Ballot measures head to Council

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

The November Election may be light on national political candidates, but in Santa Monica the ballot is gearing up to be heavy on local measures.

So far two measures have been placed on the ballot, a citizen initiative measure is likely to qualify in the coming weeks, and in Tuesday night's City Council meeting two additional measures are up for Council's vote.

These measures are a Rent Control Board charter amendment and a revenue raising property transfer tax measure authored by Councilmember Phil Brock.

The latter measure is competing with a separate property transfer tax measure that Mayor Sue Himmelrich is seeking to place on

Dr. Anne Coleman to lead UCLA Stein Eye Institute

Dr. Anne L. Coleman, UCLA Fielding School of Public Health professor of epidemiology and an internationally renowned vision researcher, physician and professional leader, has been named to the role of executive medical director and chair of the department of ophthalmology at the David Geffen School of Medicine at UCLA.

Coleman, a Santa Monica resident, will also serve as director of the UCLA Stein Eye Institute and affiliation chair of the Doheny Eye Institute. Her appointment takes effect July 1.

"Dr. Coleman's deep experience as a surgeon-scientist and national leader in the ophthalmology profession has earned her a global reputation for excellence," said Dr. John Mazziotta, vice chancellor of UCLA Health Sciences and CEO of UCLA Health. "We look forward to her leadership in this new role."

ANNE COLEMAN

At UCLA, Coleman is the Fran and Ray Stark Foundation Professor of Ophthalmology and a professor of epidemiology at the Fielding School. She succeeds Dr. Bartley Mondino, who is stepping down after three historic decades of leadership as chair of ophthalmology and director of the Stein Eye Institute.

Coleman earned her medical degree from the Medical College of Virginia, pursued her residency training at the University of Illinois in Chicago and completed her fellowship training in glaucoma at the Wilmer Eye Institute, Johns Hopkins University. She earned a doctorate in epidemiology from the UCLA Fielding School of Public Health in 1997 and is a graduate of the UCLA Anderson School of Management's executive program in management.

In her research, Coleman studies the diagnosis, treatment, risk factors, gene-environment interactions and societal impact of glaucoma, cataracts, myopia, amblyopia and age-related macular degeneration. She led a clinical trial that pioneered the use of the Ahmed valve, which is now the world's leading glaucoma drainage device to lower eye pressure.

Coleman possesses a passion for patient care, especially for the medically underserved. As director of the UCLA Mobile Eye Clinic, she has overseen outreach programs to screen and treat the vision of more than 180,000 low-income children and adults in southern California.

As vice chair for academic affairs, Coleman has helped to recruit more than 40 faculty to the UCLA ophthalmology department. She has written more than 240 peer-reviewed publications and been awarded over $20 million in federal and private funding to support her research.

Coleman is also a national leader in her field. She has served as president of the American Academy of Ophthalmology (AAO), chair of the National Eye Institute's National Eye Health Educational Program, president of Women in Ophthalmology, and as member of the U.S. Food and Drug Association's ophthalmic device panel.

Currently, she is a scientific advisory panel member for Research to Prevent Blindness, president of the Council for the American Ophthalmological Society and current associate editor of glaucoma for the American Journal of Ophthalmology.

During her career, Coleman's achievements have been recognized by many awards, including the AAO Life Achievement Award and Secretariat Award, and was elected to the National Academy of Medicine.

"The ability to bring together the work of clinicians with global standing, like Dr. Coleman, to both the medical and public health fields, and our students, is a very important element of the work we do at FSPH," said Dr. Zuo-Feng Zhang, UCLA Fielding School of Public Health chair and distinguished professor of epidemiology, who is also a physician. "It's this sort of interdisciplinary approach that makes our school what it is, and being able to partner with our colleagues and affiliated faculty across all the health sciences is a unique strength of UCLA specifically, and the Fielding School especially."

Tourism Bond and Pact Between Santa Monica and Brighton, England

The Mayors of Santa Monica and Brighton & Hove have joined forces this month as part of a new Friendship City Pact to collaborate, support each other and exchange ideas between the pier cities and their citizens. What drives this synergy is the two cities share iconic piers, beautiful coastlines, rich cultures, and vibrant communities offering a natural fit for this partnership. Santa Monica Travel & Tourism (SMTT) will host a series of Santa Monica-inspired events and experiences at key locations around Brighton throughout the month to help boost coast-to-coast tourism from the Brighton, U.K. to Santa Monica.

The pact aims to deepen the relationship between the two cities promoting cultural understanding between their citizens and offering an exchange of ideas and activities through school curriculum, event series and in-market tourism experiences on both sides of the Atlantic.

On Friday, July 29, the Mayor of Brighton & Hove, Lizzie Deane and the Mayor Pro-Tem of Santa Monica, Kristin McCowan will each sign the official Friendship City Partnership Agreement in person (following a virtual signing this past May by Mayor, Lizzie Deane, and the Mayor of Santa Monica, Sue Himmelrich) with Santa Monica Sister City Assoc. President Jeff Jarow, with senior representatives of Visit Brighton and Santa Monica Travel and Tourism in attendance. The mayors will then unveil a dedicated street art mural to mark the collaboration by Santa Monica artist, Ruben Rojas, on Brighton's Palace Pier before it moves to its permanent home in the city.

This partnership marks a new chapter for the tourism industries of Santa Monica and Brighton as they partner to celebrate the parallels between the culture, history, food scenes and creative communities of the respective cities, and of course their iconic piers, both over 100 years old, opening a decade apart in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

As part of the scheduled events, SMTT representatives will take part in several key events, which included the Visit USA Summer Affair in London on July 6, a sales mission as well as hosting an event for industry partners, trade, and media to share what's new and encourage visitation to Santa Monica.

Brighton's seaside Shelter Hall will play a key role in the collaboration with the launch of a Santa Monica-inspired menu on July 7 as part of a partnership between Mark Rush, the Hall's chef, who visited Santa Monica in May, and the highly acclaimed, two-starred Michelin chef Josiah Citrin and Govind Armstrong, who will be in Brighton this month showcasing their culinary talents.

SMTT is offering one lucky winner and a guest from the U.K., the chance to win a four-night trip to Santa Monica. The giveaway went live on July 1 at SantaMonicaLovesBrighton.com.

"As two of the worlds most beloved coastal cities we are excited to form this partnership. Having two of our talented and award-winning chefs join us in sharing a flavor of what Santa Monica has to offer and creating memorable experiences for the public throughout July, we hope to give locals and visitors a true taste of the Santa Monica vibe while in Brighton to inspire them to visit our city," said Misti Kerns, President and CEO of Santa Monica Travel & Tourism.

"We look forward to welcoming the Santa Monica Travel & Tourism team to our shores and supporting this fully immersive cultural experience for our residents and visitors throughout July. It is a sign of the exciting times that lie ahead for both destinations and we look forward to collaborating on further activations as part of our Friendship City Partnership," said Howard Barden, Head of VisitBrighton.

BALLOT

A citizen initiative requires signatures from 10 percent of registered Santa Monica voters in order to qualify for the ballot. Himmelrich and her two fellow measure proposers submitted these signatures on June 15 and they are currently being verified by the City Clerk. Brock is seeking to place his measure on the ballot via Council vote.

Both measures seek to create a third tier of real estate transfer tax in Santa Monica, but differ in how much they would charge and what the revenue would be used for.

Santa Monica already has two tiers of real estate transfer tax charging $3 per $1,000 of value on transfers under $5 million and $6 per $1,000 of value on transfers over $5 million. The second tier was established in 2020 when voters approved Measure SM.

Himmelrich's proposed measure would charge a tax of around $50 per $1,000 in value of properties above $8 million and is estimated to raise $50 million annually. The first $10 million raised a year would be allocated for school funding and the remainder would be prioritized for building affordable housing and providing rent subsidies to prevent homelessness.

Himmelrich proposed a citizen initiative because it requires Council use the revenue for the specific purposes stipulated in the measure, creating a sustainable stream of funding for affordable housing development. It is similar to a property transfer tax measure that recently qualified for the City of LA ballot.

Brock proposed his measure as an alternative to Himmelrich's, which he believes is too high and doesn't direct revenue into top resident priorities.

Brock's proposed measure would charge a more modest $15 per $1,000 in value of properties over $8 million and is estimated to raise $11 to $15 million annually. If passed, Council could use this revenue at its discretion. Brock advises using this revenue to fund crossing guards, the reopening of all library branches, after school childcare, public safety and homeless response services, and transitional homeless housing.

If both measures qualify for the ballot, the measure that receives the most votes will be enacted.

During Tuesday's meeting Councilmembers will also discuss a measure proposed by commissioners on the Rent Control Board that seeks to alter the agency's charter to give commissioners more power over rent raises during declared emergencies.

This proposed amendment was authored in response to this year's exceptionally high annual rent adjustment of 7 percent. Commissioners fear that this maximum allowable rent increase will put many rent controlled tenants in jeopardy, but were required to pass it as the annual adjustment is based on a set formula in the Board's charter. This formula is based on annual inflation, which is why it spat out an unusually high number this year.

If put on the ballot by Council vote and then passed by resident vote, the Rent Control Board would have the power to modify or suspend the annual general adjustment during declared emergencies.

This charter amendment would also set commissioner term limits, establish a registry of non rent controlled units, tighten rules around owner occupancy evictions, and remove the need for elections if commissioner candidates are running unopposed.

More information on both initiatives can be found at tinyurl.com/July12CouncilAgenda. The meeting will begin with public input on closed session, special agenda and consent calendar items at 5:30 p.m. and can be streamed live at youtube.com/user/Citytv16santamonica.

California just opened the door to ending state's abortion rights

BY WENDY VOORSANGER

Democrats don't seem to understand the law of unintended consequences. Or perhaps they don't comprehend the fierce determination of Republicans to eliminate women's reproductive rights. Either way, the California Legislature just made a huge mistake by opening the door for anti-choice voters to deny women's reproductive rights granted for the past 50 years.

Now, a woman's right to abortion is dependent upon the majority of Californians voting "yes" on California Proposition 1, the Right to Reproductive Freedom Amendment, in November.

State lawmakers recently passed a ballot measure allowing voters to decide whether to codify access to abortion and contraceptives in the state Constitution. It's a dangerous and unnecessary move, because California already has a sweeping right to privacy in its Constitution. Since 1972, this constitutional amendment has been widely interpreted as the right for women to access abortion, the right for minors to get an abortion without their parents' permission, and the right to fund abortions in the state's Medi-Cal program. California legislators just put those rights in jeopardy.

California Democrats don't seem to understand that we're no longer living in the 1970s, when two Republican presidents (Nixon and Ford) endorsed the Equal Rights Amendment, which, if ratified by the states, would guarantee protection against sexual discrimination (38 states have ratified it).

Today, we have a radical GOP and a U.S. Supreme Court majority working to take away women's reproductive rights.

The Legislature is overconfident about how widely the Golden State's progressive ideology is embraced by its population. Consider the power of Kevin McCarthy, the five-term U.S. representative from Bakersfield and the House minority leader, who is championing the religious right's efforts to take away women's rights.

The Legislature has a short memory: Remember Proposition 8? In 2008, Prop. 8 allowed voters to take away rights of same-sex couples to marry. It passed and opened a Pandora's box of legal wrangling. It took two years for Prop. 8 to wind its way through the state and federal courts, where — ultimately — the U.S. Supreme Court's then-liberal majority ruled there was no compelling state interest in denying the LGBTQ community the fundamental right to marry.

The same argument of no compelling interest applied to a woman's right to choose in California would not be deemed constitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court's conservative majority.

The Republican money machine and theocratic social media brainwashing onslaught will land soon on California, confusing the electorate and persuading many that some limits on a woman's right to her body are reasonable.

If a slim majority of Californians vote "no" on the Right to Reproductive Freedom Amendment, the wider debate will begin: Does the existing 1972 Right to Privacy Amendment to the state Constitution actually include women's reproductive freedom?

The Legislature is making a mistake in letting voters decide.

California is the prize for anti-choice zealots aiming to push a radical form of Christianity on Americans. Once the religious right gets hold of California, a woman's right to her own body will be lost for generations.

All we can do is hope every single pro-choice Californian shows up Nov. 8 to vote "yes," passing the Right to Reproductive Freedom Amendment by a wide margin and enshrining abortion and birth control rights in the state Constitution.

Wendy Voorsanger is the author of "Prospects of a Woman," a historical novel about women in the West, and has won 10 indie literary awards. This article was originally published by CalMatters.

Wingfoiling combines hydrofoiling and kitesurfing

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

Wingfoiling—a combination of kite surfing and hydrofoiling—is one of the fastest growing watersports and at just 12 years old Santa Monica resident Luca Vuillermet is one of the best wingers in the game.

The sport pairs a hydrofoil board, which uses a specially shaped long metal fin to raise and propel a board above the water's surface, with a large inflatable wing that also powers the board and can lift it in the air. After picking up the sport just two years ago, Vuillermet placed first and second in two events at the first ever Global Wingfoil Association Youth World Cup in Oliva, Spain this June.

Becoming a top wingfoiler requires a combination of many different skills. One must know how to read the wind and the waves; stay balanced on a hydrofoil board; have the strength to control an inflatable wing in strong wind conditions, the acrobatics to execute flips and spins, and the bravery to fling oneself in the area without the guarantee of a soft landing.

For Vuillermet, the love for harnessing the dual powers of wind and water came naturally. His father Arnaud Vuillermet is an accomplished kitesurfer, who hails from an Alpine town in France and spent his summers on the breezy French coast. Arnaud used to compete in kitesurfing and even formally owned a kitesurfing school in Mexico.

KITEMASTERS (@kitemasters)

CHAMP: Luca Vuillermet is earning his wings at a young age.

Wingfoiling is a very new sport that grew out of kitesurfing, but is easier to participate in as it requires less wind to power and less space between people. The first wingfoil equipment became commercially available in 2018 and since then it has quite literally taken off.

"It's the fastest growing watersport right now, because you have people from all over different sports really joining the wave; people from surfing, people from windsurfing and kitesurfing or people that have barely like any really extreme watersport experience, because it's really easy to learn," said Arnaud.

Vuillermet was already involved in many water sports and extreme sports—water polo, mountain biking, kitesurfing—but when he tried wingfoiling he was quickly addicted. During the pandemic, his family temporarily relocated to Baja California in Mexico, where Luca spent his days remotely studying his Lincoln Middle School coursework and every available free moment winging in the ocean.

Vuillermet's skills progressed rapidly and he was quickly asked to join the international F-One team of wingfoilers, which provided him with specialized training in advance of the Youth World Cup.

He participated in the two Under 14 category events, slalom and freestyle, placing first in the former and second in the latter. Slalom is a competition of speed and dexterity, where wingfoilers race through a slalom of buoys. Freestyle is a competition of style and acrobatics where wingers perform their best tricks in a timed heat.

"For the slalom... I had two other people that I thought might win, might beat me and it was kind of close but actually, I was totally wrong and I completely destroyed them," said Vuillermet. "For freestyle, I did have one big competitor and they sent their biggest trick and I sent my biggest trick, the 720, and in the end they got the best."

According to Arnaud, the 720 skill is something that very few people in the world perform in competitions. It entails completing two full rotations in the air and requires the winger to gain a lot of height and execute the turns very quickly.

Vuillermet is now gearing up for the second and final event in the Youth World Cup series in St. Pierre La Mer, France this October. He is excited to be emerging as a leader in the fast growing sports and said he hopes in the future that more people, and especially more women, will try it out.

Public Health Expanding Monkeypox Vaccination Eligibility

With the arrival of an additional 6,000 JYNNEOS doses this week, the Los Angeles County Department of Public Health (Public Health) is expanding the eligibility criteria for residents to receive the monkeypox vaccine. However, due to continued limited supply of JYNNEOS vaccine from the federal government, vaccine is still being allotted, in alignment with the national monkeypox vaccine strategy, to Los Angeles County residents at higher risk of exposure.

Beginning Monday, July 11, monkeypox vaccines will become available by invitation only to: patients of community STD / HIV clinics, Public Health Centers, and other community clinics located across Los Angeles County who meet the clinical criteria (gay and bisexual men and transgender women who are patients of an STD clinic with a diagnosis of gonorrhea or early syphilis within the past three months, as both of these sexually transmitted infections can increase the risk of monkeypox transmission through the genital sores caused by these infections). A limited number of high-risk individuals identified by clinical staff at Men's Central Jail will also be eligible for the vaccine.

Public Health or clinic partners will directly communicate to eligible patients to provide details on how and where to access the JYNNEOS vaccine.

Public Health will continue to provide monkeypox vaccines by invitation only to the following select groups of persons identified through public health investigation, including:

Persons confirmed by Public Health to have had high- or intermediate-risk contact with someone with monkeypox, as defined by CDC.

Persons who attended an event/venue where there was high risk of exposure to an individual(s) with confirmed monkeypox virus through skin-to-skin or sexual contact. Public Health will work with event/venue organizers to identify persons who may have been present and at risk of exposure while at the venue.

With the JYNNEOS vaccine supply extremely limited in the United States, residents who have not been contacted by Public Health or clinic partners are not able to be vaccinated at this time. Public Health will expand eligibility as additional doses are available; the federal government anticipates distributing additional doses later this month.

Persons with symptoms should speak with their regular provider or call 2-1-1 if they do not have a provider. In addition, people without a regular provider that have developed a rash in the genital or perianal area, can access services at Public Health's Sexual Health Clinics.

Monkeypox, an uncommon disease caused by infection with the monkeypox virus, is rarely fatal. Monkeypox can spread when a person has close, physical contact with a person infected with monkeypox virus or when a person comes in contact with materials (e.g., bedding, towels) that are contaminated with the virus. The monkeypox virus can also spread from animals to people.

name will be announced in the coming weeks. Change is also underway within the DTSM Board as during a June 28 meeting City Council appointed three new Board members, who are all Downtown business owners and have fresh ideas for the organization.

Over the course of the pandemic, Downtown has become a focal point for the citywide issues of homelessness and increased property crime. The area was also hit hard by the loss of tourists, shifts in retail trends and an uptick in vacancies.

Against this backdrop, Downtown Santa Monica, Inc. (DTSM) became the subject of criticism from a small but vocal group of Downtown property owners, whose complaints were echoed by Councilmember Phil Brock in an email in which he called for the dissolution of the DTSM Board.

The organization also faced a high level of staff turnover during the pandemic. Currently, only three of the fourteen individuals who were on staff at the beginning of 2020 still work for DTSM. The CEO, the Deputy Chief Executive and the Director of Marketing & Communication all departed the organization to take on leadership roles at The Hollywood Partnership.

DTSM is a non-profit organization that works with funding from the City and an assessment paid by Downtown businesses to promote the safety, cleanliness and vitality of the Promenade and Downtown business district. It is governed by a 13-member Board of Directors, which includes the City Manager, six Council appointed members and six members voted in by property owners.

The three new Board members are Leonid Pustilnikov, Lucian Tudor and Luke Cain. Despite backing from Councilmembers Sue Himmelrich, Kristin McCowan and Gleam Davis, longtime board member Juan Matute did not receive the five necessary votes to be appointed to a third term. All new members signaled a desire for change within DTSM in their applications.

"It seems that we have a number of disagreements between the DTSM board members, property owners, residents, and other Stakeholders. Currently there is a lack of communication [as] the main reason," wrote Lucian Tudor, the owner of 1212 restaurant on the Promenade.

Real estate investor Leonid Pustilnikov also noted a disconnect between DTSM and property owners in his application.

"When I started investing on the Promenade, I noticed a complete lack of forethought and management. The established leadership had no interest in listening to business or property owners and instead let the brilliance of the Promenade fade," wrote Pustilnikov.

Pustilnikov is a co-founder of the Santa Monica Bayside Owners Association, an organization that unsuccessfully fought to prevent the demolition of Downtown Parking Structure 3.

The third new member is Luke Cain, who is a member of SMBOA, a real estate investor on the Promenade, and helps his parents manage the Britannia Pub.

Both Cain and Tudor indicated a desire to review the Downtown Ambassador Program. This program includes teams of safety, hospitality, maintenance, and quality of life ambassadors. Collectively they are in charge of maintaining cleanliness, assisting visitors, and working with the police department and homeless service providers to improve safety.

"I've noticed while attending the Board meetings, Public Space and Placemaking meetings, and the Business and Community Development meetings, that there are significant issues that need to be addressed: 1) The $450,000 per month cost for the Ambassador Program..." wrote Cain.

> "It seems that we have a number of disagreements between the DTSM board members, property owners, residents, and other Stakeholders. Currently there is a lack of communication [as] the main reason — Luke Cain

These new appointees and the other 13 board members will begin working with the new CEO when that individual comes on board in the coming week and will collectively determine the new staff structure for the organization.

Currently DTSM is operating with a pared down staff of five full time employees and one part-time employee.

"Under the new leadership, DTSM expects to bring on additional staff members and continue to expand its internal structure. The final number of employees will depend on organizational priorities set by the Board of Directors, with guidance from the new CEO," said Barry Snell, interim CEO and chair of the DTSM Board of Directors.

The next DTSM Board meeting will take place at 5 p.m. on July 28.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 11)

You're not waiting for a fairy godmother to transform your life. You get the look and the transportation together, and you'll even put on your own ball if you have to. Your life is all the more magical because you take charge in this way. More highlights: an intense course of training, domestic smoothness and a pay raise. Libra and Taurus adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 3, 33, 27 and 17.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). When a situation doesn't measure up to your expectations, disappointment sets in. Try to get past it. There's a golden opportunity in the works, but you'll only see it after you stop thinking it should be something else.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Excitement can spark in many ways -- the intrigue of a stranger's conversation, an unfamiliar landscape or a risky challenge. Let the wild impulse move you to explore. It will make coming home all the sweeter.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Weariness is a function of working day after day, week after week without a break. Since you'll be planning the future, build a few breaks into the schedule to avoid burnout.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). No matter how well you think you know a person, there is always more to discover. New people on your scene will be just the catalyst to bring out a different side of someone you thought you knew well.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). A project requires skills that you do not yet posses, so you'll learn. In training, you will find out that you are more talented than you knew. Even your distractions and tangents will prove productive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You understand others by their actions and behaviors, not by what they declare. Every human on the earth is different. You'll be inspired by uniqueness, and you'll appreciate your own individuality.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You're a passionate person. When you give your love, you give it all. You may feel like your survival is based on another person, but this is just an illusion caused by your passionate nature. You'll feel differently tomorrow.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). What you thought was no big deal is actually a very big deal involving complexities you didn't understand before. And there's more at stake, too. You are open-minded. The more people you query, the smarter you become.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You will rise up on everyone's "favorite person" list, graciousness personified, selflessly taking care of friends. The sweetness and smiles is easy for you because at the moment you feel lucky and trouble-free.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You'll be pulled in at least three different directions, mostly due to the fact that you have three people who adore you and want your attention. There's a way to satisfy all of them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Give what you want and no more. You've been knocking yourself out for your loved ones. This won't make them love you any more. It's the work they do for you that makes them appreciate you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You'll resist anyone who pushes you. Don't take a loved one's action too personally. It might be your interpretation of their behavior and not their actual behavior causing you to feel a certain way.
