New Postmaster brings new customer focus to Santa Monica

MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

You might be annoyed if you think the line is too long at the local post office or your mail is always late but there's at least one man in Santa Monica who is guaranteed to be at least, if not more, concerned about the issue than you are: new Post Master Noel Hodges.

Hodges has been on the job since April and he said he wants to define his term in Santa Monica as an exercise in customer service.

"All customers have an option," he said. "They're out there choosing to come to the Post Office and mailing a letter and we have to make them feel like 'thankyou for coming.' Customers don't have to come to us, we need to treat them with dignity and respect. I don't think any complaint is too small, I want to address all of them."

To learn the routes, Hodges has taken what he calls "field trips" with carriers and gained an understanding of the community. He has also fielded complaints from locals and implemented technological upgrades to help track and streamline delivery.

In some cases, he said improved service was simply about matching skills to problems. For example, he said if a carrier physically moves quickly, they should be assigned to a route with extensive walking while someone who reads quickly can be assigned to a route with extensive sorting such as large apartment buildings.

He said part of his approach is educating the existing staff. For mail carriers that means evaluating how they deliver and looking for efficiencies.

"We can track every carrier and know where they are for real-time management," he said. "We can increase the on-street observations

Bad behavior is trending online, inspiring it in real life

SANDY COHEN

Young children know that name-calling is wrong. Tweens are taught the perils of online bullying and revenge porn: It's unacceptable and potentially illegal.

But celebrities who engage in flagrant attacks on social media are rewarded with worldwide attention. President Donald Trump's most popular tweet to date is a video that shows him fake-pummeling a personification of CNN. Reality TV star Rob Kardashian was trending last week after attacking his former fiancée on Instagram in a flurry of posts so explicit his account was shut down. He continued the attacks on Twitter, where he has more than 7.6 million followers.

While public interest in bad behavior is nothing new, social media has created a vast new venue for incivility to be expressed, witnessed and shared. And experts say it's affecting social interactions in real life.

"Over time, the attitudes and behaviors that we are concerned with right now in social media will bleed out into the physical world," said Karen North, a psychologist and director of the University of

Rescuers robbed at gunpoint trying to aid distressed hiker

California sheriff's deputies are searching for two armed men who robbed rescuers trying to aid a distressed hiker on a popular trail.

Kern County Sgt. Zack Bittle said an operation to find the culprits was underway Monday in the Piute Mountains about 85 miles north of Los Angeles.

Bittle says the suspects stole radios from two volunteers with the sheriff's search and rescue team Saturday who were trying to help a hiker on the Pacific Crest Trail. The two were unharmed and walked to their command post to call deputies.

Hiker Charles Brandenburg says he was dehydrated when he sought help.

Authorities closed the trail after the robbery and airlifted Brandenburg and three other backpackers trying to hike the 2,650-mile (4,265-kilometer) route from Mexico to Canada on the trail.

A World Of Music And Opportunities Abounds

LOS ANGELES IS LIKE A GIANT smorgasbord of options and things to see and do, especially during the summer months. While Santa Monica has been wracked with the debate over whether or not to continue to offer free concerts to the city on Thursday nights, there are other venues and opportunities across the southland.

I understand that the popularity of the Twilight Concert Series is creating both logistical and security concerns for the city. Crowds of that size demonstrate to me that the idea is popular, and maybe there are problems with the execution of the concerts, but is that a reason to kill the program? I'm still not convinced.

Even though the crowds are immense and I hate the traffic that they breed, it strikes me that this is a live example of the alleged Yogi Berra saying that "Nobody goes there anymore it's too crowded." How many people are more aware of the city of Santa Monica, the Pier and the fact that we offer cultural opportunities such as the Concert Series and do not attend? In the world of publicity and marketing I think this would be considered a win.

In the world of police forces, who always want to control people more, and disperse crowds and groups so that they are more easily dominated, this popularity is a great excuse to extend their over militarization and domination of society. It's the fearmongering of the Far Right to put people in their place, which is under the boot of the police, all "for your safety."

Into this debate of public arts and public safety, we must also consider the wealth of opportunities that exist for expanding our musical experiences. Take for example the world music series at the Skirball Cultural Center off the 405. My friend Jennifer Maxcy works there and they created this All Around The World music series that began this month. It runs every weekend with musical performances by bands performing music from around the world.

This summer there will be modern Yiddish soul by Klezmer Juice on Saturday the 15th and then Bluesy Gospel Rock by Whiskerman on Sunday the 16th. No music series would be complete without a reggae experience, and on the 22nd of July, Upstream will be performing, followed by Fish to Birds with improvisational vocal jazz. Rouding out July will be Malynda with Powerhouse vocals on the 29th and Heidi Swedberg on Sunday with Ukelele folk-pop on the 30th.

August will be ushered in with the African-Inspired music and dance of Adinkra on Saturday the 5th and then MôForro will transport audiences to Brazil with their hip-swiveling Brazilian dance music on Sunday.

The final days of the concert series will showcase T Sisters with sublime fold and bluegrass on Saturday the 12th, and completing the series will be Marizane with an retro indie rock concert Sunday the 13th.

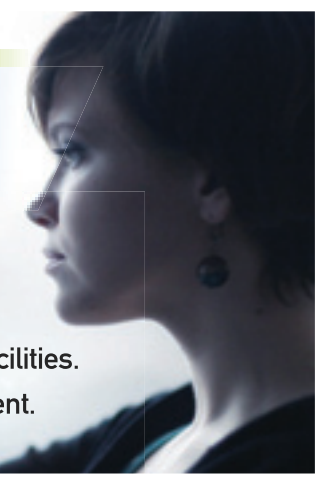

Visiting the Skirball Cultural Center is easy off the 405 with Free On-Site Parking, but beware that there is NO street parking allowed. While you're visiting you can enjoy the exhibition Paul Simon: Words & Music as a foundation for the concert series which runs now through September 3. Admission to the Skirball includes all exhibits, like the Noah's Ark experience. Cost for admission is $12 General $9 Seniors (65 and up), Full-Time Students with ID, and Children over 12 $7 Children 2–12 FREE to Skirball Members and Children under 2 and best of all it is FREE to everyone on Thursdays.

The point of all this is to say that we have great opportunities all around us for cultural experiences, whether they are the free concerts like the Twilight Concert Series, or Thursday at the Skirball, or even if they cost a few dollars to attend. Life in Los Angeles is a rich and varied experience, and while the forces of fear and budgetary concerns are always trying to shut things down, a vibrant society demands the arts and open access to our public benefits.

While I hate the traffic the Concert Series creates, I can and do choose, to support the Series while avoiding the beach on Thursdays – maybe instead I'll go to the Skirball…

Bringing Back Manufacturing And Prosperity

SINCE 2000, AMERICA HAS LOST MORE than 10 million manufacturing jobs and at least 50,000 factories. It's currently fashionable for conservative commentators and economists to say "outsourcing of our manufacturing is beneficial" because "it gives American consumers access to cheap foreign labor" and "creates wealth in foreign countries," and we are all somehow better off. But how can "creating wealth" outside this country, and creating debt inside America, benefit Americans, especially those who lose their jobs to "cheap foreign labor?"

Manufacturing, including farming and construction, is the most value-producing force in our economy, along with providing productive jobs for Americans. American ingenuity and manufacturing prowess were critical in making the U.S. a world power. When America began out-producing our enemies in the manufacture of warships and warplanes, the tide turned in WWII. Manufacturing, coupled with trade unions, created the American Middle Class by delivering better wages and working conditions. The three decades following WWII - the Era of the American Middle Class - provided the greatest number of Americans with the most prosperity in American history.

But during the 1980s, union busting and "trickle-down" economics, courtesy the Reagan administration, shifted the tax burden away from wealthy individuals and onto the backs of middle class Americans. This increased tax burden, along with the accompanying reduction of worker protections and loss of higher paying union jobs, set off the disintegration of the middle class. Corporate America, as exemplified by Wal-Mart, Apple, and GE, etc., revealed a devastating new strategy to reduce labor costs – exporting manufacturing and service jobs. Large American corporations are ringing the death knell of the American Middle Class.

American innovation and creativity in all fields are the cornerstones of American greatness. American ingenuity in science and the arts, in medicine, in entertainment, in technology, in democracy, all coupled with economic opportunity is why America stands foremost in the world. Exporting American technology and innovation has the de facto effect of exporting American jobs and ultimately, stifling American ingenuity and creativity.

Like the rest of the world, we need to make our economy more democratic. Politically, we have a representative democracy, but we live under an economic oligarchy. The CEOs of large corporations, and other wealthy individuals, control our economy and, ultimately, the livelihoods of many of us. For example, a CEO can make a "hard decision" to lay off thousands of workers and outsource their service or manufacturing jobs. This can lead to an upsurge of profit for the corporation, jubilant investors, and a million-dollar-bonus for the CEO. But the laid off American workers have no recourse except to file for unemployment and try to find other, usually lower-paying, jobs. This is the real reason for our feeble economy and high unemployment. Tragically, we are still losing thousands of manufacturing and service jobs, every day. Shouldn't workers have a say-so before their jobs are shipped overseas?

We need to enforce at least a 50/50 trade balance with our trading partners. "No Free Trade without Fair Trade" should be the rule. The trade imbalance with China is about 4 to 1, amounting to about $300 billion per year. This must be corrected by demanding that the Chinese buy as much manufactured items from us as we buy from them; carried out within five years by enforcing a 10% reversal each year.

But Congress has no stomach for correcting the disastrous imbalance of trade. Why not? Because its members take hundreds of millions of dollars of campaign donations from American and multinational corporations who want the current situation to remain unchanged. The money, American and foreign, is channeled through super PACs and corporate lobbyists such as the flag waving U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

So how do we reverse the outflow of manufacturing jobs? It's obvious, place or increase tariffs on foreign manufactured items to make the prices comparable to the same items manufactured here. We could again start making our own clothes, furniture, appliances, televisions, computers, shoes, tools, etc. We could even take back the printing of our books and magazines, which mostly resides overseas.

Worried about paying higher prices at the store? Bringing back manufacturing and jobs and prosperity to America by ending our addiction to cheap foreign goods will require fortitude on the part of Americans and courage on the part of our politicians. The cost of domestic manufactured products will go up, but so will their quality and their manufacture here will support America and American jobs.

Americans must be willing to take action. "Buy American" must not only be a slogan. We must elect leaders who protect our jobs and technology and throw out politicians who dance to the tunes played by large U.S. and multinational corporations. We need to stand up, demand change, and follow through in the voting booth! And not be fooled by politicians, on both sides of the aisle, who appeal to voters' values (social, "family", "gun rights", religious, anti-tax, etc.), while pursuing pro-corporate agendas that wreak economic harm on the very same voters they're courting. Do we want a government which operates like a wholly owned subsidiary of Wall Street?

As manufacturing returns, our economy will improve because the many benefits created by manufacturing will remain in America. The trade imbalance and the outflow of cash will be corrected. Just as important is that American ingenuity and innovation will be tied to domestic production, and our scientists and engineers and inventors will be directly rewarded, both financially and spiritually, leading to still more innovative engineering and scientific progress. The trend of more and more foreign ownership of American businesses, real estate, and debt will be reversed as innovation and production is encouraged on our shores. The selling out of America will end and prosperity will return.

Full disclosure: I've been a small manufacturer for 40 years and operate a machine shop with conventional and CNC equipment. We export about 40% of our production.

POSTMASTER

and that's a way to help them and help the community too."

He said his goal as a carrier was to be so reliable, customers forgot about the individual delivering the mail and just came to rely on the service.

"I didn't want the customer to know I was there, I just wanted them to know the mail was in the box," he said. "Customers should never have to worry about the U.S. Postal Service."

For office staff, he said they need to understand the reason residents are complaining and be aware that poor experiences will drive people away from the service, particularly if it's a repeat issue.

"A customer is not calling just to be calling, they have a gripe," he said. "Why can't we address their complaint? I've always been service oriented, I always put myself in the customers' shoes. How would I like waiting in line a long time or getting my mail delivered late?"

He said the changes are paying off. When he took over, the office was sitting on about 300 complaints at any given time, that's down to about nine now.

In addition to retraining existing staff, Hodges has brought in two fulltime complaint resolution specialists.

Complaints can be called into (310) 255-0419 and anything that can't be handled by the customer advocates can be quickly escalated to Hodges himself.

"I really want (customers) to understand that I'm their voice," he said. "Don't ever feel that you can't call and talk to me. I want you to feel your voice is going to be heard no matter how small your issue may be or how big it may be. I'm really here to help you resolve any issues that you've got."

Hodges is responsible for the 90401 through 90411 ZIP codes and the office has more than 200 employees delivering to 63,589 street addresses and 2,693 Post Office Boxes.

He said the local Post Office does more than just regular mail and cross training employees to handle the different products will create a stronger workforce that's better able to adapt.

The Santa Monica office delivers about 400 Amazon Fresh deliveries per day. The bags of fresh groceries can be sent from Playa Del Rey to Malibu and from the time the first truck arrives to deliver the morning route, to the time the last carrier returns from a 9 p.m. delivery, the facility is staffed almost 24 hours a day including Sundays when carriers work 20-30 routes for package delivery.

He said the use of automation and better management will help carriers work through the changing demands at the Post Office and create a service customers value.

Hodges is the 23rd Postmaster for the City dating back to William H. Williams in 1875.

He began his postal career in 1990 as a carrier in Los Angeles. He worked his way up through the ranks to become Postmaster in Culver City in 2012 and most recently served as Postmaster in Compton.

Hodges said he was excited to be in Santa Monica. The commute is better for him as it allows him to share a ride with his wife, Una Person-Hodges, who is a postal worker at the V.A. Post Office in Los Angeles.

"I like Santa Monica, I used to come here as a kid to go to the beach. We still go work out on the stairs a lot and I really like the community," he said.

LA Kings hire NHL veteran Pierre Turgeon as assistant coach

The Los Angeles Kings have hired Pierre Turgeon for his first job as an assistant coach.

The 47-year-old Turgeon will focus on improving the Kings' offensive play, general manager Rob Blake says. Los Angeles finished 24th in the NHL last season with 199 goals.

Turgeon was a dependable scorer during 19 NHL seasons with six franchises, recording 1,327 points in 1,294 games before retiring in 2007. The center ranks 38th in league history with 515 goals.

Turgeon joins Dave Lowry, Don Nachbaur and goaltending coach Bill Ranford on Stevens' staff. Stevens was promoted to replace Darryl Sutter in April after Los Angeles missed the playoffs for the second time in three seasons since winning its second Stanley Cup title in 2014.

Vin Scully to receive Icon Award at The ESPYS

Vin Scully will receive the Icon Award at The ESPYS, with actor Bryan Cranston presenting the honor given to those whose careers have left a lasting impression on the sports world.

Scully retired last fall after 67 years calling Los Angeles Dodgers games. The 89-year-old Hall of Famer's career was the longest tenure of any broadcaster with a single pro sports team.

Past recipients of the Icon Award are Kobe Bryant, Derek Jeter, Peyton Manning and Abby Wambach.

Manning hosts the 25th annual awards show, which celebrates the best sports stories of the year, on Wednesday night in Los Angeles.

ANAHEIM

Mike Trout slated to return to Angels' lineup Friday

Mike Trout will return to the Los Angeles Angels' lineup Friday after missing 39 games with an injured thumb.

Angels spokesman Tim Mead confirmed the club's plan Sunday night after Trout's fourth rehabilitation game with Class-A Inland Empire.

Trout has been out since May 28, when he tore a ligament in his left thumb while sliding headfirst into second base. The two-time AL MVP had surgery and missed six weeks of big-league action.

The Angels (45-47) return from the All-Star break at home Friday against Tampa Bay. Los Angeles went 19-20 during Trout's absence, staying in second place in the AL West.

Trout was in the midst of yet another MVP-caliber season when he was hurt. He is batting .337 with 16 homers, 36 RBIs and a whopping 1.203 OPS in 47 games.

Trout had a triple and three walks Sunday in his final appearance with Inland Empire. He began taking batting practice June 30 before his minor-league stint in San Bernardino.

Despite the first major injury of his career, Trout was voted onto the AL All-Star team for the sixth time. The Angels announced last week that Trout wouldn't attempt to play in Miami.

Trout was the All-Star Game's MVP in 2014 and 2015.

BEHAVIOR

Southern California's Digital Social Media Program. "We're supposed to learn to be polite and civil in society. But what we have right now is a situation where a number of role models are acting the opposite of that ... And by watching it, we vicariously feel it, and our own attitudes and behaviors change as a result."

Catherine Steiner-Adair, a psychologist and author of "The Big Disconnect: Protecting Childhood and Family Relationships in the Digital Age," said she's already seeing the effects.

She said she's been confronted by students across the country asking why celebrities and political leaders are allowed to engage in name-calling and other activities for which they would be punished.

On some middle-school campuses, "Trumping" means to grab a girl's rear end, she said.

And teenagers have killed themselves over the kind of slut-shaming and exposure of private images Kardashian leveled at Blac Chyna, with whom he has an infant daughter.

On Monday, a Los Angeles Superior Court commissioner granted a temporary restraining order against Kardashian, barring him from contacting Chyna, coming within 100 yards or her home or workplace and posting any images of her online. He is also prohibited from sharing images of their daughter.

"We are normalizing behaviors, and it's affecting some kids," Steiner-Adair said. "And what's affecting kids that is profound is their mistrust of grown-ups who are behaving so badly. Why aren't they stopping this?"

Social media satisfies a human need for connection. Users bond over common interests and establish digital relationships with their favorite public figures, following and commenting on their lives just like they do their friends'.

Gossip is a bonding activity, and it doesn't take a Real Housewife to know people love to share dirt about others' perceived misdeeds. Collective disapproval creates a feeling of community, regardless of which side you're on. Having a common enemy is "one of the strongest bonding factors in human nature," North said.

With 352,000 retweets, Trump's CNN-pummeling post isn't in the realm of Ellen DeGeneres' Oscar selfie (3.4 million retweets). And Kardashian's rant against Chyna paled in popularity with Beyonce's Instagram pregnancy announcement, which collected 8 million likes.

Still, Trump's attack tweets have proven his most popular, according to a new study by Ohio State University Professor Jayeon "Janey" Lee.

"Attacks on the media were most effective," Lee said of her analysis of tweets posted during the presidential campaign. "Whenever Trump criticized or mocked the media, the message was more likely to be retweeted and 'favorited.' "

Trump, who has 33.4 million Twitter followers, has defended his social-media approach as "modern day presidential."

Cyber incivility, particularly when practiced by cultural leaders, can have a profound impact on human relations, North said.

Studies show that young people who witness aggressive behavior in adults model and expand on that behavior. She pointed to Stanford University psychologist Albert Bandura's famous "Bobo Doll Experiment," which found that kids who saw adults hit a doll in frustration not only hit the doll as well, but attacked it with weapons.

Social media is an atmosphere devoid of the social cues that mitigate behavior in real life, she said. When violating social norms in person, there's immediate feedback from others through body language and tone of voice. No such indicators exist online, and retweets can feel like validation.

Cruel and humiliating posts often become "an instant hit online," Steiner-Adair said. "It's one of the best ways to become popular."

Viral posts then get mainstream media attention, spreading digital nastiness into everyday conversation.

By not expressly rejecting cruel or hateful online behavior, "we are creating a bystander culture where people think this is funny," she said.

"When we tolerate leaders — in the popular media like a Kardashian, or a president — behaving in this way, we are creating a very dangerous petri dish for massive cultural change," Steiner-Adair said.

Young people, who may be the most plugged in, are getting mixed messages as they form their moral concepts.

"It behooves us all to question why we are participating in this mob of reactivity," Steiner-Adair said, "and what are the character traits we need to model for our children."

News outlets seek to negotiate with Google, Facebook on ads

BARBARA ORTUTAY
AP Technology Writer

News outlets are seeking permission from Congress for the right to negotiate jointly with Google and Facebook, two companies that dominate online advertising and online news traffic.

The News Media Alliance, which represents nearly 2,000 news organizations, said the two companies' dominance have forced news organizations to "play by their rules on how news and information is displayed, prioritized and monetized."

"These rules have commoditized the news and given rise to fake news, which often cannot be differentiated from real news," the alliance said in a press release on Monday.

It won't be easy getting a congressional antitrust exemption to negotiate as a group. But the alliance's chief executive, David Chavern, said in an interview that trying is better than doing nothing.

The news industry has been hit with declining print readership and a loss of advertising revenue as it has moved online.

The outlets want stronger protections for intellectual property, support for subscription models and a bigger share of the online advertising market. Google and Facebook combined will account for 60 percent of the U.S. digital advertising market this year, according to the research firm eMarketer.

Campbell Brown, head of news partnerships at Facebook, said in a statement that the company is "committed to helping quality journalism thrive on Facebook. We're making progress through our work with news publishers and have more work to do."

For example, the company said it is testing new products to help its users discover local news on Facebook. The company also said it is working to cut down on false news and clickbait headlines in favor of "quality journalism."

Google also said it wants to help news organizations "with both their challenges, and their opportunities." The company said it has built several specialized products and technologies "specifically to help distribute, fund, and support newspapers."

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department.
These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON JUNE 29, AT ABOUT 1:29 A.M.

While patrolling in the area of 800 block of Pico Blvd, officers saw a subject walking in the roadway and making no efforts to get onto the sidewalk. Officers stopped the subject. As officers attempted to identify the subject, he provided the name and date of birth of another person. The subject admitted to giving a false name and officers were unable to positively identify the subject. The subject was taken into custody.
Eduardo Manuel Cefuentez, 41, from Los Angeles, was arrested for false ID to a Police Officer. Bail was set at $5,000.

TRANSPORTATION TUESDAYS

July is Parks Month

GoSaMo

This July, discover all the wonderful parks the city has to offer by coming out to celebrate Parks and Recreation Month. A variety of fun activities are planned for residents of all ages and abilities in celebration of all the ways parks and recreation has the power to transform our daily lives and wellbeing.

In addition to being a fun way to commute, biking is an excellent form of recreation. On Saturday, July 15, join us at Reed Park (corner of Lincoln Boulevard and California Avenue) for the monthly bike ride with the Mayor. The 7 mile ride will leave at 9 am to visit some of Santa Monica's lesser-known parks.

Bring your own bike, helmet & water bottle. Children should be capable of street riding or in an appropriate child seat or trailer.

Visit www.smgov.net/MayorsRide for more details and for a full list of Parks Month activities, visit smgov.net/parksmonth.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 11)

Your heart will be made full through friendships, family additions and romantic promises in the first third of your solar return. Lightning-bolt moments will come in October; react fast and make money! New financial partners come along in November. January doubles a prize. Stellar education is discounted in 2018. Leo and Scorpio adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 40, 3, 33, 39 and 17.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
When it goes as planned time and again, you'll be sure to change the plan up. You don't want to bore your audience, and, even more importantly, you don't want to get bored yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
As for the people don't believe as you do: You treat their faith with respect and gentleness, as you would expect others to treat yours. In this way, world peace could be an eventuality.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
Would you rather manage something you don't understand or understand something you can't manage? You'll have your choice of problems today.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)
The thing to work on now is on selling yourself harder. This isn't about a lack of talent: You've got plenty! But do you have the belief and ambition and vision? Flesh it out.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
If you want to cry over love, love seems to always be able to find something for you to cry about. It's good for the emotional hydration system, like a wash of fluids through the whole network -- ultimately refreshing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Honest introspection is the call of the day. Your soul's quieter needs will get attention. The outside world will reflect back to you what's happening with your inner life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
You may not have done right by yourself, but there's no need for punishment. That would only be counterproductive. Emphasize your positive characteristics, and ignore the behaviors you'd like to be rid of.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
Steer clear of dramas. Compassionate detachment will be the best way to help your loved ones. Walk a fine line, giving generously but not in a manner that would make them dependent on you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
Some around you are inwardly more insecure than you might have guessed. If you have to constantly reassure someone of your love, it will be very tiring. Anything you can do proactively will help.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
There are those who will try and use their moods to manipulate those around them. But another person's bad mood should not have too much to do with how you go about your business. Bring your own emotional weather.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
This day holds plenty of opportunities for whimsy, and you'll enjoy it to the degree that you take advantage of that opportunity. Take a gamble. Win or lose, the experience will be a win.

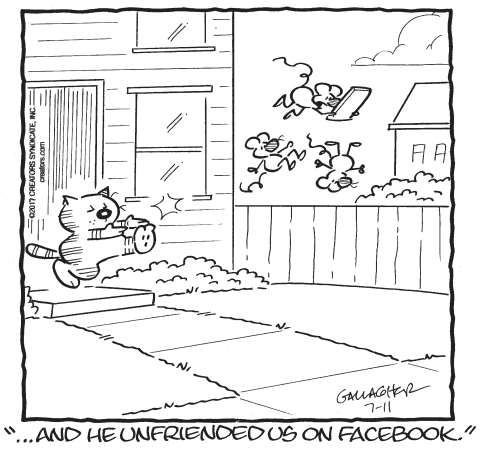

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
Success isn't a plate to be gobbled up alone: It's a banquet to share with many guests. Invite others to your recent win. More bounty is on the way.

Planet Power to the Present

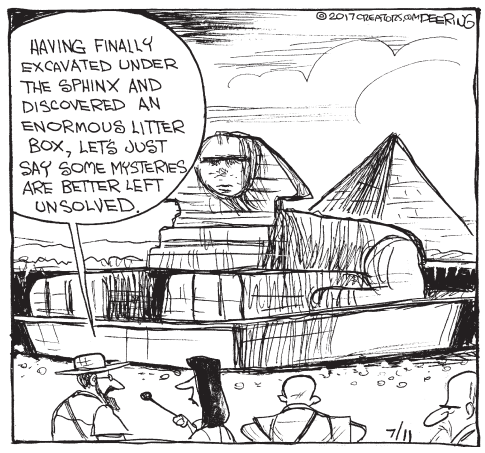

The present is where all of life's juice is. Getting there will be the hard part today, as there are many hurdles in the form of worry or wishing. Both steal from now, but they are cowardly thieves, easily deterred. The moon in Aquarius harmonizes with lucky Jupiter to help us lighten up, detach from worries and wishes and stay present.
