that you don't want to deal with. Confirm plans and times. An underlying element of confusion marks the day. Tonight: Head home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Be willing to find a solution to a money matter. You might not be so creative when your anger seems to bubble up. As soon as you can, clear up a disagreement or hurtful situation. Your imagination will flow more easily. Tonight: Out and about.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ Be more cheerful and direct with a friend who tends to be negative of late. You can make or break this person's day. Your imagination might be a bit negative when dealing with your finances. Visualize less. Tonight: Your treat.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ Stop pushing so hard to get your way. In the afternoon, you will find a different path to the same end. Someone you look up to could be difficult at best, and he or she might be pushing you very hard. Say little and remain positive. Tonight: A must appearance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ Meetings and get-togethers with others go well most of the day. You enjoy people more than usual, until you get a certain message or call. Are you having trouble juggling some parts of your life? Listen to your instincts. Tonight: Do what you feel is workable.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ Many people follow your lead. You might want to rethink a personal decision, but not now. Someone obviously cares a lot about you. If it is not mutual, you might need to let this person down kindly. Tonight: Where the fun is.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS
The stars show the kind of day you'll have:
★★★★★Dynamic ★★ So-So
★★★★ Positive ★ Difficult
★★★ Average

This year much of your energy will focus on making your daily life better. An interest in a hobby that keeps you moving helps your physical well-being. If you are single, you might find yourself attracted to someone very different from you. You will meet this person through travel or some mind-opening activity. If you are attached, the two of you will benefit from traveling more together, alone as a couple. You might find that the embers of your love reignite. CAPRICORN approaches security in a very different manner from you. Both styles work.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Debbie Stevens, 47, filed a claim before the New York Human Rights commission in April alleging that she was fired in November by Ms. Jackie Brucia, a controller of the Atlantic Automotive Group of West Islip, N.Y., after Stevens failed to recover quickly enough from major surgery in August. Stevens had donated a kidney to Brucia, who apparently could not understand why Stevens was still in pain by Sept. 6 so that she needed more time off. (Actually, since Brucia and Stevens were not perfect matches, Brucia had Stevens donate to a woman ahead of Brucia on the waiting list, which created an opening for Brucia. Brucia's husband told a New York Post reporter in April that Stevens' claims were "far from the truth," but would not elaborate.)

■ In April, a jury in Charlotte, N.C., convicted Charles Hinton, 47, for a break-in at the Levine Children's Hospital in 2010, where he had been charged with stealing 10 video gaming systems that sick children relied on for entertainment while they received cancer treatment.

■ A CNN investigation revealed in May that the Disabled Veterans National Foundation had collected almost $56 million in donations over four years but given nearly all of it to two direct-mail fundraising companies. CNN was able to locate a small veterans charity in Birmingham, Ala., that received help, but mainly in the form of 2,600 bags of cough drops, 2,200 bottles of sanitizers, 11,520 bags of coconut M&Ms and 700 pairs of Navy dress shoes. Another, in Prescott, Ariz., received hundreds of chef's coats and aprons, cans of acrylic paint and a needlepoint design pillowcase. Said the manager of the Birmingham charity, "I ask myself what the heck are these people doing."
