Filmmaker delves into anatomy of loneliness

BY ASHLEY ARCHIBALD
Daily Press Staff Writer

DOWNTOWN Tomorrow, filmmaker Edgardo Flores will experience something entirely new.

The 34-year-old Santa Monica resident will see his first feature length film, "Ill Square," projected onto the big screen at Pasadena's Action on International Film Festival, a smorgasbord of genres and styles featuring hundreds of selections from nearly 80 categories.

Watching it will be bittersweet, Flores said.

First, the sweetness.

"Ill Square," which Flores describes as an "experimental musical" that tells the story of two lonely individuals seeking connection, consumed two years of his life before coming to fruition in 2009.

It represents a success snatched from the jaws of defeat — Flores and his motley crew of actor friends were not planning on making "Ill Square" when the movie first came about.

Raw food hot, but still uncooked

BY COLIN NEWTON
Special to the Daily Press

DOWNTOWN Soups served piping warm, kelp pasta covered in faux-cheese sauce made out of pulverized nuts. Are we in a world gone mad? No, just Santa Monica, at Planet Raw, a restaurant on Broadway that caters exclusively to raw food connoisseurs, who wouldn't dare digest anything cooked over 118-degrees.

Chef Juliano Brotman, owner of Planet Raw, was raised in a family of traditional Italian restaurant operators, but became a vegan at 19. He opened a restaurant in San Francisco in 1991, and then moved it to Santa Monica in 2000.

"Santa Monica loves us, we love them, it's really a great little city," Brotman said. "Everybody's health conscious, everybody's green, clean air off the ocean. It was just a natural choice."

Brotman had many reasons for turning to raw food from his meat-based roots. One reason was environmental.

DMV now requires organ donor answer

SHAYA TAYEFE MOHAJER
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES There are about 100,000 people in the U.S. who would tell you the hours you spend waiting in line at the DMV are not a waste of your life — unless you fail to become an organ donor while you're there.

As of this month, California requires all license and identification card applicants to answer "yes" or "no" on whether they want their license to bear the pink dot identifying them as a donor.

The number of Americans who chose to donate is approaching 100 million, but because so few deaths leave organs in transplantable condition, less than 1 percent end up donating.

Transplant and donor networks — and more than 100,000 people waiting for organs — hope putting the question more directly to drivers in the nation's most populous state will boost the rate of Californians willing to donate. Previously, applicants could simply ignore the question and still have their paperwork processed.

In California, 28 percent of drivers chose to give up vital organs and tissues after death in 2010, well below the national average of 40 percent.

Transplant donor groups began pushing for the change to the DMV application after noticing that drivers are far less likely to decide to donate their organs if they apply for a license in person at the DMV office

CITY HALL

Jazz on the Lawn returns

Get out your blankets and picnic baskets, Jazz on the Lawn returns for the sixth year.

The free concert series, held on the lawn of Santa Monica's City Hall, begins on Aug. 7 and will run through Aug. 28.

Performing on Aug. 7 is the high-energy jazz sextet Theo Saunders and Intergeneration. Specializing in global rhythmic grooves and straight ahead swing, Theo Saunders and Intergeneration play original compositions and unusual arrangements of jazz, Broadway and even country covers.

On Aug. 14, The Tony Guerrero Quintet performs music from the Great American Songbook from the 1930s through the '60s, including music from artists like Frank Sinatra, Louis Armstrong, Nat King Cole, Louis Prima and Tony Bennett. This quintet's high-energy sound is reminiscent of the Jet-Set and Atomic Age eras of the 1950s and '60s (think TV's "Mad Men") and their performance looks back to the era of New York supper clubs and Las Vegas showrooms.

A special addition to this evening's concert is an open-community dance jam led by local dance-maker, Christine Suarez. Participating attendees will learn dance moves, improvise and shake their tail-feathers. All ages and abilities welcome.

On Aug. 21, the guitar-led organ trio, The Electones, play a range of jazz, blues and soul from the traditional to the experimental that will get people dancing. This concert is a tour stop on Tour da Arts, vol. 3, the Santa Monica Museum of Art's exciting art-themed bike tour through Santa Monica. Also, grab a free reusable bag made by Green Vets L.A. as part of the Office of Sustainability and the Environment's Bring Your Bag initiative. The Single-Use Bag Ban goes into effect Sept. 1 and the free bags are to encourage residents to Bring Your Own Bag whenever you shop. This concert is sponsored by Los Angeles County Supervisor Zev Yaroslavsky as part of the Los Angeles County Arts Commission's Free Concerts in Public Spaces program which sponsors free concerts at community venues throughout Los Angeles County in order to provide access to quality music programming that represents the diversity of County residents.

On Aug. 28 talented violinist Lesa Terry and her all-star rhythm section, play an eclectic mix of soulful sounds including blues, swing, bebop, Cuban, Brazilian, Middle Eastern and beyond.

'Captain America' knocks 'Harry' from top spot

CHRISTY LEMIRE
AP Movie Writer

LOS ANGELES In a battle of summer movie heroes, Captain America topped Harry Potter this weekend at the box office.

Paramount Pictures' "Captain America: The First Avenger" opened at No. 1 with $65.8 million, according to Sunday studio estimates. The Marvel Comics superhero adventure sets up next summer's all-star blockbuster "The Avengers."

Warner Bros.' "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 2," the eighth and final installment in the boy-wizard franchise, dropped to the second spot. It made just over $48 million in its second weekend for a domestic total of $274.1 million.

Don Harris, head of distribution for Paramount, said "Captain America" exceeded expectations. He figured it would do the same sort of business as "X-Men: First Class," which opened with $55.1 million in June.

"It looked to me, when I saw the marketing on the movie and then saw 'Captain America,' like a throwback movie. It reminded me a little bit of 'Raiders of the Lost Ark.' It had a little bit of a 'Raiders' feel to it, which is one of the best movies of all time," Harris said. "People embrace the look of the character. The character is a little bit like Iron Man — he didn't have a lot of special weapons to himself, he just was a pretty interesting character.

"For it to be the fifth of five superhero movies for the summer, it looks like we got to save the best for last," he said.

Internationally, "Captain America: The First Avenger" opened only in Italy with $2.8 million. It will begin playing in 23 international markets next weekend, including the United Kingdom, Russia, Argentina, Brazil, Mexico, Australia and Korea.

"Harry Potter" dropped 72 percent from its record-setting opening of $169.2 million last weekend. That was expected, though: Even Warner Bros. executives acknowledged that these movies are front-loaded in terms of audience turn-out.

And as box-office analyst Paul Dergarabedian of Hollywood.com pointed out, this final "Potter" picture made $43 million in its first midnight showings alone.

"'Harry Potter' did what it's going to do," Dergarabedian said. "Even trying to keep up with that pace, that level, is really tough."

Save chocolate milk

Editor:

Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District (SMMUSD) as well as many others in the U.S. are debating the nutritive value of sweetened milk ("Ed board stuck on flavored milk ban idea," July 22, 2011). At best, nutrition science is difficult to read and is too frequently hijacked by the food industry in its rush to the bottom line. Yes, there is too much sugar (and carbohydrates generally) in packaged foods. But throwing out the baby (protein, calcium, vitamin D) with the bath water (flavored milk) makes no sense. Milk is an excellent source of protein that diminishes the hypoglycemic (low blood sugar) effect from the stimulated insulin. Hypoglycemia gives us the tired, let down feeling that leads to further sugar craving. Protein can break the cycle. In addition, it promotes better glycogen storage in muscles that have recently been active in school sports activities.

School menus tend not to offer adequate protein. Fruits and vegetables are not enough to guarantee a balanced diet. Strawberry flavored milk has double the sugar added than the chocolate. That 77 percent of milk consumed by students in the SMMUSD is non-fat chocolate, it is a clear message, what the overwhelming choice of milk beverage is. Simply stated, ban the strawberry milk and continue to offer the chocolate as well as nonfat or low fat. For those lactose intolerant or milk averse, soy milk (with calcium and vitamin D added) can be offered, both regular and chocolate. As to juices, they are essentially sugar water and should not be available on any menu.

Baby attack just collateral damage

TWO WEEKS AGO, A DOTING GRANDMOTHER enjoying the beautiful, sunny weather with her infant grandson on Wilshire Boulevard was attacked by a disheveled, middle-aged man who forcibly tried to wrench the strapped-in 1-year-old from his stroller.

The grandmother rushes to her grandson's aid and is punched in the face. A good Samaritan intervenes. He's attacked and kicked in the face. Police are summoned. When they arrive, another struggle ensues. The aggressor is finally subdued and arrested.

Luckily, the infant only received minor injuries to his head, neck, face and torso. The grandmother also received minor injuries as did the Samaritan and a couple of our police officers.

The miracle is that the baby and grandma weren't killed or seriously injured. Hopefully, the infant is too young to have been permanently traumatized; however, the grandmother will probably be emotionally scarred for the rest of her life. Welcome to Santa Monica.

The attacker, identified as Lewis Clair Moss, 51, is a known transient. He's been charged with kidnapping, assault and felony resisting arrest. He's being held on $285,000 bail pending a court appearance July 27.

When this story broke 10 days ago, I expected a strong public reaction, but it barely created a ripple. I guess we've all had so many unpleasant experiences with local vagrants, parolees, ex-cons and other antisocial types, that many of us have become indifferent to it. Besides, it's a conversation starter: "You'll never believe what happened to me yesterday … "

A catalog of crimes, incidents and untoward behavior perpetrated by transients and nut bags runs in the "Crime Watch" pages of this newspaper every Friday. A substantial percentage of our policing effort is expended dealing with their activities.

Despite the pubic safety risks, for decades City Hall has rolled out the red carpet by supporting a wealth of services ranging from free food handouts and counseling to homeless shelters and subsidized housing. "Homeless" services is a major industry here, costing taxpayers tens of millions of dollars and employing hundreds of people, annually.

City Hall paints its efforts with a Pollyanna brush by trumpeting the few success stories of beneficiaries (almost all are here from outside Santa Monica) who've turned their life around as a result of City Hall's intervention. Meanwhile, the criminal activity that's emblematic of Santa Monica's distinctive "edge" is ignored and buried.

The public's safety is disregarded by city leaders. Every day, we all live with mentally ill, violent, alcohol or drug addicted individuals who refuse services, won't take their medications and act out. When someone is assaulted or a home, car or store is robbed or vandalized, it's just another cost of living or working in Santa Monica. In military parlance: we're all collateral damage.

What's it going to take for residents to realize that City Hall's deliberate policy of enticing undesirable elements into our community with promises of "life in paradise with impunity" is not in anybody's best interest — except those profiting by it?

SEN. LIEU LAYS AN EGG ON SMO

State Sen. Ted Lieu, D-Torrance, sent a letter to the director of the state Department of Toxic Substances Control last Monday and asked her to investigate air pollution and blood-lead levels among residents living near Santa Monica Airport (SMO).

Lieu contends that children and adults living within hundreds of feet of SMO are receiving extra high levels of lead exposure which he claims is a result of the many, small, piston aircraft fueled by aviation gasoline — rather than jet fuel — using the airport.

Lieu cites a July 13 study by Duke University that found that children who live within 500 meters of airports in North Carolina have significantly higher levels of lead in their blood caused by aircraft operating with leaded gasoline. Exposure to lead has been shown to cause learning disabilities, behavior disorders and substandard academic performance in children.

Lieu represents the 28th Senate District which doesn't include Santa Monica but does include neighborhoods directly east and south of SMO. He's also chair of the Senate Select Committee on Air Quality.

Maybe Lieu should also request studies of airports in his own district such as Northrop Field/Hawthorne Municipal Airport, Zamperini Field/Torrance, Compton/Woodley Airport and the big cheese: LAX. If Lieu is so concerned about lead pollution from gasoline, how about also conducting studies of the worst polluters of all: streets and freeways?

I'm for researching pollution sources, but any study should also include other airports for comparison along with an analysis of surface vehicle lead pollution compared to aviation pollution to be meaningful. But, I doubt Lieu is concerned about anything meaningful. He's really just sucking up to airport haters in Mar Vista.

Lieu isn't going after aviation facilities in his own backyard because he's obviously afraid of the blowback. His request for an investigation and an environmental complaint against SMO reeks of cheap politics and political favoritism. I say it's a bunch of crap!

Bottled water ban creates dilemma for Vermont offices

JOHN CURRAN
Associated Press

MONTPELIER, Vt. At the state maintenance garage where Lori Girard-Pion works, the water cooler isn't a luxury. It's a necessity, especially for the mechanics who maintain the Vermont State Police vehicle fleet.

So when the state of Vermont said it was doing away with bottled water deliveries for state government offices and buildings in favor of drinking water from the tap, she wasn't happy.

Without it, workers at the Colchester garage will have to get their drinking water from a bathroom wash tub where mechanics wash their greasy hands, she says.

"Is that a lot to ask for?" Girard-Pion, an administrative assistant, wrote in a complaint to the state last month. "I think we have good reasons to keep our water cooler."

Turns out kicking the bottle is harder than it looks.

Now, state officials who touted the change as a way to go easy on the environment, save more than $200,000 annually on water purchases and support municipal water systems are scrambling to salvage the plan.

Workplace sanitation rules, tap water said to be smelly or visibly dirty and stiff opposition from employees insulted by the thought of having to provide their own water forced the administration of Gov. Peter Shumlin to postpone the July 1 adoption of the new policy.

In March, state officials rolled out the plan, calling bottled water a waste of taxpayer money and a luxury that flies in the face of the millions of dollars invested in public water systems to ensure the availability of clean, drinkable water for all.

Agency of Natural Resources Secretary Deb Markowitz cited environmental degradation associated with bottled water, saying toxic chemicals go into plastic water bottles, delivery trucks pollute the air and ecologically-sensitive stream headwaters are damaged by bottlers who draw the water from streams and rivers.

Under the policy, exceptions would be made when no clean tap water is available to employees, either because of no tap at all or problems with water quality.

The policy was to apply to executive branch locations of state government — not courts or the Legislature — and had the support of the Vermont State Employees Association, a union that represents about 7,000 state workers.

But when word went out, the complaints started coming in.

"As a dedicated state employee, I am offended at the small mind thinking and petty penny pinching decision to have us fend for ourselves for water," wrote Betsy Levine, a career development facilitator at a state Department of Labor office in Springfield. "How dare you!!!!!!" she wrote, comparing the decision to the Titanic because "only the ones at the top get saved."

Other written objections — obtained through a Public Records Act request by The Associated Press — contained similar sentiment:

— "We work long hours inside, no air conditioning, and daily put our lives on the line to keep the convicted inmates secure and the public safe and now we cannot even have cool fresh water," wrote Michael Arace, who works at Southern State Correctional Facility. "Please reconsider." He said there are two heat-related injuries annually at the prison in Springfield.

— Kristin Holt, who works in a probation and parole office in Burlington, said the tap water in her building has visible particulates in it and smells bad. "We would like permission to keep our water delivery or at the very least have a water quality inspector come and test our water to determine if it is safe or advisable to drink."

— The Vermont Veterans Home in Bennington told the state that bottled water serves as the facility's emergency supply and shouldn't be taken away.

Rules got in the way, too.

State-adopted plumbing codes say that in buildings with 15 to 100 workers, a water fountain or bubbler is mandatory. And another is mandatory for each 100 employees over that. Eliminating the bubblers would mean the state would have to re-install fountains, a potentially costly proposition because of the plumbing work involved.

Also, under Vermont Occupational Safety and Health Administration rules, no food or beverages can be consumed by employees in a "toilet room," which rules out implementation of the bottled water ban in locations with no fountains or taps outside bathrooms.

But the state has checked drinking water at eight locations where employees complained about water quality and found that the water is potable in all of them, according to Michael Obuchowski, commissioner of the Department of Buildings and General Services.

For now, the state has appointed a panel to examine ways of going ahead with the phase-out without running afoul of workplace rules and practical considerations. Among them: whether it would cost more to re-install water fountains in buildings than to keep buying bottled water

TOO MUCH STUFF: According to the Colorado-based EcoCycle, the use of disposable packaging — especially plastic — has increased by more than 10,000 percent over the past 50 years.

Recycling a messy business

Dear EarthTalk

Why can't plastics of all types, instead of being initially sorted, simply be melted together to be separated later? It must be a monumental and error-prone task to separate truckloads of plastics.

L. Schand,

THE REASON PLASTICS AREN'T TYPICALLY melted together and then separated later is a matter of both physics and economics. When any of the seven common types of plastic resins are melted together, they tend to separate and then set in layers. The resulting blended plastic is structurally weak and difficult to manipulate. While the layered plastic could in theory be melted again and separated into its constituent resins, the energy inputs required to do so would make such a process cost prohibitive.

As a result, recycling facilities sort their plastics first and then melt them down only with other items made of the same type of resin. While this process is labor-intensive, the recycling numbers on the bottom of many plastic items make for quicker sorting. Many recycling operations are not only reducing sizable amounts of waste from going into landfills but are also profitable if managed correctly.

Manufacturers of plastic items choose specific resins for different applications. Recycling like items together means the reclaimed polymer can be used to create new items just like their virgin plastic forebears. The seven common types of plastic are: #1 Polyethylene terephthalate (PET or PETE); #2 High-density polyethylene (HDPE); #3 Polyvinyl chloride (PVC); #4 Low-density polyethylene (LDPE); #5 Polypropylene (PP); #6 Polystyrene (PS); and #7 Other/Mixed (O). One complicating factor is trying to recycle unmarked plastics and those embossed with a #7 (representing mixed resins, also known as polycarbonate). According to Earth911, a leading online source for finding recyclers for specific types of items across the United States, in some cases #7 plastics can be "down-cycled" into non-renewable resin; in other cases recycling operations just send their unmarked and #7 plastics into local landfills.

But even though recycling operations have developed relatively efficient systems for generating reclaimed resins, many environmentalists recommend that consumers still avoid plastics as much as possible. "Simply recycling these products does not negate the environmental damage done when the resource is extracted or when the product is manufactured," reports EcoCycle, a Colorado-based non-profit recycler with an international reputation as an innovator in resource conservation. The group adds that over the past half century, the use of disposable packaging — especially plastic — has increased by more than 10,000 percent.

Along these lines, products (or packaging) made out of reusable metal, glass or even wood are preferable to equivalent items made from plastic. For starters, an item of metal, glass or wood can be re-used by someone else or recycled much more efficiently than plastic when it does reach the end of its useful life to you. Wood products and other items crafted out of plant material — even so-called "polylactic acid (PLA) plastic" made from plant-based agricultural wastes — can be composted along with your yard waste and food scraps, either in your backyard or, if your town or city offers it, through your municipal collection system. Happy reducing, reusing and recycling!

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

Alley Resurfacing Project
The alley in the 100 block of Vicente Place North will be resurfaced. Please be advised that resurfacing operations will generate noise and dust. There will be certain times when the alley will not be accessible during construction, but the city will minimize these times of closure during the day.

Borderline Neighborhood Improvement Project
New water main installation, new various street pavement finishes, new landscaped areas, trees, and pedestrian lighting. Street lights will be installed along Longfellow and near Longfellow on Marine, Navy and Ozone. Please observe posted detour signs.

Expo Light Rail Line Project
1. Exploratory excavation will occur for this project in order to plan the initial layout of upcoming construction activities. 2. Camera inspection work on sewer mains will occur afterhours from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. The contractor will comply with the city's noise ordinance. Tentative start date is Aug. 1 for this activity. 3. Pending approval of an afterhours permit application, night work may occur and will impact the following intersections: Colorado Avenue and Fifth, Seventh, Lincoln Boulevard, 11th, 14th and 17th streets; and at the intersection of Stewart Street and Exposition Boulevard. To minimize impact on traffic and duration of the impact; night work for this activity may be implemented. Temporary lane closures may be necessary on Fourth Street and Colorado Avenue through 17th Street; MTA Right of Way from 17th Street to Centinela Avenue including intersection of 19th, 20th, Olympic, Cloverfield, 26th and Stewart Street. Parking Meters on Colorado Avenue will be taken out of service only when work is ongoing in a specific area. Work will take place between June 2011 and September 2011. For questions regarding this project contact Expo Light Rail Line Community Relations at (213) 922-EXPO or www.BuildExpo.org.

Street & Park Lighting Project
The work consists of modifying existing high-voltage series streetlight circuits to low-voltage multiple circuits on 26th Street between Montana Avenue and San Vicente Boulevard, and 26th Street between Wilshire Boulevard and Broadway. Partial roadway closures or detours are expected but impact to traffic should be minimal.

Transit Priority Systems Project
Installation of the Transit Priority System (TPS) at 80 traffic signals along major corridors within the City of Santa Monica. Work requires installation of wireless detectors to sense approach of buses on routes in the following locations: Wilshire Boulevard and 26th Street; Santa Monica Boulevard and Fifth Street; Lincoln and Pico boulevards; Pico and Sixth, 11th, 17th and 26th streets. Partial roadway closures or detours are expected but impact to traffic should be minimal.

Utility Undergrounding
Various alleys will be temporarily closed for underground work on utilities in the following locations: 18th Court between Pearl Street and Pico Boulevard; 20th Street between Pearl Street and Ocean Park Boulevard; 18th Street between Ocean Park Boulevard and Ashland Place North; Ashland Place North between 18th and 16th streets.

Water Main Installation
In order to improve water service in the City of Santa Monica, the Water Division is installing a new, larger water main on Princeton Street from Wilshire Boulevard to Washington Avenue Place south.

For more information on projects, please visit the Know Before You Go Web site at www.knowB4ugo.smgov.net.

Instead, they were working on "For Digital Viewers," a more traditional film with contracted actors and a basic sense of plot and flow, but which ultimately fell apart after shooting began.

With most of the $2,000 budget sunk into a new Cannon HV20 digital camera, there wasn't much to start over with, nor was there a script, plot or much in the way of rehearsal time.

What Flores did have was an urgent desire to capture on film a morose sense of searching, questioning, loss and ultimately a chance at redemption which pervaded his own daily experience, and a group of dedicated friends to help make his vision a reality.

He also had an abnormally pragmatic approach to film, and his own limitations as an independent filmmaker.

"I shoot within my means," he said simply. That means cutting out elaborate, and expensive, effects, large casts and other frills to the core of what the film is supposed to be, in this case an emotional snapshot, captured in its evolutionary phase on a digital camera.

For the year that Flores and his cast worked and shot together, it was a two-man film crew: Flores himself, and his then-girlfriend Michelle Munjekovich, who play the man and woman fated to be together in the movie itself.

In addition to directing, acting and shooting, Flores also wrote the music and edited the piece, which took another year to complete after the 80 hours of footage had been shot.

In fact, the only thing Flores did not do for the movie was write it.

"We actually made it up, week by week," Flores said.

That's been Flores' modus operandi since he first began shooting sketch comedy shorts with his brother on his mother's handheld in the mid 1990s.

The troop, called the Tricksters, managed to produce an entire 16-episode season which aired on public access cable in 1998 in Monrovia and Pasadena, although Pasadena pulled the show early because it was considered "controversial."

"Monrovia somehow managed to keep us on, in spite of all the complaints," Flores wrote in an e-mail. "They were good to us."

None of those episodes had a script. Instead, Flores and family created an outline and structure within which each actor could play, adapt and improvise.

"Ill Square" took the premise of the unwritten feature to another level. Not only did actors ad lib in each scene, they did so without a clear picture of where the movie was going, or why. Plot points in the 84-minute piece, including a comedic father-son duo determined to save the planet from a non-existent zombie invasion, come secondary to its dark moodiness, which are better captured by the minimalist electro-trance music that pervades each scene.

Flores attributes his quirky approach to filmmaking, in part, to his rather unique training in acting and directing.

That is to say, he has none.

"My film school was the Stanley Kubrick box set," Flores said. "I like his style, he's meticulous. Everything is exactly how he wants it."

While he doesn't seek to emulate Kubrick, who was known for his carefully-crafted movies and intense level of control over the filmmaking process, Flores appreciates the deliberateness of each act in Kubrick's films.

"Ill Square" still isn't quite done. When the audience sees the film Tuesday, it will end with two versions of the main character, played by Flores, facing off in the final scene, a hooded version staring down at Flores shaved bald, a liberated person who turns on his heel and walks away from the sick man staring back at him.

Flores, also something of a perfectionist, has two endings for it, and even two years after he wrapped up filming and editing the piece, he hasn't decided which one will be the capstone on his piece.

Now the bitter: Watching what could ostensibly be seen as a love story between two characters played by Flores and Munjekovich in the Pasadena theater, which held special significance for the couple, will be difficult, Flores said, but he still describes "Ill Square" as "therapeutic."

"It was very much that time of my life," Flores said. "I had to act quickly to get it on film."

Flores is not one to waste emotional energy lightly. He's already working on a second feature-length film, the details of which he's keeping largely under wraps, but will have some of the same elements as "Ill Square" and at least a few of the same actors, but with a bit more structure.

Flores will also act in the new film, partly as a result of his limited budget, but he is waiting for the film where he can step out of the multiplicity of roles he took on in "Ill Square" and stay behind the camera the entire time, guiding the action with an eye to the bigger picture rather than concerning himself with his own performance.

"I look forward to the day I'm not in front of the camera," Flores said.

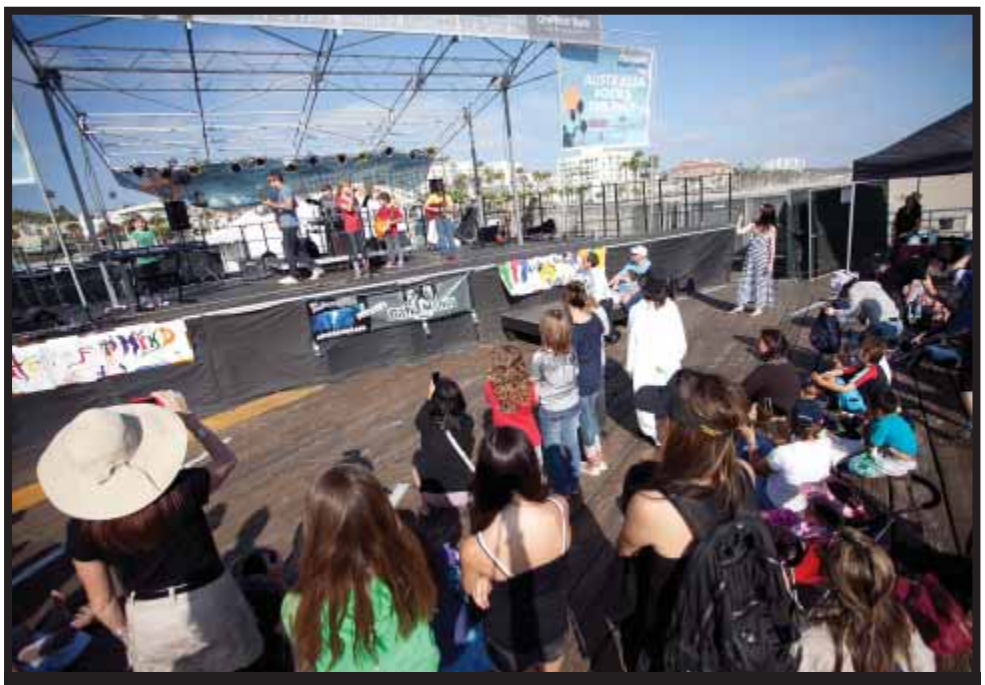

"Ill Square" will screen in the 2 p.m. time block on Tuesday, July 26. Tickets and information are available at www.aoffest.com.

RAW FOOD

foods," Brotman said. "There is no throw-away with raw food."

Ultimately, Brotman says that raw food is just a healthier, more natural alternative to other diets. "You eat out of a factory, a slaughterhouse and a laboratory. We eat out of a garden."

According to Emil Kalil, who has a doctorate in geochemistry, one of the primary purposes of the raw food diet is to preserve enzymes in food, which are thought to help people digest food. Cooking the food destroys these enzymes.

Kalil said that at 115 degrees, the enzymes start to degrade. Traditional cooking methods, such as boiling, kill the enzymes completely. For this reason, raw food dieters use dehydrators to prepare food, or just eat food that doesn't need to be prepared.

Kalil said that some people are already on a raw diet and don't even realize it, at least partially. "They'll have a salad, a couple pieces of fruit. It depends on how you were brought up, if you snack on a Snickers bar or a carrot."

Kalil admits that for some people, going fully raw is not possible. They may not be able to keep their diet diverse enough, or may not get all the nutrients they require.

Obtaining food can also be an issue.

"It's too difficult," Kalil said. "If you're eating out and you're on the go, you may not be able to get what you want."

However, Kalil says that for people who want raw food, Santa Monica appears to be a virtual paradise.

"In this part of town, on the Westside, we are blessed to have such a wealth of stores that sell nutritious raw or organic food," Kalil said.

Many stores and restaurants in and around Santa Monica offer raw food, including Rawvolution, the Co-opportunity, and of course, Planet Raw. Planet Raw's Juliano Brotman in particular is known as a bit of a "raw-k" star.

"If you get into raw foods at all, you're going to know about this place," said Elizabeth Mars, Seattle resident. She was in Santa Monica to visit friends, but made time to eat at Planet Raw.

Mars eats a largely raw diet, something that began in 2008.

"I did it because I had Lyme disease, and I didn't want to go on antibiotics. I decided to use food and herbs."

Mars has said that the raw food diet has improved her condition, and she continues to eat mostly raw food. Unlike some other raw food connoisseurs, Mars adds meat to her diet. "I try to eat raw animal protein: sushi, tartars and raw eggs."

Rita Johnson, Culver city resident, has been a vegan for over 6 years and frequents Planet Raw. Why? "For the nutritional value. I love what goes into the preparation and I also like the culture, I like to be a part of that culture."

However, not everyone who eats at Planet Raw is on the raw food diet, or even a strict vegetarian. "I like to eat food that I feel is healthy and organic," said Julie Mintz, Beachwood Canyon resident. "There's a lot of good opportunities for that in L.A., even if you're not vegan or on a raw food diet."

And of course, for many people, items like the cheesy kelp pasta and the chocolate milkshake are as popular for their health benefits as they are for their flavor.

"You feel like it's healthy and it tastes good," Mintz said.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Man City beats Galaxy on kicks after 1-1 draw

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CARSON Joe Hart saved A.J. DeLaGarza's penalty and then scored the winner in the ninth round of a shootout as Manchester City beat the Los Angeles Galaxy 7-6 on penalty kicks after a 1-1 draw Sunday.

Mario Balotelli was pulled by Manchester City coach Roberto Mancini after he broke in on goal, then turned around and attempted to score by backheeling the ball into the net. City's chance at a 2-0 lead went wide.

Mancini had some strong words for the striker as he made his way to the bench.

"I think for the player, this can be a lesson," Mancini said. "This can't happen on a strong team."

Balotelli slammed a cup to the ground and later removed his jersey as he sat watching the rest of the half. He did not return from the locker room following halftime.

"I hope he understands that he needs to have good behavior," said Mancini, who noted that the situation is finished in his eyes.

Earlier, the Italian scored on a penalty in the 20th minute after Micah Richards was taken down in the box.

Mike Magee tied it for the Galaxy in the 53rd, finishing a high-arching floater from outside the box that carried just over the reach of Hart.

"When I saw the way it bounced and him be able to volley it, I had a feeling it was going to get on goal," Galaxy coach Bruce Arena said. "It was a fabulous goal against a fabulous goalkeeper."

Manchester City played their starters big minutes in front of the crowd of 24,897 for the exhibition game.

"They're a good team, so we knew it would be a good test for us," Manchester City midfielder James Milner said. "But that's what you want for preseason, a good test, good fitness. All-in-all, it was a good game."

A talk is inevitable tonight, Taurus

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ A conversation is inevitable. Talks could take interesting twists and turns. Clarify, if need be. Echo what you think you are hearing. Confusion seems to be the nature of the moment. You could feel pulled between two choices. Tonight: Hang out with a friend.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Be careful with your spending. You could cause yourself a problem out of the blue. Confusion might surround a friendship. This person's expectation doesn't mesh with your ideas. Somehow, a misunderstanding has been brewing without your knowledge. Tonight: A talk is inevitable.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ You find your energy and seem to be on top of your game. You might not intend to cause confusion, but somehow you do it anyway. Just when you get a situation straightened out, you have a surprise of sorts. Tonight: Be willing to start sorting through a mess.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ Know when to pull back and do something totally new. The time to start a project isn't now. Take in information, do research and ask yourself just how involved you want to be. Your honesty now can make or break this matter. Tonight: Vanish while you can.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Circle the wagons around a key goal or long-term desire. You are more in touch with your goals than you have been in a long time. A partner could misinterpret your words and actions. Try to be as clear as possible. Tonight: Where the action is.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Take a stand and be willing to lead others. Far more people respect you and your decisions than you thought. Try to clarify rather than stay on the same course. You need for others to understand your ideas. Tonight: Till the wee hours.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ Keep reaching out for more information. At some point, you might feel that all the facts are creating more confusion. Actually, there is a discrepancy in the story, which is why there is an element of chaos. Tonight: Detach; take a deep breath. Think and look carefully at information.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Dialogue closely with partners or key associates. You'll feel far more connected and understand where others are coming from. It really doesn't matter what you are talking about; there is a sense of unity. Tonight: Go for a close encounter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Others seek you out. The reasons might be all over the place, but the fact remains -- you are needed and desired, and your opinions are respected. Be willing to make an extra effort. A family issue or matter involving real estate or your home needs handling. Tonight: Do what you want with who you want.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Keep your nose to the grindstone if you have any fantasy of having some extra free time. Clearly, an associate or someone in your day-to-day life could make a situation more confusing without intending to. Tonight: Burning the midnight oil.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Your playful, creative personality emerges. You feel as if there is nothing you cannot handle. Share your vision of possibilities with someone who doesn't have the same perspective. Lighten this person's day and help him or her see life differently. Tonight: So what if it is Monday?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Understand that certain limits are self-imposed. In fact, some of you might not even think a thought that would take you past these long-term boundaries. The real issue is, How reasonable are they? Please evaluate. Tonight: Purchase a new item for your wardrobe.

Happy birthday

This year, an aura of confusion surrounds communication. You could be exhausted from having to clear up misunderstandings often. Learn techniques like echoing, confirming, etc. Ultimately, you can only gain. Vagueness surrounds work, which could make you uncomfortable. If you are single, your willingness to step up to the plate and assume responsibility catches someone's eye this year. You might want to explore what kind of tie exists between the two of you. If you are attached, the two of you will need to make time for each other, as work or another responsibility demands so much of your time. TAURUS can demand a lot.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ The New York Yankees' Derek Jeter achieved his milestone 3,000th major league hit in July, and Steiner Sports Marketing of New Rochelle, N.Y., was ready (in partnership with the Yankees and Major League Baseball). Dozens of items from the game were offered to collectors, including the bases ($7,500 each), 30 balls used during the game ($2,000 each, unsigned), and even Jeter's sweaty socks ($1,000). Steiner had also collected five gallons of dirt (under supervision, to assure authenticity), and uberfans can buy half-ounce containers of clay walked upon by Jeter during the game (from the shortstop area and the right-hand batter's box) -- for a not-dirt-cheap $250 each.

■ Military veteran Joshua Price, 26, was arrested in March after police in a Chicago suburb found child pornography and 1,700 photos of dismembered women on his computer, but at a court hearing in May, Price explained that his photographs were a necessary escape from war-related trauma. In fact, Price told prosecutors that were it not for the distracting photos, his stress disorder would surely have caused him to kill his wife and two daughters. (Prosecutors accepted that Price's crime was a "cry for help," but the judge, less impressed, quadrupled Price's bail, to $1 million.)
