Like a lush oasis in a desolate desert expanse, Irish pubs represent a safe haven the world over, in any city, any country or on any planet. The Auld Fella is opening its second location at 11831 Wilshire Blvd, bringing contemporary Irish cuisine and craft cocktails to the Westside. However, the Auld Fella is not your typical Irish pub, it "eschews kitsch in favor of a thoughtfully curated menu and lively atmosphere" breaking away from the more common decor that's usually somewhere between "sports bar," "snug" and "spit-n-sawdust."

"We've reimagined the Irish pub concept for today's savvy patron," says owner Kevin Kearns, adding, "Our aim is to enhance the traditional experience by providing an uncompromising focus on quality."

This is the second location for the chain, the first opened in Culver City in 2019. The expansive menu is highlighted by the bar's

A juvenile black bear that had risen to prominence for taking up residence in the local mountains, and visiting Malibu beaches, has been killed by a vehicle on the 101 Freeway at the top of the Conejo Grade between Newbury Park and Camarillo.

In April, wildlife officials captured a black bear in the Santa Monica Mountains for the first time. The bear, named BB-12, weighed 210 pounds and was estimated to be around 3-4 years old.

BB-12 had been spotted in various locations within the Santa Monica Mountains through wildlife trail cameras before being tagged.

Rudy J. Ortega, Jr. Appointed to Mountains Recreation and Conservation Authority Governing Board

The Mountains Recreation and Conservation Authority (MRCA) has announced that Rudy J. Ortega, Jr. has been appointed by the Santa Monica Mountains Conservancy to the Governing Board of the MRCA. Ortega, Jr. currently serves as the Chairperson of the Conservancy as an appointee of the Governor. The first Native American to serve on the MRCA Governing Board, Ortega, Jr. is the Tribal President of the Fernandeño Tataviam Band of Mission Indians, a native sovereign nation of northern Los Angeles County. As the elected leader of his Tribe, Ortega Jr. oversees the governmental body and manages affairs pertaining to the rights of all Fernandeño Tataviam tarahat (people).

"My ancestry is thousands of years buried here, in this soil," said Ortega, Jr. "The dirt, the mountains, the plants all contain my ancestral DNA. I am pleased to now join the MRCA as the first California Native American and to be part of an agency that works on preservation and management of open space and parklands for all generations."

RUDY J. ORTEGA, JR

Ortega, Jr. is a member of Siutcabit, the lineage of present-day Encino. His ancestors come from the villages that originated in the geographical areas of Santa Clarita Valley, Simi Valley, and San Fernando Valley. His great-grandfather Antonio Maria Ortega, from whom he receives his traditional role as tomiar or leader, fought in Los Angeles Superior Court in the 19th century to preserve traditional lands and protect Native title to Mexican land grants from encroaching settlers. His father, the late Rudy Ortega Sr., served as the previous leader of the Tribe for over fifty years and was elected to the Los Angeles City/County Native American Indian Commission in 1977. Following his father's leadership, Ortega Jr. was appointed to the Native American Indian Commission by Mayor James Hahn in 2004, where he serves today as a commissioner.

From 2004 - 2018, Ortega Jr. invigorated the Tribe's non-profit Pukúu Cultural Community Services as the Executive Director. Through this role, he served the greater Los Angeles County American Indian community and oversaw Haramoknga American Indian Cultural Center. Through his seat as Tribal President, Ortega Jr. helped establish the Tataviam Land Conservancy, Paséki Strategies Corporation, and a co-management agreement with the City of San Fernando for Rudy Ortega Sr. Park.

In addition to serving as Chairperson of the Conservancy, Ortega Jr. is a member of the Los Angeles River Master Plan Steering Committee, Santa Clarita Watershed Recreation and Conservation Authority, Edison Consumer Advisory Panel Board, and a Commission member of the Climate Emergency Mobilization Committee appointed by Mayor Eric Garcetti.

The Mountains Recreation and Conservation Authority (MRCA) is a local government public entity exercising joint powers of the Santa Monica Mountains Conservancy, the Conejo Recreation and Park District and the Rancho Simi Recreation and Park District. The MRCA is dedicated to the preservation and management of local open space and parkland, wildlife habitat, coastal access, watershed lands, and trails in both wilderness and urban settings, and to ensuring access to public parkland and coastal resources. The MRCA works in cooperation with the Santa Monica Mountains Conservancy and other local government partners to acquire parkland, participate in vital planning processes, work towards wildfire resilience, and connect wildlife habitat. The MRCA manages more than 75,000 acres of parkland that it owns and that are owned by the Santa Monica Mountains Conservancy. It is one of the lead agencies revitalizing the Los Angeles River.

Throughout July, During Park and Recreation Month, Join the City of Malibu in Celebrating the Benefits of Parks and Recreation Programs to the Community

The City of Malibu invites community members to celebrate how parks and recreation programs make Malibu stronger, healthier, more vibrant, and more resilient during the National Recreation and Park Association's (NRPA) Park and Recreation Month.

"Malibu residents of all ages and abilities are invited to enjoy the City's many excellent parks and recreation programs this summer, from sports and wellness to crafts and culture," said Mayor Bruce Silverstein. "Parks and recreation programs offer crucial benefits to our community's beauty, health, quality of life, economic prosperity, and resilience."

Parks and recreation programs also promote physical and mental well-being, time spent in nature, environmental conservation, education, and culture, all of which are crucial as we face the threats of climate change and natural disasters, according to NRPA.

The Community Services Department provides programs and facilities to meet the recreation and leisure needs of the community. In 2022, over 2,542 children ages 2 to 14 participated in various enrichment programs, and the City coordinated more than 745 recreation programs. Nearly 300 local artists were featured or participated in City cultural and artistic events or programs. The Department also attended to the 610 acres of City native habitats and wilderness areas, including planting more than 220 new "pollinator friendly" plants.

This summer, the City offers a wide variety of fun, healthy, engaging activities for residents of all ages and abilities, including CineMalibu Movies in the Park, Learn to Swim Water Safety Lessons, Summer Day Camps, and art exhibitions. Other offerings include nature hikes and walks, afterschool programs, arts and culture classes, and the return of excursions and luncheons with the Malibu Senior Center.

Throughout July, the City invites the community to share their experiences, memories, and stories about what parks and recreation mean to them on social media with the hashtag #RiseUpJuly.

signature "Auld Fashioned" featuring Lost Irish Whiskey. "Our spirits selection is a showcase of the best of Ireland and beyond," says Kearns. "And we pour a proper pint of Guinness – the finest on the Westside."

Located quite literally at the Santa Monica city limits at 3032 Wilshire Blvd, the Katsu Bar is a hidden gem in the north end of town. The former Bank of America building has been stylishly transformed and is also now the home of Paderia, a Portuguese bakery specializing in tarts, Oakberry, which makes acai bowls and smoothies and a Fitstop gym.

Katsu is fried meat, usually chicken, crusted with Japanese panko crumbs. However, one of the restaurant's biggest draws are Katsu "sandos," the extremely popular Japanese sandwich made with super soft crustless milk bread. You also find curries, noodles and Korean on the menu.

"Our signature dish is definitely the sando," manager Alex Kim says proudly, adding, "We have dill egg salad sando, rosemary sando, even strawberry sando." Even after just a few weeks, Kim says word is spreading and Santa Monica customers are keen to try something a little bit different.

"Our goal is to bring Japanese Katsu to cities across the United States and beyond," the website says. There are a total of six Katsu Bars across Southern California, with the others being in Koreatown, Crenshaw, Cerritos, Westminster and Tustin.

And then once you've over-indulged on delicious Japanese food, you'll need to make your way to a gym…and why not explore the new 48,000-square-foot Club Studio high-end fitness concept that replaces the first level of the former Bloomingdale's location at Santa Monica Place shopping mall at the south end of the Third Street Promenade.

Club Studio will be located on level one below the Arte Museum — a "50,000 square foot immersive, digital art destination" — set to open in 2024 in the former ArcLight Cinemas location on level three.

This further advances Santa Monica Place owner Macerich's — the Santa Monica-based real estate investment trust — planned repurposing of the full former department store and theater space. Macerich expects to announce an exciting complementary use for the second level within the coming months.

> "Club Studio adds a terrific new use to our slate of top-drawing retail, dining and entertainment experiences at Santa Monica Place"
> - Doug Healey, Senior Executive Vice President

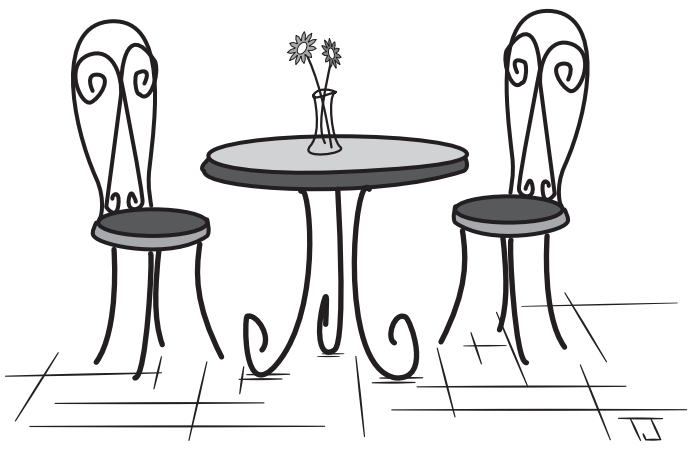

"Club Studio adds a terrific new use to our slate of top-drawing retail, dining and entertainment experiences at Santa Monica Place," said Doug Healey, Senior Executive Vice President, Leasing, Macerich, in a statement.

"We've seen proof of how symbiotic, high-end fitness uses add traffic and energy from early mornings to late evenings at our top Regional Town Centers. Club Studio is an outstanding fitness brand with a very loyal and growing clientele, and we are very pleased to welcome them to Santa Monica Place."

According to the official blurb, Club Studio will feature five unique boutique studio rooms (CS4, box, ride, hot yoga and reformer pilates), plus full-body cryotherapy, steam rooms, personal training, a high-end juice bar and a retail store.

BEAR

Biologists believe he was the first resident bear in the area as there was no evidence of an existing population in the area. The nearest population of black bears is in the Santa Susana Mountains, and bear sightings further south are rare.

According to the National Park Service (NPS) BB-12 was killed on July 20 when a driver called the California Highway Patrol (CHP) to report the accident.

"When any of our radio-collared animals get killed on the road, it's sad but not that surprising after 20 years of studying these animals in the region," said Jeff Sikich, the lead field biologist for the mountain lion study at Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area (SMMNRA). "Roadkill is the number one source of mortality for our mountain lions, so there's no reason to believe it would be much different for other large carnivores."

Sikich said BB-12 moved a lot in the short time they followed him and crossed major roads successfully five times.

"On the sixth time, he unfortunately got hit," Sikich said.

BB-12 had to have crossed busy freeways prior to his initial capture in order to reach this area and he made at least a couple of visits to beaches in Malibu where residents captured images of his footprints on the sand.

Freeway crossings are part of life for large animals living in the Los Angeles area and the famed Mountain Lion P-22 was remarkable for his ability to survive in the environment. However, at the time of his death, P-22 also showed signs of a recent strike by a vehicle.

BB-12 was recorded crossing busy roads several times in the days before his death.

"He provided valuable information in the short time that we studied him," said Seth Riley, the wildlife branch chief for SMMNRA. "Wide-ranging animals like this young male bear are especially useful for learning about connectivity in the region, and this was certainly true of BB-12, given the five major road crossing that he made in such a short time."

> "He provided valuable information in the short time that we studied him"
> - Seth Riley, the wildlife branch chief for SMMNRA

Later this year, NPS biologists, in cooperation with the Ventura Transportation Commission, Caltrans, and the California Department of Fish and Wildlife, will begin a new study of wildlife connectivity along the Conejo Grade.

"This just points even more to the importance of learning about connectivity, or the lack thereof, in this area," Riley said. "In the long run, it would be great to increase opportunities for animals to safely cross in this area, too. We'll see."

LIONS: The Lions are planning a party.

The Santa Monica Pacific Palisades Lions Club started our new year by welcoming a new member, Derrick Beerensteyn, who transferred from the Suriname Lions Club, and the installation of our 2023-24 officers. Past District Governor Bill Yoon led both ceremonies.

Co-President Kathy, along with Lion Phil, shared their experiences at the Lions Clubs International Convention that was held in Boston. Both had a great time and were inspired with ideas for new projects in the coming year. As plans unfold, I will share about how you could join us in making an impact on our community. There will be a variety of opportunities for everyone, from high school and college students to everyone that lives or works on the Westside.

Lions Kathy and Pam shared some of the plans they have for our 100th anniversary gala with a “Roaring Twenties” theme on Sunday, October 29 from 5 - 8 p.m. Join us at a Santa Monica speakeasy for an evening of fun, frivolity and surprises! We will be updating our Facebook page as more details are revealed.

One of the SMPP Lions signature projects throughout the years has been the collection of used eyeglasses and hearing aids. With drop-off locations throughout Santa Monica and the Pacific Palisades, we take these items to be restored, sorted and distributed to help others in need throughout Southern California and Mexico. To increase the number of donations, we are planning to partner with a new recycling company that is hoping to come to Los Angeles, Ridwell.

They come to you home to collect your traditional cans, bottles, batteries, damaged clothing and plastics to make sure they are recycled. But they also partner with local nonprofits, helping to collect gently used clothing, household items, pet food, etc., and distribute them these partners so the items will have a second life. We have been asked to be their partner for used eyeglasses and hearing aids. To learn more about their company go to www.ridwell.com/join/los-angeles and signup. They currently have 7229 on the waitlist to join and they need 7500 households to signup.

If you want to be part of the exciting year we have ahead, please join us as a guest and consider becoming a Lion. To learn more, please reach out to Kingsley at 310-454-2960 or smpplionsclub@gmail.com. A full list of our speakers through the end of 2023 is posted on our Facebook page. Our dinner meetings are the second Wednesday of each month at 6:00 pm at the Santa Monica Elks Lodge, on Pico near 11th Street.

HOUSING

want to shift incentives from building rental units to encouraging construction of units that will be for sale and at the same time, explore ways to convert existing rental units to owner-occupied units.

All of the Commission's proposals are targeted at creating housing for lower-income residents and that would be available for sale below current market rates.

BUILD MORE HOMES:

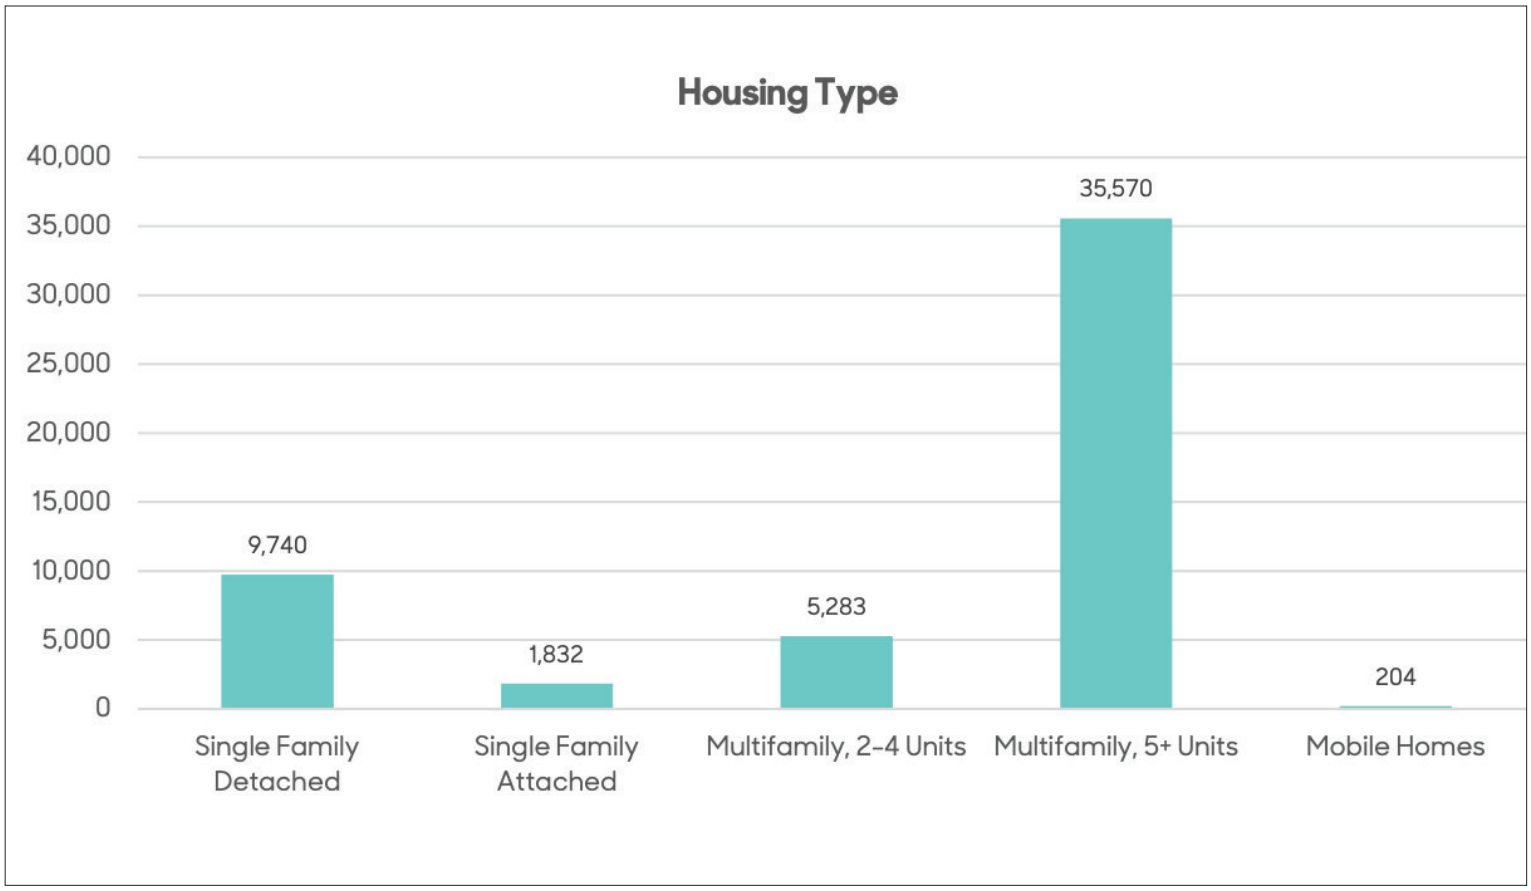

The Commission argues affordable for-sale housing is entirely possible given the existence of affordable materials and modern design elements. It is recommending a reallocation of some existing housing resources away from the construction of rental buildings toward sellable housing.

"Large areas of land in Santa Monica are bought by nonprofits using city loans which are subsequently forgiven," said the report. "This permanent land transfer to third parties at little or no cost is currently used almost exclusively for affordable rental housing. Diverting some of the city's resources to affordable homeownership projects in lieu of affordable rental housing projects would create a better and more diversified investment in Santa Monica residents, neighborhoods, and community."

Aside from land, the Commission says fees and planning policies are biased against new for-sale housing and the disparity in municipal support discourages construction of lower priced units in favor of rentals.

The report says a homeownership assistance program should be funded through a combination of local, state and federal housing trust funds that could provide interest free loans or a forgivable down payment system. In addition, the Commission says dedicated support is needed to help understand the homebuying process.

"Buying a home for the first time is daunting," said the report. "Navigating affordable homeownership assistance programs is even more complex, difficult, and time consuming, particularly for first time home buyers. The Housing Commission recommends that the city establish a home purchase assistance office that will encourage homeownership, help prospective buyers navigate the numerous and varied purchase assistance programs, monitor ownership programs, and seek new ways to help Santa Monica residents, particularly those with low or moderate incomes, buy a home."

HOUSING: The Housing Commission wants to convert some rental apartments to owner-occupied units.

CONVERTING RENTALS:

Santa Monica has both rent controlled and market rate units, but in either case, they argue a nonprofit or government agency should purchase entire buildings at a time and then offer the units for sale to residents. The sales would be voluntary and the purchasing agency would remain as a proportional owner until all units were sold. Under the Commission proposal there would be no time limit attached to the ability to purchase units and buyers would be required to live in their units for some time before considering a resale.

The report says converting rent controlled units is a real possibility as evidenced by the original Tenant Ownership Rights Charter Amendment (TORCA) that offered a way to convert Rent Controlled units to ownership during the early 1980s.

TORCA was not widely successful with only seven percent of eligible tenants buying units and the Commission said the original program had several shortcomings including potentially tense negotiation between tenants and their landlords and an incentive to push out renters to make market rate sales. However, they said a revised version of the policy that accounts for past failings should be considered.

"Furthermore, when occupied buildings that are subject to rent control are placed on the market, their sale prices are frequently lower than their replacement cost because rent control laws prevent new building owners from charging existing tenants prevailing market rents. This presents a unique opportunity for nonprofit parties to purchase discounted multifamily housing in order to facilitate tenants' optional subsequent affordable purchase of their units…," said the report.

To ensure affordable prices, the Commission recommends deed restrictions on the sales targeting specific income levels and using a qualification system to filter buyers.

"First, staff should conduct research to determine the legal, financial, and logistical feasibility of working with existing and/or new housing nonprofit partners to convert 100% affordable rental housing to a homeownership model whereby each tenant would be given the option to purchase their unit," said the report. "Next, the city should engage directly with existing nonprofit housing providers currently managing, constructing, or planning 100% affordable rental properties in Santa Monica to gauge their willingness to consider such transitions and discuss how they could be orchestrated."

The Commission said rental housing is important, but not the only solution the housing crunch.

"While affordable rental housing is a key component of plans to remedy California's and Santa Monica's affordable housing crisis, relegating low and moderate income residents solely to rental housing perpetuates and exacerbates other economic and societal disparities," said the report. "These disparities are increasingly evident in Santa Monica given the high cost of living, and the city must act swiftly and decisively to mitigate and more fully address them."

The proposal will be discussed in detail at the July 25 meeting of the City Council. The meeting will be held in City Hall, 1685 Main Street and closed session begins at 5:30 p.m.

PLACE YOUR CLASSIFIED HERE

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 24)

Your awareness expands in all directions, then good things come from all 360 degrees at once. Though you'll put some in the bank, your emotional account will be filled, too. Those with similar priorities and values show up to enrich your life and projects. More highlights: You'll cross an ocean more than once. You'll go big with some news, and you'll get to know fascinating creatures. Scorpio and Cancer adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 1, 30, 14, 21 and 11.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). People connect in different ways. Not every love story is romantic. Forcing a connection into one category may reduce it to something less beautiful and interesting than it would be if you simply took it moment by moment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Some keep trying to lower your expectation to what they call "reality." Reality is many things to many people. You don't need to accept another person's definition of it because you're so adept at creating your own.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). This is your friendly reminder not to waste any time on the things that are resistant to your influence. There's so much of life that will bend to your will, mold to your work and build to your specifications. Focus there.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Be patient. The challenge at hand is a little like the "plank" exercise. It starts easy enough and gets more difficult with every second, engaging and eventually producing results in every faculty at once. Your endurance will pay off.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). The golden rule only works with those who want the same thing. When you "do unto others," you'll do what they want, not what you want. This is beyond the golden rule; it is the platinum rule.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You will foresee what could go wrong, which will either make you extremely valuable to a process or inspire you not to be a part of it at all. Being knowledgeable of risk doesn't mean you're pessimistic. It means you're smart.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23).The idleness of others bothers you, perhaps because you're doing far more than your share of the work. You won't be perceived as bossy if you assign a tasks to others. They will gain a sense of purpose as you gain a sense of ease.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Everything important will be accomplished through other people. Socializing is a dance. You'll move beautifully now as you feel the rhythms of the room, get in step with others and tune into the push and pull that keeps things interesting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Your whimsy is irresistible. People watch what you do and how you do it, then talk about and imitate your moves. Increased popularity means your attention and attendance will be often requested.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The day plays out like a carnival ride. You end up back where you started, but that's beside the point. This is about the experience, the thrill and the bragging rights. You'll get all three.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Is it your job to provide protection, comfort and shelter from the harshness of the world? Only because you make it your job, a noble aim that gives you a permanent spot in the hearts and minds of your people.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Commitments are life-changing, not because of what happens to you in them but because of the way you must grow to meet their demands. You won't mind the work today, and you're earning rewards of your future.
