LA County Health widens monkeypox vaccine eligibility

EMILY SAWICKI
SMDP Staff Writer

With an additional 9,800 newly arrived doses of the JYNNEOS monkeypox vaccine arriving in Los Angeles County this week, the LA County Department of Public Health announced expanded vaccine eligibility during a Tuesday morning media briefing.

The expanded eligibility — effective immediately — opens up vaccine doses for gay or bisexual men and transgender persons who: "were diagnosed with gonorrhea or early syphilis within the past 12 months; or are on HIV pre-exposure prophylaxis (PrEP);

Power restored to 20,000 SCE customers across Santa Monica

EMILY SAWICKI
SMDP Staff Writer

A power outage knocked out electricity for a huge swath of Santa Monicans Tuesday morning and it took Southern California Edison almost four hours to resolve the problem.

The outage began at about 6 a.m. and covered about 20,000 customers according to an SCE spokesperson.

Traffic lights malfunctioned throughout the city, including at the railroad track crossing at

US health insurers raise rates to match increase in usage

ADAM BEAM
Associated Press

After putting off routine health care for much of the pandemic, Americans are now returning to doctors' offices in big numbers — a trend that's starting to show up in higher insurance rates across the country.

Health insurers in individual marketplaces across 13 states and Washington D.C. will raise rates an average of 10% next year, according to a review of rate filings by the Kaiser Family Foundation.

That's a big increase after premiums remained virtually flat for several years during the pandemic as insurers seek to recoup costs for more people using their policies, combined with record-high inflation that is driving up prices for virtually everything, including health care.

The rates review included Georgia, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, Oregon, Rhode Island, Texas, Vermont and Washington.

"We're at a point in the pandemic where people are using health care that they may have put off before," said Larry Levitt, executive vice president for health policy with the Kaiser Family Foundation. "We have a double whammy right now of people using more care and inflation throughout the economy."

In California, state officials announced Tuesday that rates would increase an average of 6% next year for the 1.7 million people who purchase coverage through Covered California, the state-operated health insurance marketplace. That's a big jump after years of record low increases, when rate increases averaged about 1% in the past three years.

Increased use of health plans was the biggest reason for the increase, accounting for four percentage points, according to Jessica Altman, executive director of Covered California.

"That is really the consistent message that other states are seeing as well, and even more so than California," she said.

About 14.5 million people purchased individual health coverage through state marketplaces this year, according to the Kaiser Family Foundation.

That's a small portion of the total number of insured Americans, as about 155 million people get their insurance through their employer-sponsored coverage. But Kaiser said the filings for the individual plans are more detailed and publicly available.

The annual open enrollment period for when customers can shop for and buy 2023 coverage starts this fall. That's the main window each year when people on the individual market can buy coverage or change plans.

How much people will pay for coverage depends on a variety of factors, including where they live and what type of plans they choose.

The rate increases come as Congress debates whether to extend financial help for consumers through the American Rescue Plan — the $1.9 trillion economic aid package Congress passed last year to combat the economic impacts of the pandemic.

The American Rescue Plan included significant funding to keep health insurance premiums low for people who purchase coverage through state marketplaces.

> "That is really the consistent message that other states are seeing as well, and even more so than California"

California receives about $1.7 billion annually from that funding to make sure no one paid more than 8.5% of their household income on monthly premiums.

If that assistance expires at the end of this year, about 3 million Americans — including 220,000 Californians — would likely drop coverage because they will no longer be able to afford it, according to an analysis by Covered California.

Without guidance on whether Congress will extend the assistance next year, some insurers have reacted by proactively raising rates in anticipation of people dropping coverage. The uncertainty accounted for half a percentage point of California's 6% increase, Altman said.

California officials have lobbied hard for Congress to extend the financial assistance through the American Rescue Plan. In general, the price of health insurance premiums depends on who is buying coverage. If its mostly sick people, the premiums are more expensive. If more healthy people buy them, the premiums cost less.

Altman said California has managed to keep its rate increases below the national average in part because more healthy people are buying coverage through Covered California than most other states.

She said that's in part because of a California law that taxes people who refuse to purchase health coverage. But she said it's also because of subsidies that keep premiums low so more people can afford them.

Altman said not extending the federal financial assistance would price some people out of coverage and "is the core outcome to be concerned about here."

"That would be a big step backwards," she said.

Associated Press health writer Tom Murphy in Indianapolis contributed to this report.

House to vote on same-sex marriage, responding to high court

LISA MASCARO
AP Congressional Correspondent

The U.S. House prepared to vote Tuesday on legislation to protect same-sex and interracial marriages amid concerns that the Supreme Court ruling overturning Roe v. Wade abortion access could jeopardize other rights criticized by many conservative Americans.

With a robust but lopsided debate, Democrats argued intensely in favor of enshrining marriage equality in federal law, while Republicans steered clear of openly rejecting gay marriage. Instead leading Republicans portrayed the bill as unnecessary amid other issues facing the nation.

Tuesday's election-year roll call was partly political strategy, forcing all House members, Republicans and Democrats, to go on the record with their views. It also reflected the legislative branch pushing back against an aggressive court that has sparked fears it may revisit apparently settled U.S. laws.

"For me, this is personal," said Rep. Mondaire Jones, D-N.Y., who said he was among nine openly gay members of the House.

"Imagine telling the next generation of Americans, my generation, we no longer have the right to marry," he said. "Congress can't allow that to happen."

Wary of political fallout, GOP leaders did not direct their lawmakers to hold the party line against the bill, aides said. Dozens of Republicans were expected to join Democrats in voting for passage.

While the Respect for Marriage Act is expected to pass the House, with a Democratic majority, it is almost certain to stall in the evenly split Senate, where most Republicans would likely join a filibuster to block it. It's one of several bills, including those enshrining abortion access, that Democrats are proposing to confront the court's conservative majority. Another bill, guaranteeing access to contraceptive services, is set for a vote later this week.

Polling shows a majority of Americans favor preserving rights to marry whom one wishes, regardless of the person's sex, gender, race or ethnicity, a long-building shift in modern mores toward inclusion.

A Gallup poll in June showed broad and increasing support for same-sex marriage, with 70% of U.S. adults saying they think such unions should be recognized by law as valid. The poll showed majority support among both Democrats (83%) and Republicans (55%).

Approval of interracial marriage in the U.S. hit a six-decade high at 94% in September, according to Gallup.

"The extremist right-wing majority on the Supreme Court has put our country down a perilous path," said Rep. Mary Gay Scanlon, D-Pa., in a floor speech setting Tuesday's process in motion.

"It's time for our colleagues across the aisle to stand up and be counted. Will they vote to protect these fundamental freedoms? Or will they vote to let states take those freedoms away?"

But Republicans insisted Tuesday that the court was only focused on abortion access in June when it struck down the nearly 50-year-old Roe v. Wade ruling, and they argued that same-sex marriage and other rights were not threatened.

In fact, of all the Republicans who rose to speak during the morning debate, almost none directly broached the subject of same-sex or interracial marriage.

"We are here for a political charade, we are here for political messaging," said Rep. Jim Jordan of Ohio, the top Republican on the Judiciary Committee.

As several Democrats spoke of inequalities they said that they or their loved ones had faced in same-sex marriages, the Republicans talked about rising gas prices, inflation and crime, including recent threats to justices in connection with the abortion ruling.

Even if it passed the House with Republican votes, as seemed likely, the outcome in the Senate is uncertain.

"I'm probably not inclined to support it," said Sen. Josh Hawley, R-Mo. "The predicate of this is just wrong. I don't think the Supreme Court is going to overturn any of that stuff."

For Republicans in Congress the Trump-era confirmation of conservative justices to the Supreme Court fulfilled a long-term GOP goal of revisiting many social, environmental and regulatory issues the party has been unable to tackle on its own by passing bills that could be signed into law.

But in a notable silence, Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell declined to express his view on the bill, leaving an open question over how strongly his party would fight it, if it even comes up for a vote in the upper chamber.

"I don't see anything behind this right now other than, you know, election year politics," said the GOP whip, Sen. John Thune of South Dakota.

The Respect for Marriage Act would repeal a law from the Clinton era that defines marriage as a heterogeneous relationship between a man and a woman. It would also provide legal protections for interracial marriages by prohibiting any state from denying out-of-state marriage licenses and benefits on the basis of sex, race, ethnicity or national origin.

The 1996 law, the Defense of Marriage Act, had basically been sidelined by Obama-era court rulings, including Obergefell v. Hodges, which established the rights of same-sex couples to marry nationwide, a landmark case for gay rights.

But last month, writing for the majority in overturning Roe v. Wade, Justice Samuel Alito argued for a more narrow interpretation of the rights guaranteed to Americans, noting that the right to an abortion was not spelled out in the Constitution.

In a concurring opinion, Justice Clarence Thomas went further, saying other rulings similar to Roe, including those around same-sex marriage and the right for couples to use contraception, should be reconsidered.

While Alito insisted in the majority opinion

Los Angeles Olympics to begin July 14, 2028

The 2028 Los Angeles Olympics kicked off a six-year countdown on Monday with the announcement of the dates for the Games' return to the city.

The opening ceremony will be July 14. Competition will run through July 30. The Paralympic Games will be Aug. 15-27.

"This milestone makes the games real for every athlete actively training for their LA28 dream and the fans who follow the journey," said LA chief athlete officer Janet Evans, a five-time Olympic medalist swimmer.

Los Angeles previously hosted the Olympics in 1984 and 1932.

International Olympic Committee President Thomas Bach was on hand for the announcement. He visited future venues and met with LA28 leadership.

"I have been really impressed by the progress and creativity of the LA28 team," Bach said. "They are using the power of the Olympic Games to inspire young people to get involved in sport."

The Games will use existing stadiums and venues across the region. The organizing committee said 15,000 athletes are expected to compete in both the Olympic and Paralympic games.

Bike/Pedestrian enforcement

The Santa Monica Police Department will conduct a bicycle and pedestrian safety operation Wednesday July 20, from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m.

The Santa Monica Police Department recognizes the need to protect the public by looking for violations made by bicyclists, drivers and pedestrians that make roads unsafe.

These violations include drivers speeding, making illegal turns, failing to yield to pedestrians in crosswalks, failing to stop for signs and signals or any other traffic violation by bike riders or pedestrians.

"Drivers, slow down and allow bicyclists and pedestrians the same access to roads," Captain Saul Rodriguez said. "To protect you and your family, we want to make sure everyone is following rules that keep them safe."

The safety of bicyclists and pedestrians remains a top priority for the Santa Monica Police Department.

MLB moving ahead with uniform ads for 2023

Major League Baseball is moving ahead with plans for advertising on uniforms next season.

The new labor contract agreed to in March allows teams to add uniform and helmet advertising patches. The San Diego Padres in April became the first team to announce a deal for 2023, with Motorola.

“I think that jersey patches advertisements on jerseys are a reality of life in professional sports,” Commissioner Rob Manfred told the Baseball Writers’ Association of America on Tuesday. “That’s a revenue source that is significant enough that it is really impossible for the sport to ignore over the long haul. I think that’s the truth.”

Major League Soccer became the first of the major North American leagues to allow jersey ads in 2007.

Among other North American leagues, the NBA started selling sponsorship logos for the 2017-18 season. The NHL launched helmet ads for the 2020-21 season and began jersey advertising last season.

Manfred defended experiments with new uniform looks, such as having players not wear their regular-season jerseys during the All-Star Game last year.

After a markedly new look in 2021 that included three-letter abbreviations of team names, uniforms for this year’s game contain the script from regular season jerseys, with gold lettering on a white background for the National League and a gray background for the American.

Nike took over as MLB’s uniform supplier in 2020 and last year added a series of City Connect uniforms that were markedly different, such as having the Boston Red Sox wear yellow and blue.

“A lot of kind unease, trepidation among certainly the more traditional people in the game. City Connect has been one of the great marketing successes in the game in recent years,” Manfred said.

“I think that it’s important to experiment with things like that in order to give the game a little different look. I never thought that a baseball team wearing different jerseys in a game was a particularly appealing look for us. I understand that people can have different views on that topic, but it is part of a larger program designed to market the game in a nontraditional way,” he said.

that “this decision concerns the constitutional right to abortion and no other right,” others have taken notice.

“The MAGA radicals that are taking over the Republican Party have made it abundantly clear they are not satisfied with repealing Roe,” said Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., referring to Trump’s backers.

He pointed to comments from Sen. Ted Cruz, R-Texas, who said over the weekend that the Supreme Court’s decision protecting marriage equality was “clearly wrong” and state legislatures should visit the issue.

But Schumer did not commit to holding a vote on the bill.

Jim Obergefell, the plaintiff in the landmark ruling legalizing same-sex marriage and now running as a Democrat for the Ohio House, said after the court’s ruling on abortion, “When we lose one right that we have relied on and enjoyed, other rights are at risk.”

or attended or worked at a commercial sex venue or other venue where they had anonymous sex or sex with multiple partners ... within the past 21 days."

Anyone in LA County who fits the above criteria is encouraged to visit ph.lacounty.gov/monkeypoxsignup and fill out the form.

Previously, LA County Public Health was distributing the vaccines based on eligibility standards, primarily to known close contacts of those who have already tested positive or those who had been diagnosed with gonorrhea or syphilis within the past six months.

Following a brief update from public health officials, members of the media were invited to ask questions.

KPCC Senior Health Reporter Jackie Fortiér asked about the rationale for excluding most women from vaccine eligibility.

Andrea Kim, the director of Vaccine-Preventable Disease Control, Acute Communicable Disease Control Program for the county, said that was because the current outbreak is not spreading in that demographic.

"At this time this, you know, we're focused on ... gay and bisexual men and transgender persons," Kim said. "You know, we're going to be following the evidence, you know; we really want to be guided by our data. And the evidence hasn't been shown that this has been — this is among women at this point. So, we're really focusing on, you know, where our known risk factors are and that is gay or bisexual men and transgender persons."

Another health expert, Dawn Terashita, MD, associate director of the County's Acute Communicable Disease Control Program, added that women who have been close contacts with known cases would be eligible for vaccines.

Those who have had close contact with an infected person and the JYNNEOS vaccine within four days may avoid contracting the virus; if the vaccine is administered between four and 14 days after exposure, it is still expected to help reduce the disease's severity.

The panel on Tuesday confirmed that eligibility for contacts lasts for 14 days following exposure, and those who become aware of contacts late should still visit the Public Health website to register.

As of Tuesday morning, LA County Department of Public Health reported 120 known cases of monkeypox countywide, up from 85 cases reported as of last Thursday.

"The risk of monkeypox in the general population remains very low based on the information available," official messaging from the public health department stated.

Lincoln and Colorado. The Santa Monica Fire Department responded to elevator rescues and business openings were delayed due to the lack of electricity.

Power was restored to customers throughout Santa Monica as of 9:42 a.m., about three hours and 45 minutes after a power outage was first reported in the city.

SCE spokesperson David Song said there could be any number of explanations for the problem, from a strained grid to equipment failure to an external factor such as a metallic balloon entering a substation.

The reason for the widespread nature of the outage was due to a failure at the hub and not one transformer or line.

"It originated at the substation," Song said, likening the issue to a traffic collision at a major intersection rather than on a side street.

"Instead of just one lane closure on the freeway or on Ocean [Avenue], it's like shutting down the McClure Tunnel," Song offered as an analogy

The spokesman said SCE was thankful for customers' patience.

"We definitely appreciate customers' patience with this. It's a hot day," Song said, later adding, "We recognize all that and definitely appreciate people understanding."

A final determination of cause, if one is found, could take days.

ELEVATOR RESCUE: Firefighters responded to calls for elevator rescues after residents became stuck in the morning power outage.

After a long wait LouLou opens on the roof of Santa Monica Place

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

At long last the marine layer has subsided, the summer sun has arrived and so have a new range of culinary delights, including several long and eagerly awaited restaurants.

Top of that list for many residents is the second ever location of famed Woodland Hills sushi restaurant Brothers Sushi, which a year after first announcing its new space at 1008 Montana Ave, has finally opened its doors. The menu is designed by Mark Okuda and features both omakase and a la carte options.

An even longer wait is ending for the French-Californian restaurant LouLou, which after first announcing its intent to take over the former Sonoma Wine Garden space on the roof of Santa Monica Place in March 2021, will finally host its grand opening on July 23.

LouLou Santa Monica Restaurant & Lounge seeks to pair the seafood restaurant scene of the French Riviera with the coastal cuisine of California. The rooftop has been redesigned to create a dreamy vacation inspired atmosphere with low seating, candlelit trees, wood furniture and plenty of greenery.

"Ten years ago, my wife Florence and I were traveling to Los Angeles and happened to visit the Santa Monica Place," said LouLou's owner Erik Chol. "Eight years later in July 2020, with the yearning for a new project, we had a location scout meeting and the realtor suggested that very location we visited so many years prior. The location with an ocean view, the proximity to the pier and everything about the Santa Monica atmosphere was exactly what we were looking for."

The restaurant will be open for brunch, lunch, dinner and drinks with a farmers market driven menu. Highlights include grilled octopus with romesco sauce and avocado; galette made with a buckwheat pancake, ham, eggs, and Gruyere; and lobster linguine tossed in garlic, shallots, meyer lemon, basil and cream.

There are also several other exciting dining spots edging close towards opening.

Gourmet NYC mochi ice cream store Mochidoki is opening its first West Coast location at 1133 Montana Ave. Their creative range of flavors include jasmine boba, cake batter, salted caramel, match, lychee, black sesame, and acai cacao crunch.

Sawtelle restaurant and bar Hermanito, which features Mexican dishes with a Japanese inspired twist, will be moving into the former Swingers diner location at 802 Broadway.

Lastly, there are several longtime eateries that have received a recent reimagining.

Formerly known as Rick's Tavern, the rebranded Tavern on Main, reopened on July 4th weekend. This building is known to many residents as the oldest bar in Santa Monica with its lineage stretching back to the late 1930s when it was called Willie T's. The newest owners are Addie and Mark Van Gessel and their business partner Lance Sellers.

The trio want to keep the spirit of the Tavern the same with "good food, good pints, good times," however they have greatly expanded the hours and the menu of the Tavern as they seek to create a real pub feel where people are comfortable to come dine, drink and hang all day long.

"We offer something for everyone: great music, great sports viewing, and a great place to come sit on the sidewalk or by the bay windows and watch the local color as it goes by," said Addie.

A more upscale rebranding has taken place at the five star Casa del Mar hotel, which has revamped its oceanfront dining space with a fresh menu and even more oceanfront seats. The new Patio del Mar restaurant has a seafood forward menu with a focus on refreshing coastal dishes. Highlights include the heirloom tomato burrata salad, Main lobster roll, Dungeness crab avocado toast, and wagyu burger.

Another change is coming to the 40-year-old local restaurant Thai Dishes, albeit a minor one. This well loved local eatery will be moving up the street in the coming weeks, from 1910 Wilshire Blvd. to 2628 Wilshire Blvd., as their current building is scheduled for demolition.

Schumer: Dems will push ahead on pared down economic measure

ALAN FRAM
Associated Press

Democrats will push ahead on restraining pharmaceutical prices and extending health insurance subsidies for millions of Americans, Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer affirmed Tuesday, backing President Joe Biden's call for his party to settle for a pared-down economic package and effectively concede to a pivotal senator.

Aiming to craft the bill and approve it over likely unanimous Republican opposition by Congress' recess next month, Democrats were already hailing it as a victory. Passage would give the party an achievement ahead of November voting in which Republicans seem on track to win majorities in the House and perhaps the Senate.

"This is something we've waited for a very long time," Schumer, D-N.Y., told reporters. "It's going to be a major, major accomplishment to help people bring down inflation."

But that glossed over an accompanying reality — Sen. Joe Manchin, D-W.Va., has again forced his party to narrow the measure's sweep, this time making it abandon hopes of using it to combat climate change.

Such initiatives are a passionate goal for younger and progressive voters, who are showing signs of souring on Democrats for their inability to pass strong legislation curbing carbon emissions that warm the planet. Biden has said he will take executive action to address the environmental crisis, and congressional Democrats are urging him to do that aggressively.

Sen. Martin Heinrich, D-N.M., and other Democrats have said Manchin's views on climate are out of synch with the party. Heinrich questioned last week whether Manchin, one of Congress' most conservative and fossil-fuel friendly Democrats, should remain as chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

"It's not fair to string people along for a year and not come to a conclusion," Heinrich said Tuesday. Heinrich has criticized Manchin for repeatedly forcing Democrats to dramatically shrink the economic legislation. Manchin's backing is needed for his party to prevail in the 50-50 Senate, along with Vice President Kamala Harris' tie-breaking vote.

> "It's not fair to string people along for a year and not come to a conclusion"

Manchin upended a roughly $2 trillion, 10-year social and environment bill in December after the House approved it. He did not attend a weekly lunch Tuesday that Democratic senators hold.

Earlier, Manchin reiterated his concerns that a larger economic measure could further worsen inflation and was unapologetic. "I'm not stringing you along. Don't you believe inflation is the No. 1 thing in America right that's hurting every human being?" he told reporters.

Asked if he felt Manchin had negotiated honestly with him over the months, Schumer said, "Senator Manchin and I know each other a long time. We have many disagreements. I am very strenuous when I talk to him about my disagreements. But we always try to show each other respect."

It remains unclear exactly what the final measure will look like or when it will be ready for votes. As of now, the package would save $288 billion over the coming decade, largely because its price controls would make government drug purchases cheaper. Some money would pay for health insurance subsidies for consumers, with the rest used to slightly reduce federal deficits.

Some Democrats want the bill to be expanded to include other initiatives, such as including billions Biden wants to strengthen federal efforts to contend with the COVID-19 pandemic. Many are skeptical Manchin will sign off on that.

Senate staffers from both parties plan to meet Thursday with the Senate parliamentarian, who must decide if any provisions should be dropped from the measure for violating the chamber's budget rules.

One item that might be vulnerable would require drug makers to pay the government rebates if they raise prices beyond inflation increases. If the parliamentarian, Elizabeth MacDonough, says those provisions should be removed, that could reduce the measure's savings by as much as $100 billion, a big blow.

The still-developing legislation would authorize Medicare to negotiate how much it pays for some prescription drugs and require rebates if price increases exceed inflation. It would cap Medicare recipients' out-of-pocket drug costs at $2,000 a year, give them free vaccines and expand prescription drug subsidies for some low-income people.

It would also extend federal payments, now expiring in January, that help around 13 million people who don't get employer-paid or government health coverage pay premiums for their private insurance.

Republicans are opposing Democrats' measure. They say it would discourage pharmaceutical research and object to shoring up federal health insurance subsidies created in former President Barack Obama's 2010 health care overhaul.

"It's pretty unclear where they're going," said Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky. "But they're desperate to pass something on a party-line basis as rapidly as possible. That's in all likelihood bad news for the American people."

Manchin has said he would consider climate change legislation in September once he's seen updated inflation figures. Approving a measure in the heat of election campaigns would be extremely difficult.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 20)

It's as though the sun shines on you with new light. As you pursue your fascinations, they develop you in unexpected ways. You'll be a leader, then a follower, both roles equally life-enhancing. Creative urges drive you to do work so unique, you'll attract students of your style. A purchase will stay in your family for years to come. Libra and Gemini adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 40, 28, 14 and 6.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You'll sort useful pursuits from those that are out of your control and therefore pointless to involve yourself with. If you can't possibly solve it, then it's not your problem. Your terrifically productive day depends on focusing well.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). While business can feel good, the stress from being overwhelmed is something else entirely. It can be alleviated by negotiating the deadline, halving the list and/or delegating. Self-compassion is key.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Whether you're praising or being praised, the act of acknowledgment can feel like an exhausting and tricky test of social grace. Step back, shake it off, lighten up and move on to topics less attached to ego gratification.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). There's no such thing as "off the record" with smartphones on the ready today. Hopefully, people will behave better knowing they might be recorded at any moment. Matters of publicity and privacy impact the action.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Your humor is so alluring to those who share a similar sense, though you'll also be struck by how rare such a thing is. You'll be drawn to those who get how funny you are, and life is just better when you're together.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Newborn ideas aren't usually crystal clear. Typically, clarity comes after you've shared some half-baked version of the idea and then talked it through or worked it out on paper. Shamelessly communicate your baby thoughts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). People think that having specific preferences makes them special. Perhaps, but it also narrows their choices. Today you'll choose between imposing more requirements and qualifications on a thing or broadening your options.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). How do you help a loved one celebrate good times or weather hard times? What's your approach to a loved one being a bit needy? Apply these answers to your relationship with yourself. It's the care you deserve.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). The outside world smiles when you smile, and yet sometimes, those on the inside are impervious to your cheer. Keep your rule over your own internal weather. Let no one affect your excellent mood.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You'll give your best to the thing that feels right to you, even if you can't put your finger on why you're doing it. Your enthusiasm is the quality that gets you hired, promoted, befriended and more.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Your general rule for yourself is simple: listen more than you speak. Because you follow this, socializing will bring you a gift. You'll have the advantage that comes from learning what others don't know.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Many times, it is not until you are in the middle of a task that you realize it is not worth your time or attention. In that case, fulfill your obligation and then plan how to avoid the same sort of situation in the future.

Established in 1946, the Planning Commission envisions Santa Monica as a city of wellbeing, sustainability, and equity, and seeks to balance the many needs and priorities within our community in accordance with the City's General Plan and Specific Plans. The Commission acts through open and civil discourse that is informed by public input, impartial analysis, and best practices in land use and planning. Begins 5:30 p.m. at City Hall. 1685 Main St.

THURSDAY JULY 21

MONTANA AVENUE BRANCH BOOK GROUP
The July 21 meeting will be held in person on the Montana Branch Patio. This month's discussion is on the Santa Monica Reads selection: Joan Didion's blend of California, family, and personal history "Where I Was From." Begins at 6 and ends at 7 p.m. 1704 Montana Ave.

SANTA MONICA READS BOOK DISCUSSION: WHERE I WAS FROM
Join organizers for the 20th anniversary of Santa Monica Reads! This year they turn to Joan Didion's "Where I Was From." In the 2003 book, the great California writer explores the state's romances with land and water, its unacknowledged debts to railroads, aerospace, and big government, the disjunction between its code of individualism and its fetish for prisons. Begins at 6 and ends at 7 p.m. The meeting will be held in-person on Montana Branch Patio. 1704 Montana Ave.

AIR PLAY BY ACROBUFFOS
Umbrellas fly, fabrics soar over the audience, balloons swallow people, and snow swirls, filling the stage. A visual poem, using no words, brings to life the very air we breathe. With stunning images and gales of laughter, Air Play bounces on the edge of definition: part comedy, part sculpture, part circus, part theatre, all while transforming ordinary objects into uncommon beauty. Great for all ages! Begins at 7:30 and ends at 8:30 p.m. Located at the Broad Stage. 1310 11th St.

FRIDAY JULY 22

COURTYARD AND SPLASH PAD
The Annenberg Community Beach House gated area, including the courtyard and splash pad, are open to the public daily. Begins at 9 a.m. and ends at 7 p.m.

SATURDAY JULY 23

FLOATING FITNESS WORKOUT
Floating Fitness Workouts with BOGAFiT builds strength, deepens flexibility, and improves balance and coordination. Wear a bathing suit or workout clothes. Be ready to get wet — you may fall into the pool. Located at the Annenberg Community Beach House from 8:30 to 9:30am. $20/class, pre-register online through Reserve Santa Monica.

DOWNTOWN SANTA MONICA WALKING TOUR
Discover downtown Santa Monica's architecture, history and culture with one of our highly engaging docents. See where Jim Morrison played his first show and visit the lavish Art Deco hotel that housed a speakeasy during Prohibition. The walking tour covers about 6 blocks in 2 hours and begins at the city's first landmark, the 1875 Rapp Saloon. Begins at 10 a.m. and ends at 12 p.m. Hostelling International Santa Monica 1436 2nd St. $10.

LIVE COMEDY AT HI SANTA MONICA
Join Comedians from The Tonight Show, Conan, Comedy Central, and more as they perform comedy in English to a group of foreign tourists every Sat. and Tues. at 8:30pm at HI - Los Angeles Santa Monica Hostel, with an after Party "Hang" at The Craftsman (2nd & Broadway). Check out the Show 5EveryDay.com named one of the Top 5 Events in LA, and the LA Weekly is raving about. You never know what to expect! Begins at 8:30 and ends at 10:00pm.

SUNDAY JULY 24

SANTA MONICA AIRPORT ANTIQUE MARKET
Noted as One of the Top Ten "Flea Markets' in America, visit the Santa Monica Airport Antique Market, a fun outdoor (and dog-friendly!) market full of many great dealers with furniture, antiques, collectibles, art, vintage clothes, jewelry, rugs and much more. Begins at 7 a.m. and ends at 3 p.m. 2800-3200 Airport Ave.

MALIBU LAGOON MONTHLY FIELD TRIP
Registration required, max. 30 people. No drop-ins, please. All Field Trips are designed to maximize your safety, while also enjoying birds. CDC Guidelines are followed. Participants are encouraged to observe safe distancing, and face coverings are required for those who are not fully vaccinated (2 shots + booster) for Covid-19 (proof of vaccine required). Adult walk. 8:30 a.m. Register to Chuck: misclists@verizon.net
