Holiday trash requires beach cleanup

SURFRIDER: The Surfrider Foundation is recruiting volunteers to clean beaches on July 5

BRYNN SHAFFER
Daily Press Intern

As we approach the height of summer, California beaches tend to see an increase in visitors, and in return, an unfortunate rise in debris as July 5 has become statistically the dirtiest beach day of the year.

This Tuesday, Santa Monica residents are invited to participate in Surfrider's annual July 5 beach cleanup at Sunset Point in the Pacific Palisades from 4-5:30 p.m.

"While the Fourth of July is an awesome holiday, and a great time to celebrate our country's independence, it also coincides with longer days and typically nicer

New bill signed to fight single-use plastics

EMILY SAWICKI
SMDP Staff Writer

On the federal level, environmental protections were dealt a blow on Thursday as the United States Supreme Court (SCOTUS) issued a ruling — West Virginia v. EPA — restricting the ability of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to regulate carbon emissions. But on the West Coast, lawmakers continue to push forward an earth-friendly agenda here in California.

"SCOTUS sided with the fossil fuel industry, kneecapping @ EPA's basic ability to tackle climate change," Governor Gavin Newsom wrote in a social media post published by his office following the Supreme Court decision. "CA will lead this fight with our $53.9 BILLION climate commitment. We'll reduce pollution, protect people from extreme weather & leave the world better off than we found it."

The same day SCOTUS delivered its ruling against the EPA, the California Senate sent a bill to the Governor's desk designed to make all single-use plastics used in California recyclable in the next 10 years, while also compelling plastic producers to foot the bill for enforcement. By Thursday afternoon, Newsom signed the bill into law.

The bill, SB 54, was authored by State Senator Ben Allen, representing CA-26 including Santa Monica. On Wednesday, it passed the California State Assembly by a vote of 66-1, before passing the Senate, 29-0 the following day.

"Countless hours of work have led to this moment," Allen wrote in a social media post following the Senate vote. "I am pleased to announce that #SB54 overwhelmingly passed the Legislature and will head to @GavinNewsom for his signature. It's time for California to lead the nation and world in curbing the plastic crisis. Our planet cannot wait."

SB 54, entitled the Plastic Pollution Producer Responsibility Act, requires that, by Jan. 1, 2032, all single-use packaging and plastic food ware be recyclable or compostable. Further, the Act will "ensure that plastic covered material offered for sale, distributed, or imported in or into the state meets specified recycling rates. In particular, the bill would require not less than 65% of plastic covered material to be recycled on and after January 1, 2032."

SB 54 also requires producers of single-use plastic packaging and food service ware to register with a producer responsibility organization, or PRO, designed to hold them accountable to meet the state-mandated requirements laid out in SB 54.

"For far too long, plastic waste has been a growing burden for humans, animals, and the water, soil, and air we need to exist," Allen, who chairs the California Legislature's Environmental Caucus and the Senate Environmental Quality Committee, said in a statement provided by his office. "We knew that we needed to act. And in this time of extreme polarization in our nation, California was able to show that we can pass strong environmental legislation with bipartisan support that brought together the environmental and business communities."

The vote on the Senate floor has been a long time coming; Allen introduced the first draft of the legislation in December 2018. The bill underwent several revisions up to the final days of the legislative term.

The text of the bill requires that, by Jan. 1, 2028, a minimum of 30 percent of all single-use plastics offered for sale or distribution in the state be recycled, followed by a minimum of 40 percent by Jan. 1, 2030 and 65 percent by Jan. 1, 2032. Similar target rates were presented for expanded polystyrene, commonly known by the trademarked name Styrofoam.

The bill was expected to cost CalRecycle about $3.6 million per year in the first fiscal year, increasing to $5.1 million by 2023, plus $1 million each of the first two years to develop waste characterization studies. However, the PRO — the organization overseeing all producers of single-use plastic packaging and food ware — would be compelled to pay $500 million to the state per year for a decade, generating $5 billion in state revenue in the 10 years from Jan. 1, 2027, through Jan. 1, 2037. Those funds would be allocated to various government agencies "to monitor and reduce the environmental impacts of plastics on terrestrial, aquatic, and marine life and human health, including to restore, recover, and protect the natural environment," as well as "to monitor and reduce the historical and current environmental justice and public health impacts of plastics, including to mitigate the historical and current impact of plastics on disadvantaged or low-income communities or rural areas."

In written remarks, Allen said the bill would also save money when it comes to trash and pollution clean-up.

"Senate Bill 54 will reduce the amount of waste that burdens taxpayers and local governments, plagues human health, and pollutes our natural environment by decreasing single-use packaging and the most problematic plastic food service ware products sold in California and ensuring the remaining items are effectively composted and recycled," according to author comments published in Senate Bill Fiscal Committee Analysis. "Though the state and communities in California have been focusing efforts on reducing the burden from single-use packaging since the 1980s, taxpayers and local governments still spend over $420 million annually in ongoing efforts to clean up and prevent litter in streets, storm drains, parks and waterways. Existing recycling infrastructure cannot keep pace with the continued exponential growth in single use waste."

Californians to vote on 7 ballot measures this November

ADAM BEAM
Associated Press

California voters will weigh in on seven ballot measures this fall, the fewest to appear on a general election ballot since 2014.

Thursday was the deadline to qualify measures for the November ballot. Secretary of State Shirley Weber confirmed that seven questions will appear in November. Six are ballot initiatives that supporters gathered enough signatures to place before voters and one was placed on the ballot by the state Legislature.

Two other initiatives that had qualified were withdrawn after state lawmakers worked out a compromise and passed legislation before the deadline. Lawmakers also rejected a possible question about whether to remove involuntary servitude as punishment for a crime from the state constitution.

This year's ballot measures ask voters to weigh in on a variety of issues, including abortion, sports betting and school funding.

ABORTION

This question placed on the ballot by the state Legislature asks voters to amend the state constitution to guarantee a right to an abortion and contraceptives. Last month, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned Roe v. Wade, letting states decide whether to allow abortions. California is run by Democrats who support abortion rights, so the laws here won't change anytime soon. But California's right to an abortion is based on a right to privacy in the state constitution. The U.S. Supreme Court's ruling overturning Roe v. Wade found the right to privacy does not guarantee the right to an abortion, concerning supporters that the state's abortion laws could be vulnerable in state courts. This amendment would leave no doubt that abortion is legal in California.

SPORTS BETTING

Two ballot initiatives would amend California's constitution to make it legal to bet on sports in California. But they would do it in different ways. Both would only allow federally recognized Native American tribes to run sports wagering operations. The key question is how people would be allowed to place bets.

One initiative would let people bet on sports at privately operated horse racing tracks on Native American land in four counties. A portion of a 10% tax would help pay for enforcement of gambling laws and programs to help people who are addicted. This measure is supported by some Native American tribes.

Another would let people use their phones to place bets on sports. A tax would first pay for regulatory costs, while 85% of what's left over would go to homelessness programs while the remaining 15% would go to nonparticipating Native American tribes. This measure is supported by some sports betting companies.

If both initiatives pass, the one that gets the most votes will become law.

ARTS, MUSIC IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

This initiative, placed on the ballot by the group Californians for Arts and Music Education in Public Schools, would require lawmakers to use 1% of all state funding for public schools for music and arts education programs. That would be between $800 million and $1 billion each year, according to an analysis by the nonpartisan Legislative Analyst's Office. For schools with 500 or more students, at least 80% of the money must be spent to employ teachers while the rest could be used for training, supplies and education partnerships.

RAISE TAXES ON THE WEALTHY

This measure would raise taxes on rich people and use the money for wildfire prevention programs and incentives to help people buy electric cars to help reduce greenhouse gas emissions. The initiative, funded by a coalition of rideshare companies, labor and environmental groups; would raise taxes by 1.75% on people who have at least $2 million in personal income per year. That would bring in between $3 billion and $4.5 billion in new revenue each year. Of that money, 45% would go to rebates and other incentives for purchasing electric cars, 35% would be for charging stations and 20% would be for wildfire prevention programs, with an emphasis on hiring and training.

FLAVORED TOBACCO

This initiative asks voters whether a 2020 law that outlawed the sale of certain flavored tobacco products in California should take effect or be overturned. When the state Legislature passes a law, voters have the power to stop it from ever taking effect if they can gather enough signatures to put a referendum on the ballot. That's what tobacco companies did after lawmakers passed a law in 2020 to outlaw certain flavored tobacco products, arguing the products were designed to appeal to children. The law was delayed until voters could decide in November.

KIDNEY DIALYSIS

This measure would require a doctor, nurse practitioner or physicians' assistant to be present during treatment at an outpatient kidney dialysis clinic. This will be the third consecutive general election where voters have been asked this question. The two previous measures failed. This measure is backed again by labor unions who represent health care workers. And again, kidney dialysis companies are opposing it. Some have suggested the subtext of these ballot initiatives reflects a broader battle of labor unions attempting to organize workers at the state's more than 600 kidney dialysis clinics.

beach weather, so a lot of folks are excited to spend the day down on our coasts," said Newara Brosnan-Faltas, manager of the Los Angeles Chapter of the Surfrider Foundation. "And, unfortunately for our marine environments, many of the celebrations on the beach are dependent on single-use plastics, and oftentimes those don't make it into a trash can, or the trash can blows over, and they really end up littering our beaches."

The Surfrider Foundation will be providing all of the equipment needed, from trash grabbers to a hydration station and sunscreen. After the cleanup is over, Surfrider will be hosting somewhat of an "afterparty" at Boardriders Malibu, with tacos and beer, as well as a giveaway.

"Sunset Point in particular is a beach and a coastline that really needs lots of love and attention," said Brosnan-Faltas. "We, on average, will pick up anywhere from 400 to 500 lbs of trash in just a couple of hours there…it's one of our most polluted sites."

Last July 5, Surfrider chapters hosted 14 cleanups where 436 volunteers removed 1,719 lbs of trash and recycling from beaches and waterways around the country, according to their website.

Whether you're able to make the July 5 beach cleanup or not, there are tons of ways beachgoers can limit their individual impact like choosing reusables over single-use plastics and being conscious of packing trash.

"Following the leave-no-trace principle is a really good practice," said Brosnan-Faltas. "I know that sometimes when we're walking down the beach, we can notice trash and kind of have this internal dialogue inside where we're like, 'well, that's not ours. I'm not going to pick it up.' But, I think we all have to shift our framework into starting to think about trash on our beaches as a collective responsibility."

The Surfrider Foundation is a nonprofit organization, fighting for the protection and enjoyment of the world's ocean, waves and beaches for all people, highlighting five main areas: plastic reduction, ocean protection, beach access, coastal preservation and clean water.

Founded in 1984 when a handful of local surfers in Malibu banded together to protect their home break at Surfrider Beach, they have since grown into an international organization with a strong presence, consisting of over 75 chapters and 100 student clubs worldwide.

For those interested in getting involved with the Surfrider Foundation, you can visit https://la.surfrider.org and sign up to volunteer.

Tens of thousands of Californians in limbo as eviction protections end

MANUELA TOBIAS
Special to the Daily Press

Eviction protections for tens of thousands of California households still waiting in line for payments from the state's multi-billion dollar rent relief program expired Thursday.

Since September 2020, the Legislature has passed and Gov. Gavin Newsom has signed four laws shielding tenants who were unable to pay rent due to COVID-19 from eviction. The most recent extension shielded tenants through June 30 who had applied for rent relief from the state's $5 billion program by the March 31 deadline but had yet to hear back or receive payments. Those tenants can now be brought to court by their landlords.

"It's highly unlikely that they are going to get through all these applications by June 30, when the eviction protections expire," Sarah Treuhaft, vice president of research at PolicyLink, a nonprofit that has been reviewing the state's rent relief program, said during a press conference this week. "This means they are likely to be evicted and they might eventually get rental assistance."

Debra Carlton, chief lobbyist for the California Apartment Association, said they have asked their members not to take their tenants with pending applications to court.

The state Department of Housing and Community Development, which administers the program through a contractor, did not respond to multiple interview requests.

The rent relief program has paid more than $3.8 billion to 329,000 households, according to the state's public data dashboard. More than 28,000 initial applicants and 57,000 people who reapplied have not yet heard back, according to PolicyLink, which has been reviewing weekly program data from the state through Public Record Act requests.

Horne LLP, a Mississippi-based accounting firm that specializes in disaster relief, is being paid a total of $278 million to distribute $4.5 billion of the federal rent relief funds, according to a contract renewal dated April 1 that CalMatters obtained through the Public Records Act on June 17.

State Assemblymember Buffy Wicks, a Democrat from Oakland and co-author of the last extension, acknowledged the program has been "incredibly frustrating." She said the state housing department had assured her qualifying applications would be paid.

"I think it's no secret that it's had challenges," she said. "And while I'm sympathetic to some of the challenges we've had as a state government in terms of dealing with a global pandemic that none of us anticipated, it's also our job as government to run well especially when you're talking about critical social safety nets."

But there's a silver lining for tenant advocates. A key portion of the now expired law was the preemption of more stringent local measures against eviction, many of which will now go into effect, including in Los Angeles County.

The state faces at least two lawsuits over the program from tenant advocates, who argue it has denied funding to qualifying tenants and isn't covering the amount of rental debt originally promised.

More than 135,000 people — or nearly a third of all households — who applied for rent relief had their applications rejected as of June 17, according to data CalMatters obtained from the housing department through the Public Records Act. That number spiked in the last few weeks as the program wound down. The lawsuit, which cites the same set of data, says tenants are receiving little to no explanation for their denials, which makes it difficult to contest the final decision.

"Tenants are facing eviction even as their landlords are given these giant checks and tenants who are eligible for assistance are being denied with these cryptic notices that don't tell them why. It just doesn't make sense," said Madeline Howard, a senior staff attorney at Western Center on Law & Poverty, one of the groups suing the state over the program.

Wicks said the latest state budget, approved this week, includes nearly $2 billion to pay back the state for a line of credit opened earlier this year to pay tenants who submitted applications prior to March 31, although it does not include any new funds for rent relief. The program covered rent for up to 18 months between April 1, 2020 and March 31, 2022 for low-income tenants who were financially impacted by COVID-19.

SANTA MONICA RENT CONTROL BOARD NOTICE INVITING APPLICATIONS

Applications and letters of interest are invited to fill one unscheduled vacancy on the Santa Monica Rent Control Board for a partial term ending November 2022. The person appointed will serve until the next general election in November 2022.

All persons are invited to apply regardless of race, sex, age, disability, religion, marital status, national origin, sexual preference, or ancestry. Applicants must be residents and registered voters in the City of Santa Monica. No Santa Monica City employee may serve as a member of any Board or Commission.

All interested parties please send applications and/or letters of interest to:

Alvin Ho, Board Secretary
City Hall
1685 Main Street, Room 202
Santa Monica, CA 90401
Alvin.Ho@santamonica.gov

Applications are due in the Rent Control Board office by 5:30 p.m. on Wednesday, July 6, 2022.

Applicants will be invited to make a presentation of up to 3-minutes to the Rent Control Board at a public meeting at 7:00 p.m. on Thursday, July 14, 2022. The Rent Control Board will appoint a new commissioner that evening.

The State Political Reform Act requires certain officeholders to disclose their interest and income which may be materially affected by their official action. The applicant appointed to serve in this position will be required to file a Statement of Economic Interest (Form 700) upon assuming office, and annually thereafter. In addition, this position is required to complete two hours of Ethics Training (AB1234) biennially.

Applications and information on Board duties are available from the Rent Control Board Office, City Hall, 1685 Main Street, Room 202, by phone at (310) 458-8750 or online at www.santamonica.gov/rentcontrol.

Disability related assistance and alternate formats of this document are available upon request by calling (310) 458-8751.

CRIME WATCH

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON JUNE 26 AT APPROXIMATELY 5:30 P.M.

Officers responded to the 1200 block of 4th Street for a disturbance. Upon arrival, officers learned that earlier in the day, an employee at the location was involved in an incident where the suspect attempted to enter the building and charge his cell phone without authorization. During a verbal altercation, the suspect spilled his cup of coffee and demanded that the victim pay for it. The victim refused and continued to explain that the suspect was not allowed on the property. With the assistance of PD personnel, the suspect eventually left the building and the victim declined to press charges. The suspect returned later that evening and once again demanded that someone buy him a cup of coffee and proceeded to swing his arm at the victim, striking him. The suspect, 64 year old Ali Gholami was arrested and transported to the Santa Monica Jail. His bail was set at $20,000 with an upcoming July 21st court date.

Fourth of July Parade is back in full fanfare

After a two year pandemic hiatus, the 14th Annual Main Street Parade is back in all its star spangled splendor.

This well loved community tradition carries an extra level of significance this year, due not only to the length of time since it last took place, but also due to the special role established to honor essential workers. In lieu of a traditional parade grand master, all essential workers are to be highlighted, celebrated and considered leaders of the annual event as the community shares a collective 'thank you' for their continuous sacrifices over the course of the pandemic.

"I want to give back to the people something that everybody's in agreement about, and everybody loves the parade," said parade founder and organizer Jeff Jarow. "Especially after COVID, people can't wait for this parade. They are so excited to be out there and experience a nice holiday... and this year our specific message is 'thank you to our essential workers, we couldn't have done it without you'."

Jeff Jarow founded this event in 2007 with a simple goal of giving locals a place to gather, celebrate and bond. It has since become a beloved community tradition and one of the few times a year when the bustling tourism and transit heavy city of Santa Monica closer resembles a quaint and tight knit neighborhood.

As always, the parade is sponsored by the Ocean Park Association and runs along Main Street, the commercial and communal heart of the Ocean Park neighborhood. However, in a break from tradition this year's parade will run in reverse, beginning at the south end of Main Street and proceeding merrily northward until hitting Pico Boulevard. This route change was due to construction by the Civic Center parking lot, which rendered the traditional staging location inaccessible. Staging this year will instead take place at the South Beach Lots at the end of Ashland Avenue.

Courtesy photo

THE MAN WITH THE PLAN: Santa Monica resident Jeff Jarow is the driving force behind the parade and he said this year's event wouldn't have been possible without help from Magdalena Davis.

Several groups of essential workers have dedicated floats in this year's parade including Santa Monica Firefighters, Santa Monica Police Officers, teachers from the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District, as well as workers from Santa Monica's hotels and restaurants.

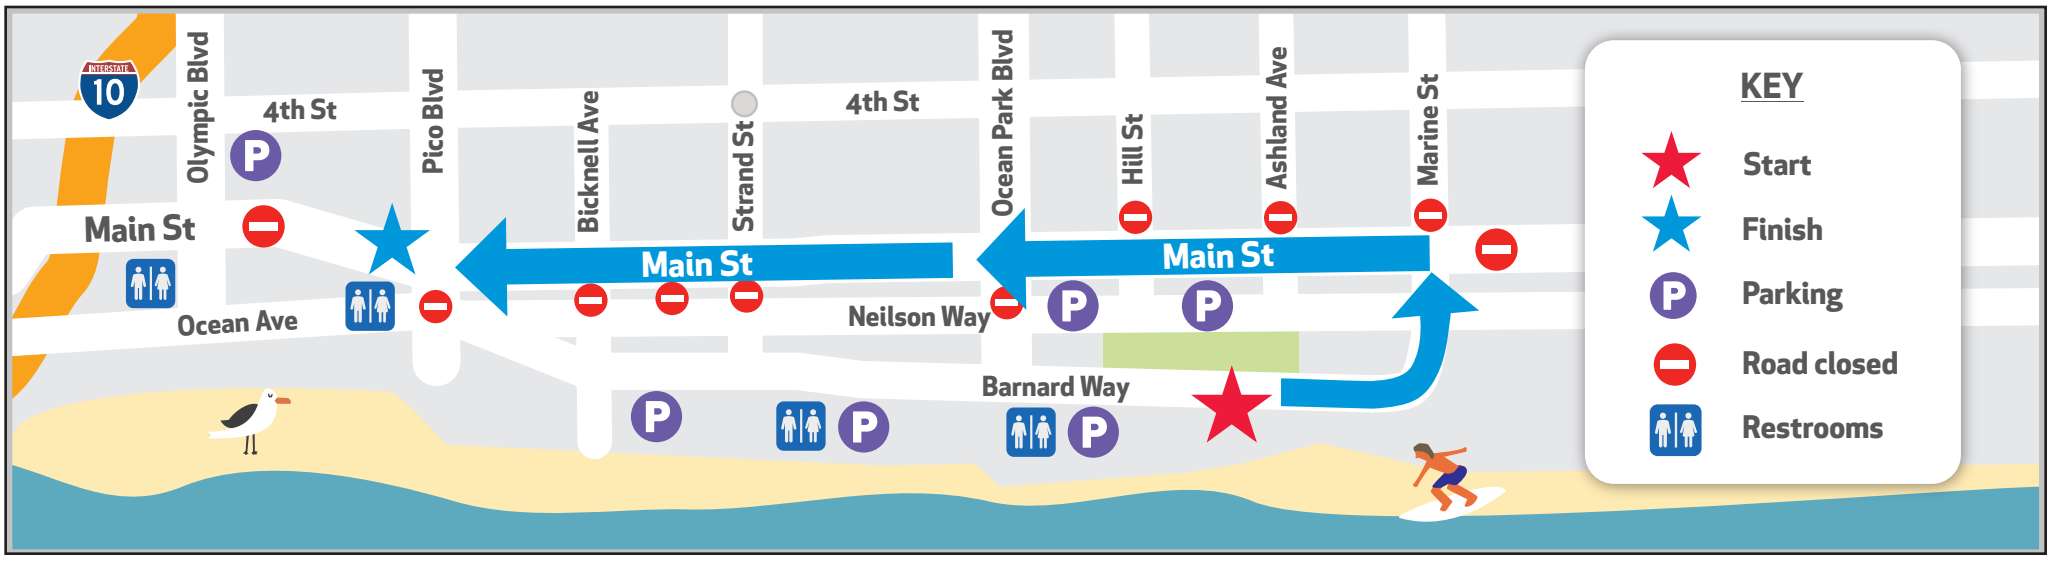

Jarow said he founded the parade with the purpose of creating a space of common ground; an event that everyone supports, enjoys and feels welcome participating in. As the years have gone on and politics, both local and national, have only become more divisive, Jarow believes this goal has only become more important.

"To get everyone in one place like this, this is really that one time that happens and it's sort of a place where everybody gives up whatever differences they may have had," said Jarow. "This is a place where it feels that Santa Monicans come together to be together and recognize the importance of the parade and the meaningfulness of why we live here and why we do what we do."

While politics are to be put aside for the day, there will still be many politicians in attendance. In past years the parade has drawn out all of City Council as well as the State Senator and Santa Monica's US congressional representative. The event gives residents a rare opportunity to celebrate and connect with their elected officials as fellow patriots and lovers of the Santa Monica community.

In addition to essential workers and politicians, the parade also highlights the many other amazing organizations and groups that make Santa Monica such a wonderful city to live in. This includes local nonprofit organizations, small businesses and kids activity groups. All in all, around one hundred decked out floats will be traveling down Main Street for the common cause of having a good time.

7. Swim with Heart

Swim with Heart is 12 years old and is a proud Santa Monica Business. We help kids and adults with special needs learn how to swim and be on a swim team.

8. Southern California DeLorean Club / SoCal DMC

Back in 1981, John DeLorean challenged the automotive industry with his Stainless Steel sports car built in a state-of-the-art factory in Belfast, Northern Ireland. Only 9,200 of these cars were made. After 40 years, approximately 6500 are still around. These cars are driven by members of the Southern California DeLorean Club. The area represents one the largest concentrations of these cars in the world. The distinctive lines leave no doubt these shiny machines will take you anywhere, including “Back To The Future” as the movie would suggest. Many do carry a Flux Capacitor. However, at 88 miles per hour, the noise and flash-of-light usually comes from the California Highway Patrol.

9. Bee Walkers

Bee Walkers is a Santa Monica soul and funk band. This band is made up of childhood friends that first started playing music together at SAMOHI. They are now performing regularly, playing both cover songs and original songs.

10. Santa Monica Fire Ass / Santa Monica Fire

Essential Workers, the Santa Monica Fire Association is proud to be honored at this year’s parade.

11. Venice Japanese American Memorial Monument Committee

Venice Japanese American Memorial Monument founding committee member, 99 year old and former Manzanar internee, Mae Kakehashi and her son Dr. Robert Kakahashi. In April 1942, during WWII more than a thousand American men, women and children of Japanese ancestry in Venice, Santa Monica and Malibu reported to the corner at Venice & Lincoln Blvds. With only what they could carry, buses transported them directly to the AMerican concentration camp at Manzanar in Inyo County where many internees were incarcerated for more than 3 years. Formed in 2010, the Venice Japanese American Memorial Monument (VJAMM) Committee, an ad hoc group comprised of former internees, concerned citizens and activist dedicated the 9’6” solid black granite obelisk, a permanent memorial in April 2017 at this very corner. Visit the website at www.venicejamm.org. The banner is carried by (3) people: Terumi Tanisha Garcia, a Cal Poly Pomona student and recipient of the Arnold Maeda Manzanar Pilgrimage Grant; John Moody and Fehmi Yildirim. Riding in the car (4) people: Venice Japanese American Memorial Monument Founding Committee Member, 99 years old, former Manzanar internee, and medical stenographer, Mae Kageyama Kakehashi accompanied by her son Dr. Robert Kakehashi, and VJAMM Founding Committee Members Dr. Alice Stek, and Suzanne Thompson.

12. Chabad Camp Gan Israel / Chabad on 17th in Santa Monica

Chabad in Santa Monica provides religious, social and humanitarian services to residents and visitors in Santa Monica and the bay area. Camp Gan Israel is celebrating its 55th year on the westside, giving Jewish children a fabulous Summer experience.

13. FrontLine Workers of Providence Saint Johns / Providence Saint Johns Health Center

Here we have the front line workers of Providence Saint John’s, one of our sponsors for this year’s parade!

They are led by Dr. Lahiji and his family. Dr. Lahiji is the Providence Saint John’s Doctor of the Year and a beautiful representation of someone who lives out the mission and vision of Providence, treating all he encounters with dignity and care. Thank you, Dr. Lahiji, for your work on the front lines!

He is followed by more valuable providers, nurses, caregivers and volunteers of Providence Saint John’s, along with their families. Our families are the number one support and we can’t thank them enough for getting us through the past few years, and every day!

We can’t leave out Eloise, representing the dozen or so of our furry friends from the Saint John’s Pawsitive Pets Program, bringing comfort to patients throughout the hospital.

Thank you to all the essential workers from Providence Saint John’s who have been providing healing love to the community for the past 80 years!

14. Mr Citizen Patriot / Justiceville

Patriotic education and homelessness resolution, Mr Citizen Patriot is a fan favorite, attending the annual parade each year.

15. White Chocolate Martini / Santa Monica Music Center

White Chocolate Martini is a band from the Santa Monica Music Store! Santa Monica Music Store voted most loved legacy business and has a 50 year history in the community, offering lessons, rentals, repairs , instruments, and accessories as well as studio time.

Greater LA Realtors (GLAR) is a real estate trade organization representing a membership of over 13,000 REALTOR® members throughout Los Angeles This year, GLAR undertook our regionalization plan to ensure that there was more localized representation to better respond to the community's needs, tailor programming events like marching in today's 4th of July Parade, They advocate on important issues in the region such as protecting property rights, free enterprise, increase housing production and promoting homeownership which are all important to achieving the American Dream.

GLAR along with the California Association of REALTORS® and National Association of REALTORS®, has long advocated for amending the Fair Housing Act to include sexual orientation and gender identity, which would reflect NAR's own LGBTQ-inclusive REALTOR® Code of Ethics. So many are shocked to learn that the LGBTQ+ community is not protected in the federal Fair Housing Act. Our economy and communities suffer when discrimination and segregation artificially constrain homeownership and limit intergenerational wealth that it builds.

From the frontlines to the parade procession, community honors healthcare heroes

Local healthcare workers will be trading their scrubs for stars and stripes this 4th of July with a place of honor at the annual parade.

Providence Saint John's and UCLA Santa Monica Medical Center both have floats in this year's parade and look forward to celebrating the tireless sacrifices of their employees with great fanfare.

Collectively over 100 people will be participating from the two medical organizations including doctors, nurses, caregivers, lab technicians, support staff and their family. UCLA will also be bringing some hard working fuzzy friends who serve as hospital therapy animals.

While in a normal year there is one parade grand master, this year and the years since the parade last took place in 2019 have been anything but normal. Recognizing the unique circumstances, parade organizer Jeff Jarow thought it wouldn't be enough to simply honor the contributions of one individual and has instead designated all essential workers as leaders of this parade.

"We let know that the theme was 'thank you to our essential workers' and so we definitely wanted to honor them for all the hard work that they do day in and day out, especially the last few years, and so they're literally like over the moon to take part in the parade and be recognized by the community," said Christina Crawford, community health supervisor at Providence Saint John's.

UCLA will be entering one of their shuttle buses into the parade and also having many of their staff members and their families join foot.

"We are within the City of Santa Monica; this is also home to a lot of us, including myself, and these past years have just been unprecedented and at times stressful. And we haven't faltered in caring for our community and their patients and families and everything. So we're just really looking forward to celebrating now, for once, with everybody all in together," said Janet Rimicci, senior director of UCLA Santa Monica Medical Center

Providence Saint John's float will be a car driven by Dr. Parshawn Lahiji, who is the Associate Program Medical Director at Providence St. John's Intensive Care Unit. He oversaw care from some of the most critical COVID-19 patients and was recently honored with a Friend of Nursing Advocacy Award.

"This is a physician who advocates for the profession of nursing through educational support and through nursing recognition," said Crawford. "All he encounters he treats them with dignity and care and it's noticed by his colleagues as well as the patients, so we're excited to have him lead our entry in the parade this year."

This year's healthcare parade participants have quite literally carried the community on their backs, managing urgent and intensive care for COVID patients in addition to their wide array of specialty medical services. Many of these workers live within Santa Monica and are excited to connect with the community in a time of celebration as opposed to illness.

"What's so neat about Santa Monica is it's within LA County, but… it just feels like a smaller community in a lot of ways, so a parade just means even more I think, because a lot of us all know each other and it's the same community we serve in our hospital," said Rimicci. So just having that chance to see each other and celebrate life and our partnership is just so incredible."

COMMUNITY NEWS

Citywide

Safety Measures Recommended for Fourth of July Weekend

Public Health is continuing to track the impact of the pandemic in LA County using the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) COVID-19 Community Levels framework and the County's Early Alert Signals.

Currently, the county remains at the CDC designated COVID-19 Medium Community Level. However, there are increasing concerns about the impact of new Omicron sub-variants on transmission and hospitalizations that could result in the County moving into the High Community Level designation sometime later this summer.

Our seven-day case rate is currently at 326 cases per week per 100,000 people, an increase from last week when the case rate was 307.

The first of two hospital metrics in the CDC Community Levels Framework is the seven-day total of new hospital admissions per 100,000, which rose this past week to 8.1 admissions per 100,000 people. This is a 56% increase compared to one month ago. The second hospital metric, the seven-day average for the proportion of staffed inpatient beds occupied by COVID-19 patients, also increased this past week to 4.2%.

If the county moves into the CDC designated High Community Level and remains there for two consecutive weeks, the county would implement a universal indoor masking requirement for everyone age 2 and older in LA County as a safety measure aligned with the CDC framework. The safety measure would remain in effect until the county returned to the CDC Medium Community Level designation, or lower, for two consecutive weeks.

It's important to note that Public Health can't predict with certainty what the future hospitalization trend will look like. Hospitalizations could level off or begin to decline. With the continued proliferation of new Omicron subvariants, it is very difficult to accurately predict the rate of hospitalizations, so Public Health will continue to closely monitor the CDC metrics.

Because hospitalizations are a lagging indicator, it is important to also track other metrics that indicate areas of concern and/or risk. Our Early Alert signals track both community and sector specific pandemic activity. As a reminder, school outbreaks will not be tracked over the summer since schools are closed.

Six of the seven Early Alert metrics Public Health are tracking continue to convey cause for Medium or High Concern. Moreover, in the past week, four Early Alert Signals moved upward in the level of concern: The case rate in the lowest income areas and the number of new outbreaks at Skilled Nursing Facilities per week, both moved up to High Concern. The number of new outbreaks in settings for People Experiencing Homelessness is now at Medium Concern. And the number of worksite clusters increased, moving from Medium to High Concern for the first time since Public Health started tracking this metric in early March.

There was also an uptick in the percentage of Emergency Department Visits. The only measure indicating Low Concern is the number of sewer systems with a two-fold increase in viral load.

When a sector-specific metric moves up in level of concern, additional safety measures are implemented, and remain in place until the level of concern has dropped for two weeks. For example, although there has been some fluctuation in the elevated level of concerns at nursing homes based on their outbreak numbers, and they move between Medium and High Concern for a couple of weeks now, the enhanced protection measures that were put in place under High Concern are still in place - requiring staff to wear N95 respirators at all times in the facility, conducting routine testing twice weekly for staff and weekly for residents, regardless of vaccination status, and moving, where possible, communal activities outdoors.

"I send my deepest sympathies and wishes of peace and comfort to the many families who have lost a loved one from COVID-19," said Barbara Ferrer, PhD, MPH, MEd, Director of Public Health. "Since July 4 is right around the corner and many of us are looking forward to celebrating Independence Day with family and friends, it is important to remember that many of our loved ones may be older adults, or have serious underlying health conditions, or not yet been vaccinated and boosted. Given the rising number of COVID cases and hospitalizations, and the increased circulation of the more infectious BA.4 and BA.5 subvariants, it is extra important to take steps that reduce the risk of transmission especially over the long holiday weekend; this helps us protect ourselves, our families, and our community. With a little planning, you can have a great time celebrating while keeping each other safe. Please be sure to remind friends and family to stay home and skip the celebration if they feel sick or have tested positive. It is also a great idea for everyone to test themselves before getting together, ideally on the day of the gathering. It is always best to celebrate outdoors, and if people come indoors for part of the gathering, wearing a mask is advisable, particularly if there are individuals at high risk of severe illness should they become infected. Let's use the tools at hand to enjoy our summer, our holiday, and our time with others."

A wide range of data and dashboards on COVID-19 from the Los Angeles County Department of Public Health are available on the Public Health website at http://www.publichealth.lacounty.gov.

90-Feet Tall American Flag Flies On Ferris Wheel For Fourth Of July

Pacific Park on the Santa Monica Pier's Ferris wheel will fly a 90-feet tall American Flag for the Fourth of July weekend celebration, along with a spectacular display of patriotic red, white and blue colors, patterns and transitions.

Independence Day commemorates the signing of the Declaration of Independence in 1776. The Continental Congress declared that the 13 American colonies were no longer subject to the monarchy of Britain and were united, free, and independent states.

July 4th is commonly celebrated in the United States with fireworks, parades, backyard barbecues, picnics at the beach, organized civic ceremonies, and more

The Pacific Wheel is the world's only solar-powered Ferris wheel featuring 174,000 LED lights that are mounted on the Ferris wheel's 40 spokes and two hubs. The Ferris wheel's lighting system features 16.7 million color value combinations to display dynamic, custom, computer-generated lighting entertainment. The eco-friendly, enhanced LED lighting provides 81 percent greater energy savings than most Ferris wheel's traditional incandescent bulbs.

The Ferris wheel soars nine stories high and lifts riders more than 130 feet above the Pacific Ocean to offer extraordinary views of the Southern California coastline from its location on the internationally popular Santa Monica Pier. For more information and operating hours, please call 310-260-8744, visit pacpark.com, and go to Facebook.com/pacificpark, Instagram.com/pacpark or Twitter.com/pacpark.

Conference realignment makes another seismic shift

JOHN MARSHALL
AP Sports Writer

Conference realignment in college sports has been going on since 1984, when the Supreme Court invalidated the NCAA's national television contract for football.

The conference juggling has gone through ebbs and flows through the years since, from small schools bumping up to bigger leagues to power programs switching to other major conferences.

The latest move, Southern California and UCLA bolting the Pac-12 for the Big Ten, could be part of a tectonic shift. Not just because of the marquee schools involved, but because it happened at a time when the NCAA is looking to take a more decentralized approach to governing college athletics, handing more power to schools and conferences.

"You might think this is more seismic because it's involving wealthier schools — and arguably it is — but also it's seismic because of the underpinnings of the system, the foundations of the system, are being challenged at a time when the financial structure is exploding," Smith College economics professor Andrew Zimbalist said Friday. "It may have larger ramifications, but it is a process that's been ongoing."

The decisions by USC and UCLA to join the Big Ten in 2024 come roughly a year after Texas and Oklahoma announced they were leaving the Big 12 for the Southeastern Conference.

While surprising, even to Pac-12 officials, the announcement Thursday gives the Los Angeles schools stability and exposure in a shifting collegiate sports landscape.

"It's huge for our student athletes, just from a national exposure perspective," UCLA athletic director Martin Jarmond said. "They're going compete at the highest level in a major elite conference in different time zones. UCLA is always national, but now we have the ability for student athletes to showcase their talent across the country. That's exciting."

For all the other benefits, the bottom line to the defections is the bottom line.

The SEC has become a college football behemoth that distributed $54.6 million to each of its member schools in the 2021 fiscal year. The Big Ten has tried to keep up and had a per-school distribution of $46.1 million last year.

The Pac-12 had the lowest distribution number among Power Five schools, paying its member institutions $19.8 million in 2021.

At the core, it's all about the TV.

The SEC has a $3 billion deal with ESPN that's set to start in 2024 and the Big Ten is currently negotiating a massive media rights deal. The Pac-12 has floundered when it comes to TV as the conference's network has struggled to gain footing while many of its games are played late at night.

With costs to run college athletic programs have climbed in recent years, exacerbated by the pandemic, moving to an even bigger conference provides more financial stability. For the Big Ten, adding UCLA and USC gives the conference a foothold in the nation's second-largest media market.

"Money talks," said Tom McMillen, President and CEO of Lead1, which represents Football Bowl Subdivision athletic directors and programs. "I was on the board of regents when Maryland jumped in to the Big Ten and there were all kinds of arguments about it was academics and it was this and that, but ultimately it came down to money. I think that's the same case here."

The defections will create two mega conferences that will hold the majority of power and money, leaving the rest of leagues scrambling to keep up.

The tiering could stratify even more if the SEC and the Big Ten continue to expand, which could be the next step.

The future power structure could consist of two, maybe three mega conferences of up to 20 schools at the top, with the Power Five joining the Group of Five conferences in the tier below but still above the Football Championship Subdivision.

More schools in the Pac-12 and Big 12, along with the ACC, could look to bolt for more stability.

Conferences losing members likely will face two options: combining with another league to form a mega conference of their own or expand on the current membership. The Pac-12 it plans to take the expansion route, issuing a statement on Friday that said it is exploring all expansion options.

"You have exploding costs on one end and your revenue sources are being decimated, which is a tremendous pressure," Zimbalist said. "On the other hand, what do you do? Well, something pretty radical I think is going to have to happen."

Uncertainty is the only thing that's certain at this point.

PLACE YOUR CLASSIFIED HERE

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 2)

It's a year in which you achieve a remarkable balance of opposites -- freedom with security; passion with practicality; serious play. You'll use your talent to promote the interests of others and take home an award for the team. More highlights: money from a new client or company, a renovation and a cuisine-driven adventure. Leo and Virgo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 1, 18, 6, 20 and 5.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You feel the unexpressed emotions of others. Because you're intuitive, you'll wonder at what people need in addition to and outside of the things they are actually asking for.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You'd like to help but aren't sure how. You don't want to be the person who thinks they are helping while they make things worse. So, you take the time to learn what's needed. Respectfully unobtrusive, you'll hang back and observe.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Treat everyone identically and there will be problems. People have different preferences. Trying to meet the individual needs of each is also problematic, plus exhausting! Do what you most enjoy. You'll attract a good fit.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). So much of life can be negotiated for those inclined to try. You'll be especially keen in such matters and will consider the first offer a jumping-off place. You'll think of brilliant deals, arrangements and compromises.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Certain numbers have a resonance for you and it's good luck to see them in your environment, perhaps on a receipt, address or license plate. What's even better luck is when you hit the numbers you've attached to a particular goal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Worry is produced by imagining a frightening future. Take precautions, handle what you can, and then project all that energy into a vision of the future in which you and your loved ones are healthy, wealthy and wise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You'll split your time between interests and people you adore. There is absolutely no better use of your day, so put off laborious tasks until another day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Following a whim will bring about an auspicious circumstance, but only if the impulse comes to you honestly, and not because you're just trying to get out of the work you told yourself you'd do. Give your inner boss priority.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). When you say "let's get together," you mean business. There's fun to be had with friends and you wouldn't dream of leaving this up to chance. You'll lead in this regard as you follow up with an adventurous plan.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Each day you gain both skill and awareness that there's exponentially more to learn, giving you the warped sensation of catching up whilst falling further behind. And yet you'll do it anyway, for the love of learning.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You have ideas about what a loved one should do next for optimum health and success, but unless explicitly asked, the best you can do is continue to be a fine example and trust that something good is coming together for all.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Those trying to appear normal will come across as weird because only weird people consciously strive for normalcy. You'll embrace anyone struggling to fit in, with the full knowledge that all the best people are weird.
