Pier organizers charting new direction for events

MADELEINE PAUKER
Daily Press Staff Writer

The Santa Monica Pier will be pulling funds from some programs this year to invest more money in its banner events, including a new Halloween celebration.

The pier has launched or rebranded several events since Negin Singh became executive director of the Santa Monica Pier Corp. in January 2018. Since last summer, it hosted its first holiday celebration in more than a decade, served as one of the main hubs for Santa Monica's inaugural Pride Month and doubled attendance for Pier 360, a sporty start-of-summer festival.

Singh said she wants to continue the momentum over the next year with new and elevated programming.

"I don't want to throw free events, I want to throw "I can't believe it's free" events," she said. "We're a destination people from all over the world dream about coming to. If they come here, it needs to be amazing."

One new celebration this year will be dedicated to Halloween, Singh said. Depending on the amount of funding the event

Council approves $450,000 to improve Council Chambers

MADELEINE PAUKER
Daily Press Staff Writer

City Council chambers are getting a $450,000 upgrade later this year.

City Council approved the improvements to the chambers' audiovisual, agenda and meeting management systems last week at the urging of city staff, who said the existing equipment and software, which were installed in 2009, are becoming obsolete and unreliable.

"It is increasingly difficult to repair or find replacements for many of the system's components since many of the models have been discontinued," staff said.

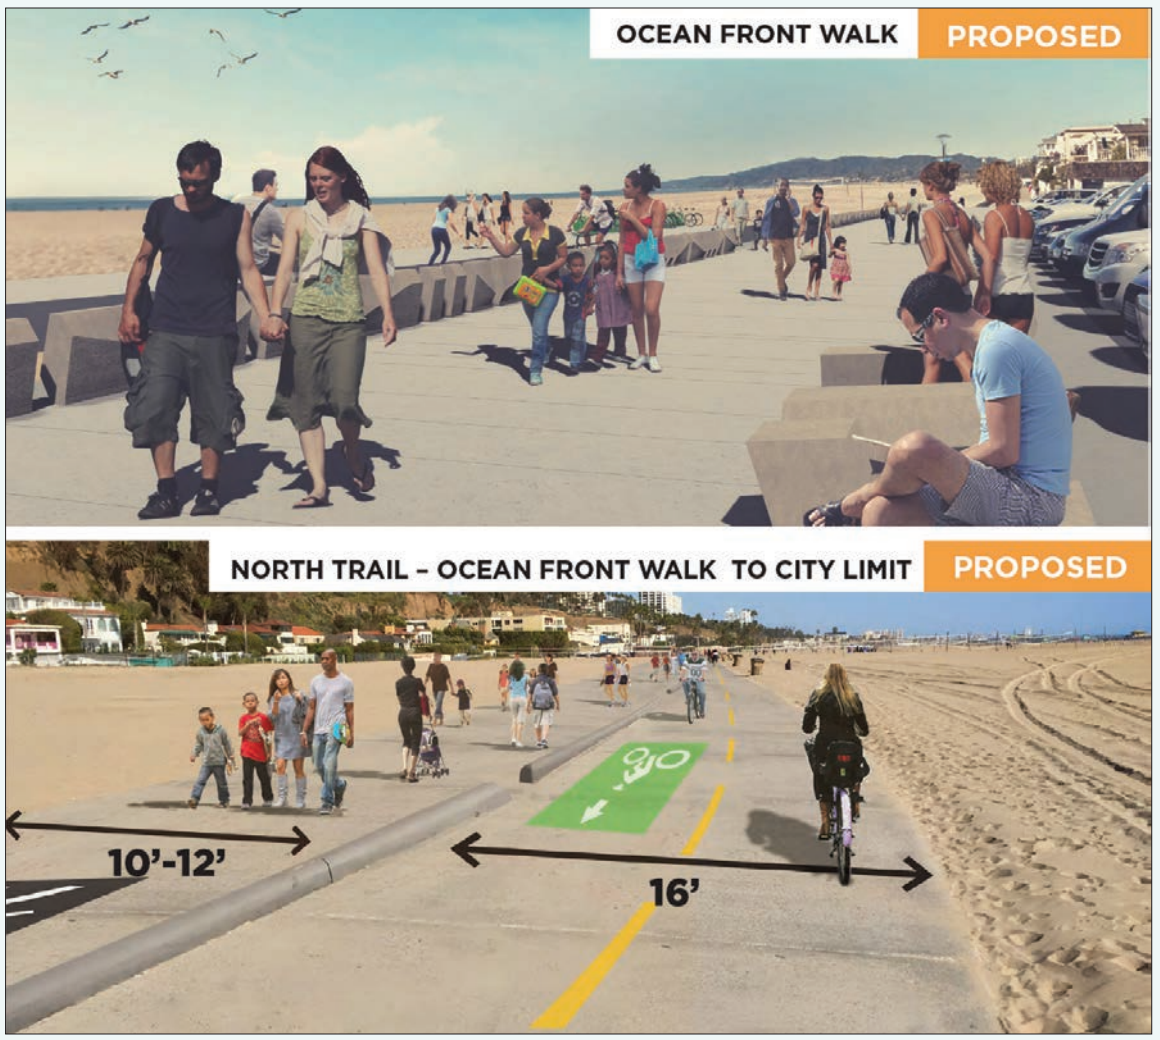

The new audiovisual and meeting management systems will allow the public to request to speak electronically using a kiosk in the lobby. Councilmembers will vote electronically and the results will be automatically displayed on new high-resolution monitors with closed captioning.

Meeting minutes will be automatically generated and speakers will be able to plug in their tablets and laptops to give presentations.

"The new ... systems would enhance the public's experience when attending meetings ... and provide an efficient, functional

Los Angeles

Bank of America Makes $2.4 Million Investment with Los Angeles Nonprofits

Bank of America has announced more than $2.4 million in grants to 84 Los Angeles nonprofits that will advance economic mobility for individuals and families and put them on a path toward financial stability. The local nonprofits receiving funding will help address two key factors improving financial stability: basic needs such as access to food, shelter and health services and access to educational and workforce development services that either give young adults pathways to employment or provide additional opportunities for people to rebuild their careers for better-paying work.

Despite the strengthening economy, the number of people who are homeless saw a double digit spike this past year, according to the County's most recent moment in time count; and one in four Angelenos live in poverty, according to the Public Policy Institute of California.

"So many of us are just one life event away from needing to depend on basic needs services such as food banks or shelters, while others–especially from economically disadvantaged areas–remain under-employed lacking the evolving job skills necessary to be part of today's booming workforce economy," said Raul A. Anaya, market president for Greater Los Angeles, Bank of America. "But through strategic philanthropic investments into the Southland's incredible nonprofit network, Bank of America is deploying its capital to advance more economic opportunities in the region."

Chrysalis, one of the organizations to receive a grant from Bank of America, has offices in Downtown Los Angeles, Santa Monica, the San Fernando Valley and Anaheim. The organization helps low-income and homeless individuals across Los Angeles and Orange Counties prepare for, find and retain employment.

"Among individuals experiencing homelessness, 40% cite unemployment as a leading contributor to their homelessness," said Mark Loranger, President & CEO of Chrysalis. "Jobs play a key role in helping individuals get back on a pathway to self-sufficiency, and we are so pleased to receive continued grant support from Bank of America for Chrysalis' employment program."

Los Angeles-based Covenant House California will put its grant towards a program to give a safe haven to homeless and trafficked youth. "While pockets of Los Angeles are thriving, the most recent homeless count for the county showed an increase in the number of homeless, with 17 percent of young people experiencing homelessness," said Bill Bedrossian, CEO, Covenant House. "Our ongoing relationship with Bank of America has helped us to continue to provide a full continuum of services to meet the physical, emotional, educational, vocational and spiritual well-being of young people in order to provide them with the best chance for success in independence."

Other organizations receiving grants include: White Memorial Medical Center Charitable Foundation, Covenant House California, Engage Inc., ITEP, Boys & Girls Club of Carson, Korean Health Education Information and Research Center, USC Gift Services, Project Grad Los Angeles Inc., Goodwill of Southern California, AbilityFirst, Weingart Center Association, Chinatown Service Center, Los Angeles Universal Preschool, Altamed health Services Corp., Para Los Niños, Unite-LA Inc., St. Barnabas Senior Center of Los Angeles, JVS SoCal, Door of Hope, Special Olympics Southern California Inc., Junior Achievement of Southern California, Union Rescue Mission, The Boys & Girls Club of Burbank and Greater East Valley Inc., Project Angel Food, A Place Called Home, Students Run America, Path, United Way of Greater Los Angeles, Central American Resource Center – Carecen – of California, ManifestWorks, Bet Tzedek, Central City Neighborhood Partners, Alliance for Housing and healing, Teach for America, Lift Inc., Center for the Pacific-Asian Family Inc., After-School All-Stars Los Angeles, Economic Development Corporation of Los Angeles, Boys & Girls Club of Santa Monica Inc., Chrysalis, Streetlights Production Assistant Program Inc., United States Veterans Initiative, New Directions Inc., P..F. gets from partners and sponsors, it could range from an installation on and around the Merry-Go-Round Deck to a spooky multiweek occasion.

"People go to other attractions in Los Angeles for Halloween and I think the pier deserves to have a piece of that Halloween action," she said.

The new offerings come with a tradeoff, however. To launch programming like Halloween and expand tentpole events such as Twilight on the Pier, the pier will say goodbye to smaller events like Front Porch Cinema, ProCon and Steam Machines.

Singh said Front Porch Cinema, a series that started in 2012 and screened four movies on the pier each year, was very expensive and time-consuming to put on compared to the relatively small number of people it served. It cost two-thirds of what it costs to produce Pier 360, which drew 20 times more attendees earlier this month, she said.

"The events we're cutting were really loved by the people who came to them, but we have to make decisions about the best events we can make vs. the most events we can make," Singh said.

Singh said the pier is courting new events from outside producers so the pier team can focus on banner events. For example, other companies may want to screen movies at the pier after Front Porch Cinema is discontinued.

The pier is also focusing on growing and diversifying its revenues so it doesn't have to rely on income from events and funding from corporate partners or the city, Singh said.

It will launch a pay-to-download app on its 110th anniversary this fall that visitors can use to tour the pier and learn about its history, which could radically impact the pier's budgets in the next few years, she said. It has set a goal of growing its rental business by 25% and plans to capitalize on the advertising potential of its social media platforms.

"For too long, the situation for the Pier Corp. was if Twilight on the Pier goes down, everything goes down," she said. "We're working really hard to not be that vulnerable."

Other plans for this year include making over the Merry-Go-Round Deck as construction on Ocean Front Walk concludes and Starbucks Coffee opens, creating branded content like "A Day at the Pier" or "Foodies Guide to the Pier," and improving traffic flow at the top and bottom of the pier bridge.

"Last year was spent fixing and building the ship. This year is about the direction the ship is going to go," Singh said. "We're looking at every single thing we do and thinking about how to make it the best it can be."

frequent congestion on the heavily trafficked trails.

After construction is completed in about one year, cyclists and pedestrians on the beach trail will be able to use separate paths from Bay Street to northern city limits. A 16-feet wide, two-way bike path and 12-foot wide pedestrian path will stretch for two miles, separated by a concrete curb. The path is currently only 14 feet wide and shared by both cyclists and pedestrians.

"This existing width does not adequately accommodate the volume of cyclists and pedestrians now using the Beach Trail," city of Santa Monica staff said.

There will also be wayfinding signage on the path where it travels through the parking lot north of the Santa Monica Pier and a plaza near the pier entrance so bikes can pull off the bike path in an area typically crowded with pier and beach visitors.

"Many of these areas are prone to congestion and potential conflicts between pedestrians and cyclists," staff said. "There are inadequate crossing points for visitors parking in the (parking lot) to cross the single bike path as they head to and from the beach and the pier."

Ocean Front Walk will receive upgrades as well. New paving, lighting and concrete seating walls will be installed north of the pier. After construction concludes, pedestrians will be able to get to and from overpasses over the Pacific Coast Highway to the beach more easily.

The city conducted community outreach for the projects in spring 2017, which included an in-person survey on the beach trail and an online survey. The surveys drew 1,000 responses.

The city presented a design concept for the renovations at an open house on the beach in May 2017 and invited residents of the homes along the beach to review the final design in March 2018.

Local vs. global action

Dear EarthTalk: What are so-called regional climate models and why do we need them given that we already have pretty decent global climate models? – Rich W., Seattle, WA

Scientists (and economists and business people) love to create models to help predict future outcomes as a way to direct planning and preparedness efforts. Climatologists specifically love to create models of how the planet and its various natural systems and cycles will react with the input of way too many greenhouse gas emissions in the atmosphere. Climate science has come a long way since its early days a few decades back, but most of what we think will happen regarding global warming comes from global climate models—that is, predictions based on lots of empirical data about how much global average temperature is expected to rise and by when.

"Global climate models (GCMs) simulate the interactions between the atmosphere, ocean and land to project future climate, based on assumptions about future emissions of greenhouse gases," reports the Climate Impacts Group at the University of Washington (UW).

According to ClimatePrediction.net, a volunteer computing and climate modeling project out of the UK's University of Oxford, global climate models (GCMs) are designed to calculate what the climate is doing (in terms of wind, temperature, humidity, etc.) at a number of discrete points on the Earth's surface as well as in the atmosphere and out at sea. The points are then laid out in a grid covering the planet's surface. The more points at play, the finer the resolution (and accuracy) of the model.

Nowadays climate researchers are applying what they have learned thus far to look in more detail on a regional basis, especially given that climate change has not only large-scale but also local consequences. These so-called regional climate models (RCMs) work by magnifying the resolution of GCMs in a small, limited area of interest, typically within a 3,000 square mile radius. Only by creating and analyzing RCMs can we assess the influence of myriad fixed geographic conditions and other local factors such as land height, land use, lakes, sea breeze, mountain ranges and localized weather patterns on climate impacts for a particular metropolitan area, state or country.

"For the practical planning of local issues such as water resources or flood defenses, countries require information on a much more local scale than GCMs are able to provide," adds ClimatePrediction.net. "Regional models provide one solution to this problem."

UW's Climate Impacts Group has been able to leverage its expertise in global and now regional climate modeling to do groundbreaking research into the likelihood of things like floods in the Pacific Northwest, expected moisture flux convergence and ensuing drought in the Southwest, and, even further afield, projected climate change and impacts in Southeast Asia. The analytical techniques being pioneered at UW are being shared with researchers around the world with the hope that more and more scientists will start to run RCMs in their own regions to help planners plan and improve people's lives despite the warming climate.

GCMs and RCMs are both important tools in figuring out how to cope with the effects of climate change, whether a worst case scenario is borne out or something not quite so cataclysmic.

2020 Candidates Must Address Affordable Housing

Last week, 20 potential Democratic nominees for President took the debate stage in Miami over two days to discuss everything from taxes to health care to foreign policy. Largely absent was one of America's most pressing issues: affordable housing.

Housing affordability is a key challenge in communities across the country and should be at the forefront of our national conversation. A study from Harvard University released last week found that one third of U.S. households are cost-burdened, meaning they spend more than 30 percent of their incomes on housing. A Pew Study found that the number of rent-burdened households has doubled since 2001, as more and more low-income and middle-income families are unable to afford one of the most basic human needs: a roof over their head.

There is some progress on this issue at the federal level, where Senator Maria Cantwell (D-WA) is leading a bipartisan effort to pass the Affordable Housing Credit Improvement Act, which would help build 1.9 million affordable units nationwide over the next decade. This will help, though more is needed. The National Low Income Housing Coalition (NLIHC) found that the U.S. needs 7.2 million affordable units. This is happening in part because, nationally, the number of low-rent units has fallen sharply, from almost 60 percent of units in 2001 to 43 percent of units in 2017. Over the last few years, America has lost over 4 million low-rent units—making housing unaffordable for millions of families.

Of course, this crisis is felt acutely in Los Angeles County, where 57 percent of renters are cost-burdened and 31 percent are severely cost-burdened, paying more than 50 percent of their income on housing. Right now, renters in LA County need to earn more than $47 an hour — well over triple the minimum wage — to afford their median monthly rent. Local funding and policy changes alone cannot and has not addressed this problem, which has only grown.

Local legislators are working to address the crisis — but they need federal support. California Assemblymember Richard Bloom (D-Santa Monica) has even made housing his No. 1 priority in office, working to make it easier to increase affordable housing and pushing for more renter protections. Mayor Eric Garcetti recently joined a coalition of mayors calling on the federal government to pass Ending Homelessness Act — proposed by Rep. Maxine Waters of Los Angeles — and has worked to support a number of affordable and permanent supportive housing policies and funding measures. But the federal government simply has more resources to help build housing that people can afford.

When people can't afford rent, they forgo other vital needs like food and health care. Other progressive proposals from the bevy of Democratic candidates—ones like Medicare For All, a $15 minimum wage, and lower cost higher education—will only go so far as the increase in housing costs outpaces any increases in income.

The next President of the United States will have the moral imperative to address this issue, and those interested in running for the Democratic nomination must prioritize housing. The NLIHC noted that only four candidates (briefly) touched on housing during the first debates, and just over half have mentioned affordable housing during other interviews or in policy proposals. That's not enough.

While state and local funding and policy can help, this humanitarian crisis in California — which is mirrored in states across the country — can only be addressed in concert with federal assistance. Meanwhile, the Trump administration continues to work to end funds to help low-income renters afford this basic human right and funds that support public housing.

This housing crisis has been growing for years — in California and across the country. Democratic nominees must voice their support for policies that will address this mounting problem. Our state's Democratic primary will be held on March 3 and mail-in ballots go out on February 3 — the same day as the Iowa Caucuses. California has more delegates choosing the Democratic nominee than any other state. Candidates for the Democratic nomination — and the California Democrats who will be voting for one of them on Super Tuesday — must voice their support for affordable housing now.

COUNCIL

(system) meeting the needs of a 21st century city," staff said.

Construction will take about two weeks and is scheduled for late 2019, when fewer meetings are scheduled in the Council Chambers. Meetings will be held in the Civic East Wing during this period.

The $450,000 contract comes weeks after the council approved a 2019-2021 city budget that trims millions in spending, initiating a decade of belt-tightening. Over the next 10 years, the city will be paying down a $448 million unfunded pension liability as revenues from traditional sources, such as sales tax from brick-and-mortar retail, grows only marginally.

Mayor Gleam Davis said she thinks replacing the audiovisual systems will make council meetings more accessible for people with disabilities. She questioned the optics of the project, however, referencing the recently adopted budget.

"I think as we are asking our entire community and staff to take one for the team, to gussy up our chambers seems a little questionable," she said.

Councilmember Kevin McKeown said the new systems are necessary and will increase the council's transparency and accessibility. He said many residents have told him that they don't always understand what is said during council meetings or how councilmembers vote. Closed captioning and electronic voting will help with that, he said.

"Before the phrase appears irretrievably in social media, I want to say that the phrase 'gussy up' is not what this contract is about," McKeown said. "This is anything but a gussying up, this is a move toward better democracy."

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON JUNE 27, AT 3:45 P.M.

The victim was in the 1500 block of Ocean inside Palisades Park. He was upset about having to pay taxes and was yelling out profanities about the United States. The suspect came up to him and started to strike him the face with his fists. The attack was unprovoked and the victim did not know the suspect. Sam Davis, 23, from Gardena was arrested for battery. Bail was set at $20,000.

HENRY WEYSE/CHARLES MORRIS HOUSE

401 Ocean Ave
Built: 1910, Designated 1990.

This two-story residence that combines features of Colonial Revival and Craftsman styles was built for local attorney Henry Weyse in 1910. The shingle-sided building has a brick-paved entry porch that is defined by Tuscan columns. A rounded bay, topped by a stick-railed balcony, abuts the porch to the north, balanced by a second, smaller bay to the south. Shutters flank most of the six over single sash windows. Farquhar was the most regionally prominent local architect of his time. His work includes the California Club in downtown Los Angeles. He was also a son-in-law of the City's founder.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 8)

How the wonders unfold! You choose optimism and curiosity at every turn, the attitude that attracts fascinating opportunities. The old alliances may not fully get where you're going, but they'll catch up in later months. Embrace friends, teachers and love coming your way. The adventure sets sail in January. Capricorn and Aquarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 30, 22, 28 and 1.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). To flow with your own energy will be a challenge. It's not about trying to will yourself to be more or less active, rather it's about listening to the needs of your body, mind and soul.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You won't know what the real deal is until you're in it in person. Today, the hypotheticals are even less grounded than usual. Wherever possible, meet up in real life.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You'll get to the goal faster when you include another person in the process. The down side is that you'll either have to pay this person up front or on the back end, so it's not the most cost-effective way.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You don't have to be perfect to be loved, liked or included. You don't have to be perfect to be persuasive, effective or accomplished. You don't have to be perfect, period.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Don't overthink. Plow through. Throwing money at a problem isn't usually the best or most lasting solution; however, in today's case, it will fix things quickly so you can move on.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You've used your talents to do good work, to position yourself and to contribute to your team. Now you'll use them for the sole purpose of making someone else look good. They need you, and you need to help. So, it works out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You don't need yes-people around you to make you feel large and in charge. While it's nice to get pumped up with compliments before you set out to conquer the world, it's better when the boost comes from inside yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You are connected to someone in a mysterious way. This person shows up in your life unexpectedly, at the strangest times, and changes the way you think about what's going on.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Simple stories are easier to understand, but then again, they also leave a lot out – maybe the best stuff. To go directly from here to there is logical and unmemorable. There's pleasure and usefulness in meandering.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). If you could do the thing in half the time, it would be better. No catch. There's nothing to miss in the half you're about to cut out. Bottom line: This task is really taking too long; find another way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). When people aren't telling the whole story, there's a reason. If you ask directly, you're unlikely to get the whole truth. Press gently and observe, or wait for unguarded moments to reveal more. This is worth knowing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Peer pressure is powerful and omnipresent. Wherever people are, there's a pressure to conform to them. Spend as little time as possible with people who undervalue you.

The Conjunction Function of Mercury and Mars

The imagination of adults will generally follow in the direction of available resources, whereas children who are unaware of the limits imposed by a longer time spent in a certain perceived reality will imagine wildly, and often brilliantly. Whatever you can do to get back to the purity of such imaginings is favored as Mercury conjuncts Mars.

INTUITION AND MERCURY RETROGRADE:

When life is going as expected, with systems and routines in place to keep us marching along in our given and chosen roles, we can move with the confidence that comes with stability inside of a known world. But what about when everything shakes? Mercury retrograde has a way disrupting the status quo, making us less certain and more aware that we could be wrong, there could be more, or less and that everything holding this picture of life together is a tenuous construct of our own mental processes.

And so, the logic we followed before suddenly seems less reliable. We could use new logic, but it would still be logic. We sense there's something better – an innate knowing that rises up to move us worldlessly, unconsciously, without the hassle of decision-making. This inner sense is so quick, it's undetectable, so much a part of us it seems that it is us. This is the power or our own intuition. The Mercury retrograde in full swing gives us an excellent excuse to broaden our awareness of it in the days to come. Stay tuned!

CELEBRITY PROFILES

Jaden Smith is sure to make theatergoers cry when he stars in the romantic heartbreak drama, "Life in a Year" with Cara Delevingne. The second-generation moviestar has film credits that date back to his infancy and his natal chart suggests they could keep going into old age. Smith is a Cancer with Mars in Cancer, too, and Jupiter in Pisces. These undercurrents in his chart show depth of emotion and spiritual reverence. Write Holiday Mathis at HolidayMathis.com.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF: Ofelia Bastidas CASE NUMBER: 19STPB03675 To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both of Ofelia Bastidas A Petition for Probate has been filed by Kathryn A. Vannuaker in the Superior Court of California, County of Los Angeles . The Petition for Probate requests that Kathryn A. Vannuaker be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows: Date: July 22, 2019, Time: 8:30 a.m. Dept. 11. Address of Court: 111 North Hill Street, Los Angeles, CA 90012 If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney. If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law. You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk. Attorney for petitioner: David C. Loe 5826 E.
