McKinley students adapt to help the community

BRENNON DIXSON

COVID-19 forced the cancellation of Open House celebrations at schools across the Westside this year, but the students of McKinley Elementary School refused to let the pandemic stop them from creating more than 100 virtual projects that aimed to help the community in a time of need.

Open House events are traditionally held at schools across the country throughout the year to allow parents the opportunity to see the work their children have completed, but Principal Ashley Benjamin said McKinley's recent Global Citizenship Service Learning Projects sought to go above and beyond the pieces that are typically on display in the classroom.

LEARNING PROJECTS: Students from the local school, including Freddy Ankowski, lost their annual Open House to the pandemic but chose to use their learning projects as an opportunity to support community members during the difficult times.

At McKinley, Benjamin said, 'our goal is to foster what we call 'Deep Learning' to develop the whole child. We help students to learn how they can contribute to the common good, address global challenges, and flourish in turbulent and complex times."

One way this is achieved is through projects that seek to utilize different learning partnerships, pedagogical practices, learning environments, and digital technologies.

McKinley educators always aim to help students to develop the six global competencies — creativity, communication, citizenship, critical thinking, character, and collaboration, Benjamin added, mentioning how students become

Resident files complaint related to May 31st arrest

BRENNON DIXSON

Only a few hours after allegedly being shot with rubber bullets by the Long Beach Police Department on Sunday, May 31, Brandon Smith returned home to Santa Monica hoping to settle down after a long day's work of documenting history. But the local resident instead found himself in a jail cell, accused of brandishing an assault rifle while driving.

Smith recently filed a complaint with the Santa Monica Police Department detailing why he believes he was wrongfully detained, searched, and stripped of his second amendment rights by officers only a few hours after attending a protest held in response to the killing of George Floyd.

"I was able to get from Long Beach back to Santa Monica sometime around 11:15 (p.m.) that Sunday and I remember passing a Walgreens, CVS or something like that on a corner," Smith said in an interview Thursday.

He said he looked into the side-view mirror and saw several police vehicles, approximately 100 yards behind him on Sixth Street. They weren't displaying lights or sirens,

California salons say new closures threaten their survival

AMY TAXIN
Associated Press

At the start of the year, Luis Lopez moved his barbershop to a bigger location with three more chairs and more than twice the rent. Then, when the coronavirus pandemic hit, he had to close, plunk down more cash for upgrades to health safety standards and wait for officials to allow salons to reopen.

Now, Lopez owes $10,000 in monthly rent for the coveted space in Southern California's downtown Huntington Beach and says he can only keep paying it if he can cut hair at his Orange County Barbers Parlor. But Gov. Gavin Newsom said that isn't allowed under new closures this week to curb soaring numbers of infections.

"With all due respect, I can't close my doors. I just really can't," Lopez said. "I am going to have to shut my business if that is the case.

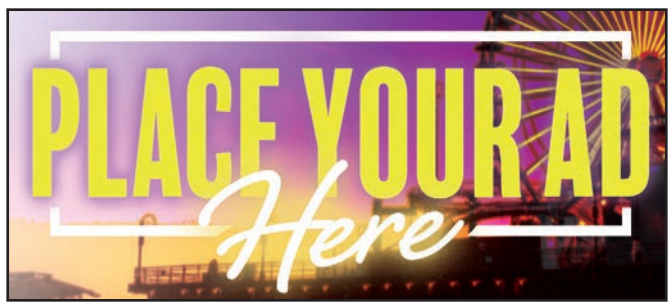

"People say work from home or do house calls, but people are still getting fined to do that, so what's the difference?" he added. "If they come in and shut us down, then that's what is going to have to happen."

The closures hit salons in the nation's most populous state especially hard. The industry is filled with mom-and-pop shops and independent stylists — many still struggling after a monthslong shutdown that began in March. While restaurants and retail stores are encouraged to set up on sidewalks, regulators have barred salons from moving outdoors. That's something Republican Assemblyman Jim Patterson and industry representatives on Thursday urged Newsom's administration to reconsider to keep shops afloat.

Like many businesses, salons nationwide have been walloped by

River Report Card Grades Freshwater Health Risks in Los Angeles County

Heal the Bay today released the annual River Report Card, which assigns water quality color-grades of Red, Yellow, or Green for 28 freshwater sites in Los Angeles County based on observed bacteria levels in 2019. Green means there is a low risk of illness when there is contact with the water. Yellow indicates a moderate risk, while Red signals a high risk. The River Report Card is the most comprehensive water quality report to date on bacterial pollution in freshwater recreation areas within the Los Angeles River, the Malibu Creek, and the San Gabriel River Watersheds.

Due to the coronavirus pandemic and Safer At Home measures, more Angelenos will likely be heading to the local mountains and waterways this summer for recreation and escape from the urban heat. Popular freshwater areas are used for swimming, wading, fishing, kayaking, and other outdoor activities, especially when beaches and municipal cooling centers are closed. Some freshwater locations remain closed to certain activities due to coronavirus restrictions while some locations are not being monitored for water quality.

Our tests do not detect the presence of the COVID-19 virus in the water, but they do detect fecal indicator bacteria (FIB). The COVID-19 virus has been detected in sewage, indicating that fecal matter from infected individuals can contain the virus. We do not know how long the virus survives in sewage or in water, and we do not know if someone can contract the COVID-19 disease from coming into contact with water. Experts have stated that the transmission risk in water is likely very low because the virus mainly spreads through person-to-person contact. Since COVID-19 and FIB both enter our waterways through sewage, measuring FIB concentrations can help keep people safe from both.

In addition to the annual River Report Card, Heal the Bay has an interactive map with bacterial water quality at 28 locations updated weekly, where Angelenos can check the latest reading before choosing a spot to swim.

Here are the major findings from Heal the Bay's 2019 data:

Across all 28 River Report Card sites in 2019, 66% of grades assigned were Green, meaning bacterial levels were not a cause for health concern at the time the water was tested. This is a nine percent increase in Green grades from 2018.

All four watershed study areas included in the report had a decrease in overall Red grades in 2019.

Seven sites in the San Gabriel River Watershed and three from the Upper L.A. River Watershed made the "Top 10 Honor Roll" of freshwater sites with lowest public health risk detected, including seven that earned perfect scores of 100% Green grades.

The River Report Card also includes a "Freshwater Fails" list, which only has six entries this year, all in the Los Angeles River Watershed. This is a reduction from ten entries in the 2018 report, a good sign that only six met the criteria of 10% or more Red grades.

Hansen Dam at Tujunga Wash was once again the number one Fail, but improved to 44% Red grades, down from 80% in 2018. Lake Balboa Boat Ramp and Rattlesnake Park were a close second and third worst, with 43% and 41% Red grades, respectively.

There is still room for improvement in L.A. County's freshwater quality. Nine sites we grade actually had poorer water quality in 2019 compared to 2018, including both test sites in the Malibu Creek Watershed.

Freshwater sites in more natural areas tended to earn better grades than freshwater sites near urban development.

Better State and regional oversight and funding are needed for monitoring and public notice of water quality in freshwater recreation sites. Monitoring protocols and public notification in L.A. County are not standardized, and government agencies only test for E. coli. Testing should also include the fecal indicator bacteria Enterococcus. Solely monitoring for E. coli may be putting the public at unnecessary risk.

closures in states seeking to slow the spread of the virus. New York City only recently allowed nail salons to reopen.

Many owners feel like they're being unfairly punished with the new California shutdown. Unlike at bars or restaurants, workers and customers at salons wear masks constantly and groups don't typically gather. They say they have ample training on sanitizing procedures and don't understand why they're lumped in with other businesses.

"We were temperature checking, we were doing everything to the letter, no one was getting in without a mask," said Ben Daidone, who has closed his Santa Monica salon. "It reminds me of my grade school teacher punishing everybody for chewing gum when we couldn't find out who the perpetrator was."

The strife comes as California grapples with a rise in infections and hospitalizations after allowing many businesses to reopen and as people gather in warmer weather. This week, Newsom shuttered bars and indoor dining throughout California and halted indoor religious services, gyms and salons in most places after virus-related hospitalizations jumped 28% in two weeks.

Many salon owners say they understand the severity of the pandemic, have followed state guidance and haven't seen cases of viral transmission linked to their shops.

The state has received nearly 2,200 complaints of salons failing to follow sanitizing measures but hasn't issued citations, said Cheri Gyuro, a spokeswoman for California's Department of Consumer Affairs. Salons can't operate outdoors, but the state board of Barbering and Cosmetology is considering options, she said.

San Diego County's health director, Dr. Wilma Wooten, reported Wednesday that a hair salon and a barbershop were linked to community outbreaks, in which people from at least three different households got infected in a single setting. State health officials say they don't know how many outbreaks have occurred in salons.

In Michigan, health officials recently reported as many as 75 possible exposures at a salon. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said this week that no additional virus cases appeared tied to a Missouri salon where two infected stylists had contact with 139 customers in May, likely because people wore masks.

In Palm Springs, Nathan Rickel said he closed his Tiny Bubbles salon this week because he needs to keep his license. The pandemic threatens to upend the dream he and his partner built in the desert resort community, but he is heeding the order.

"Fighting it is not going to help," he said. "We work as a team to fight the disease — not fight each other."

The closures have spurred mixed emotions. Tam Nguyen, president of Advanced Beauty College in Orange County, said he's concerned about the rise in virus cases but also the well-being of 11,000 nail salons that are largely owned by Vietnamese immigrant families.

"We're from an industry that wants to work. We're from an immigrant community that wants to work," he said.

Many salon owners are looking for ways to offset soaring bills. Lisa Ann Bowles, who owns New Nail Creations in Clovis, said she's determined to find a workaround to the latest shutdown, especially for diabetic customers who depend on her for foot care. She said she may start working outdoors in the mornings and that she isn't barred from providing free care to those buying her nail care products.

"If I am not charging, I am not doing a service," she said. "When I get put in a corner, I look for a way to get out."

George Garcia, whose family has owned a barbershop in the seaside community of San Pedro for three decades, said he couldn't have made it through the first shutdown without his landlord's generosity. They were open only three weeks before the new closure.

He said he will need to take single haircut appointments to sustain the business he runs with his father and son.

"If we really close completely, I think we won't be able to come back after this," Garcia said.

Eviction Moratorium Extended to September 30 for Residential and August 31 for Some Commercial Tenants

The City of Santa Monica today issued two updates to its local emergency declaration for the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) extending the eviction moratorium for residential tenants and some commercial tenants, and further clarifying requirements for face coverings.

"As COVID-19 continues to spread, impacting the livelihoods of our community members and small businesses, we continue to extend our local eviction moratorium to keep people in their homes or tenancy," said Interim City Manager Lane Dilg. "Please wear a face covering at all times and do not gather with people outside of your household."

Under a twenty-second supplement, Santa Monica's eviction moratorium is extended to September 30, 2020 for residential tenants in alignment with state law. The extension is to August 31, 2020 for commercial tenants defined as commercial tenant 1s in the fifth revised first supplement, as explained in this June 17 press release.

A revised twentieth supplement clarifies the requirement that everyone engaging in outside activities (walking, jogging, biking, etc.) must wear a face covering, or have one ready to be immediately put on, whenever they approach within 30 feet of another person outside of their household.

For questions about the City's eviction moratorium, please visit santamonica.gov/coronavirus, or call the City's hotline at (310) 458-8400 or email info@santamonica.gov.

according to Smith. He said he assumed they needed to pass and he pulled over. They still were not displaying any police lights or sirens but all of the vehicles stopped at a standstill on the road.

There was no communication over the loudspeaker, Smith remembers, "so I assumed I was mistaken in thinking they needed to pass me … I literally pull out, and then they hit me with all of the lights and sirens."

After pulling over once again, Smith said he heard, "'Get out of the f*cking car now. Get out of the f*cking car. Put your hands out the window now.' And I have a backup camera on my car so I can see the cops, the lights and everything behind me."

After peacefully complying, he said he was handcuffed and placed on the curb in a manner that allowed him to see his SUV, which was being ripped apart by officers at the time.

"Long story short," Smith said, "we're sitting there and they're accusing me of brandishing a weapon at somebody. An officer said a motorist back there accused me of brandishing a weapon at them and essentially asked, 'Why would they lie?'"

Shortly after explaining how it'd be impossible for him to drive, unlock his gun case that's located in the trunk of his SUV, point an assault rifle at somebody and then perfectly toss a 25-pound weapon back into the trunk and its box all while the police are tailing him, Smith said, a member of the National Guard approached him to ask for the combination to his digital safe, which is a lot more complex to break into but is still relatively easy if you know what you're doing.

Smith added, "The (soldier) finally says, 'Okay, well, I'm just gonna break into the case since you're not going to give me the combination,'" and around midnight, Smith found himself in the backseat of a squad car.

"I realized I still had my Apple Watch on my wrist so I used it to call my mother's phone. She picked up and I was able to tell her that I was being wrongfully arrested in Santa Monica and what streets I was on."

He said a detective came to the back of the car to remove the Apple Watch that would later break while being tossed in the trunk of the police car, Smith said.

"I'm then taken to the Santa Monica jail on Fourth Street by City Hall… At about 5:30-6 a.m., they still hadn't told me what I'm being charged with and I never heard my Miranda Rights or anything like that. Luckily, my mother was finally able to make it to the jail and I was released at approximately 9:30 a.m."

When he later returned to pick up his work tools and weapons from the station, Smith said he talked about filing a complaint, which has now been referred to the city attorney's office.

"I would need three hands, essentially, to be able to maneuver an AR while driving," Smith said, "but nobody wanted to use common sense at the scene and I paid the price.

I have the ability to defend myself, thankfully, but I can't imagine this happening to a 22-year-old without resources. This is not okay."

The Santa Monica Police Department said it could not comment on the complaint.

Surfrider Foundation Releases First Annual Cleanup Report

The Surfrider Foundation has released the 2019 Beach Cleanup Report, highlighting the impact of their national Beach Cleanup program and presenting regional stories, current science and how beach cleanup data can be used to create large-scale policy change. The results from Surfrider's 2019 Beach Cleanup Program confirmed our current reality that plastic is the most common material found on the beaches and the percentage of microplastics continues to increase. Nine out of the top ten items collected on the beaches were plastic, and 25% of all items collected were plastic fragments smaller than a dime.

Surfrider's Plastic Pollution Initiative uses a multi-pronged approach to reduce plastic pollution, and the Beach Cleanup program is the first step in addressing the amount of plastic ending up in waterways, on beaches and ultimately in the ocean. Their volunteer chapter network conducts local beach cleanups across the nation and removes hundreds of thousands of pounds of trash and recyclables each year. During 2019, 47,059 Surfrider volunteers held 936 beach cleanups and removed nearly 300,000 pounds of trash and recycling from beaches. Without the efforts of Surfrider volunteers, this waste would end up in the ocean where it could harm marine life and damage crucial ecosystems, as well as adversely affecting human health and local economies that rely upon tourism generated revenue along our nation's coasts.

Beach cleanups and data collection play a crucial role in enabling us to learn more about the types of plastic ending up on our beaches. Without this data, the effectiveness of the program would decrease and beach cleanups would be a reactionary response to plastic pollution. Whereas with this data, they are able to work proactively to reduce plastic pollution before it gets to the beach by influencing laws that reduce the use and production of single-use plastics, and track trends in trash data to show the effectiveness of policy in keeping plastics off of the beaches in the first place. It gives Surfrider activists critical insights into what items are most often found on beaches and the tools to use this data to create meaningful change at the local, state and national levels.

The beaches are also suffering negative impacts from the coronavirus outbreak. Increased takeout foodware and single-use packaging, improperly discarded personal protective equipment (PPE) and limited volunteer events to clean the beach has led to increased reports of plastic on our coastlines. In response to the increasing reports of finding masks and gloves on the beach this spring, they quickly adapted their cleanup data form to include PPE to help better understand the lasting environmental impacts COVID-19 has on beaches.

You can view the complete 2019 Beach Cleanup Report online at https://www.surfrider.org/coastal-blog.

The Surfrider Foundation is a nonprofit grassroots organization dedicated to the protection and enjoyment of our world's ocean, waves and beaches through a powerful network. Founded in 1984 by a handful of visionary surfers in Malibu, the Surfrider Foundation now maintains over one million supporters, activists and members, with more than 170 volunteer-led chapters and student clubs in the U.S., and more than 700 victories protecting our coasts. Contributions to Santa Monica's Black Agenda Now Accepted Through We Are Santa Monica Fund

The City's We Are Santa Monica Fund, originally limited to COVID-19 community relief, expands today to permit donors to earmark their donations to advance a Black Agenda in Santa Monica. In addition, 10% of any donations that are not earmarked for a specific purpose will be allocated to support projects that are part of the Black Agenda.

On June 9, 2020, the Santa Monica City Council unanimously approved agenda item 13B: "Request of Councilmembers Himmelrich, Jara, and Morena that staff support community leaders creating a Black Agenda to address systemic racism in Santa Monica and that staff take action to eradicate racism within the City government and to implement the Black Agenda." Then, on June 23 2020, the Council unanimously approved agenda item 13B, the request of Mayor Pro Tem O'Day and Councilmembers Davis and Winterer, that the We Are Santa Monica Fund be modified to permit it to accept donations to support the development and implementation of the Black Agenda, allow donors to earmark donations up to 100% for this purpose, and allocate 10% of any unrestricted donations for this purpose.

"Immediate community donations to the Santa Monica Black Agenda through the We Are Fund are a crucial good-faith first step," said Mayor Kevin McKeown. "In the longer run, racial justice requires remedying historic inequities in the availability for Black community purposes of capital that other sectors of society took for granted. Our involvement now, at the beginning, will create opportunities that were denied before, and encourage our Santa Monica Black Agenda to flourish."

Santa Monica's Black community leaders have come together to create a Black Agenda to assist the City in owning its history and recognizing and addressing existing barriers by adopting an informed, proactive platform of forthright, sustained, and credible actions.

The Black Agenda will evolve from outreach, engagement and assessment within the Black community to provide a robust plan for empowerment, inclusion, and equity. The goal is a plan that will be a comprehensive blueprint for authentic change across a wide-range of areas; economic, health-mental, health-wellbeing, police reform, education, COVID-19 recovery, the arts, housing, and civic and political participation.

The We Are Santa Monica Fund is managed through the California Community Foundation (CCF), a 501c3 public charity. Contributions to the California Community Foundation represent irrevocable gifts subject to the legal and fiduciary control of the foundation's board of directors. To learn more about the We Are Fund and to donate, visit www.calfund.org/wearesantamonica/.

If you are interested in getting involved in the Black Agenda, contact the Black Agenda Steering Committee, led by Dr. Karen Gunn, Robbie Jones and Barry Snell, at SantamonicaBlackAgenda@gmail.com.

problem solvers and global citizens at the local elementary campus.

"Essentially, Deep Learning is a learning experience that helps students excel in academics and life," she said.

When school was shut down in March, Benjamin knew she wanted to continue Deep Learning during the pandemic and believed the challenging time could actually serve as an opportunity for students to deepen their compassion, character, creativity, and global citizenship.

"We could all use some happiness during this difficult time, and helping others is a great way to bring some joy and light into our lives, so in order to raise the spirits of our students, they had the opportunity to use some of their distance learning time at home to do an optional 'service-learning project,'" Benjamin said, which allowed students to find with creative ways to help their family, community and the world.

"Students were encouraged to use their passion and creativity to do service-learning projects that interested them, so they could feel empowered and good about making a positive impact," according to Benjamin.

Most of the young scholars chose to tackle real-world problems like homelessness and how to help refugees while others sought to promote environmental conservation or inclusion and kindness. Health care workers and local food banks also benefited from the projects.

"We then did a re-imagined Open House that was virtual, where we featured these Coronavirus Global Citizenship Service Learning projects on a website that families and the community could view and enjoy," she said. "And I must say it was really wonderful to virtually come together as a school family to celebrate our students as academic learners and global citizens making a positive impact on the community and world. All the wonderful projects brought some joy and light to both our students and to others during this difficult time, and I am so proud of how our students stepped up to make a difference."

Uncle Dearest

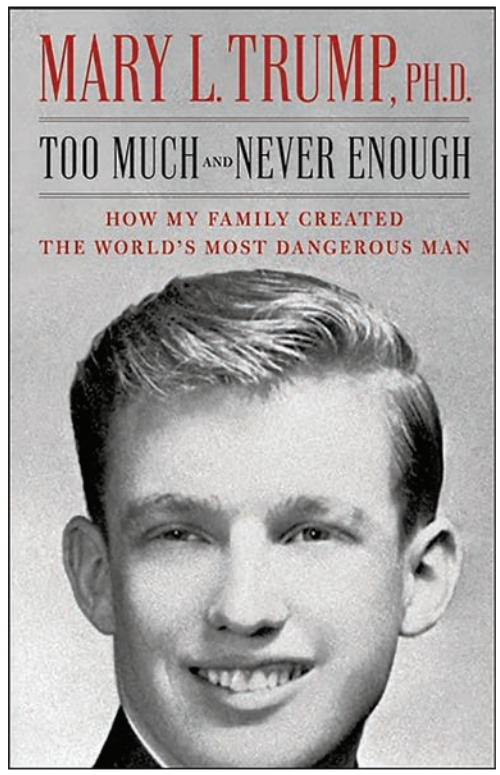

Mary L. Trump, Donald's estranged niece, a licensed clinical psychologist with a PH.D, just released her book about her mentally unbalanced uncle. Because a 20 year old Non Disclosure Agreement Donald prepared was "fraudulent" (duh) Mary is on the book tour. "My uncle is emotionally unfit to be president and as such is incredibly dangerous." If it's depressing how many are afraid of Trump, it's encouraging Mary isn't.

Mary is the daughter of Donald's older brother, Fred Jr. who at 42, suffered a massive heart attack attributed to alcoholism and was rushed to the hospital. The family sat vigil at the Trump manor in Queens, though Donald got bored and went to the movies.

Sadly, Freddy died and, coincidentally. when his mentor, Roy Cohn, who pulled strings to get Maryanne a Federal Judgeship, was dying of AIDS, Trump also refused to visit him. (But there was no mention of going to a movie.)

Another time of grief for the Trump "Klan" (sic) was when Fred Sr. passed away from Alzheimer's in 1999. While the rest of the family was mourning, Donald was busy illegally devaluing his father's estate by a few

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (JULY 17)

You're a light in the world, and you bring a lot of creativity to the role. You'll keep people on their toes with your humor and the delight of your attention. You'll make a financial move and be a leader. Don't let up on improvements just because things get easy. There are six wins that will get you named your team's most valuable player. Aries and Aquarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 30, 24, 17 and 3.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). It seems that basic human rights should be a birthright, and yet it has not been the case for everyone at any point in human history. You'll help those who do not sure your same rights and privileges.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Everyone is quirky in some way, though not always obviously. As you accept how each person has a unique way of relating to the world, you'll help the people around you understand one another.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You're friends with many people who share your interests, have commonalities of background and experiences similar to yours. This is why it's imperative that you reach out to different people. Your creativity depends on it.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Books have the power to change people, but only people who read them. You'll love the way information is presented to you today, and the more you find out, the more you want to know.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). The barriers to love seem to be in the other person, but this is the same illusion for every human. The world is full of mirrors. What appears to be outside is really coming from you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Anyone can whine and complain but it takes real strength, organization and follow-through to alter the way things are done from here on out. You've made change happen before and you'll do it again.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Some important things are very difficult, some are easy, and the difficulty level actually doesn't matter much. You'll do what it takes to get the result you want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You'll reach the point in an endeavor in which you've done as much as you can do, or as much as you really need to do, and the best next move is to open your hands and let it go. Further work would be a waste.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). No one deserves better treatment than the others, and yet most people believe they do and will gladly accept any perks that come along. You will never be sorry you upheld the value of humility.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The origin of problems is a wonder, although not entirely worth spending a lot of time on. No matter where a problem came from, once you pick it up, it's yours to love, solve, keep or give to someone else.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You have the opportunity to improve your condition and this you will sweep up and make the most of. Then you'll share all you've gained and learned so that others can do the same.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Because you have deep wells of empathy, you sometimes feel things more than is necessary for you to be of help. You can always dial it back. That's better than the alternative, which is being oblivious to the feelings of others.

LAUGHING MATTERS

hundred million dollars.

It's ironic, because, when applying for loans, Trump illegally increased his assets by a few hundred million. With Mary's confidential details, these criminal practices were documented in a Pulitzer Prize winning series in the N.Y. Times.

Speaking of prestigious awards, Donald feels entitled to a Nobel Prize. Perhaps for suggesting injecting disinfectant to fight COVID-19 or dropping a nuke into the eye of a hurricane?

Trump has committed endless crimes, but if he loses in November, a Federal pardon in New York wouldn't apply. (Maybe he'd wind up a cell mate of Harvey Weinstein?) But, if he's re-elected the Statute of Limitations could run out. (I say that as I bite my tongue.)

Mary's book is quite scholarly and dovetails with what over 50 esteemed psychiatrists and mental health experts have written over the years. With a tyrannical father and neglectful mother, Mary notes that Trump checks all 9 boxes for malignant narcissistic disorder. She cites his pathological lying, cheating, lack of a conscience and basic human empathy.

The latter is evidenced by "kids in cages," separating families at the border, mocking the disabled, and Gold Star families and being one of the most racist presidents in history. Trump lives for "revenge," which reportedly he has said, "is better than sex." (According to Stormy Daniels, it certainly lasts longer.)

For the family and friends of the 140,000 who died from COVID-19, Trump couldn't even feign empathy. Shockingly tone deaf, he said, "Next year, financially speaking, will be tremendous."

And what other POTUS has hated dogs? Frankly, Trump seems incapable of love for humans. (Other than for Putin and Kim Jung-un.)

During a presser, when referring to Barron, Trump once said, "The First Lady has a young son," as though he forgot he was the father. On the occasion of a recent wedding anniversary Trump admitted on Fox and Fiends (sic) he was too busy to buy the First Lady a gift. The hosts were shocked, so Trump suddenly said he had bought her flowers and a card, which even they knew was pathetic lie.

Mary stipulates his sister Maryanne, who refers to Trump as "a clown," did all Donnie's homework but, to take his SAT he allegedly hired Joe Shapiro, an exceptionally gifted test taker. (Joe eventually lived at the Shores and was my first tennis partner when the Ocean View Courts opened in 1987.)

I was also friends with Joe's wife, Hall of Fame tennis star, Pam Shriver, who insists her late husband was a man of the utmost integrity. She admits, however, when she met Trump he told her Joe, who was Disney's top lawyer, was the smartest person he'd ever met.

Digressing briefly, Pam once called to see if I'd practice tennis with her. I was thrilled but felt obligated to mention, "Pam, I'm not as good as the players you normally practice with." She responded, "Yes, I've seen you play." I joked, "Pam, you didn't have to agree with me so fast!"

Speaking of the SAT, when I was an 11th grader I was offered $50 by my sister's boyfriend's best buddy, Larry Kates, eventually the owner of the Shores. I was to take the exam for Ron Samuels so he'd be admitted to USC and be Kates' fraternity brother. (Samuels ultimately married Linda Carter and managed her "Wonder Woman" career which ended with their bitter divorce.)

Frankly, I was flattered that a college senior thought I was smart enough. (Or naive enough?) Without a word to my sister, I passed the SAT with semi-flying colors and Samuels got into SC. Another frat brother, a cheapskate parking lot owner, paid me with 200 quarters. (Served as laundry money when I was a college freshman.)

In my opinion, Trump is guilty of: Obstruction of justice, bribery, witness tampering, tax fraud, and treason to name but a few. Given my checkered SAT past, I'm hoping Mary views her uncle's SAT fraud, as the lesser of his myriad of sins. Now I'm going to confess all this to my sister.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Baltimore, Maryland

Robert A. Pickett of Santa Monica, California, Chosen to Lead District of Elks

Thousands of members of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the United States of America and guests have gathered in Baltimore, Maryland, from July 5 to July 8 for the BPO Elks' National Convention. During the convention, Robert A. Pickett, of Santa Monica, was installed as District Deputy for the BPO Elks for lodges in the South Central Coast District of the California-Hawaii Elks Association and will serve a one-year term.

The BPO Elks is one of the premier patriotic and charitable organizations in the United States of America and is committed to making its communities better places to live. Each year, the Order donates more than $85 million in cash and $450 million in goods and services to the needy, students, people with special needs, active-duty members of the US armed forces and their families, veterans and their families, and charitable organizations.

As part of the Elks' ongoing commitment to help students achieve their goals and help local lodges make positive changes in their communities, the Elks National Foundation awards annual college scholarships worth a total of more than $4 million, and the Elks National Foundation's Community Investments Program provides local Elks lodges with more than $13 million to help them enrich their communities.

As part of the BPO Elks' commitment to our nation's veterans, the Order has taken the following vow: "So long as there are veterans, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks will never forget them." Each year, Elks members keep this promise by donating more than $50 million in cash, volunteer hours, and goods to offer essential support for veterans and active-duty members of the US armed forces and their families and for programs that serve hospitalized and recovering veterans and lift up veterans experiencing homelessness.
