A toast for local teens

BY REBECCA KHEEL
Special to the Daily Press

MIDCITY The fear of public speaking is one of the most common phobias. For an actor, that fear could kill a career before it has a chance to get off the ground.

To help some teenage actors master the art of public speaking, Toastmasters Club 21, the Santa Monica branch of an international public speaking and leadership organization, is sponsoring a Youth Leadership Program organized by Children In Film in association with The Actors Fund's Looking Ahead Program.

"We want to help teens become better public speakers because it's just a good life skill to have," said Heather Broeker, the director of marketing for Children In Film, a website that supports the positive employment of children in the entertainment industry.

Starting July 13, 15 to 20 members ages 13 to 18 of Children In Film and the Looking Ahead Program, which also helps children employed in the entertainment industry, will attend four two-hour workshops to develop public presentations about a common theme the group will decide on at the meetings. They will then give a final presentations during a banquet to their parents and industry professionals on or around Aug. 10.

Though adults from Children In Film and Toastmasters, like Broeker, will be in attendance to supervise the meetings, the teenagers will lead everything themselves. This will allow them to learn to evaluate others' speeches and construct their own order of business, among other skills, Broeker said.

"It's a shortened version of what the main Toastmasters do," she said.

Toastmasters Club 21 has been in Santa Monica since 1934. The international organization helps adults looking to improve their public speaking skills or to overcome their fear of public speaking through weekly meetings.

The club decided to sponsor the youth program after it was presented to them by Broeker, a current Club 21 member, and Children In Film President Toni Casala, a

Vidiots launches film study program

BY REBECCA KHEEL
Special to the Daily Press

DOWNTOWN Tom Kemper has been a card-carrying member of the independent video store Vidiots since shortly after it opened in 1985, while he was an undergraduate at the University of California, Berkeley.

"It felt like a good bookstore, or a used bookstore, in its depth of collection compared to a chain store," he said. "And there's also a sensibility in the collection."

Now, Kemper, a film studies teacher at Crossroads School and visiting lecturer at the University of Southern California, will employ his love of film and Vidiots to teach two film classes as part of the new Vidiots Annex.

The Vidiots Annex launches today as a dedicated screening room adjacent to the store offering lecture series in five subjects, free Saturday night film screenings and special events.

While other video stores are folding or shifting to online business, Vidiots' managers decided to expand and incorporate the film studies program to help its business evolve with the times, said Patty Polinger, co-founder of Vidiots.

"One thing feeds another," she said. "The annex brings new people in. We've already seen an increase in membership."

Body found could be man who jumped off Venice Pier

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES Los Angeles County Lifeguard officials say a body found floating in Santa Monica Bay could be that of a man who jumped into the ocean off the Venice Pier a week ago.

Lifeguard Capt. Terry Hearst says a fisherman discovered the body Sunday morning about 300 yards from the beach in Santa Monica. It was brought to shore and will be turned over to coroner's investigators.

Hearst says it's expected the body will be identified as 31-year-old Brian Patrick Dunn of West Hollywood.

Witnesses told the Coast Guard that Dunn was intoxicated and fully clothed when he jumped into the churning surf at 2:30 a.m July 5.

‘Despicable Me’ tops weekend box office

CHRISTY LEMIRE
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES “Despicable Me” wasn’t such a bad guy after all, it seems, opening at the top of the box office with an estimated $60.1 million.

The first 3-D animated movie from Universal Pictures stars Steve Carell as the voice of Gru, a bumbling villain with plans to steal the moon — until three adorable orphan girls enter his life. Jason Segel, Russell Brand and Julie Andrews are among the star-studded voice cast.

Nikki Rocco, head of distribution for Universal, said Sunday that “Despicable Me” far exceeded the studio’s expectations for opening weekend.

“Thirty (million) would have been a win for the studio — because it’s a new creative idea, we really didn’t know what we had, so we backed in saying $30 (million),” said Rocco. “I would never have said $50 million-plus.”

Rocco believes a number of factors worked in the movie’s favor, including jokes for the kids and more grown-up humor and a warmhearted story for adults. But the tiny, yellow Minions — quirky, pill-shaped creatures who spout gibberish and help Gru carry out his dastardly plans — were appealing to both, and were a huge part of the film’s marketing campaign.

The week’s other new wide release, “Predators,” grossed $25.3 million to open at No. 3. A sequel of sorts to the 1987 sci-fi cult classic “Predator,” the 20th Century Fox film stars Adrien Brody and Laurence Fishburne as mercenaries being stalked by alien hunters in the jungle.

L.A. police teach Marines how to train Afghan cops

JULIE WATSON
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES A tough-talking, muscular Los Angeles police sergeant steadily rattled off tips to a young Marine riding shotgun as they raced in a patrol car to a drug bust: Be aware of your surroundings. Watch people’s body language. Build rapport.

Marine Lt. Andrew Abbott, 23, took it all in as he peered out at the graffiti-covered buildings, knowing that the lessons he learned recently in one of the city’s toughest neighborhoods could help him soon in the war against the Taliban in Afghanistan.

“People are the center of gravity and if you do everything you can to protect them, then they’ll protect you,” he said. “That’s something true here and pretty much everywhere.”

Abbott was among 70 Camp Pendleton Marines in a training exercise that aims to adapt the investigative techniques the LAPD has used for decades against violent street gangs to take on the Taliban more as a powerful drug-trafficking mob than an insurgency.

The Marines hope that learning to work like a cop on a beat will help them better track the Taliban, build relationships with Afghans leery of foreign troops and make them better teachers as they try to professionalize an Afghan police force beset by corruption.

The troops believe they can learn valuable lessons from the LAPD, which has made inroads into communities after highly publicized abuses, from the videotaped beating of Rodney King to corruption in an anti-gang unit.

“Their role is to win the hearts and minds of the community and that’s what they did,” said Marine Staff Sgt. Brendan Flynn, who also works as a Los Angeles police officer and will be deployed to help train Afghan police.

The weeklong exercise — unbeknownst to the public — involved Marines dressed in jeans and T-shirts observing drugs busts, witnessing prostitution arrests and even following a murder case. It was the largest group of Marines to embed with the city’s officers.

Abbott, of Long Island, N.Y., rode with Sgt. Arno Clair, a 16-year veteran with salt-and-pepper hair who swims up to a mile a day.

TDS on last leg?

Editor:

Your pullout is a wonderful thing that we can enjoy and know what is going on in reference to the Thursday concert series.

However, Ms. Katharine King and Mr. Ben Franz-Knight skewed what really is the Twilight Dance Series. It is true that the recession left the concert series "high & dry" with lack of funds. It is also true that without last minute efforts to get sponsors from corporations it may have been canceled.

There was a great way out, nine months ago: KCBS JACK FM offered to sponsor the event and give over $300,000. Ms. King refused, because she would have to give up some of her power. You can see over the past few years that the acts have dwindled, as have the crowds. What once was, hasn't been for a few years. You can see this as a fact this year. To think that a sponsor offered their service, and would have provided much bigger acts and a series that could have been 11 weeks, instead of the nine we have. All because the Pier Restoration Corp. and Ms. King didn't want to give an inch of the power of the concert series.

If something isn't changed I wouldn't be surprised if this is the last year. Even if it isn't, we have lost thousands of local concert goers, because of the drab acts given us for three years now. It is a shame because what JACK FM was going to offer was huge, and the acts would have been fantastic. Santa Monica residents and its leaders should want to enhance what is a staple such as the Twilight Dance Series, but instead because of egos and stubborn sensibilities we are losing what could go for many years. Residents and the people who enjoy this free concert series need to know that it is on its last leg, and we need to let the powers know that a sponsor such as a radio station that has hundreds of thousand of dollars to spend should be embraced and thanked, not just ignored and pushed away.

Yes, just the facts, Chris

CHRISTOPHER HARDING IS ONE OF Santa Monica's most successful lawyers. His developer, auto dealer and real estate clients have made Chris a wealthy and powerful man in the community and his law firm the "go-to" place for land use issues.

On July 1 (Your column here, Pg 4), Harding wrote a guest column in this paper "Just the facts, guys" claiming, "Bill misstates the positions taken by the (Santa Monica) Chamber of Commerce … and others," referring to my June 28 column, "LUCE as a goose" about the update to the city's general plan called the Land Use and Circulation Element (LUCE).

In a personal and vindictive attack, Harding stated that I "persistently misstate the facts, grossly exaggerate differences of opinion and attack the character or motives of those with different points of view." He used points from my column as examples of how I was supposedly wrong on almost everything.

Let's examine just some of Harding's "facts" and why he's the one who's in error.

Auto Dealerships: I'd written that business interests (meaning in part, members of the Santa Monica Chamber of Commerce) wanted "parts of Lincoln Boulevard between Wilshire and Interstate-10 to be re-zoned for car dealerships." Chris retorted that it was already zoned for auto dealerships.

Harding is comparing apples to oranges by referring to the old 1984 General Plan, not the draft LUCE which would severely restrict where auto dealerships could do business including on Lincoln Boulevard which I was referencing.

Doubling Residential: He wrote, "Bill further states that 'business interests and developers are also asking for increased floor areas in new buildings.' This, too, is demonstrably false … The chamber has, along with Santa Monicans for Renters' Rights, supported consideration of floor area discounts for housing in certain areas as an important tool for addressing the city's imbalance between housing and jobs. But neither the chamber nor SMRR has suggested that such a tool should be used to increase overall densities.

Yet, in his "COC Recommended Changes" (June 10, Pg. 4, D), Harding states, "The Chamber and SMRR agree that the draft LUCE should consider the use of floor area discounts ...."

Harding knows "floor area discounts" operate as a 50 percent bonus, meaning that the Floor Area Ratio (FAR) is doubled for residential housing if the discount is used. This would essentially double the square footage of any new residential allowed. He also completely misrepresented Santa Monicans for Renters' Rights position on doubling housing FARs.

SMRR Co-Chair Patricia Hoffman swiftly refuted it in an e-mail to City Council: "I see that there is still a misunderstanding about SMRR's position on incentives for affordable housing ... We do not need to use the old method of discounts to incentivize affordable housing."

Height Limits: Harding's claims that "virtually every significant practicing architect in Santa Monica supports the Planning Commissions recommended 2 – 6 additional feet…" are totally unsubstantiated and meaningless.

Last Minute Changes: "And Bill gets it wrong again when he labels this recommendation 'last minute' — the architects and the Chamber have been raising this issue for more than two years," he opined. Harding waited until early May to start his fusillade of memos and "COC Recommended Changes" on LUCE — which he's actually admitted were both "fundamental" and "very late." And, "Much of it is new to us," city Planning Director Eileen Fogarty e-mailed me.

Harding knew that many Chamber recommendations would anger residents. It appears he shortcut the lengthy LUCE vetting process by jumping directly to the finish line. The strategy paid off because four City Council members gave Harding, his clients and the Chamber, what they wanted and more. He's just upset because he's been called out on it.

Although his "guest column" was ostensibly about LUCE, Harding couldn't resist taking a cheap shot at me for alleged "misstatements in previous columns about our public schools" and "baseless attacks on our school district." Of course, Harding is off base here, too.

Bottom Line: Harding is "lawyering" us. When not comparing apples to oranges, he's distorting the facts, omitting key points, misrepresenting other peoples' positions, telling half-truths and fantasizing about what architects support. He's probably even bad-mouthing my red Chuck Taylors.

BP makes no promises about latest fix in Gulf

TOM BREEN
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS Underpromising with hopes of overdelivering, BP said Sunday that it is making progress on what could prove its most effective effort yet to contain the Gulf oil leak, but cautioned that the verdict could be several days away.

A new cap being placed atop the gusher is intended to provide a tight seal and might eventually allow the oil giant to capture all the crude leaking from the well for the first time since an April 20 oil rig explosion set off the environmental crisis. But several prior failed attempts to stop the leak have made BP PLC careful to keep expectations grounded.

"We're pleased with our progress," said BP senior vice president Kent Wells, who then hastened to add the operation was still expected to last up to six more days.

Asked during a conference call if the new cap and collection efforts would end the spilling of oil into the Gulf, Wells said only that BP will capture all the oil "at some point."

Wells said BP may have to bring another vessel back online and add additional collection capacity in order to stop the oil flow altogether.

Officials won't be satisfied the cap is working until they've run tests on whether it can withstand the tremendous pressure of oil pushing up from below the seafloor, Wells said.

"We've tried to work out as many of the bugs as we can. The challenge will come with something unexpected," he said.

The well has been gushing largely unchecked since an old, leaky cap was removed from the wellhead Saturday to make way for the new one. Between 88 million and 174 million gallons have already spilled into the Gulf, according to federal estimates.

Wary Gulf residents reserved judgment about BP's latest effort and said the damage already done to the environment, fishing and tourism will haunt the region for a long time either way.

"At this point, there have been so many ups and downs, disappointments, that everybody down here is like, 'We'll believe it when we see it,'" said Keith Kennedy, a charter boat captain in Venice, La.

Robotic submarines finished removing a busted piece of pipe that was bolted around the leak around 3 a.m. Sunday. That paved the way for the installation of a pipe-like connector called a flange spool that will sit on top of the spewing well bore. The new cap would be mounted on top of that connector and have flexible pipes leading up to surface ships.

The work was being closely monitored at the White House, where President Barack Obama is being briefed multiple times a day, adviser David Axelrod said on ABC's "This Week."

"We have every reason to believe that this will work," he said.

The new cap will be aided in containing the leak by the arrival of the Helix Producer, a vessel that will be able to take in about 1 million gallons of crude per day by Tuesday after gradually ramping up. The Helix connected to flexible pipes from the well Friday, and crews have been running tests since then.

Like another vessel already operating, the Q4000, the Helix will take in oil through connections beneath the new seal. Once the new cap is affixed, two other vessels are to connect to it for their oil collection.

Ultimately, the four vessels collecting oil from the leak would have a rough capacity of about 2.5 million to 3.4 million gallons a day — enough to capture all the oil leaking, if federal estimates are right. Getting all the vessels on the task will take about two to three weeks.

The hurricane season that lasts through November could interfere. There are no storms forecast now, but if one blows through, the ships collecting the oil may have to leave and crude would spew again for days into the water.

If the new cap is a complete success in stopping the leak, that will be a first.

In May, BP tried to drop a four-story, 100-ton steel-and-concrete box on the leak, but abandoned it when it was encased by ice-like crystals. That was followed by a mile-long siphon tube designed to suck up oil escaping the leak. That, in turn, was scrapped after it managed to suck up only about 900,000 gallons after roughly a week of operation.

The most anticipated effort was the so-called "top kill," in which mud and cement were pumped down from above the leak. After about three days of the strategy, BP announced on May 29 it had failed.

Then came the cap that was removed Saturday. That device didn't form a perfect seal on the jagged pipe that was cut to make room for it, and the inexact fit meant that it was able to collect only 1 million gallons or so of oil a day.

The new, tighter cap is not intended to be the permanent fix to the problem.

Relief wells are being dug for the permanent fix, a "bottom kill" in which heavy drilling mud and cement are pumped in from below the broken wellhead.

The effort to drill relief wells was moving ahead of schedule, Wells said Sunday. BP and government officials have said the wells are expected to be completed sometime around mid-August.

Problem plastics

Dear EarthTalk

Where do you recycle plastic stuff like sandwich bags, Saran wrap and plastic grocery store wrappers? Can they just go in with other plastics in the recycling bin? There never seems to be any information available about this.

Renee La-Fountaine
Lake Hughes, Calif.

THE REASON YOU DON'T HEAR MUCH about recycling these types of plastic films is that most municipalities don't take back items intended to wrap food. One exception may be sandwich bags, which are made from easy-to-recycle polyethylene, as long as any hard (i.e. "Ziploc") components are removed and they are rinsed free of any food debris or stains.

For that matter, if you are going to the trouble to wash them, you may as well dry and reuse them at home a few times before relegating them to the recycling bin. There are even small countertop racks available for hanging plastic bags to dry before reusing them.

Clinging plastic like Saran Wrap is problematic for recyclers because the resin that it contains (to give it wrapping power) cannot be re-extracted without massive amounts of energy — more than it takes to make it new from scratch. And given that it's usually soiled with some kind of food, used plastic wrap should always just go right into the trash.

Other non-recyclable plastic films include dark-colored plastic bags, bags with handles or drawstrings, and anything else designed to be wrapped around food. Since you can't even rinse or recycle these kinds of plastics, it's better to avoid them altogether and invest in some reusable containers to store leftovers.

Another option is to use plastic grocery store shopping bags (though they are increasingly being phased out) to wrap your food leftovers in. Many municipalities and most stores that provide such bags accept them for recycling, so once you're done with them they can be recycled or returned to the store, after which they can be melted down and incorporated into weather- and rot-resistant window and door frames, decking (such as Trex), palettes, pipes and other long-lasting hard goods. Like with sandwich and other bags you intend to recycle, make sure plastic grocery bags are clean before you turn them in for recycling.

If you are a Ziploc bag or plastic wrap fanatic but want to do the right thing by the environment, look for plastic food storage film or bags made from biodegradable polymers. Some popular brand names to keep an eye out for at Whole Foods and elsewhere are Eco Wrap, EcoFlex and BioBag. These plastics — some of which are made from agricultural scraps left over from corn crops — can go right in with yard waste or other compostables and will break down over time accordingly just like cardboard or food scraps. With time major brands will undoubtedly be offering similar products.

But even though there may in fact be "greener" plastic out there, reducing our reliance on disposable bags altogether should be the ultimate goal. Luckily many grocery chains are hip to greening their own operations and image, and are giving away or selling for a nominal amount reusable canvas shopping bags so customers don't have to choose between wasting plastic and paper at the checkout line.

Parking Structure No. 2 Seismic Retrofit

The parking structure will remain open throughout construction, however the work requires temporary closure of up to 50 parking spaces per day. From approximately June 29 traffic leaving Parking Structure No. 2 will not be able to exit onto Second Street. Instead, all exiting traffic will be re-routed through the alley behind the structure. Please be sure to obey all posted directional and no parking signs throughout the construction project. Estimated project completion is December, 2010.

Parking Structures at Santa Monica Place

Parking Structure No. 7 will be completely closed until August, 2010 for construction improvements. For construction questions, please contact George Millinopoulos at (323) 301-5661. For alternate parking location questions, contact Frank Ching at (310) 458-8295.

specifically came as an extension of Vidiots clerks answering customer questions and recommending films and directors, Polinger said. Vidiots also had extra space as a store room was no longer needed after Vidiots cleared out some clutter and got rid of the VHS versions of films that were also on DVD.

There will be five separate series spanning between four and six weeks long. The classes are: "What is a Cult Film," "Auteurs," "Anime Mythology," "An Introduction to Essential Film Comedy Genres," and "Censorship in Cinema."

Kemper will be teaching the classes on auteurs and censorship. He said he decided to participate because it seemed like "an intriguing idea to get out of the classroom."

While he will run his classes similar to a university lecture, Kemper predicts Vidiots Annex classes will be more informal than a school course as there is no pressure of homework, notes or grades.

"I've taught classes outside of school before," he said. "They tend to be very stimulating, and people feel free to engage without the fear of grading."

John Achorn, a professor at Santa Monica Emeritus College, will teach the comedy class. He said he looks forward to turning his students on to forgotten comedy acts such as Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, a vaudeville act that was in competition with the Marx Brothers.

The Vidiots Annex will also be host to the "Saturday Night Film Club," free weekly film screenings at 8 p.m. The screenings kick-off July 17 with the 1987 German film, "Wings of Desire."

Additionally, the annex will also feature special events, such as an appearance by actor/director/producer Tony Bill, known for producing "The Sting," on Sept. 24.

former Club 21 member, as it fit with its initiative to help young people become better leaders and to be involved in the community, said Peter Orlowski, Club 21's vice president of communications. Since he joined Club 21 nine months ago, Orlowski said it has hosted two or three other community events in the same style of the summer Youth Leadership Program.

Teenagers involved said they are excited to get the opportunity to hone their leadership and public speaking skills in the free program, both to advance their careers and to help with life outside of acting.

"I'm hoping to get my speech skills upgraded because I'm an actor, so speech is really important. I kind of have a hard time pronouncing words and stuttering, so this will really help me," said Darnell Cates, a 15-year-old member of Children In Film. "When I'm doing school presentations, [public speaking skills] would really help me."

During their afternoon together, police handcuffed a bus driver — moments after he was caught by an undercover officer with $25,000 worth of crack cocaine outside an apartment complex in a south-central Los Angeles neighborhood long plagued by violent gangs.

The tattooed suspect wearing an earring and baggy shorts seemed a world away from the ragtag, Kalashnikov-toting Taliban fighters, just as the streets of south-central Los Angeles are from the dusty villages of mud-brick houses in Afghanistan.

But in many ways, police in Los Angeles' crime-ridden neighborhoods use the same skills that Marines say could help them.

Marines are in charge of training Afghanistan's army and police but often have no police experience themselves. Their success in building effective police forces is considered key to stabilizing the country and allowing foreign troops to withdraw.

Marines also are changing their approach, realizing that marching into towns to show force alienates communities. Instead, they are being taught to fan out with interpreters to strike up conversations with truck drivers, money exchangers, cell phone sellers and others.

The rapport building can net valuable information that could even alert troops about potential attacks.

Marines can gather intelligence by picking up the notebooks, receipts and other papers left behind in raids that could provide insight into the opium business the Taliban uses to buy their weapons, Afghan expert Gretchen Peters said.

She told Marines before the Los Angeles patrols that they should follow the lead of some Afghans who have gone from using the term "mujahadeen" or "holy warrior" to identify the Taliban to calling them gangsters.

That, she said, shows how fed up the villagers are with being extorted by them and calling them gangsters will win them over.

"Think of the Taliban as the Sopranos in turbans," she said. "I think essentially they're criminals."

Peters, who has written extensively about the Taliban being a criminal network, has been talking to troops across the country before they deploy to Helmand Province, a top opium-producing region.

Afghanistan supplies 90 percent of the world's opium, the main ingredient of heroin, and is also the leading global supplier of hashish. Last year, opium seizures soared 924 percent because of better cooperation between Afghan and international forces.

In the end, the police training mission is what will win the war, said Marine 2nd Lt. Jared Siebenaler, 24, of Hastings, Minn., who spent the past six months training police in Afghanistan. But he acknowledged their police mission faces enormous challenges.

Siebenaler said many recruits tested positive for drugs, arriving to work high on hashish if they came at all. Supervisors were believed to be skimming money off their officers' measly salaries. One force had men from two tribes who could barely stand each other.

And then there's the language barrier between Marines and the Afghan police.

But like most police work, getting past issues of trust and cultural difference begins with a brief encounter on a street.

As Clair and Abbott cruised past a row of dilapidated homes, the police sergeant told him to notice how a person's walk and dress changes from street to street, and whether children are playing or hurrying by.

BOX OFFICE

Robert Rodriguez ("Planet Terror," the "Spy Kids" movies) wrote an early version of the script in the 1990s, produced the film at his Texas compound and his name appears high on the credits — an association that proved fruitful, said Bert Livingston, a 20th Century Fox distribution executive

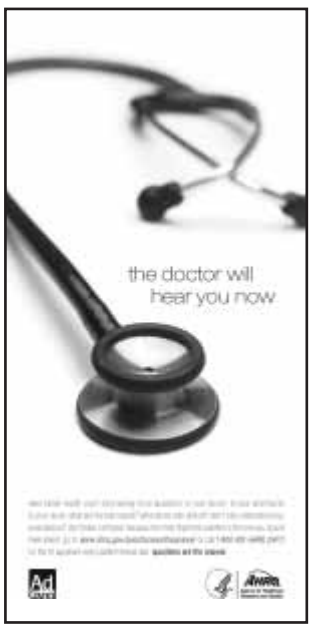

"People wanted to see the film because Robert Rodriguez was attached to it, and he's the best at what he does, and we got our audience," Livingston said. "It was 70-percent male and they liked the film."

Meanwhile, last week's juggernaut, "The Twilight Saga: Eclipse," fell to second place with $33.35 million. The third film in the wildly popular vampire franchise has now made $237 million in its first 12 days. It's expected to surpass part two, "The Twilight Saga: New Moon," which grossed $296.6 million when it came out last year.

"'Twilight' dropped less than 50 percent — that's impressive to me," said Paul Dergarabedian, box-office analyst for Hollywood.com. "That's a really strong hold for a movie that, in its first day, made $68 million."

It's been a strong series of weeks at the box office, especially after a rough start to the summer with movies such as "Shrek Forever After" and "Sex and the City 2" not opening to expectations. Next weekend brings "Inception," Christopher Nolan's hugely anticipated first film since the blockbuster "The Dark Knight," which opened on the same weekend two years ago.

"You can't underestimate the importance of momentum in the marketplace," Dergarabedian said. "'The Karate Kid,' 'Toy Story 3,' 'Eclipse' and now 'Despicable Me' — we're on a roll and it feels more like the beginning of the summer than the middle of the summer."

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Friends are like quicksand, Gemini!

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ Energized, you strut out into the world, ready for nearly anything. Allow yourself to be spontaneous; see where it gets you. Others will respond, with the exception of a difficult associate. Tonight: Have a long-overdue discussion with a child or loved one.

TAURUS (April 20-)
★★★ Take a personal day if you want to. Wherever you are, you experience the unexpected. Greet new ideas and technology openly, ready for nearly anything. Though you might not be extremely verbal, your eyes are wide open. Tonight: Close to home.

GEMINI (May 22-June 20)
★★★★★ When you feel confident, you simply go off and do. Such is the case today. A partner pulls back and re-groups. Your mercurial ways often draw strong reactions. Why would today be any different? Tonight: Friends are like quicksand!

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ Be aware of the costs of being a little too mouthy or erratic. If you are moody, others could become quirky. This combination appears to be a recipe for problems. The unpredictability of results could become an issue. Tonight: Buy a new summer item on the way home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Your ability to see beyond the obvious proves to be exciting once you explain your concepts. Good news comes from someone at a distance, the legal profession and/or a personal commitment to detach mentally. Tonight: Stay open.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★ Fortunately, you tend to withdraw and listen when you sense that what you know isn't clicking with external events. Avoid tapping into your creativity right now. Your inner dialogue makes mountains out of molehills. Tonight: Do for yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ Remain goal-oriented. Refuse to get tied up in an uncomfortable personal situation. Partners can be provocative, creative and exciting. Lose the word "stable," and you won't be disappointed. Go with the flow. Tonight: Only where the action is; nothing less.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ You might say that your image isn't important, but it is, especially when dealing with superiors. You could be exhausted by demanding communication. You might feel as if you are skipping around a control issue. You are. Tonight: Working late.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ Follow your impulses and instincts. Though sometimes this combo could land you in hot water, right now that is not the case. Do be careful with spending, and avoid unnecessary risks in this area. Tonight: Two exciting alternatives appear. You choose.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Defer to a partner or loved one who has similar interests. You might wonder which way to go with a near-life-altering decision. Understand what is expected from you. You might not want to go along for the ride! Tonight: Have an important discussion over dinner. Everyone will be more relaxed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Loosen up about your expectations. Many people have similar goals, but the paths are often different. Note a tendency to be controlling. No one can control anyone. You can only control yourself. Tonight: Say "yes" to an offer.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Focus on one job at a time. Don't make a list, because, as you will see, much comes in from out of left field that needs immediate handling. You will have more flexibility if you just let go of rigidity. Tonight: Choose a stress-buster.

Happy birthday

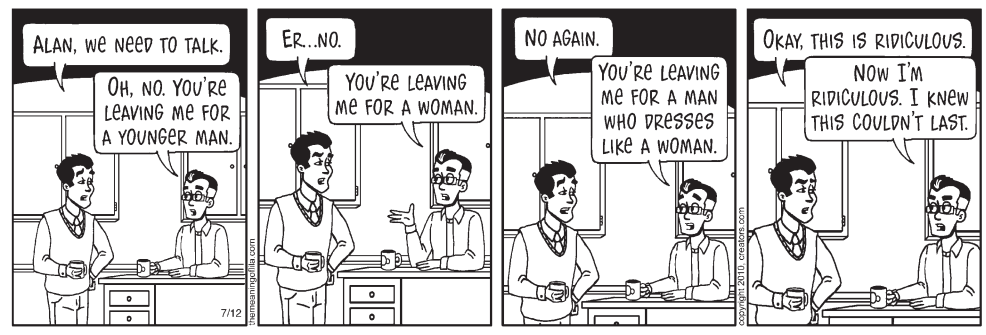

This year, you express your generosity in many new ways. Others are drawn to you. Your optimism seems to define their lives in a new way. Within your immediate community and/or professional circle, you become a star as you adapt and demonstrate many ways to arrive at the same place. If you are single, you will meet someone while out and about or at work. This person lights up your life. He or she has a quirky nature; give this person much-needed space.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

ARITHMO™ CrossMath

- Fill the grid with the set of given numbers (1 to 12) to satisfy the Equa demands (7 to 24) in the shaded boxes. The Equa demands represent the sum of the digits that you will insert into the empty squares.
- Each horizontal row has one Equa demand to satisfy; each vertical column also has one demand to satisfy. Each empty square in the grid dictates the math operation (addition +, subtraction -, multiplication X, and division ÷) that must be performed to meet the demands.
- You must follow the given math operations for each square and you must make sure all the numbers satisfy the demands in the shaded boxes when connected in adjacent threes and calculated together from left to right, and top to bottom.
- The numbers you insert into the grid must satisfy the Equa demands both horizontally and vertically.

For more games, go to www.arithmo.com

Fill in the empty fields with the given numbers so when calculated together they satisfy all Equas in the gray boxes:

4, 6, 7, 9, 12

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ A severe but underappreciated American drug problem (sometimes deadly and often expensive) is patients' failure to take prescribed medications -- even to save their own lives (such as with anti-coagulants or cholesterol-regulating statins). In recent pilot programs, according to a June New York Times report, compliance rates have been significantly improved -- by giving patients money ($50 to $100 a month, sometimes more) if they remember to take their drugs. Data show that, indeed, such compliance subsidies reduce society's overall health care costs by preventing expensive hospital admissions. Beyond health care costs is the social benefit when violent schizophrenics take their meds and refrain from attacking people.

■ Labor unions' sweet, recession-proof contract with the New York City area's severely cash-strapped Metropolitan Transportation Authority last year provided 8,074 blue-collar workers (conductors, engineers, repairmen, etc.) with six-figure compensation, including about 50 who earned $200,000 or more. Researchers cited by The New York Times in April found that one Long Island Rail Road conductor made $239,148, about $4,000 more than the MTA's chief financial officer and about $48,000 short of being the highest-paid person in the entire system. Included in some of the fat payouts for LIRR locomotive engineers was special "penalty" pay (about $94,600 in one case) for engineers who are required to move a train to a different location from its normal assignment.
