The menu at the freshly opened Jonah's Kitchen is as worldly, flavorful, and authentic as the Chef behind it.

The restaurant features Latin dishes crafted with a California healthy mindset and woven with Caribbean and Asian flavors. It reflects Chef Jonah Johnson's experiences traveling the world as a celebrated private chef and his obsession with traditional wood fire cooking techniques.

This fondness began at the age of ten when he was captivated by the California delays considering supervised sites for drug use

ASSOCIATED PRESS

California lawmakers will wait until next year to continue considering a bill that would give opioid users a place to inject drugs in supervised settings, the bill's author said Tuesday.

State Sen. Scott Wiener, a Democrat from San Francisco, said he was told the Assembly Health Committee will delay a hearing on his bill until January.

The measure would allow Los Angeles, Oakland, San Francisco and Los Angeles County to start programs giving people a place to inject drugs while trained staff are available to help if they suffer accidental overdoses.

"Safe consumption sites are a proven strategy to save lives and help people into recovery," Wiener said.

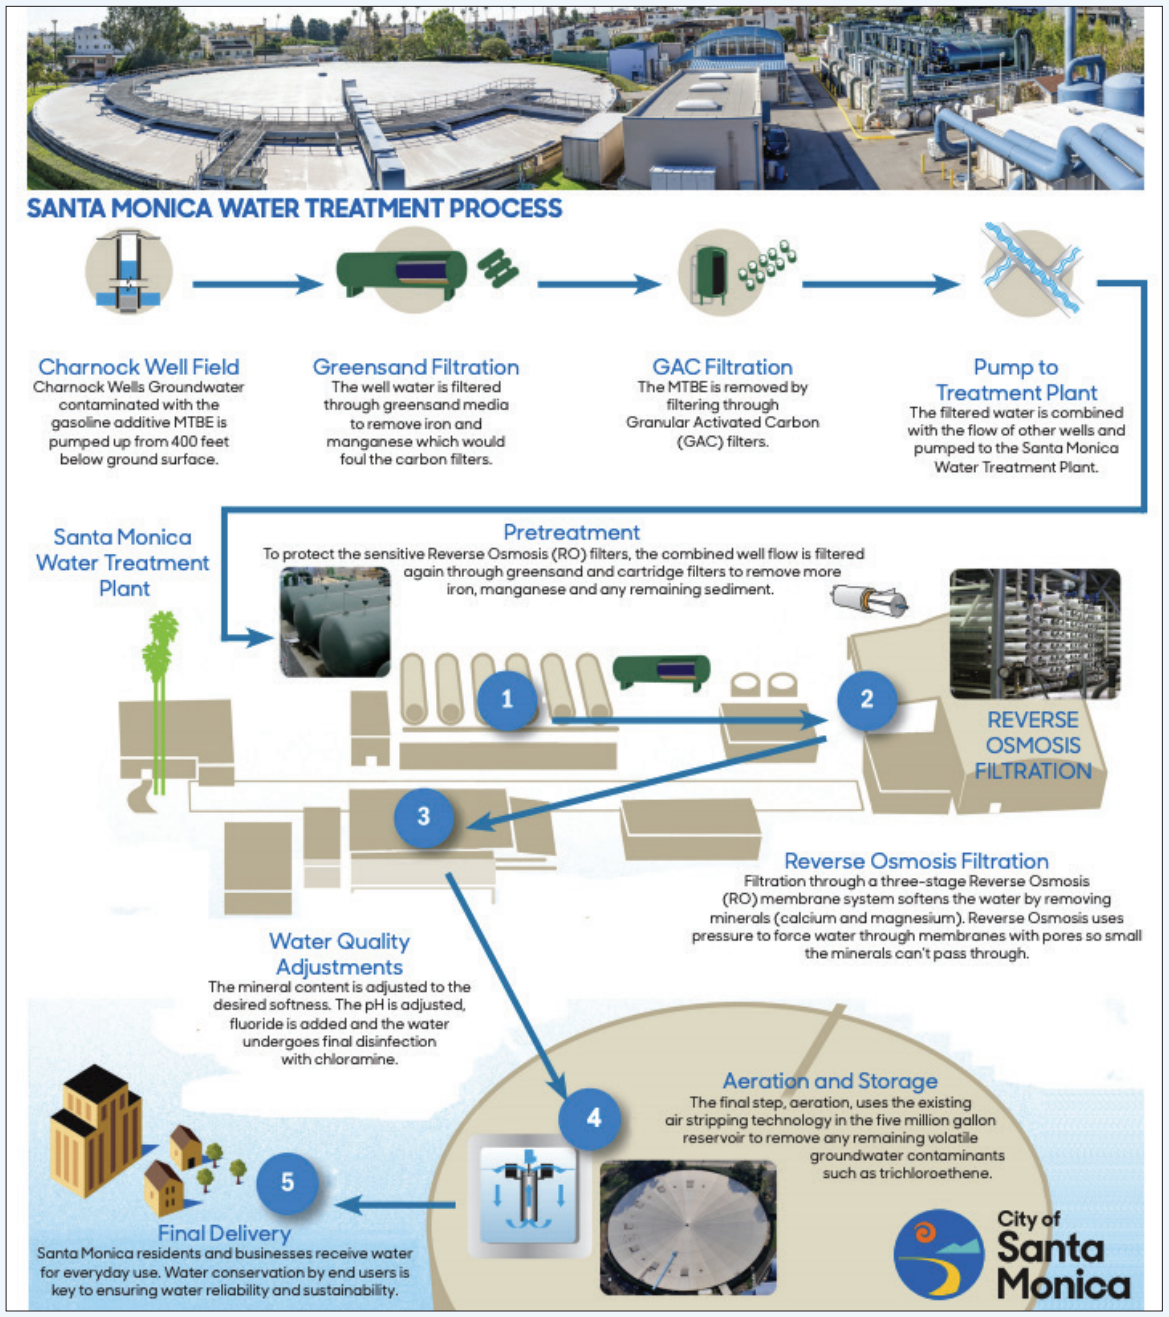

Currently the sites are illegal in the United States, but legal in Canada.

Wiener's bill cleared the Senate in April with the minimum number of votes needed for passage there. The Senate Republican Caucus said in a statement at the time that the bill would "establish taxpayer-staffed and funded drug dens."

The proposal is opposed by some law enforcement groups, but

WATER: The local treatment system produces good quality drinking water for Santa Monica residents.

MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

Santa Monica's drinking water continues to meet or exceed all safety standards but the persistent drought is an ongoing concern for local water officials.

According to the annual water quality report, local drinking water met all federal and state standards last year.

Pollution sources vary but can include naturally present material, soil runoff, industrial waste and corrosion of pipes and Santa Monica has experienced water contamination in the past. Two wells were shut due to pollution from gas stations that allowed Methyl tertiary-butyl ether (MTBE) to leech into the system

Covid cases at Skilled Nursing Facilities Remain Low

Cases at skilled nursing facilities plummeted since staff and residents began receiving vaccinations and remain low. For the week ending June 20, nearly 30,000 COVID-19 tests were completed among skilled nursing facility staff and residents and only seven people tested positive for COVID-19; one new case among residents and six new cases among staff; the majority of these cases are among unvaccinated individuals. For comparison, the last week of December 2020, a total of 2,532 people tested positive for COVID-19; 1,423 cases among residents and 1,109 cases among staff.

Currently, 84% of skilled nursing facility staff and 84% of skilled nursing facility residents are fully vaccinated. The low case rates at skilled nursing homes reflects these high vaccination rates.

The Los Angeles County Department of Public Health (Public Health) has confirmed three new deaths and 326 new cases of COVID-19. The number of cases and deaths may reflect reporting delays over the holiday. Of the three new deaths reported today, one person that passed away was between the ages of 65 and 79 and two people who died were between the ages of 30 and 49. To date, Public Health identified 1,253,065 positive cases of COVID-19 across all areas of L.A. County and a total of 24,507 deaths. There are 273 people with COVID-19 currently hospitalized. Testing results are available for more than 7,070,000 individuals with 16% of people testing positive.

"Our deepest sympathies are with everyone who has lost someone they cared about to COVID-19," said Barbara Ferrer, PhD, MPH, MEd, Director of Public Health. "We continue to see in places where there are high rates of COVID-19 vaccinations, transmission of COVID-19 has plummeted and remains low. While vaccination rates continue to increase throughout L.A. County, COVID-19 and variants of concern like the Delta variant remain a threat to everyone unvaccinated. L.A. County has recently seen increases in cases, hospitalizations, and daily test positivity and the people that are overwhelming suffering from COVID-19, are the people who are not vaccinated. The best way to protect those not able to get vaccinated, including the 1.3 million children under 12 years of age, is to surround them with vaccinated folks. With rising community transmission, we already have noted increased cases occurring among even our very youngest children. If you are 12 or older and around younger children, please take time soon to get vaccinated if you have not yet done so. Let's continue to keep each other safe."

Through Thursday, July 8 at county-run vaccination sites, LA City sites, and St. John's Well Child and Family Center sites, everyone 18 and older coming to get a vaccine will have an opportunity to win one of four packages of tickets and passes to botanical gardens in the area. Each prize package consists of one annual membership to the Huntington Botanical Gardens and one-day passes to Descanso Gardens, L.A. County Arboretum, and South Coast Botanic Garden. Official rules and participating site locations are posted online on the Los Angeles Vaccination Sweepstakes page. Winners will be contacted by phone and/or email.

Anyone 12 and older living or working in L.A. County can get vaccinated. Visit: www.VaccinateLACounty.com (English) and www.VacunateLosAngeles.com (Spanish) to find a vaccination site near you, to make an appointment at vaccination sites, and much more. If you don't have internet access, can't use a computer, or you're over 65, you can call 1-833-540-0473 for help finding an appointment, connecting to free transportation to and from a vaccination site, or scheduling a home-visit if you are homebound. Vaccinations are always free and open to eligible residents and workers regardless of immigration status.

COVID-19 Sector Protocols, Best Practices, COVID-19 Vaccine Dashboard, COVID-19 Surveillance Interactive Dashboard, Recovery Dashboard, and additional actions you can take to protect yourself, your family and your community are on the Public Health website, www.publichealth.lacounty.gov.

Hunt for Capitol attackers still on 6 months after Jan. 6

ALANNA DURKIN RICHER AND MICHAEL KUNZELMAN
Associated Press

The first waves of arrests in the deadly siege at the U.S. Capitol focused on the easy targets. Dozens in the pro-Trump mob openly bragged about their actions on Jan. 6 on social media and were captured in shocking footage broadcast live by national news outlets.

But six months after the insurrection, the Justice Department is still hunting for scores of rioters, even as the first of more than 500 people already arrested have pleaded guilty. The struggle reflects the massive scale of the investigation and the grueling work still ahead for authorities in the face of an increasing effort by some Republican lawmakers to rewrite what happened that day.

Among those who still haven't been caught: the person who planted two pipe bombs outside the offices of the Republican and Democratic national committees the night before the melee, as well as many people accused of attacks on law enforcement officers or violence and threats against journalists. The FBI website seeking information about those involved in the Capitol violence includes more than 900 pictures of roughly 300 people labeled "unidentified."

Part of the problem is that authorities made very few arrests on Jan. 6. They were focused instead on clearing the building of members of the massive mob that attacked police, damaged historic property and combed the halls for lawmakers they threatened to kill. Federal investigators are forced to go back and hunt down participants.

The FBI has since received countless tips and pieces of digital media from the public. But a tip is only the first step of a painstaking process — involving things like search warrants and interviews — to confirm people's identities and their presence at the insurrection in order to bring a case in court. And authorities have no record of many of the attackers because this was their first run-in with the law.

"Most of these people never showed up on the radar screen before," said Frank Montoya Jr., a retired FBI special agent who led the bureau's field offices in Seattle and Honolulu. "You watch the movies and a name comes up on the radar screen and they know all the aliases and the last place he ate dinner, all with a click of a button. Unfortunately, that's not how it is in reality."

The FBI has been helped by "sedition hunters," or armchair detectives who have teamed up to identify some of the most elusive suspects, using crowdsourcing to pore over the vast trove of videos and photos from the assault.

Forrest Rogers, a business consultant who helped form a group of sedition hunters called "Deep State Dogs," said the group has reported the possible identities of about 100 suspects to the FBI based on evidence it collected.

Sometimes, a distinctive article of clothing helps the group make a match. In one case, a woman carrying a unique iPhone case on Jan. 6 had been photographed with the same case at an earlier protest, Rogers said.

"It's seeking justice," he said. "This is something that's unprecedented in the history of our country." Rogers asked, "Where else have you had several thousands of people who commit a crime and then immediately disperse all over the United States?"

John Scott-Railton is a senior researcher at the Citizen Lab at the University of Toronto who has been collaborating with journalists and others to identify suspects using digital clues. He said that while much is known about the "small fish" who committed crimes that day, a deeper understanding is needed of the actions of organized group leaders.

"We all need to be in a place where we can have conversations about what Jan. 6th was that go beyond a bunch of individuals motivated by a set of ideologies who showed up at the Capitol," he said.

Those being sought include many accused of violent attacks on officers. One video released by the FBI shows an unidentified man attacking officers with a baton. In another, a man is seen ripping the gas mask off an officer who screamed in pain as he was being crushed into a doorway by the angry mob.

The FBI on Tuesday released 11 new videos of rioters attacking law enforcement officers and appealed for the public's help in identifying the suspects. More than 100 people already have been arrested on suspicion of assaulting law enforcement officers at the Capitol.

In some cases, social media platforms have turned over incriminating posts that defendants tried to delete after their gleeful celebrations of the siege gave way to fears of being arrested. Often, the attackers' own family, friends or acquaintances tipped off authorities.

In one case, the FBI used facial comparison software to find a suspect on his girlfriend's Instagram account. Agents then went undercover, secretly recorded the man at work and got him on tape admitting to being in the crowd, which he described as "fun."

"The more of these people you identify — potentially through search warrants and social media communications — you're going to be able to identify others," said Tom O'Connor, who focused on counterterrorism as a special agent before leaving the bureau in 2019. "Those people who have been arrested will then be given the opportunity to cooperate and identify other persons involved."

The FBI has offered a reward of up to $100,000 for information leading to the arrest of the person responsible for planting the pipe bombs in Washington on Jan. 5.

No relay: Banned sprinter Richardson left off Olympic team

EDDIE PELLS AND PAT GRAHAM
AP Sports Writers

Banned sprinter Sha'Carri Richardson was not on the Olympic roster released Tuesday by USA Track and Field, a decision that means the American champion's positive test for marijuana will cost her a chance at running on the relay team in Tokyo, in addition to her spot in the 100-meter individual race.

Richardson's positive test nullified her win at Olympic trials in Eugene, Oregon, last month and the spot that went with it for Tokyo in the 100. Her 30-day suspension will end before the start of the relays on Aug. 5, which left open the possibility she could win a medal as part of the 4x100 relay team.

But her name was missing from the 130-person roster USATF sent out. The federation had two discretionary picks beyond the top four finishers in the 100-meter final at trials but chose not to offer a spot to the 21-year-old sprinter, who was expected to challenge for Olympic gold.

Asked about how Richardson was taking the news, her agent, Renaldo Nehemiah, responded: "We haven't spoken about it at all. It was actually not a topic we focused on."

In a statement, USATF said it was "incredibly sympathetic toward Sha'Carri Richardson's extenuating circumstances" and "fully agrees" that international rules regarding marijuana should be reevaluated.

"So while our heartfelt understanding lies with Sha'Carri, we must also maintain fairness for all of the athletes who attempted to realize their dreams by securing a place on the U.S. Olympic Track & Field Team," the statement read.

In this case, that meant offering the remaining relay spots to the sixth- and seventh-place finishers, each of whom moved up in the pecking order after Richardson's DQ. They are English Gardner and Aleia Hobbs.

Richardson tested positive for a chemical found in marijuana after her victory on June 19. She said the stress of her biological mother's recent death combined with the pressure of preparing for trials led her to use the drug.

"I was definitely triggered and blinded by emotions, blinded by badness, and hurting, and hiding hurt," she said on NBC's "Today" show. "I know I can't hide myself, so in some type of way, I was trying to hide my pain."

Over the weekend, she sent out a pair of tweets: "All these perfect people that know how to live life, I'm glad I'm not one of them!" and "2022-2025 undefeated!"

Shortly after the 2012 Olympics, international regulators loosened restrictions on marijuana use, increasing the threshold for a positive test to a level designed to catch athletes only who were using it in the immediate hours before competition. Potential bans were reduced from two years to as little as the 30-day suspension that Richardson is serving.

But where some professional leagues, such as the NFL, NHL and NBA, have greatly reduced enforcement of marijuana rules, with the acknowledgement that the drug does not enhance performance, the Olympic world continues to test for and punish use in some circumstances. According to the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency, in addition to substances that trigger performance enhancement, the banned list can includes drugs that can pose health risks to athletes or violate the "spirit of sport."

It's a stance that has triggered a wide-ranging debate, largely in the realm of social media but also in Washington. Last week, President Joe Biden said that while he was proud of the way Richardson handled her ban, "the rules are the rules."

"Whether they should remain the rules is a different issue, but the rules are the rules," Biden said.

Meanwhile, Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez of New York tweeted out a letter she and Rep. Jamie Raskin of Maryland sent to the leaders of both the U.S. and world anti-doping agencies urging them to overturn the decision.

"Please strike a blow for civil liberties and civil rights by reversing this course you are on," the letter said.

SMC's Emeritus Acting Troupe to Perform July 17

Santa Monica College's Emeritus Acting Troupe is pleased to announce its performance, "Conversations: Scenes from Film and Theater."

The performance is free and will be held online as a live virtual event at 1 p.m. on Saturday, July 17. A Zoom link at the July 17 event listing at smc.edu/calendar takes guests directly to the online event.

The performance, which features students in SMC's Emeritus acting classes, will showcase silly, serious, and quirky scenes that inspire, entertain, and offer something to think about.

"The Emeritus players have put a lot of time and energy into this performance," said Dean of Noncredit and External Programs Dr. Scott Silverman. "And after a tumultuous year that kept us all socially distant, 'Conversations: Scenes from Film and Theater' is the kind of re-engagement we need. I'm sure it will entertain and delight everybody who attends."

SMC's widely praised Emeritus program, founded by Santa Monica College in 1975 to serve the lifelong learning interests of older adults, offers more than 120 noncredit adult education classes and special programs that serve more than 3,000 students each year.

More information is available at smc.edu/emeritus or by calling 310-434-4306.

All Universal films coming to Peacock starting in 2022

The streaming service Peacock is ramping up its offerings with a new deal with Universal Filmed Entertainment Group.

The companies said Tuesday that starting in 2022 all Universal films, including the new "Jurassic World" and "Minions" movies, will become available exclusively on Peacock no later than four months after their theatrical premieres. Both companies are subsidiaries of Comcast's NBCUniversal.

The unique multi-year deal guarantees that in an 18-month window, Universal films will be available on Peacock for the first and last four months. The films can be licensed to other services in the middle 10 months.

Universal's 2022 slate includes "Jurassic World: Dominion," "Minions: The Rise of Gru," "Puss in Boots: The Last Wish" and a new original film from "Get Out's" Jordan Peele.

The studio will also start developing and producing Peacock-only content.

LA cop cleared of wrongdoing for George Floyd 'Valentine'

The Los Angeles police officer who shared a photo of George Floyd with the words "you take my breath away" in a Valentine-like format has been cleared of wrongdoing and will not face any punishment.

The officer, who has not been named publicly, was found not guilty of any administrative charges by a internal disciplinary panel comprised of community members, the Los Angeles Police Department confirmed.

Police Chief Michel Moore had directed the officer to the panel, known as a Board of Rights, in May with the recommendation that the officer be fired. The chief does not have the authority to dismiss officers.

"The Department respects the disciplinary process and will direct employees to a board of rights where it is believed that termination is the appropriate penalty," the LAPD said in a statement Tuesday.

The officer chose to have their case heard by a board of three civilians, instead of two LAPD officers of the rank of captain or higher and one civilian panelist. KNBC first reported the panel's findings.

Leslie Wilcox, the officer's attorney, said the officer only shared the Valentine to report it to his superior.

"The Board of Rights panel was absolutely correct in exonerating the officer based on the evidence of this case. The officer found the meme offensive, he did not create the meme, nor did he distribute it beyond notifying a commanding officer of its existence," Wilcox said in a statement. "This decision shows that the Board of Rights process works and that the civilian panel is able to put aside political pressure and focus on the evidence in front of them in making objective decisions."

Moore had ordered an investigation into the racist Valentine in February, vowing that if the probe found that LAPD officers were circulating the image, "people will find my wrath."

"Our investigation is to determine the accuracy of the allegations while also reinforcing our zero tolerance for anything with racist views," Moore said.

Floyd, a Black man, was killed in May 2020 after then-Minneapolis police Officer Derek Chauvin pressed a knee on his neck as Floyd repeatedly said, "I can't breathe." His death launched massive protests nationwide over racial injustice and police brutality, including in Los Angeles.

Chauvin was sentenced to 22 1/2 years in prison last month for Floyd's murder.

GOP lawmaker joins recall race targeting California governor

A California lawmaker on Tuesday joined the growing list of Republican candidates hoping to oust Democratic Gov. Gavin Newsom in a September recall election.

Assemblyman Kevin Kiley – one of Newsom's most vocal critics at the Statehouse, and a rising personality in the California GOP – announced on Twitter that he would enter the race.

In a statement, he faulted the first-term governor for "special interest corruption" and promised to be an antidote to the governor's "lawless mode of governance."

"I've said I'm ready to play whatever role will do the most to get our movement across the finish line," Kiley said, referring to the recall election. "After hearing from tens of thousands of Californians, I'm convinced that role is to replace Gavin Newsom as governor."

Newsom's campaign didn't immediately respond to messages seeking comment.

Kiley joins a large GOP field that includes former San Diego Mayor Kevin Faulconer; businessman John Cox, who was defeated by Newsom in 2018; reality TV personality Caitlyn Jenner; and former U.S. Rep. Doug Ose. Conservative talk show host Larry Elder has said he's considering joining the race.

Kiley, a 36-year-old lawyer and former prosecutor from the Sacramento suburb of Rocklin, is known in the Legislature for fighting for access to charter schools and was one of the Republican lawmakers who filed a court challenge to Newsom's far-reaching policies during the coronavirus pandemic.

Newsom, a former San Francisco mayor, was elected governor in a 2018 landslide in the heavily Democratic state. The recall drive gained momentum following school and business closures during the depths of the pandemic that unsettled life for millions of Californians. The election is set for Sept. 14.

In a statement earlier this month referenced by Kiley, recall organizer Orrin Heatlie said volunteers behind the effort where disappointed with the field of potential replacement candidates and predicted Kiley, should he enter the race, would unite those backing the drive to remove Newsom.

However, Kiley is little known statewide outside of GOP circles, and he enters a race in which some of the leading candidates have been campaigning for months.

wood fire barbecue methods of his Southern father. Johnson's first foray into cooking was helping his dad prepare for barbecue competitions. A few years later he was setting up his own food booths at local fairs.

"Since then I've always been most interested in cooking over wood fire and all of the beautiful cultures and their methods of cooking with wood fire," said Johnson. "The cooks and chefs that inspired me most were pitmasters, gauchos and great chefs like Francis Malman of Patagonia."

Johnson's fascination with different cultures' traditional cooking styles also began in his youth as he grew up spending time in Mexico, Jamaica and Los Angeles. This taste for travel and ethic food never left him and went on to cook for celebrity clients, including Leonardo DiCaprio and Brad Pitt, in hotels around the world.

"I would meet all the chefs that were working in the hotels and we would trade recipes. They would teach me how to make a really great chimichurri and I would teach them how to make a Southern style barbecue sauce," said Johnson.

Jonah's Kitchen is the crystallization of Johnson's life experiences and culinary expertise. Its dishes incorporate flavors from Argentina, Brazil, Costa Rica, Peru, Italy, Korea, Eastern Europe and more.

"My restaurant is not intended to be any kind of fusion or clever thought out dishes no one has ever experienced," said Johnson. "It is simply the food that I love and the flavors that I grew up with in a very culturally diverse Los Angeles and through my travels around the world."

The aesthetic is inspired by the airy beachy restaurants of Tulum and intends to create a casual atmosphere welcoming for families, dates, or friends grabbing a drink at the tiki bar.

Menu highlights include the Yucatan pork — which is rubbed with achiote paste and orange juice, wrapped in banana leaves and slow cooked for 16 hours — and the Texas black angus brisket — which is smoked for 14 hours until it resembles "meat butter."

The restaurant is also focused on health-conscious dishes as Johnson has worked extensively with nutritionists and is devoted to sourcing the highest quality ingredients.

"I tell my people when you go to the farmers market look for something that looks unbelievable and they'll bring me some of the best looking tomatoes or squash or brussel sprouts and that'll be the chef's choice for the day," said Johnson.

Although he has years of culinary experience, Johnson is always learning and looking for new techniques and flavors to bring to his dishes.

His favorite textbook is the streets of Los Angeles, but he will rarely be spotted at high-end or trendy restaurants. Instead, Johnson always searches for the heart of authentic ethnic cooking, whether that's in the depths of Korea Town or the markets of Little Bangladesh.

He is also a big fan of home cooked meals and is constantly hosting friends and family to enjoy food prepared in his outdoor fire pits and brick oven. Johnson's at-home al-fresco kitchen was the inspiration for Jonah's Kitchen and he says he looks forward to welcoming the neighborhood into his world.

Jonah's Kitchen is located at 2518 Wilshire Blvd and is open from 5 p.m. to 12 a.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

DRUGS

Wiener said in a statement that it "is very much alive, albeit delayed."

Similar bills authorizing injection sites have passed both chambers of the Legislature within the last five years, and such bills have repeatedly passed the Assembly Health Committee during that time, Wiener said. Former Democratic Gov. Jerry Brown in 2018 vetoed a bill that would have allowed San Francisco to offer injection sites.

Wiener noted he was disappointed in another delay at a time when he said San Francisco and other cities are experiencing record overdose deaths.

His bill would require workers at the centers to try to get users into drug treatment programs or refer them to medical or mental health care or social services programs.

The former Trump administration sued to block a proposed injection site in Philadelphia, and a federal appeals court sided with the government earlier this year. Supporters have appealed and hope President Joe Biden's administration will drop the lawsuit.

Footage shows a person in a gray hooded sweatshirt, a mask and gloves appearing to place one of the explosives under a bench outside the Democratic National Committee and the person walking in an alley near the Republican National Committee before the bomb was placed there. It remains unclear whether the bombs were related to planning for the insurrection.

Justice Department officials say arresting everyone involved in the insurrection remains a top priority. Authorities recently arrested the 100th person accused of assaulting law enforcement as well as the first person accused of assaulting a member of the press — a man prosecutors say tackled a cameraman.

"They will find them," said Robert Anderson Jr., former executive assistant director of the FBI's Criminal, Cyber, Response, and Services Branch. "I don't care how long it takes. If they are looking for them, they will find them."

More than a dozen Jan. 6 defendants have pleaded guilty, including two members of the Oath Keepers militia group who admitted to conspiring with other extremists to block the certification of President Joe Biden's victory.

Most of the other plea deals reached so far are in cases where defendants were charged only with misdemeanors for illegally entering the Capitol. The only defendant who has been sentenced is an Indiana woman who pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor and was spared any time behind bars.

WATER

and after decades of work filtration systems were eventually put in place in 2010 to solve the problem.

In this year's report, MTBE levels were undetectable in the local supply.

The city's total water supply comes from three sources, groundwater (from the Santa Monica Basin), imported water (from the Colorado River) and runoff recycled from storm drains. While recycled water is used for irrigation, it's not part of the drinking supply.

Aesthetic standards are also measured in the report and while they do not have safety implications, officials said the measurements of odor, color or taste compromising elements are important as they generate complaints from residents. Santa Monica's water met all standards for the aesthetic category.

In addition to the normal water quality measurements, local officials also provided information on Covid contamination in the water supply saying the pandemic causing disease can't survive in the municipal water supply.

"According to the U.S. EPA and CDC, the COVID-19 virus has not been detected in drinking water supplies," said the report. "Current research shows no evidence that COVID-19 virus can be spread to people by consuming treated drinking water. Filtration and disinfection methods used in water treatment plants remove and kill viruses, bacteria and pathogens."

City Hall has had a long-term goal of establishing self-sufficiency and eventually eliminating water imports but the persistent drought has hampered those efforts.

"If there's no rain, it's hard for the city to be self-sustaining," said Water Quality Analyst Oscar Teller. "It's not like we have a good amount of rain every year so the aquifers are just not recharging like we'd want them to."

Teller said residents should take water-saving messages to heart.

"Use your water wisely and try to conserve it as much as possible," he said.

The City of Santa Monica is still offering incentives for environmentally-friendly measures taken by the community. For more information, call or visit the Office of Sustainability website at www.smgov.net/water.

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON JUNE 30 AT APPROXIMATELY 9:30 A.M.

SMPD officers responded to the 500 block of Ocean Park Blvd for a burglary investigation. A contractor at the location reported a missing motorcycle and that he believed the culprit was still at the location. Officers located a female at the property that, per the owner, was not authorized to be there. The owner also identified multiple items missing including a Ducati motorcycle. Damaria Evans was charged with 459PC- Burglary and received a citation and future court date before being released.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (JULY 7)

Healthy relationships will top the long list of things you're grateful for. What starts as an exciting attraction will develop into a deep connection and, at points, a shared mission. You'll entertain loved ones and contribute to the magic of many a social event. The places you see will enrich your work and open opportunity. Scorpio and Libra adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 38, 33, 21, 8 and 20.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Thoughts show up like intrusive pop-up ads on the internet -- suggestions based on your history -- but that doesn't mean you have to act on them. Click the little "X" and bring your attention back to what matters to you now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Shallow thinking leads to knowing enough to be dangerous. While not everything requires a deep dive, be alert to the signals that there might be more than what meets the eye.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Sometimes you wonder why you were even chosen, but you can stop that line of inquiry today because it's easy to answer: You're the best person for the job. Go and do it.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You'll toss out ideas to your friends, and though they may not act on them, your position as a valuable contributor and influence in the group will be reinforced.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). One part of you sets the tone and the agenda for the rest of you. Your inner leader beats the drum for your better angels to follow, and follow they will... until they won't. There's an inner conversation and negotiation to work out today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Inexperienced people can read about the inner world of others, but experienced people like you have felt it, so you can instantly spot it -- pain, excitement, need -- and seize the arising opportunity.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You'll see evidence of a person's attempt to hide something. You're not interested in shaming anyone or calling out bad behavior; you just want the truth. Naughtiness is a cover-up for an honest, if unacceptable, desire or need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Among the world's more interesting jobs is the scientific station involving the search for extraterrestrial life elsewhere in the universe. You can relate. You, too, await a distant affirmation. You won't regret holding out hope.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Financial decisions may be serious and requiring of a rigorous thought process and strategy, but once the decisions are made, back off and relax. It's only money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). There's a difference between the detachment of effortless coolness and one of shy reservation, though it's a difference many will not recognize. Go on and build your mystery; it's working for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). With intelligence and compassion, you'll connect with people on levels deeper than the business at hand. You'll communicate from the heart, which will take surprisingly few words.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). People ask things of you, their requests rarely coming in the form of questions. You'll tune into what people need and want, which is something very different from the literal meaning of the words spilling from their lips.

FIND THE WORDS

This is a theme puzzle with the subject stated below. Find the listed words in the grid. (They may run in any direction but always in a straight line. Some letters are used more than once.) Ring each word as you find it and when you have completed the puzzle, there will be 19 letters left over. They spell out the alternative theme of the puzzle. © australianwordgames.com.au 5168

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF: Bernadine Forsyth CASE NUMBER: 21STPB05682 To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both of Bernadine Forsyth . A Petition for Probate has been filed by Charles C Forsyth in the Superior Court of California, County of Los Angeles-Stanley Mosk Courthouse. The Petition for Probate requests Charles C Forsyth be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows: Date: July 9, 2021 Time: 8:30 a.m Dept. 44 Room 418 Address of Court: 111 N. Hill St Los Angeles, CA 90012 If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law. You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk. Attorney or Party without Attorney: Charles C. Forsyth 578 Washington Blvd #377 Marina Del Rey, CA 90292 Telephone (310) 345-9978 Published In The Santa Monica Daily Press: 06/23/21, 06/30/21, 07/07/21
