Downtown Santa Monica, Inc. selects Andrew Thomas as new CEO

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

Following the departure of 25 year CEO Kathleen Rawson, Downtown Santa Monica Inc. has selected Andrew Thomas to lead the next chapter of its history.

While Thomas is new to his role, he is not new to the organization, having served as its Director of Operations from 2001 to 2010 during the heyday of the Promenade's commercial splendor.

Following his departure from DTSM, Thomas became the founding Executive Director of the Westwood Village Improvement Association, a nonprofit organization that seeks to make the village clean, safe, and friendly for the community. Thomas has also served as the President of the California Downtown Association and former Chair of the Los Angeles Business Improvement District Consortium.

DTSM is a non-profit organization that works with funding from the City and an assessment paid by Downtown businesses to promote the safety, cleanliness and vitality of the Promenade and Downtown business district.

Hertzberg secures Sacramento endorsements as local leaders rally around Horvath for supervisor

EMILY SAWICKI

Santa Monica's representatives in state-level offices would like to see one of their own in the role of Third District Supervisor.

Both State Senator Ben Allen and Assemblymember Richard Bloom have thrown their weight behind California Senate Majority Leader Emeritus Bob Hertzberg in his campaign for LA County Supervisor, in contrast with the endorsements of Santa Monica's local elected leaders, who favor his competitor, former West Hollywood Mayor Lindsey Horvath. Allen, Bloom, Hertzberg and Horvath are all Democrats.

Horvath has gathered the support of numerous Santa Monica leaders including councilmembers Christine Parra, Oscar de la Torre, Phil Brock, Gleam Davis and Kristin McCowan (plus former mayors Judy Abdo, Pam O'Connor, Ted Winterer and Kevin McKeown), as well as the endorsement of the Santa Monica Democratic Club.

During their endorsement debate in April, members of the Democratic Club opined that Horvath's executive experience as mayor more closely aligns with the

Signs of summer at the library

CLASS: The library's summer reading program included lessons on American Sign Language.

EMILY SAWICKI
SMDP Staff Writer

From little elephants that stomp to medium-sized dogs that run, Santa Monica youngsters had a chance to sing and sign — using American Sign Language — along with storyteller Georgia Frawley at a special storytime at the Santa Monica Library's Pico Branch last Thursday. Amid giggles, little ones practiced signing along to nursery rhymes and songs about weather, plus what Frawley called "the alphabet of animals," during the hour-long family event.

Santa Monica school kids have about six weeks left of their summer vacation, and from specialty day camps to educational vacations, there are plenty of ways for parents to ensure their little ones don't experience the dreaded "summer slide," forgetting some of what they learned in the previous school year and making it more difficult to get geared back up for learning in the fall. But among the many options for parents, there's one tried and true activity that's free, effective and as popular as ever: your local library's summer reading program.

Last Thursday's sign language event was part of a suite of free summer learning enrichment activities sponsored by the Santa Monica Public Library. Despite budgetary limitations still affecting services and reducing hours, the local library system has a calendar stacked with activities for kids "ages zero to about 17," all summer long.

Librarian Jennifer Boyce said funds for the special programming came from the nonprofit Friends of the Library as well as the Kiwanis Club of Santa Monica.

"They have provided continued support for many years now. And so we're very, very appreciative of that funding," Boyce said.

Nearly all public library systems in the United States offer some version of a summer

Biden celebration of new gun law clouded by latest shooting

ZEKE MILLER
Associated Press

President Joe Biden welcomed a crowd to the White House lawn Monday to showcase a new law meant to reduce gun violence, celebrating "real progress" after years of inaction. But he also lamented the country remains "awash in weapons of war" — with the 16-day-old law already overshadowed by yet another horrific mass shooting.

The bill, passed after recent gun rampages in Buffalo, New York, and Uvalde, Texas, incrementally toughens requirements for young people buying guns, denies firearms to more domestic abusers and helps local authorities temporarily take weapons from people judged to be dangerous.

But the "celebration" Monday morning came a week after a gunman in Highland Park, Illinois, killed seven people at an Independence Day parade, a stark reminder of the limitations of the new law in addressing the American phenomenon of mass gun violence. And it comes as Democratic governors have taken up the mantle of offering outrage in the face of gun violence.

Biden hosted hundreds of guests on the South Lawn, including a bipartisan group of lawmakers who crafted and supported the legislation, state and local officials — including Illinois Gov. J.B. Pritzker and Highland Park Mayor Nancy Rotering — and the families of victims of both mass shootings and everyday gun violence.

"Because of your work, your advocacy, your courage, lives will be saved today and tomorrow because of this," Biden said.

"We will not save every life from the epidemic of gun violence," he added, "But if this law had been in place years ago, even this last year, lives would have been saved."

Still, Biden said, "we're living in a country awash in weapons of war." He repeated his call on Congress to pass a federal ban on assault weapons and high capacity ammunition magazines — or at minimum to require more stringent background checks and training before purchases.

He also said Congress should pass legislation to hold gun owners legally accountable if their weapons are improperly stored and are used to commit violence. He noted that he owns four shotguns and said he keeps them secured at his home.

> Because of your work, your advocacy, your courage, lives will be saved today and tomorrow because of this - Joe Biden

"We can't just stand by," Biden said. " With rights come responsibilities. If you own a weapon, you have a responsibility to secure it and keep it under lock and key."

Biden on Saturday invited Americans to share with him via text — a new White House communications strategy — their stories of how they've been affected by gun violence, tweeting that "I'm hosting a celebration of the passage of the Safer Communities Act." He told some of their stories on Monday — of people traumatized by shootings and kids left orphaned.

The new law is the most impactful firearms-violence measure Congress has approved since enacting a now-expired assault weapons ban in 1993. Yet gun control advocates — and even White House officials — say it's premature to declare victory.

"There's simply not much to celebrate here," said Igor Volsky, director of the private group Guns Down America.

"It's historic, but it's also the very bare minimum of what Congress should do," Volsky said. "And as we were reminded by the shooting on July 4, and there's so many other gun deaths that have occurred since then, the crisis of gun violence is just far more urgent."

Volsky's group, along with other advocacy groups, was holding a news conference on Monday outside the White House calling on Biden to create an office at the White House to address gun violence with a greater sense of urgency.

Biden has left gun control policy to his Domestic Policy Council, rather than establishing a dedicated office like the one he opened to address climate change or the gender policy council he started to promote reproductive health access.

"We have a president who really hasn't met the moment, who has chosen to act as a bystander on this issue," Volsky said. "For some reason the administration absolutely refuses to have a senior official who can drive this issue across government."

During his remarks Monday, Biden was heckled by Manuel Oliver, whose son Joaquin was killed at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Florida. Biden briefly paused his speech and asked Oliver, who was shouting, to sit down, before adding "Let him talk, let him talk," as he was escorted out of the event.

CRIME WATCH

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON FRIDAY, JULY 8

Officers from the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department notified SMPD they were looking for Thomas Aaron Brothers, a suspected wanted for damaging vehicles and homes in Malibu with a pickaxe. Brothers was seen getting of a Metro bus in Santa Monica at Ocean and Colorado but officers did not immediately find him at that location. Sheriff deputies returned several hours later and found Brothers near the California Incline. After a brief chase, Brothers was arrested in a bathroom on the beach.

Olympian injured in downtown Los Angeles attack last week

A former Olympic volleyball player was attacked Friday in downtown Los Angeles when a man threw a metal object at her face in an assault that fractured multiple bones in her face and left one of her eyes swollen shut, the athlete said in videos posted to social media.

Kim Glass, a silver medalist at the 2008 Beijing Olympics, had been leaving a lunch on Friday afternoon when she saw a man run up with something in his hand. He was on the other side of a car, in the street, when he threw the object — what Glass believes might have been a metal pipe or bolt — at her face.

"He just like looked at me with some pretty hateful eyes," she said in videos posted to Instagram. "It happened so fast, he literally flung it from the street, he was not even close to me at all."

Bystanders restrained the man — identified by police as Semeon Tesfamariam, 51 — until officers arrived to take him into custody.

Tesfamariam was booked on suspicion of felony assault with a deadly weapon, according to Officer Drake Madison, a Los Angeles police spokesperson. He is being held without bail. It was not immediately clear whether he had an attorney who could speak on his behalf or when he is scheduled to appear in court.

"USA Volleyball is appalled to learn of this weekend's brutal attack on our Olympic medalist Kim Glass. Our thoughts are with her and we wish her a speedy recovery," USA Volleyball President and CEO Jamie Davis said in a statement on Monday.

Glass, a Los Angeles native, posted videos showing her injuries to her eye, nose and cheek. She said she believes her vision will be OK and thanked a doctor for stitches near her eyebrow.

"Just be safe out there," she said in the videos. "You shouldn't have to be fearful when you walk."

3 killed, 2 wounded in weekend shooting near Los Angeles

Three men were killed and two others were wounded in a shooting early Sunday near Los Angeles, authorities said.

Officers responded to reports of gunshots at 12:45 a.m. on a residential block in the city of Downey, according to police. Four men and one woman were shot, the Los Angeles Times reported.

Three of the men died at the scene and the injured were hospitalized in unknown condition, police said.

Investigators believe the shooting was an isolated incident and there are no outstanding suspects, said Downey police Sgt. Tim Lau.

No other details were immediately available.

The president signed the bipartisan gun bill into law on June 25, calling it "a historic achievement" at the time.

On Monday, Biden said the law's passage should be a call for further action.

"Will we match thoughts and prayers with action?" Biden asked. "I say yes. And that's what we're doing here today."

On Friday, Biden responded to the assassination of former Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe by taking note of how the shooting had shocked people in Japan. The country has a strikingly low incidence of gun violence compared to the U.S., which has experienced thousands of gun deaths already this year.

Most of the new law's $13 billion in spending would be used for bolstering mental health programs and for schools, which have been targeted by shooters in Newtown, Connecticut, and Parkland. The law was the product of weeks of closed-door negotiations by a bipartisan group of senators who emerged with a compromise.

It does not include far tougher restrictions that Democrats and Biden have long championed, such as a ban on assault-type weapons and background checks for all gun transactions. Prospects are slim for any further congressional action this year.

a pivotal point in time as the Downtown area faces the challenges of increased homelessness and property crime alongside the declining popularity of brick and mortar retail shopping.

The pandemic had a profound impact on the economics of the Downtown commercial area, which suffered a precipitous drop in revenues, tourism, and retail tenancies. The organization also dealt with high levels of staff turnover and criticism from a limited yet vocal group of Downtown property owners.

As he steps into this new position, Thomas is charged with spurring economic growth, assisting with the homeless crisis, and grappling with reductions in funding and city services.

"The Board is excited to welcome back Andrew Thomas, whose wealth of experience in the placemaking industry and deep understanding of the core values of Santa Monica will allow him to make an immediate impact in DTSM," said Barry Snell, chair of the DTSM Board of Directors. "We trust Thomas will help the Board as it embarks on a thorough reassessment of the organization's programs so we can continue to best serve our community, the property owners and businesses."

In consultation with the 13 member Board of Directors, Thomas will also be in charge of restructuring the organization's staffing.

Prior to the pandemic, DTSM had fourteen employees. Through staff attrition and the elimination of two positions, this number has shrunk to five full-time employees and one part-time employee.

Since the beginning of the year the three top leadership positions—CEO, Deputy Chief Executive, and the Director of Marketing & Communication—all departed DTSM for new leadership roles at The Hollywood Partnership.

In his new position, Thomas will also inherit the Promenade Vitality Plan and be tasked with moving it from ideas to implementation. This plan was published in August 2021 with the assistance of MIG planning firm and seeks to modernize and revitalize the Promenade as a dining, entertainment, and retail destination with a more diverse range of businesses and experiences that appeals to locals and visitors alike.

> "It is an exciting time to be an urban placemaking professional, as our expertise and leadership has never been more needed given the challenges our traditional city partners are facing - Andrew Thomas

"It is an exciting time to be an urban placemaking professional, as our expertise and leadership has never been more needed given the challenges our traditional city partners are facing," said Andrew Thomas. "Downtown Santa Monica, and particularly the Third Street Promenade, remains an economically vibrant, welcoming, diverse and innovative district with so much to offer. I am confident that with the support of the DTSM Board, the City and our many stakeholders, we can make great things happen and continue to be the envy of other cities across the globe."

reading program, which in its essence exists to promote and incentivize reading during the long summer break. Here in Santa Monica, that basic structure is enhanced with free enrichment programs, optional age-appropriate learning activities and prizes including gift cards for teens and aquarium companion passes for younger kids.

> “Having a library card is really one of the smartest cards that you can have, because it’s free and it connects you to so many resources
> -Jennifer Boyce

Programs like summer reading are more critical than ever, Boyce said during a recent interview with the Daily Press.

“The purpose of the library’s summer reading program is to help prevent ‘summer slide’ by ensuring that youth routine reading and learning skills over the school break,” Boyce said. “And since COVID, this type of programming has really become critical to student success.”

Boyce went on to quote U.S. Secretary of Education Miguel Cardona: “Summer learning programs have always been important for our students but over the last couple of years, they have become essential. Quality, evidence-based summer learning and enrichment programs are key to recovering from the pandemic.”

Boyce said this summer marks her 10th year working at the local library, and over the past decade the popularity of the summer reading program was steadily growing each year — right up through 2019. Then came the pandemic, a move to all-virtual programming and a steep drop-off in enrollment. The following summer, the library offered a hybrid version, but pandemic-era staffing reductions and other constraints kept it from taking off. This year, the library is ramping back up, offering lots of activities for all ages, with the majority taking place outdoors.

Parents seem keen on having their kids participate in the program, with enrollment at about 1,600 students so far this summer as of last week. Boyce said she was optimistic she would see that number double.

All kids enrolled in the program receive a tote bag and book upon registration, with the opportunity for two more prizes as reading goals are achieved. Right now, the program is just past its midway point, with plenty of time left for young readers to reach those targets.

When asked why parents and students with so many options for how to spend their summer vacations should consider adding the summer reading program to the list, Boyce said on top of having fun, learning and staying connected with friends and classmates, the program introduces kids to all the resources of their local library, which “opens a whole new world of possibilities.”

“Having a library card is really one of the smartest cards that you can have, because it’s free and it connects you to so many resources,” Boyce said. “I think that beyond connecting children and teens and families to resources, there’s that human connection that people are making when they come into the library, whether that’s with a staff person or with other people from the community … There’s so much more that we are connecting them to through summer reading. And I think it’s really important to give kids an opportunity to really explore things that they might be interested in, you know, whether that’s through our programming or through our collection.”

This year’s program theme is “Oceans of Possibilities,” and Boyce said the library branches are all decorated to inspire kids’ creativity. It runs through Aug. 6, with registration and more information available at smpl.org/srp.

Cops: 2 dead and 3 wounded at 4 California 7-Eleven stores

STEFANIE DAZIO
Associated Press

Two people were killed and three wounded in shootings before dawn Monday at four 7-Eleven stores in Southern California and authorities said they were seeking a lone gunman in at least three of the shootings.

The shootings appear to have occurred after robberies or attempted robberies at the four convenience stores on July 11, or 7/11 — a day when the national 7-Eleven brand is celebrating its 95th birthday by giving out free Slurpee drinks.

"Our hearts are with the victims and their loved ones," 7-Eleven, Inc. said in a statement. "We are gathering information on this terrible tragedy and working with local law enforcement."

It wasn't immediately clear to investigators what prompted the shootings in the cities of Riverside, Santa Ana, Brea and La Habra, or why the violence occurred on July 11.

"I think the only person to answer that would be the suspect," said Officer Ryan Railsback, a spokesperson for the Riverside Police Department, where the first shooting happened at about 1:50 a.m. "There's no way it can be a coincidence of it being 7-Eleven, July 11."

The Riverside shooting left the victim in grave condition and while that shooting had not been officially connected to the others, Railsback said, "they all seem very, very similar."

The cases appeared strange, Railsback said, because criminals typically know that robberies at convenience stores rarely yield large amounts of money, especially during the overnight hours.

"If you go hit a liquor store or a 7-Eleven or a fast food place, you're not going to get a lot of cash out of it," he said. "It's kind of odd that they would do this."

In the Riverside case, the gunman robbed the clerk and brandished a gun, then turned the weapon on a customer, opened fire and fled, Railsback said. Police believe the clerk handed over cash from the register.

"It doesn't appear to be any reason that the suspect shot the customer," Railsback said. "It sounds like the clerk gave him whatever he asked for."

The second shooting occurred around 3:20 a.m., about 24 miles (39 kilometers) away, in Santa Ana, authorities said.

Officers responding to reported gunshots at the 7-Eleven in that city and found a man dead in the parking lot with one bullet in his upper torso, according to Sgt. Maria Lopez, a Santa Ana police spokesperson. The violence appeared to include an attempted robbery.

"At this moment, we don't believe he was an employee. We don't really know yet what he was doing there in a parking lot, if he was a potential customer or just walking by," Lopez said.

Surveillance video shows the suspect dropping items — believed to be the victim's belongings — as he fled, Lopez said.

> "At this moment, we don't believe he was an employee. We don't really know yet what he was doing there in a parking lot, if he was a potential customer or just walking by -Sgt. Maria Lopez

Lopez said detectives believe the suspect in the Santa Ana killing is the same person who then traveled 12 miles (19.31 kilometers) to Brea, where a 7-Eleven employee was found dead of a gunshot wound at about 4:18 a.m.

Brea Police Capt. Phil Rodriguez said officers responded to a report of a man suffering from a gunshot wound and found the employee wounded. He was later pronounced dead.

"This does appear to be a robbery that turned into a homicide," Rodriguez said.

Less than an hour later, officers in neighboring La Habra were sent to a reported robbery at a 7-Eleven. They discovered two gunshot victims around 4:55 a.m., according to Sgt. Sumner Bohee. The gunman had fled.

"We feel confident that it is the same suspect," Rodriguez said.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Send comments to editor@smdp.com

Dear Editor:

The 6% GA brings Santa Monica's rent regulated units to a socio-economic inflection point; a socio-economic moment of truth: those who are fortunate enough to absorb the shock of the increase and those who cannot, ultimately being forced from their apartments.

The 6% increase will cause the City to, inevitably, careen into the proverbial "Tale of Two Cities". On the one hand, a city of the economically privileged and on the other, a city of the very low income aided by government programs.

The demographic damage will be inflicted upon long-term senior renters who are penalized by the POD Program for creating an economic cushion for themselves in retirement.

Unlike other nearby rent regulated jurisdictions that protects its renters in a "common sense" and "collaborative approach" in troubled times, our Rent Control Charter's current "flawed" and "inflexible" formula for General Adjustments puts far too many renters at economic risk and hardship.

City Council must take the following steps and measures to prevent the upending of its rent regulated population:

1. Declare an economic emergency giving emergency powers to override and downgrade the September 6% rent increase to no more than 3%. Councilmembers must be mindful that rent is only one among many other rapidly accelerating costs faced by Santa Monica renters. Any "rent over payments" during this period must be returned to renters.
2. Amend the Rent Control Charter to provide the tools and latitude to better reflect distressed times and "realities". The GA cap should never be allowed to rise above 3% and should be kept below that whenever feasible.
3. Revise the POD Program making it more expansive. Long-term seniors are currently penalized for having any kind of emergency cushion.

Unlike Federal and California tax code that does not treat held assets as income, unless they produce income, the POD Program treats held assets as income -- even in instances when they produce little or no appreciable income. THIS MUST CHANGE.

Bill Davids, Santa Monica

role of LA County Supervisor than would a candidate with legislative experience like Hertzberg, which factored into the Club's decision to support Horvath in the June primary.

In that primary election, both Santa Monica and Venice voters chose Horvath as their top overall Third District candidate, followed by another candidate, State Senator Henry Stern, and then Hertzberg. (Stern, who came in third overall, was knocked out of the race.)

"Bob Hertzberg is the best choice for LA County Supervisor. His experience is deep, wide-ranging and unparalleled," Bloom said in a written statement provided by Hertzberg's office on Monday morning, July 12. "Most importantly, Bob thinks creatively and innovatively when it comes to developing polices to solve problems. The Board of Supervisors will benefit from his ability to build coalitions among different people and groups, generate consensus, and get things done. I am fully confident that Bob will be a strong advocate for people across the 3rd District. For these reasons and many more, I am proud to endorse Bob Hertzberg for LA County Supervisor."

Allen represents Santa Monica and other westside communities from West Hollywood to Rancho Palos Verdes in Senate District 26, while Bloom represents Santa Monica and the Santa Monica Mountains region from Malibu to West Hollywood in Assembly District 50 (prior to the district being redrawn as AD-51). Both Allen and Bloom have announced their support of Hertzberg in the weeks since the primary election results emerged, after it became clear the race would come down to Horvath and Hertzberg.

It makes a difference!

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 12)

Your interactions make a difference, even the small ones. The attachments you form this solar journey will be unique, valid, meaningful and just right for you. More highlights: a divine intervention in a rather mundane matter, a colorful collaboration and the key to an exclusive arrangement, given to you because you earned it. Libra and Leo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 8, 30, 12, 41 and 1.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Looking too hard for a reward prevents people from experiencing the reward that is the work itself, or the present moment. Spontaneity is your strength. You will be fearless in your pursuit of experience.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You're a dreamer, and yet you are realistic about what it will take to make your dreams come true. Deals come up. The first offer will not be the only one or the best one. Hold out for what you really want.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Your No. 1 task is to make yourself happy. Clear the decks. Look at the trouble and either resolve it or accept it. Because you treat others so well and want nothing from them, you wind up getting everything.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). When someone needs an open door, you'll be right there with a smile. This is true both literally and figuratively. As far as your talent goes, you're better than you think you are. Invest in yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Not everyone wants the prize you're going for, but those who do will give you stiff competition. You have a high tolerance for discomfort and will do what it takes to win. Your victory will be sweet because you worked so hard for it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Your powers of concentration are impressive. You stay calm in the chaos. You'll be put in charge of an important job. There is one person who you haven't talked to in a long while. This will be an auspicious time to catch up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). To seize your opportunities, you must first recognize them. What is needed? What do you need to learn, do or get to meet the need? There's a niche to be filled, and you're just the one to fill it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Pick your battles, or better yet, decide not to fight. Someone falls in love with your gentle spirit. Just because you are kind does not mean that you are weak. Sometimes the most heroic move is not to make one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You become deeply engrossed in the work of the day. Mental chatter quiets down in a hum of productivity. Someone will be excited to be in your presence and get an energetic charge from being near you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Share with generous people who will let you be the star of the hour when it's your turn. You don't know enough of these types, but you'll meet more as you consciously seek the company of unselfish people.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). There are many subtleties between casualness and formality. You'll navigate nuance so well, figuring out what to wear, say and do to connect with people in a genuine way. You'll influence others with your style.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Any fool can force things along, but it takes a strong person to know when to go with the flow. Your gentle ways will open previously locked doors. You will be water, following the path of least resistance.
