AIRPORT: New transportation service, Blackbird is offering flights out of SMO with local charter companies.

A new service by a former Santa Monican hopes to revitalize regional air transit by connecting travelers to local charter companies.

Blackbird is currently offering services at several California airports including a route between Santa Monica and Palm Springs.

The company offers three services available to user who download an app for a smartphone.

The first service offers a single seat on a specific route. The company currently flies from Palo Alto to Tahoe, Palo Alto to Monterey, Sausalito to Tahoe City and Santa Monica to Palm Springs. Additional routes are planned between Santa Barbara to San Diego, Palo Alto to Santa Barbara and Palm Springs to Vegas.

The second service crowdsources customers for a custom charter. Potential customers can ask for a destination and departure time and if enough people also buy into the flight, Blackbird will schedule a plane.

The third is a standard charter rental. Customers can use the company's software to book an entire aircraft at any of their partner airports.

Blackbird CEO Rudd Davis said traditional charter plane companies have business and regulatory hurdles that prevent them from selling single seats on their planes. From the business side, there's significant effort required to establish individual service.

"It's hard to sell individual seats without routes and schedules," he said. "There's a lot of backend complexity to optimize demand … We figure out a route that is in demand, we figure out when people want to fly on that route, set the route, schedule the flight and the per seat price," he said.

He said the service doesn't plan to increase the number of flights at any given airport but does aim to maximize the efficiency of each flight ensuring the planes are full and consolidating operations where necessary into a single larger plane over several small flights.

"We are putting more people on the planes that are already flying," he said.

Blackbird doesn't own the planes or employ the flight crew

Hack The Beach opens 2017 contest

The City By The Sea is welcoming problem solving proposals from Silicon Beach.

MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

Santa Monica has opened applications for the 2017 Hack The Beach contest designed to leverage the skills of the local tech community to improve local quality of life.

The contest is in its second year and officials said this year's event is focused on a set of challenges related to the city's budget priorities. Anyone with a hardware of software solution is invited to participate provided their entry incorporates technology in some way, address one of the six goals and meets the judging criteria for viability, value and growth.

"Hack the Beach is about harnessing the talent of innovators in our backyard to create solutions that offer a better customer service experience for residents," said Mayor Ted Winterer. "While doing this, participants get to work directly with the City to shape a product with real world application. In our second year, we hope to continue to strengthen the bonds between local government and the tech community to bring value to citizens and anyone doing business with the City."

This year, there are six possible design challenges.

Building Community — How might we use technology to encourage residents connect with each other in a very real, genuine, neighbor-to-neighbor way?

Chef Nick Barainca has brought a whole new meaning to "pop-up" in Santa Monica.

Like his renovation of the term, at his month-and-a-half-old nighttime eatery "Gargantua," ran out of OP Cafe on Ocean Park, he has been completely transforming the place every Thursday through Saturday at 6:30 p.m.

You might be familiar with the busy atmosphere and unbranded breakfast entrees at OP, but at Gargantua, the five-course taster menu, restyled aura and seasonal, local dishes have a composed character unlike most pop-up joints. That is why Barainca calls the place a "residency." It's more permanent, he says, as he plans to stay at OP until the end of the year. In a year from now, he sees Gargantua having its own location with taster menus for dinner, lunch and breakfast.

"Pop-up had its day," Chef Nick said. "And I think people almost expect it to be not as polished, not as good, they already come in with that mindset of 'Oh, we're going to give them the benefit of the doubt,' but we don't want the mercy of the connotation of a pop-up."

An amalgamation of Southern California's finest organic staples, Gargantua offered pork toro from

Award-Winning City Administrator and Tourism Champion Charts a New Course

DO YOU REMEMBER YOUR FIRST VISIT to Santa Monica? Share your (and get your friends to do the same) story at santamonicatourism.com or via social media using the hashtag #SMFirstVisit. A winner will be selected at random on September 1, 2017 to win an Apple iPad mini and Santa Monica-themed prize basket. As part of our Tourism Talks column series, we'll be sharing "First Visit" stories from community leaders.

Departing Assistant City Manager Elaine Polachek's first visit to Santa Monica was in Summer 1984. She arrived in Southern California from Canada and was staying with her sister in the San Fernando Valley. In search of a job, she headed down to Santa Monica. "It was just as the Olympics were happening," she recalls. "I had heard there might be some positions with the City government. I got here and noticed immediately that it was about 30 degrees cooler than the Valley. I fell in love with the ocean and the beach, and I thought, 'This is where I want to be!'"

Polachek ended up finding work with the newly formed Santa Monica Pier Restoration Corporation, a non-profit organization dedicated to the aging landmark's redevelopment. "At that time the pier was in a state of disrepair; its reputation had been tarnished a bit and it wasn't the safest or most attractive place," Polachek explains. "But it always had great bones and great character, so the goal was to revive it and bring it back to the important destination it has become. It took about 20 years, but these kinds of things take time."

In 2000, after spending 11 years on the pier project and a three-year stint as VP of marketing at the Pacific Design Center, Polachek finally found that job with the City government. She started as part-time Interim Beach Manager, and worked her way up through the ranks to Open Space Manager, Director of the Community Maintenance Department, and Deputy City Manager, before being named Assistant City Manager in July of 2010. She even served for a while as Interim City Manager.

This past May, at Santa Monica Travel & Tourism's 8th annual Travel & Tourism Summit, Polachek became the first recipient of SMTT's new "Tourism Champion of the Year" Award. She was honored for her creativity and leadership in fostering a positive visitor experience and Santa Monica community pride. "That was lovely," she says. "I was truly thrilled to receive that."

Polachek believes it's essential that the City strike a balance between the needs of residents and visitors. "Tourism is part of Santa Monica's life blood. Many residents of Santa Monica started out as visitors. We came, we loved it and we stayed. We can't forget that people live here and people work here, but people also visit. So the goal is to make Santa Monica a dynamic, interesting and vibrant community for everyone. We want everybody to feel welcome here and feel a part of this community, whether they're here for an hour, or a day, or they decide to spend their lives here. "

Polachek steps down from her current post this month, saying goodbye to a 28-year career with the pier and the City. "I'm leaving the City, but I'm not retiring quite yet," she says. "I have a few more things I want to do, so I'm not quite ready to hang 'em up. It's been an honor and a privilege to serve this community, but it's time to try something different."

Although Polachek is not ready to announce her next venture, we have no doubt she will bring the same passion and focus she brought to helping turn Santa Monica into a world-class city for locals and visitors alike. We wish her all the best in the next chapter of her career.

CONTEST

What are ways to cultivate a trustworthy and participatory local government through equitable, transparent, and effective processes?

Health — How might we use technology to make it easier to empower residents to access these public resources to take charge of improving their health?

Place and Planet — How might we use technology to make it easier to get around town in an environmentally-friendly way?

Learning — How might we use technology to champion lifelong education achievements and opportunities for continuous personal growth?

Economic Opportunity — How might we use technology to support community needs through a stable, vibrant and diverse local economy?

The application process is available online (www.hackthebeach.com) and applications will be taken through September 4. Once the deadline closes the judging process will select up to 10 finalists. Those applicants will receive additional mentoring and feedback to refine their ideas before the final judging in December.

Behrang Abadi, Senior Information Technology Manager with the City of Santa Monica, said the contest isn't a one-off event or a side project, but rather a significant effort to bring new ideas into government. He said large tech firms have the staff and resources to work with a city but many start-ups don't know how to get their ideas heard.

"What we're really trying to do is engage the private sector to create meaningful solutions to things that are of importance to the city," he said.

Abadi said Hack the Beach is designed to bring the City's needs to creative thinkers in environments that are familiar to the companies and using language that is easy to understand instead of assuming solutions will walk in the door of City Hall.

"We really want to co-create solutions," said Abadi. "We don't want to pretend the City has all of the answers or all of the resources to solve the issues of the community."

Abadi said the outreach helps spark thinking from companies that might not otherwise realize they could work with government.

"We're bringing city hall to our tech industry, you don't have to understand how city hall works, you don't even have to know where it is or what the hours are," he said.

Catherine Geanuracos' company, CityGrows, won the inaugural contest last year and her technology is actually being used to run the 2017 contest. Her company provides digital templates that allow government agencies to automate and streamline routine processes.

She said participation has benefits for the companies and the city.

While Geanuracos had some understanding of civic work prior to entering Hack the Beach, she said the specialized mentoring is invaluable to companies that want to do businesses with governments.

"It's hard as a startup trying to work with government. It's hard to find a champion inside a system like that," she said. "We were connected with people who are really primed for experimentation."

The contest also opened a window to the culture of government.

"I had some government experience but getting inside knowledge of the technological and political challenges was incredibly helpful," she said. "We learned about how much isn't just how much better your technology is, that's just one piece of supporting change management inside government."

She said Santa Monica is a city that is particularly welcoming to experimental ideas and she said city staff are interested in making their jobs more efficient.

"What we found was there are a ton of people inside the city who were really motivated to improve things for constituents," she said. "We know they wanted better services but to also improve the quality of life inside the city."

but it works with a network of charter companies that fulfill flight requirements. In Santa Monica, they offer four-seat or nine-seat propeller planes.

Davis said decisions about where to operate were made based on several factors including demand, cost of comparable commercial service and transportation alternatives. He said up to 70 percent of regional air service has disappeared in the past 30 years as airlines transitioned to a hub system. He sees organized charter service as a way to fill the gap covering distances of 100 – 1,000 miles.

"That's kind of our zone, we want to be comparable to renting a car when you think about getting to say Palm Springs for instance," he said. "It makes sense to hop on a plane because when you get to the other side, you can hop on an Uber or Lyft."

Davis said he lived in Santa Monica for seven years and actually lived under the flight path for SMO.

"I lived in Santa Monica," he said. "I know how miserable it is to get to LAX, that alone is a pretty terrible journey."

The Santa Monica Airport has been mired in controversy for decades. The City and the FAA agreed to a deal last year that allows the airport to close in 2028 and facilitates shortening the runway. JetsuiteX had previously announced plans to operate a routine service from SMO but those plans were curbed by the prospect of a reduced runway.

San Diego and black coffee from Ojai, since none of Chef Nick's ingredients come from beyond Santa Barbara.

"I think for me and the world in general, this has how it's been forever and we've gotten so far removed from what this region has to offer," he said.

The five course taster menu changes frequently, and spontaneously. In the last week of June, the menu offered garlic bread, a sprouted grains and English peas plate and then sweet potatoes for it first three courses. Now, the sweet potatoes have been replaced by a "melon ceviche" dish with white corn cream and salted cucumber.

His appreciation for what locals have to offer goes beyond the food. All five courses are served on cazuelitas and other artisan ceramic dishes and bowls crafted by LA artist Delphine Lippens, creator of Humble Ceramics. Other clever interior design changes such as hanging, cloudy lights and tiny, circular candles give the place a subtle touch that differentiates it from its daytime persona while not being forced.

But for an "unassuming spot that serves food that's more ambitious than its surroundings," as Chef Nick describes it, Gargantua has not been receiving enough business. On the last Friday night of June, only two parties of guests were there.

Chef Nick said the restaurant's lack of business is due to flakiness of potential guests. They recommend RSVPing online, which people do, but many cancel last-minute, apparently "a growing problem in Los Angeles," according to Chef.

To solve this problem, he plans on charging those who cancel less than 24 hours in advance. The money kept will act as an IOU, and the customer who cancelled can come back at a different date.

But for those who don't cancel last minute, Gargantua is a surprising solace from the usual business and impersonality of many LA restaurants.

Chef Nick talks to customers to get to know them and to answer questions about the menu, explaining that some of the items were sauteed or left cooking for over 48 hours in advance of being served. Of the two tables filled one night, one was a double date with one couple from Sherman Oaks and the other just around Gargantua's corner.

Each one had a different favorite dish. One said the pork toro was one of the best he had ever had, the woman sitting next to him loved the grains and peas dish.

The diners praised Gargantua for having nice food with a casual atmosphere and being able to bring their own wine. They liked the secretive of the place, which makes visiting feel like getting into a club with a few select members. Still, they hope that doesn't last for long since it means minimal business for the place.

Gargantua closed that night at around 10:15 p.m., a whole 45 minutes earlier than expected for the place, which states its closing time as 11 p.m. on its website. The team of four reverted the place back to its daytime character. More chairs and tables were brought inside the restaurant, each one now about two inches apart, giving it a crowded breakfast diner-cafe vibe. The Sweet n' Low sugar packets and paper napkins went back on the tables and the tiny, annular candles came off. Light bulbs that dimly illuminated the restaurant, previously hanging from black rope on the ceiling, came down and the bright lights flickered black on.

City Attorney Files Lawsuit To Stop Harassment of Local Tenants

The Santa Monica City Attorney's Consumer Protection Division has filed a lawsuit against two local landlords, alleging violations of a local law that protects tenants against harassment.

The lawsuit, filed Tuesday in Santa Monica Superior Court, names as defendants landlords Ante Trinidad and the Adel Luzuriaga Trust doing business as SanMo17 Property. It alleges that the defendants bought a nine-unit Santa Monica apartment building in July 2016 and immediately targeted three long-term, below-market-rent tenants with harassment tactics in a manner designed to make the tenants vacate so that the landlords could obtain higher rents from new tenants.

THE LAWSUIT ALLEGES THAT THE LANDLORDS' MISCONDUCT INCLUDED:

■ Using fraudulent and coercive tactics to force tenants' existing roommates to vacate Improperly refusing to allow the tenants to get other roommates, and conducting bogus and intrusive "inspections" of tenants' units.

The lawsuit alleges that the defendants have already coerced one tenant into believing that his longtime roommate and partner (who had been living there for many years with permission of the previous owner) would have to vacate, along with their three children. Rather than break up the family, the tenant had to leave Santa Monica to find housing in Inglewood. He not only gave up his longtime home but also a great commute—the apartment building is walking distance from the place where he has worked for over thirty years.

Another tenant's roommate was allegedly coerced into leaving even though he had been living there long before the defendants took control of the building. When that tenant tried to find another roommate to help with the rent of the two-bedroom apartment, the defendants allegedly coerced either the tenant or the tenant's next three roommate candidates from completing the roommate approval process.

The City's Tenant Harassment Ordinance prohibits a landlord from trying to influence tenants to vacate through fraud, intimidation or coercion. Deputy City Attorney Gary Rhoades said that the law is tailor-made to address these kinds of allegations: "Long-term tenants paying below-market rents sometimes face harassment tactics when the landlord can't find good cause to evict them. But those tenants have protection under Santa Monica law. "

Agreement Reached with the Santa Monica Police Officers Association and City Hall

The first of ten City of Santa Monica employee union agreements was agreed to this week with the Santa Monica Police Officers Association (POA). At its July 11, 2017 meeting, the Santa Monica City Council authorized the City Manager to execute a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with POA. The components of the negotiated changes are outlined below with a net increase of 5.5%, or a total cost of approximately $1,052,032 for FY 2017-18.

SIGNIFICANT NEGOTIATED CHANGES:

A 6% salary increase in the first year of the agreement (subsequent two years are 2.5%).

Employees will increase their contribution to 15.5% towards the cost of their retirement benefits through the California Public Employee Retirement System (CalPERS), one of the highest contributions in L.A. County. This is a significant increase from the current 6.5% contribution. In addition, they will contribute 2% more towards their retirement in the subsequent years of the contract.

Elimination of the Employer Paid Member Contributions plan. This constitutes a value of 9% in retiring employee salaries that the City formerly reported to CalPERS. This cost is shifting to employees and is part of the 15.5% contribution.

Employees will pay an additional 2% of the cost of their health insurance for a total contribution of 10% the first year and 11% by the end of the contract.

The current MOU with POA was established on August 26, 2014. This new negotiated MOU is effective July 1, 2017 through June 30, 2020. Negotiations with the remaining bargaining units are ongoing and will be brought to Council in the coming months.

"This is a major step forward to address our long-term pension obligations by significantly raising the employee share of contributions," said Mayor Ted Winterer, "while continuing to be competitive for public safety compensation compared to nearby communities."

The Council is currently undertaking a compensation review overseen by the City Council Audit Subcommittee that will provide a comprehensive analysis for future policy direction on employee compensation.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 17)

There's a fire burning in you, in the form of a quest. This isn't so much about a project; it's more like a mission of emotion. You want to feel and experience deeper love, more engagement, greater excitement, and this will happen for you as you take risks with your social life this year. You'll be a different person this time next year. Pisces and Gemini adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 20, 22, 28 and 11.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
People feel comfortable with you. Maybe it's the way you kindly accept all the quirks. Your presence is easy. Your love is generous. Your moments will be full and vibrantly lived.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Remember when you didn't go because you thought it would take too long to get there? This time, go. The time will pass whether you embark on the journey or not.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
If you're on the same team, you need to be on the same side, too. Don't let the spirit of competition get out of hand. Infighting will lead to the demise of the group.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)
To do what is best for you is to do what is best for those around you. Ignore your own needs and it will catch up to the whole group. That said, there's a difference between good self-care and the indulgence of weakness.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
You could, alone in a room armed with determined focus, plan out your life down to the minute details. What's going to work better, though, is to get in motion and start making some mistakes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Usually when something is changing you, you feel it -- and it's not usually a pleasant feeling, either. They call it "growing pains," not "growing pleasures." The pleasure will be in the privileges of being grown.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Happy people bop along to the music, whereas sad people delve into the meaning of the lyrics. To be fully appreciated, the art (and life itself!) needs to be looked at from many different lights and moods.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
The best group will be a diverse group. It may take longer to work out the different roles and the balance of personalities, but once you do, the unit will be unstoppable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
Many ideas will be bandied about. If you come to an impasse, take a break and then come back to it. There's more in the well. Don't stop until you find a mutually beneficial solution. It's the only kind that will endure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Beauty captivates your attention and leads it toward hope and light. You don't have to be looking for beauty to find it, but you do have to know it when you see it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
Excellence is a mansion atop a long, sweaty hill. Getting to it takes great effort, but it's a lot easier because you can see the proud result as you step ever nearer to it.

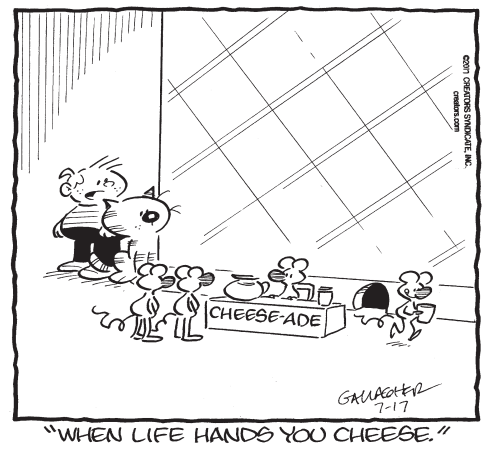

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
It's a very pleasurable thing to imagine an adventure and quite a different thing entirely to embark on one. Your spirit of exploration will be awakened and encouraged by fire sign influences (Aries, Leo and Sagittarius).

Cosmic Squares

The Greek poet Hesiod said, "It will not always be summer; build barns." Try to store some emotional warmth up today. Capture it in a pic. Jot a note. Make a list of the things you can do to keep your energy, creativity and playfulness alive when things change, as they inevitably will as Venus squares Neptune and Mars squares Uranus.

Medical Myths

■ While honey has been shown to have topical antibacterial and anti-inflammatory properties, notions that it provides relief from seasonal allergies is purely anecdotal and lacking in empirical evidence. Advocates say the "pollen" in honey triggers a beneficial neutralizing immune response, but there's no proof. In fact, honey may contain antigens that trigger allergic reactions, sometimes life-threatening.
