Development will be back on the ballot in November

KATE CAGLE
Daily Press Staff writer

Two years after a contentious election concerning citizen initiative Measure LV, the City Council hopes to quell community concerns over development once and for all with its own ballot measure this fall. The measure to require a supermajority vote to amend the city's land use plans narrowly passed Tuesday with a 4-2 vote.

Now, it's up to the voters to decide whether to pass it when they go to the polls Nov. 6.

"A supermajority will cause developers to up their ante," said Councilmember Sue Himmelrich before voting for the measure. "When a project is a good project, it goes unanimously and we don't have the ill will and acrimony over it."

The supermajority requirement would not apply to development agreements for individual projects, discussions which have produced the most community controversy in the past. Rather, it restricts the ability of future Councils to increase height and density allowances in the Land Use and Circulation Element and Downtown Community Plan.

"It's not about individual projects, it's about our land use standards going forward," Mayor Ted Winterer said. If adopted, the measure will expire Nov. 6, 2028.

The measure has an exemption for affordable housing and the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District, which has considered an expansion of the Double Tree Hotel to supplement other revenue sources. The measure requires all eligible Councilmembers to be present for the votes.

Mayor Pro-Tempore Gleam Davis and Councilmember Terry O'Day were vocal in their opposition to the measure, with O'Day calling it a "nonsensical election

Derrick Guidry is a nice guy. In a phone call with the Daily Press he's kind and polite, asking about your well being, your day, and apologizing if he may have excitedly spoken over you, and who can blame the guy? He's passionate about the reason for the phone call, his clothing line named LAers Apparel. LAers (pronounced 'layers') isn't just a way to say Hey, I'm From LA, it's an acronym that means Love All Equally, Respect Self. It's a creed Guidry came up with and lives by after a short stint in prison.

"After I did my time and came home, I wasn't bitter," Guidry says, his slow-as-molasses, Louisiana-born southern drawl still clinging to the timbre of his voice.

"One of my friends said I had a great attitude for just getting out. He said, 'You have such a great attitude, you positive while others might have fallen back into bad habits.' Council waves white flag over Labor Peace

KATE CAGLE
Daily Press Staff Writer

A two-year war of attrition over potential Labor Peace Agreements on city-owned property ended Tuesday, with the City Council abandoning the idea amid outcry from local restaurant owners.

After directing staff to explore potential models for mandating a no-strike agreement with a union in leases on the Pier, the beach and at the airport, the majority of the Council said the idea was too fraught with potential legal and economic challenges.

"As I've delved into it further and further, I've come to the conclusion that the community's interest and labor's interest have diverged from one another," Mayor Ted Winterer said, who initially asked for staff to look into LPAs. "I think that we have already imposed a lot of requirements on our small businesses."

City leases already stipulate owners can not impede workers' efforts to organize. The City has about 27 restaurant tenants who pay about $4.5 million a year in leases.

The union most likely to benefit from an LPA requirement, Unite Here Local 11, remained mostly

Man Convicted in Fatal Beating Outside Hollywood Nightclub

An Anaheim man was convicted last week of beating a man to death outside of a Hollywood nightclub, the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office announced.

A jury convicted Dietrich Canterberry (dob 12/20/81) of one count of involuntary manslaughter in Los Angeles County Superior Court after deliberating for three days.

Sentencing is scheduled for Sept. 5 in Department 119 of the Foltz Criminal Justice Center. Canterberry faces up to four years in state prison.

At about 2:30 a.m. on Oct. 30, 2016, a dispute erupted outside a nightclub near Hollywood and Cahuenga boulevards. Canterberry attacked and beat 28-year-old Devion Jelkes, who was taken to a nearby hospital where he died.

Deputy District Attorney Seth Carmack prosecuted case BA451429. The case was investigated by the Los Angeles Police Department.

Los Angeles County District Attorney Jackie Lacey leads the largest local prosecutorial office in the nation. Her staff of nearly 1,000 attorneys, 300 investigators and 800 support staff members is dedicated to protecting our community through the fair and ethical pursuit of justice and the safeguarding of crime victims' rights.

City Council Adopts Malibu's First Homelessness Strategic Plan

The City Council marked a milestone, voting unanimously to adopt Malibu's Homelessness Strategic Plan during the Council meeting on Monday, June 25.

"This is a great example of a grassroots movement of people and community-based organizations responding to a need, partnering with the City, and evolving into a community-wide effort involving residents, organizations, faith groups and government agencies all working together," Mayor Rick Mullen said. "Now we are starting to see the positive results, and it really says a lot about who we are as a compassionate, engaged City."

The Strategic Plan is designed to improve the effective use of existing resources, align Malibu's local efforts with those of the Los Angeles County region and balance the need to protect public safety while addressing the humanitarian and long-term needs of homeless individuals.

The Advisory Group worked with a consultant to draft the Strategic Plan, which is the result of a community survey, targeted questionnaires and three half-day strategic planning workshops. The Advisory Group included about 30 representatives from the City, Malibu residents, the Sheriff's Department, the Malibu Task Force on Homelessness, the faith community, CART (Community Action Resource Team), the People Concern, the Malibu Homeless Outreach Team, S.O.S. (Standing on Stone), the business community, California State Parks, the County of Los Angeles Public Library, St. Joseph's Center (Malibu's Coordinated Entry System partner), and the Pacific Palisades Task Force on Homelessness.

This year for the first time, the City included a budget allocation to address homelessness in the Fiscal Year 2018-2019 Budget. Included in the Public Safety budget is $200,000 to support Malibu's Homeless Outreach Team and an encampment management initiative which are both part of the Strategic Plan.

Since they started their work in September 2016, the Homeless Outreach Team has gotten 30 people off the streets and into permanent housing. Malibu's homeless population has decreased from 180 in 2017 to 155 in 2018, according to the results released by Los Angeles Homeless Services Authority (LAHSA) of the Greater Los Angeles Homeless Count recently conducted across the County and in Malibu. This result is also lower than the 2016 Count which showed Malibu had 161 homeless.

To keep the community informed about the homelessness initiative, the City created a dedicated web page at https://www.MalibuCity.org/Homelessness to provide information and resources about homelessness in Malibu, information about the Homelessness Strategic Plan, links to staff reports, information on public safety questions, contact information for organizations that work on homeless outreach and services, ways to get involved and upcoming events. The page also has two recent videos the City highlighting the work of the Homeless Outreach Team and a town hall meeting about the Homelessness Strategic Plan.

Drescher Planetarium Features Deep Sky Wonders, Human Spaceflight, Telescope Viewing and a Report on the 2018 Grand Canyon Star Party

The Santa Monica College John Drescher Planetarium will present special feature shows in July on Summer Deep Sky Wonders, the latest developments in human spaceflight, a telescope session with a focus on the Moon, Jupiter, and Saturn, and a special report by the planetarium director on the Grand Canyon Star Party (GCSP). The feature shows — as well as our popular Night Sky Show — will be held on Friday evenings.

The events are at 8 p.m. and are preceded by "The Night Sky Show" at 7 p.m., offering the latest news in astronomy and space exploration, a "tour" of the constellations, and the chance to ask astronomy-related questions.

The July events offered are: "Summer Deep Sky Wonders", "Human Spaceflight Update", "The Moon on the Anniversary of Apollo 11, Jupiter, and Saturn!" and "The Grand Canyon Star Party (GCSP) — A Volunteer's Report".

"Summer Deep Sky Wonders" on July 6. Images of the wonders of the summer sky show us star birth and death, the raw material of planetary formation, and distant galaxies. Come discuss what they tell us about our universe, and pick up tips on where to go to view them.

"Human Spaceflight Update" on July 13. A survey of both the new "commercial" crew carriers from SpaceX and Boeing, and the latest details on flight schedules, the Orion Crew Exploration Vehicle, Chinese space station activities, and the state of Russian space vehicle development.

"The Moon on the Anniversary of Apollo 11, Jupiter, and Saturn!" on July 20. With guidance from the planetarium director, gaze through a variety of telescopes at the 8-day-old Moon and its Sea of Tranquility on the 49th anniversary of the first lunar landing, then take a look at Jupiter and its belts and moons, and at Saturn and its rings.

"The Grand Canyon Star Party (GCSP) — A Volunteer's Report" on July 27. A first-hand report on the 2018 North Rim Party – with images – from planetarium director Jim Mahon. With simultaneous events held on the North and South Rims of the Grand Canyon, the annual Grand Canyon Star Party is one of the premier astronomy outreach events in the Southwest, with amateur astronomers from all over the planet bringing a wide variety of telescopes.

The John Drescher Planetarium, which features a Digistar projection system, is located near the elevators on the second floor of Drescher Hall (1900 Pico Blvd., Santa Monica). Tickets are available at the door and cost $11 (nine dollars seniors and children) for the evening's scheduled "double bill," or six dollars (five dollars for seniors age 60+ and children age 12 and under) for a single show or telescope-viewing session.

Call (310) 434-3005 or see www.smc.edu/eventsinfo or www.smc.edu/planetarium for information. All shows subject to change or cancellation without notice.

LA Metro to Receive P3 Authority for Select Transit Projects Under Bloom Legislative Proposal

A measure to update LA Metro's authority to utilize public private partnerships and design-build for transit projects was unanimously approved by the Senate Transportation & Housing Committee on Tuesday afternoon. The bill, authored by Assemblymember Richard Bloom (D-Santa Monica) clarifies LA Metro's authority to enter into agreements to use public-private partnerships on non-highway subway, passenger rapid transit, and heavy rail projects. It also allows LA Metro to use the design-build method of project delivery with a majority vote of the Board of Directors.

"AB 1594 will allow LA Metro to use creative and cost-effective methods to meet the transportation needs of the Los Angeles area," said Assemblymember Bloom. "Our transportation needs and infrastructure have changed dramatically since the passage of LA Metro's original enabling legislation. This bill will allow the agency to take advantage of a wider array of project delivery methods for critical transit projects currently being considered."

Los Angeles County is expected to grow by an estimated 1 million residents over the next twenty years. The region's transportation system, already under significant strain, must evolve in order to meet the needs of the region while reducing congestion and greenhouse gas emissions. Public transit is a critical part of that evolution and solution.

LA Metro is currently seeking to utilize public private partnerships to build out its transit infrastructure and expand its service, but existing law limits its ability to do so for passenger rapid transit, heavy rail, and subways. The agency is currently considering using P3's for three specific projects: the West Santa Ana Branch Transit Corridor (a 20 mile light rail transit corridor connecting the gateway cities to downtown Los Angeles), the Strategic Managed Lanes Network (a countywide express lanes network), and the Sepulveda Pass Transit Corridor (a rail project that will provide transit options for the I-405, one of the most traveled and congested urban highways in the nation).

"Public-private partnerships are an essential tool for transit agencies seeking to maximize their funding. Similarly, design-build offers agencies a more streamlined method for meeting their needs. AB 1594 will allow LA Metro to better use both of these methods to build infrastructure, expand service, and meet the growing transit needs of the LA area," said Assemblymember Bloom.

Richard Bloom represents California's 50th Assembly District, which comprises the communities of Agoura Hills, Bel Air, Beverly Hills, Brentwood, Hollywood, Malibu, Pacific Palisades, Santa Monica, Topanga, West Hollywood, and West Los Angeles.

Is ridesharing green?

Dear EarthTalk:

Is ridesharing via companies like Uber and Lyft good or bad for the environment overall?

Jeff Timotheos
Akron, OH

BETWEEN FUEL, MAINTENANCE AND insurance, owning a vehicle is expensive—even more so in cities like New York, where residents pay an annual average of $430 for parking alone. It may be no surprise why the affordable, convenient enterprise of ridesharing, whereby you use a smartphone app to arrange a ride in a privately-owned vehicle, has gained massive popularity in recent years and is expected to see even further growth (22.9 percent) in 2019. But is this shift from car ownership to ridesharing good for the environment overall?

Professor Daniela Rus of MIT's Computer Science and Artificial Intelligence Laboratory, who focuses on ways to reduce traffic congestion and otherwise improve mobility in major cities, thinks so. "Ridesharing services have enormous potential for positive societal impact with respect to congestion, pollution and energy consumption."

Perhaps the biggest environmental benefit to ridesharing is carpooling. Uber's "POOL" option puts riders in the same car, with each individual rider paying less. Last year, Uber drivers served 35 million riders in POOL trips. If these riders had instead driven by themselves, cities might have seen an additional 314 million vehicle miles and 82,000 metric tons of carbon dioxide emissions. Lyft has also set a goal to make shared rides account for 50 percent of all trips on the Lyft platform by the end of 2020.

Besides carpooling incentives, Uber is also expanding their app to provide customers with alternative forms of transport like electric bikes and buses. Their partnership with Jump Bikes, currently available in San Francisco, Sacramento and Santa Cruz, California and Washington, DC, can shift millions of trips from cars to bikes. "We realized that we shared Uber's vision of multimodal mobility and had the same goal of decreasing car ownership," says Jump Bikes Founder and CEO Ryan Rzepecki. Uber is also working with transit agencies to help fill empty seats on buses and trains — which can be two to three times cleaner than a solo car drive—by allowing riders to book and use transit tickets in their app.

Additionally, in April 2018, Lyft announced their commitment to immediately offset the carbon emissions from all Lyft rides globally. Their first-year, multi-million-dollar investment will make Lyft one of the top voluntary purchasers of carbon offsets in the world. Lyft plans to help achieve carbon neutrality through the direct funding of emission mitigation efforts in the U.S., including emissions reductions in the automotive manufacturing process, renewable energy programs, forestry projects, and the capture of emissions from landfills. Lyft Co-Founders John Zimmer and Logan Green emphasize that this action is not the full solution, but a real step forward. "The more shared rides and clean vehicles on the platform, the fewer carbon offsets we will need to purchase," they report.

Enhancing the environmental benefits of ridesharing is an emerging effort across the entire industry. This past February, leading transport and ridesharing companies that account for a staggering 77 million passenger trips per day signed on to Shared Mobility Principles for Livable Cities, a coalition committed to prioritizing people over vehicles and reducing emissions in an increasingly congested and polluted urban environment. "Working together, we can have a real impact on congestion, making our cities easier to get around and more enjoyable to live in," said Joseph Okpaku, Vice President of Public Policy at Lyft.

Don't make laws you can't enforce

Editor:

I live on Lincoln Blvd blocks from the Santa Monica/Venice border. Rarely is a rider of Bird or Lime scooters in the bike lane in my neighborhood. Riders are 90% of the time on the sidewalks, 99.9% of the time without mandated helmets, and 30% of the time too young to have a driver's license. The abandoned scooters are a hazard - dropped wherever, impeding pedestrians, people with walkers or wheelchairs, and people pushing kids in strollers.

I have NEVER observed any enforcement of the "regulations" regarding use of these playthings.

But I have never witnessed enforcement of crosswalk violations by motorists, use of noisy leaf blowers by gardeners or residents, riding of bikes on sidewalks, littering or failure to pick up animal waste.

Why continue to create regulations which the elected officials know will go unenforced by a beleaguered and underfunded police force?

Eternally frustrated,

Killeen Pilon

Committee approves Measure to Protect Children and Firefighters from Toxic Chemicals

A measure to protect California consumers, children, and firefighters from toxic flame retardant chemicals passed out of its second Senate policy committee late Monday evening. AB 2998, introduced by Assemblymember Richard Bloom (D-Santa Monica), passed the Senate Business, Professions and Economic Development Committee on a 7-2 vote, a week after it passed the Senate Environmental Quality Committee. The measure prohibits the sale of juvenile products, mattresses, and upholstered or reupholstered furniture in California that contain unnecessary toxic flame retardant chemicals.

"Every day, Californians are needlessly exposed to toxic flame retardant chemicals that accumulate in our bodies and migrate into the environment," said Assemblymember Bloom. "AB 2998 moves us one step closer to eliminating these chemicals from our homes."

Flame retardant chemicals have long been added to a variety of household products to meet now-defunct flammability standards. Today, these chemicals are ubiquitous in American households and have steadily built up in human bodies and in the environment. As a result, Americans have higher levels of these chemicals in their bodies than populations in many other developed countries.

Among the general public, children and firefighters have particularly high exposure risks. Infants are exposed to these chemicals at higher levels than adults, often coming into contact with them in dust or through breast milk. Studies have linked these chemicals to lower birth weight, reduced IQ, and impaired neurological development in children. Additionally, when flame retardant chemicals burn, they convert into dioxins and furans: toxic substances known to cause cancer. Firefighters inhale these chemicals in the process of fighting fires and over the past several decades, cancer rates have increased among firefighters in part due to the presence of these chemicals.

AB 2998 prohibits the sale of specific products – juvenile products, mattresses, and upholstered or reupholstered furniture in California – that contain toxic flame retardant chemicals. All of the products identified in the bill either have no flammability standard or a standard that can easily be met without the use of flame retardant chemicals.

In fact, much of the industry in all three segments, has moved away from the use of flame retardant chemicals, in part due labeling requirements and increased public awareness about their dangers. However, disclosure requirements have been insufficient to fully eliminate these chemicals and legislation is needed to protect all Californians from these chemicals.

"We have come a long way since the creation of California's original flammability standard over forty years ago. We know now that flame retardants are both unnecessary and toxic; it's time to phase them out for good."

AB 2998 now heads to the Senate Appropriations Committee. Richard Bloom represents California's 50th Assembly District, which comprises the communities of Agoura Hills, Bel Air, Beverly Hills, Brentwood, Hollywood, Malibu, Pacific Palisades, Santa Monica, Topanga, West Hollywood, and West Los Angeles.

SMMUSD Seeking Applicants for Two Committees: Financial Oversight Committee and Santa Monica Facility District Advisory Committee

The Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District's Financial Oversight Committee (FOC) is seeking qualified candidates who will bring a depth of business and/or financial expertise to the committee. There is one (1) upcoming vacancy with a term beginning July 1, 2018. FOC application forms are available from the Superintendent's Office or through via the website: http://www.smmusd.org/fiscal/financialDAC.html and can be mailed to the district office (1651 16th Street, Santa Monica, CA 90404) or scanned and emailed to foc@smmusd.org.

The SMMUSD Facility District Advisory Committee for Santa Monica (SM-FDAC) is seeking qualified candidates for two open seats. The committee meets quarterly and twice a year with the Malibu FDAC. The purpose of the FDAC is to provide the Board of Education and district staff with the community's perspective regarding the use of bond funds for school site construction in conformance with board-established and approved goals and priorities.

Application forms are available through the Superintendent's Office or via the website: http://fip.smmusd.org/pdf/FDAC.Application.pdf. The deadline for applications is July 13, 2018. Completed applications can be mailed to the District Office, (1651 16th Street, Santa Monica, CA 90404) or emailed to dacapps@smmusd.org.

year political manipulation."

"I think the circus is coming to town and again, here is the sideshow for development fighting during the election season," O'Day said.

Davis criticized the supermajority requirement as undemocratic.

"The premise of this supermajority provision is if something is a really good idea, it will get five votes," Davis said. "This isn't getting five votes tonight."

The Downtown Community Plan (DCP) was adopted in 2017 to allow streamlined approval for housing projects up to 75,000 square feet, with larger projects needing a development review permit or development agreement from the Planning Commission. Projects up to 90,000 square feet are allowed along Colorado Avenue to encourage density along the Expo Line.

Councilmember Pam O'Connor was absent for the vote. She will be up for reelection this year if she decides to run again, along with Councilmember Kevin McKeown and Sue Himmelrich.

LABOR

silent on the issue. An LPA usually requires a business to make some concessions in exchange for a no-strike pledge, for example, requiring owners to hand over names and contact information for workers or agreeing to a card-check vote without a secret ballot. Unite Here represents thousands of hotel workers in Santa Monica.

Local mom and pop restaurants argued an LPA would give unions a foothold in their businesses. The Chamber of Commerce and California Restaurant Association began an onslaught in November, gathering about 800 petition signatures, sending out direct mailers and flooding the Council inbox with opposition letters.

"We've had a tremendously difficult time in battling this issue for the last year and a half, it's a severe threat to the viability of our business," said Richard Chacker, the owner of Perry's Cafe & Rentals, who appeared on the mailers. "Just by sheer default we're going to end up with larger corporate interests."

Councilmembers were persuaded by the argument corporate chains would be better equipped to handle the legal burden associated with negotiating an LPA and potential union requirements.

"If there's a risk this would tip us more toward chain operations, I think that's also of grave concern to me," said Mayor Pro-Tempore Gleam Davis.

Santa Monica would not be the only city to face backlash over LPAs, if the Council had decided to include a requirement. The Airline Service Providers Association has appealed a decision upholding LPA requirements at LAX to the Supreme Court. Councilmember Sue Himmelrich said the lawsuit there could open the door for legal challenges here.

"I'm uncomfortable with the whole setting we're in because we can't just pretend we're going to say you have to have a Labor Peace Agreement and not know what the consequences are," Himmelrich said. "The thing that really bothers me most is that we already have litigation in the city, some big litigation, and I think this would be more litigation."

In the end, Mayor Winterer asked staff to look at other policies that could give workers more protections.

up with black, brown, white, you name it. Growing up in Santa Monica — which was a lot different from what it is now — I knew I could adapt to society, because I grew up here."

Born in Louisiana and raised in the Santa Monica Pico neighborhood, Guidry grew up in a household and neighborhood in constant chaos. He details a childhood without a father, growing up being shot at and being "tested a lot" for being a "light-skin, green-eyed guy that dressed well… a pretty boy", with gang-affiliated brothers living the only lifestyle they knew to provide for a struggling family.

Growing up, Guidry was aware of the ways his brothers would get by and attempted to stay out of trouble by playing basketball at his local Boys and Girls Club in Pico. Eventually, being raised in this environment, Guidry said "you don't go looking for trouble, but trouble finds you."

His brothers asked him to sell drugs, the youngest of the Guidry brothers obliging because, as his brother put it, "you might as well be making some money while you're out."

He was arrested and placed on house arrest for selling drugs and eventually spent two years in prison for assault with a deadly weapon with the intent to do harm. "That wasn't me," Guidry said. "That wasn't my life."

Prison changed Guidry for the better. With a wife and child at home and his brothers continuing down a path Guidry refused to follow, he knew he had to take steps to become a different person, a better man. "I'm visiting my son through glass, with my family driving hours to see me... They [the prison] telling me when to eat, when to sleep, when I can do phone calls...I couldn't live like that, couldn't do that to my son."

After serving his time, Guidry went through changes; he and his wife divorced due to "being on different pages" and his brothers were now in prison long-term. Guidry had nothing left besides rebuilding his relationship with his son and the goal of starting a clothing line.

"I knew I had to get my life together," he said. "What I was doing, it wasn't my life. I was still in my 20s, kicking it with people that didn't have jobs, no career or anything, but I still had dreams."

To start his own clothing line, Guidry had to get the money to do so first, a trying task when a previous life haunts your potential future.

He worked odd jobs here and there— security guard, program coordinator, well-known club promoter — anything to help make ends meet, support his family, and keep his dreams of LAers alive. But when applying to more lucrative jobs, livescan fingerprint checks and criminal background checks would come back scaring off potential employers, putting Guidry back at square one.

"You don't get it til it happens," Guidry says, reflecting on his past life. "If I knew how serious it was, my life would've been straightened out a long time ago. State, City jobs, everywhere, it still gets pulled up."

Luckily for Guidry, his laidback, friendly demeanor kept him employed. He credits the Boys and Girls Club and New Roads School for employing him despite youthful mistakes. "I grew up at the Boys and Girls Club, so they knew who I was," he said. "New Roads, I was the security guard there. The kids, teachers, cafeteria staff, everyone liked me and I liked them. Once they got to know me, they knew I wasn't what my background check said. They knew the real me."

He worked his day job and promoted at clubs while working on his fashion line in his off time, starting LAers just a year ago.

"It's not where I want it to be but I know it'll grow. I have passion for this. People love it. They stop me and ask where they can get it. That's why I keep doing this."

LAers Apparel is a sporty, lifestyle brand, akin to something you'd see at a Lids, Champs, or Footlocker. The hats display "LA" in bold, stylish letters, with "ers" following in lowercase. The hats come in different colors, mimicking popular sports team's colors as well as offering other color variations. LAers shirts, tank tops, and v-necks have the mantra fully spelled out on them.

The brand can be found locally at Bay Street Boards in Santa Monica as well as the Rogue collective in Downtown LA. Guidry also makes house calls if you'd like delivery.

Next for the brand is a hat collection for the 1988 Samohi reunion, every piece custom made for the alumni. "My biggest following is Samohi alumni, this city supports me," Guidry said. "I have over 3,000 pieces sold just by social media and word of mouth, and that's just the city supporting that."

While Guidry wants his LAers to be the next Nike in terms of outreach (although he jokingly says Nike-type money would be nice), Guidry says LAers is all about the message, adding his son and mother are his motivation.

"I'm just trying to put love out there because there's a lot going on in this world. It's perfect timing for this message. Beyond that, I wanna make my mom and my son proud. They saw what i went through and I never gave up. Never let them see you give up and always and stay positive. I want to set an example and let them know this, LAers, this is for them."

Work will take place in the roadway, but will not create any lane closures. Please contact Carlos Rosales, Construction Manager at (310) 458-8721, x2620 with any questions/concerns regarding this project.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 2)

The word that describes you best over the next six weeks: driven. You'll hardly stop to replenish your joy. Recharge at the end of August. Get involved with the things that help you stay positive, and stick with it. In 2019, you'll lavish in new and better habits. Self-promotion leads to promotion by others in October. Sagittarius and Virgo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 48, 3, 49 and 1.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

Touching can reduce pain. To reach out to a loved one with the validation of a handshake, an embrace, even a celebratory fist bump — it will solidify the bond and the moment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

An agenda is nigh complete. How do you know? There's an air of finality around it — a sense that the job has been done and the next one is quite pressing. Wrap it up; excitements lie ahead.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)

To show up and do your work — well, that's just not enough for you. You want to be remarkable. You want to be the best. It's why today you'll sign on for something the others shirk.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)

Most don't reach adulthood without a scar or two, either on the inside or on the outside. You can be proud of the way you've healed. Don't wait for the chance to share your story; just share it. You'll be helping others.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

What happens today happens for a reason, and that reason isn't necessarily a part of some universal plan; it's simply the effect of a cause. You were noticing. You took action. And now here you are.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Although the entire problem is not yours to solve, there's a little part of it that you can and should handle. You're the best person for the job, and it may even be your responsibility. Good fortune will follow your solution.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

You have great taste and a knack for putting things, words and people together. It will be lucky to share the connections and creations you make with your real-life friends and the virtual friends on your social networks.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)

Time's winged chariot hurries near. In other words, it's as if you're being pushed around by the schedule, which can seem artificial and against your natural rhythm, but at least things are getting done.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

When you connect with others who have similar talents, things will go very well, but reach out to those with talents that are merely related to yours and it will go even better. Brilliant co-creations are possible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

When you get interrupted once, chalk it up to the other person's excitement. Twice or more, though, and you can take it as a red flag. Think twice about getting very involved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

You don't have to stay abreast of every new trend to be relevant, but it helps that you have an excellent overview of what's important to the generation behind you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

In the name of progress, you'll be the bigger person and rise above an annoying and essentially wrong situation. Defying emotional gravity in this way won't be too hard, once you let go of your need to be right.

Moon of Deep Thoughts

The Pisces moon brings deep thoughts. Here's one by Jack Handey: "Before you criticize someone, you should walk a mile in their shoes. That way, when you criticize them, you're a mile away and you have their shoes." Whether your deep thoughts produce answers, introduce options or just amuse you, you'll be better for having them.

WELL NEWS BY SCOTT LAFEE

A Sweet Tax Source

■ Even as the debate on taxing sugary drinks continues to be waged (in some places), advocates are looking at expanding the arena (along with our consumptive waistlines). In the United Kingdom, researchers collected household spending data on different types of food and drinks, and then used that information to calculate how price changes would impact shopping for such goodies as chocolate, cake and other desserts.

■ They concluded that a 10 percent tax on the price of dessert items would reduce purchases by 7 percent. While they concede that's just a guesstimate, they say it supports the idea that a dessert tax warrants further investigation as a public health measure.

City of Santa Monica

CITY OF SANTA MONICA
Ordinance Numbers 2578-2579 (CCS)
(City Council Series)

The following are summaries of Ordinances Number 2578 (CCS) and 2579 (CCS), which were adopted by the City Council at its meeting of June 26, 2018:

Ordinance Number 2578 creates a shared mobility device pilot program and establishes a process to select no more than two entities to operate an electric scooter mobility device system and no more than two entities to operate an electric bike mobility device system. The ordinance also authorizes the Director of Planning and Community Development, or his or her designee, to develop administrative rules with minimum operating requirements in the categories of maintenance, education, safety, customer service, data sharing, and insurance/indemnification. The pilot program expires on December 30, 2019, unless otherwise extended or terminated earlier by the City.

Ordinance Number 2579 makes a clerical correction to the City's Elections Code to clarify that the definitions set forth in the Political Reform Act apply to the City's Elections Code. The ordinance also increases the amount a person may contribute to a candidate, or a committee controlled by that candidate, who was on, is on, or likely to be on a ballot at a City election from $325 to $340.

The ordinances will become effective thirty days after adoption. The full text of the ordinances is available from the Office of the City Clerk located at 1685 Main Street, Santa Monica, California 90401; phone (310) 458-8211.
