Council wants rising tenant complaints addressed

BY DAVID MARK SIMPSON
Daily Press Staff Writer

CITY HALL When tenants complain in a city that's majority renters, elected officials listen.

Tenant harassment complaints nearly doubled in the last fiscal year, which ended earlier this month, city attorneys told City Council on Tuesday. Councilmembers gave the attorneys a list of suggestions for potentially solving the problems.

"In the previous four years the number had stayed fairly constant other than one large case (Village Trailer Park) that doubled in the previous fiscal year," said Adam Radinsky of City Hall's Consumer Protection Unit.

"There are undoubtedly greater pressures than we've seen in many years due to the real estate market rebounding," he said. "Rents are going higher than they have in quite

Several large palm trees have been cut down in the Santa Monica Place courtyard and the remaining stumps have been barricaded or covered with temporary tabletops. Mall visitors decried the loss of the trees that reached to the third floor but according to Senior Manager Shoshana Puccia, mall officials were told the trees were unhealthy. She said the trees would be replaced sometime in the future.

Man gets 15 years for 2008 killing

BY DAVID MARK SIMPSON
Daily Press Staff Writer

DOWNTOWN LOS ANGELES Daniel Becerril was sentenced to 15 years in state prison in July 23 for the 2008 killing of a Santa Monica man, according to Sgt. Rudy Camarena of the Santa Monica Police Department.

Becerril pleaded no contest to voluntary manslaughter, money laundering, and five counts of grand theft. He was ordered to pay $442,000 in restitution including $315,000 to the family of the murder victim, Alexander Merman.

Merman, 35, was found dead, covered in stab wounds, in his apartment on the 500 block of Montana Avenue in March of 2008. "The case initially had no leads, but an intensive investigation by SMPD detectives led them to Becerril who owed Merman over $550,000," Camarena said in a release. "The complex investigation revealed Becerril as the head of AP Financial Group in Orange County which was found to be involved in numerous cases of fraud and theft." Victims were believed to have been bilked out of millions of dollars, mostly through pyramid schemes, mortgage fraud, and retirement scams. "Merman and Becerril were friends and most of the money involved was loaned to Becerril by Merman to help him with his business," Camarena said. "Becerril promised to pay Merman back but never did."

Merman discovered Becerril's scheme and was killed shortly thereafter. Becerril, of Huntington Beach, was arrested in March of 2012 after evidence was taken from volumes of financial, cellular phone, computer and Internet records.

Bill Bauer's attack on Loren Drake

Editor:

As a 50 year resident in Santa Monica, a former parent of two Santa Monica High School students and a consultant for Student Support Services at LAUSD, I take offense at Bill Bauer's attack on Loren Drake

I had the privilege of working with Mr. Drake at two LAUSD schools - Fairfax High School when he was a Counselor and at John Burroughs Middle School when he was an Assistant Principal. Mr. Drake has been an active participant in the baseball careers of both of his sons - one who is a recent graduate of Santa Monica High School and one that will be a freshman in the coming year.

I do not know the reasons why Mr. Schwengel was fired but I do know that Mr. Drake is an athlete and an excellent advocate for our student population.

The new policy may be nonsense but this has nothing to do with the athletic competence of Mr. Drake. He is far from some "Joe" as referred to in Mr. Bauer's column.

Our park awaits us

Editor:

I was very interested to see Saturday's SMart Thinking column about Santa Monica's need for more parks.

In most modern cities at most times the creation of parks would be hampered by the lack of available, large-scale acreage.

Fortunately for us, the citizens of Santa Monica bought lots of land with a Parks bond in the 1920's.

That land is now covered by concrete and serves as an airport for the benefit of a very small few.

So let's take it back.

JUST CALL ME CARY: Oscar will be 13 in September.

The Cary Grant of Dogs

I FIRST MET OSCAR DE LA RASCAL 12 _ years ago. I was walking toward the tennis courts west of the Shores to go play a match when I saw him next to his owner, Colleen, a disabled neighbor of mine in her wheel chair heading home. A trained service dog, Oscar was just six months old but clever as a fox.

I got down on my knees and opened my arms to greet and hug Oscar. But he had other plans. Instead he sprinted right past me and dove headfirst into my open bag.

As if on a mission, Oscar furiously began shoveling the tennis balls onto the sidewalk until he found the exact one he wanted. Grumbling, I began putting the balls back into my bag as Oscar proudly held the coveted ball securely in his mouth.

The next day Colleen phoned to see if I might be available to walk Oscar regularly. I agreed, though given his rather rambunctious nature, I had my doubts. I didn't know the half of it.

Late that afternoon, as I walked with a tennis buddy, Michael, toward the Ocean View tennis facility my plan was to let Oscar off the leash in an unoccupied court, shut the gate and let him run. Sure enough, he dashed off hunting the loose tennis balls and especially those wedged behind the mesh windscreen. He barked like a car alarm until I got on my knees and worked them free for him. Even then, he had me working for him. Forget "Dog is man's best friend." It's more like "Man is a dog's best schlepper" as I was clearly Oscar's.

But when it came time to leave, Oscar wasn't interested. As Michael and I tried to fasten his leash, he easily darted away from us. This went on for 10 minutes, two seemingly grown men helplessly trying to outflank a six-month-old puppy that was having the time of his life.

Finally, Oscar gave up, perhaps out of pity. You see players on the other courts had begun laughing at our spectacular ineptitude.

As I walked Oscar back to the Shores I prepared the speech for Colleen. "It's not going to work out, Colleen, but we gave it the old college try, yada yada."

But before I could begin Colleen blurted out, "So did you want to walk Oscar every day?" She was in a wheel chair, how could I say no?

So the next day we tried again. This time I gave Oscar a stern lecture. "You're on probation, pal. One glitch, no more walks. Capiche?"

Oscar looked at me innocently as if to say, "Why didn't you just say so?" And remarkably from that moment on he was shockingly obedient. When it was time to go he trotted over dutifully as if to say, "See?"

Oscar will be 13 this September. He has arthritis and his back legs are giving out but he's still as handsome as ever. And he's still so tuned into humans you'd swear he was one. Over the years he and I have hiked all over the Santa Monica Mountains.

Unfortunately, we've gotten a few "off-leash" tickets, which prompted columns such as "Rebel with Four Paws," and "Oscar's Big Day in Court." (Charges were dismissed.)

Lastly, one summer night Michael, Oscar and I were walking to the pier. On the grass across from the Loew's Hotel, I threw the tennis ball for Oscar to fetch. Unfortunately, it bounced over the fence and into a huge construction pit as they were building condos.

Oscar barked his head off. He got the attention of a security guard who seemed like a recent immigrant. He noted there was a hole in the fence. Hey, there was no freakin' way was I crawling into that pit.

Twenty minutes later on our way back from the pier, suddenly Oscar took off running like he was obsessed. He made a left at the pit. Michael and I chased after him but by the time we got there he had completely vanished.

I was frantic. What the hell would I tell Colleen? Then, in the darkness, crouched behind the fence, I saw green eyes staring at me. Oscar! Somehow he had found the hole in the fence and was proudly holding his tennis ball! Michael and I had totally forgotten the ball but obviously he hadn't. Had he understood the security guard's broken English? It was absurd and yet…

The next day, Michael confessed that he hadn't gotten a thing done at work. He'd been too busy telling co-workers about the amazing Oscar de la Rascal. But now that he's old and distinguished, you can call him Cary.

Fault maps are in the works

BY DAVID MARK SIMPSON
Daily Press Staff Writer

CITYWIDE It's a seismic year for Santa Monica.

In the 20th year since the destructive Northridge Earthquake, city officials announced they would assess buildings that might need seismic upgrades and now the California Geological Survey (CGS) is mapping the fault lines in the city by the sea.

The Alquist-Priolo Earthquake Fault Zones allow the state to regulate development built near faults. Santa Monica doesn't have one yet but it's in the works as of July 1.

City planners claim that even without the zones they are overly cautious about faults when approving new development.

These zones take time and money to identify and a lack of state funding slowed the process to a standstill earlier this year. Santa Monica was slated to get a zone of its own but, until Gov. Jerry Brown signed the budget earlier this month, there was no money for it.

The work starts in the office said Tim McCrink, a supervising engineering geologist with CGS.

"We are going to be looking at any geographic maps and early publications that describe the faults and we're going to compile that stuff in the office," he said. "We're going to look at the aerial photography and we're going to take modern base maps and draw our impression of where that fault is. Then we'll go in the field and see if we can document what we're seeing with all that previous information."

Geologists have to track down aerial photographs from the 1920s and '30s. This allows them to see what the land looked like before it was scraped for the construction of new homes. They are looking for subtle breaks in the ground or notable slopes.

Particularly valuable are aerial photos that have stereo-overlap, McCrink said. When viewed with special glasses, it allows the geologists to see the ground in 3-D.

"That three dimensional view gives us better inclination of where the ground surface changes shape, which is an indication of what may have occurred," he said.

Then there's the stuff underground.

"We look for any kind of subsurface investigations that have occurred over the years, whether they be fault trenches of even geotechnical boreholes," McCrink said, "things that we can use to try to understand the subsurface stratigraphy to see where there are breaks in that stratigraphy that would indicate the presence of the fault. "

Many of the details are visible to the trained eye, he said.

"Some parts of faults that we're looking at have a pretty clear topographic signature," he said. "You can see that today. Driving down the street you wouldn't really notice that the building on your right is a little bit higher than the road, but it's those kinds of things that we look for in the presence of a fault."

Once established, any developer looking to build within a fault zone must contract a study of the plot to see if it rests directly on the trace of a fault. If it does, they can't build.

McCrink does not have an estimate as to when the process might be completed but he told the Daily Press to check back early next year.

Police to pay $1.8M for Dorner manhunt shooting

Associated Press

TORRANCE A surfer who was hurt when a Los Angeles-area police officer rammed and shot up his truck during the manhunt for cop-turned-killer Christopher Dorner will receive $1.8 million to dismiss his federal lawsuit, police said Thursday.

The Torrance Police Department announced its settlement with David Perdue in a news release that also stated the Los Angeles County district attorney's office cleared all its officers involved in the incident of any criminal wrongdoing.

They found that the "circumstances created a situation in which a reasonable mistake of fact, namely that Dorner was driving the truck, nearly resulted in a horrific tragedy."

David Perdue, 38, was driving his black Honda pickup early Feb. 7 on his way to pick up a friend to go surfing when he was stopped by officers looking for Dorner, an ex-Los Angeles police officer who had promised to bring "warfare" to his former department's officers and their families.

Authorities say Dorner killed four people, including two law enforcement officers, during a weeklong rampage that involved a massive manhunt that ended in his death.

At the time officers stopped Perdue, Dorner had already killed two people, and officers throughout the area were protecting people he had named as targets. Authorities believed Dorner was driving a pickup, although it was a different make and color than Perdue's truck.

The officers who stopped Perdue asked him a few questions and told him to turn around and go back the way he came, according to his lawsuit.

Soon after, a second police car driving toward Perdue rammed his pickup, and multiple officers riddled it with bullets. Perdue wasn't shot but suffered head and spine injuries.

Torrance police say they've reviewed their procedures and training since the shooting and "implemented specific skill-building activities."

"The Torrance Police Department is very sympathetic to the disruption this incident caused our community and to all involved. We truly appreciate the high level of public trust that our community and region have in the Torrance Police Department," the department said in a statement.

The Perdue shooting was not the only case of mistaken identity that morning. Two women delivering newspapers in Torrance were also shot at by Los Angeles police officers; the city reached a $4.2 million settlement with the women in April in addition to the $40,000 settlement for the loss of their pickup truck.

Obama visits with nonprofit head, ex-gang members

TAMI ABDOLLAH
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) President Barack Obama met privately Thursday with four former gang members and the head of a Los Angeles nonprofit that is helping them turn around their lives.

The brief meeting with Homeboy Industries founder Father Gregory Boyle and the four teenagers who all served time for their gang-related activities took place after Obama's speech at Los Angeles Trade-Technical College.

The teens stood in a semi-circle and the president approached each one, asked his name and age, and took a picture with him.

Obama then gave them a short pep talk, telling them how he had been raised by a single mother who was 18 when he was born, and how he used to get in trouble, Boyle said.

The teens that met with Obama were Jhonny Iglecias and Raymond Maldanado, both 18, and Herbert McKinley and Anthony Swift, both 19.

"I never thought I was ever going to meet the president in my life," said Swift, who was serving time a year ago. He said meeting the president was exhilarating. "He was a cool guy - he was kind of funny, and just like us."

McKinley was still aglow afterward because the president had complimented him on the scraggily beard he's growing - the one Boyle and the other teens had tried to get him to shave before the meeting.

"The president says 'I couldn't grow a beard like that at 19. But I couldn't even grow a beard like that today,'" Boyle said. The comment prompted McKinley to look to Boyle, vindicated.

The gathering was part of Obama's "My Brother's Keeper" initiative, which aims to connect youth to mentors and support networks to gain skills to get a job or go to college.

As the president prepared to leave, he said, "'Well, I've got to go back to work,'" Boyle recalled. "'The work never stops. So no shortcuts.'"

Those last few words stuck with Swift.

"The way I live my life, I always try to go the easy way out," Swift said. "But the way he became president wasn't the easy way, so OK, to get what I want I know I've got to really buckle down."

Also at the meeting were U.S. Secretary of Labor Thomas Perez, the president's senior adviser Valerie Jarrett, Congresswoman Karen Bass and state Assemblyman Steven Bradford.

Presidential Lunch

Prior to his remarks at Los Angeles Trade Technical College, the President met for lunch at Canter's Deli - a family-owned LA landmark since 1931 - with four Americans who wrote to him. The White House said the lunch continues the President's efforts to meet with folks from across the country to listen to their stories, struggles, and successes.

Participants included:

Katrice Mubiru, who also introduced the President at Los Angeles Trade Technical College. In January of 2012, Mubiru, a career-technical education teacher for the Los Angeles unified school district, sent a note encouraging the President to support adult and career technical education. Mubiru is a Los Angeles native who graduated from California State University Long Beach. She is married and has a nine-year-old daughter and a seven year old son.

In March, Aaron Anderson wrote to the President to share his story as a recent UC Irvine graduate in anticipation of the President's commencement address at his alma mater. Aaron joined the Green Berets after 9/11 and was wounded in Afghanistan. After returning home he founded the Green Beret Foundation to provide resources for Special Forces veterans affected by their service. Today he is working at a bond trading company. He is married and has a two-year-old baby. The President recognized Aaron's service and shared his story in his UC Irvine remarks.

In April, Joan Waddell wrote to the President about the need to make grants or funds available for vocational training for older workers. At age 60, Joan is beginning anew and would like to become a certified nurse assistant, but is having trouble affording the certification program. Waddell is a mother of a 24-year-old daughter and two sons, 26 and 22.

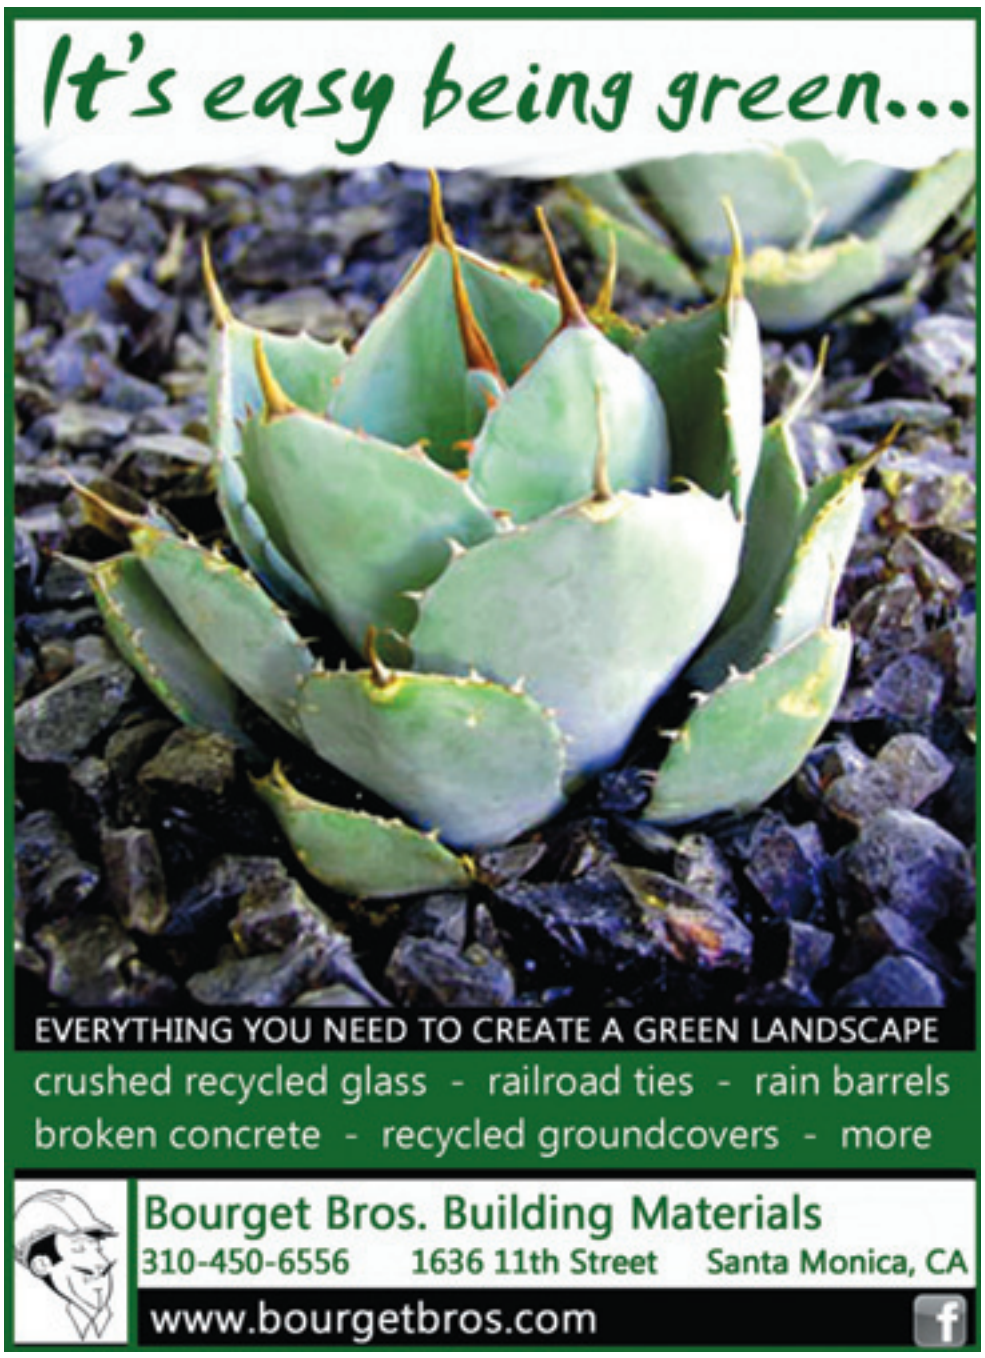

In March, Kati Koster wrote to the President about the challenges she and many other young professionals face trying to build a career. Koster has a Master of Public Policy Degree from Pepperdine University, but has had to make sacrifices to balance her student loans, rent and monthly bills. As the first in her family to graduate college, Koster believes that someone who works hard and plays by rules should be able to find more opportunities to get ahead. The White House said the President agrees.

RadioShack Santa Monica was filled with teens July 23 as they hosted a meet and greet and performance by singer/songwriter Lily Lane (known for her recent Pretty Little Liars single "Nothin' But Trouble") and Youtube sensation Orion Carloto.

Lily and Orion then took to the stage to perform covers of songs like "Royals", Iggy Azalea hit "Fancy" and Lily Lane originals like "Nothin' But Trouble" and "I Get High". Lily was accompanied on guitar by good friend Evan Stanley, son of KISS guitarist Paul Stanley.

some time and there are also a consistent number of owners coming into the city purchasing rental properties, many of whom aren't familiar with the laws."

City attorneys are not sure if the spike is an aberration or the beginning of a trend, Radinsky said.

While complaints are up, that number does not correlate directly to the number of violations.

"One of the classes of cases that we've seen increasing in the past year are cases where there's an owner who is looking to remove tenants from a building legally, whether it's by enforcing lease provisions that have not gone enforced for some time and in some cases, cases that would constitute violations of the harassment ordinance, trumping up charges against tenants," Radinsky told council.

Landlords might pretend not to have received a payment and use that as a means of eviction. They might pretend to serve notices that haven't actually been served.

"Those are the kind of cases that we consider most serious and that we put the most resources into in terms of larger scale investigations," Radinsky said.

Radinsky assured council that they look into every case, no matter how large or small.

A representative from Santa Monicans for Renters' Rights, who monitors their tenant hotline, said he no longer refers callers to the city attorneys, stating, among other things, that they take too long to investigate a complaint. A representative from the Legal Aid Foundation of Los Angeles concurred.

When council asked if bolstering the Consumer Protection Unit, which is currently staffed by one half-time and two full-time attorneys, would speed things up, Radinsky was unsure.

"We do applaud the effort of council recently to fund an additional attorney position with Legal Aid because, whether these actions by landlords always violate the law or not, there's no question that tenants who are facing eviction, especially those who can't afford an attorney, are often facing an uneven playing field," he said.

Councilmember Kevin McKeown suggested that attorneys look into the point at which ongoing construction should be a means for temporary relocation of a tenant.

"Because otherwise it's used as a means for harassment for the tenants," he said. "Homeowners complain all the time about how it took a contractor 15 months to finish the work but when that happens and you're a renter, you have no recourse at all and you're living with a wall that's been torn open from plumbing and stays that way for months."

Councilmember Gleam Davis suggested several options, including a City Hall-funded advocacy group for tenants, a requirement that tenants' rights be posted in common areas within apartments, and a requirement that all relocation offers are provided in writing.

City attorneys promised to address the suggestions within 60 to 90 days. They will hold an informational forum about tenant-landlord issues in that fall and will pen a monthly column in the Daily Press.

Investor Service and Standard & Poor's, respectively. Officials said the good ratings would help with the long-term success of the sale.

"Hopefully it means that our bonds are more attractive to the investment community," said CBO Janece Maez "We're excited about the good rating because it would mean lower interest rates to investors and therefore lower cost to the property owners who repay the bonds. It's lower interest rates, lower costs and it makes sure the bonds are fully sold because they are a better investment with a better rating."

Both ratings agencies cited the district's solid finances, the strength of the local tax base and strong community support.

"Standard & Poor's and Moody's reaffirmed what Santa Monica-Malibu parents and our community already know: SMMUSD schools are a great investment," said PTA Council President Rochelle Fanali in a statement. "Our students are fortunate to be supported by a community that is so strongly committed to their success. And, as our school district makes its spending plans for these bonds to improve classroom facilities, it's great to know that strong community support also translates into real savings."

District officials said the credit ratings put the District in the ranks of other impressive districts that hold these stellar ratings, such as the Beverly Hill USD, Newport-Mesa USD, and Palo Alto USD.

"The continuance of our excellent credit ratings is a testament to this district's commitment to maintaining its fiscal strength, so we can best serve our students in the challenging economic environment," said Superintendent Sandra Lyon in a statement.

Measure "ES" is a $385 million construction bond affirmed by the voters in November 2012, with focus on improving academic instruction, school safety, and technology of Santa Monica and Malibu schools. The first series will be for about $30 million and will help fund the planning and prioritization of other bond projects.

"There is a previous bond and there were a number of plans and designs that were done to upgrade our elementary sites, so those will be considered as we move forward. There's also a great need identified at Santa Monica High School, so there will be projects most likely funded there," said Maez.

She said part of the money would also go to pay for technology upgrades throughout the district such as wireless access points and new computers.

Maez said decisions about spending priorities would be made in conjunction with the community.

"There is an allocation within the bond that we will be prioritized by the district in collaboration with a group in the Malibu community. Typically what we do with our bonds is we have a lot of community input, we move forward to identity the actual projects that we're going to do. Right now, there may be some of the planning money spent for both Malibu and for Samohi and the elementary sites here throughout the district."

After much movement, stocks end where they began

KEN SWEET
AP Markets Writer

NEW YORK Only Wall Street could make the buying and selling of more than 3 billion shares look like nothing happened.

Major U.S. stock indexes ended roughly where they began Thursday, despite investors having to work through a busy day of corporate earnings and two economic reports.

Underneath the flat surface, there was a lot of movement in individual companies. "It's a stock-specific market right now," said Ryan Larson, head of equity trading at RBC Global Asset Management.

Facebook's stock rose 5 percent while Caterpillar's fell 3 percent after the companies each reported quarterly results.

The Dow Jones industrial average edged down 2.83 points, or 0.02 percent, to close at 17,083.80. It was the fourth-smallest point move in the blue chips this year. The Nasdaq fell 1.59 points, or 0.4 percent, to 4,472.11.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index managed to rise 0.97 of a point, or 0.05 percent, to 1,987.98 - a record, though barely. The day before, the S&P 500 closed at 1,987.01.

Three billion shares changed hands on the New York Stock Exchange Thursday, a quieter-than-average day.

Facebook rose $3.69 to $74.98 after announcing a profit that trounced investors' expectations. The company reported an adjusted profit of 42 cents per share versus the 33 cents analysts were looking for, according to a poll by Zacks Investment Research. Mobile advertising, a crucial business for the world's largest social media company, saw major growth.

"It was a very impressive quarter on top of what we believe were very high Street expectations," said Paul Vogel, an analyst with Barclays Capital, in a note to investors.

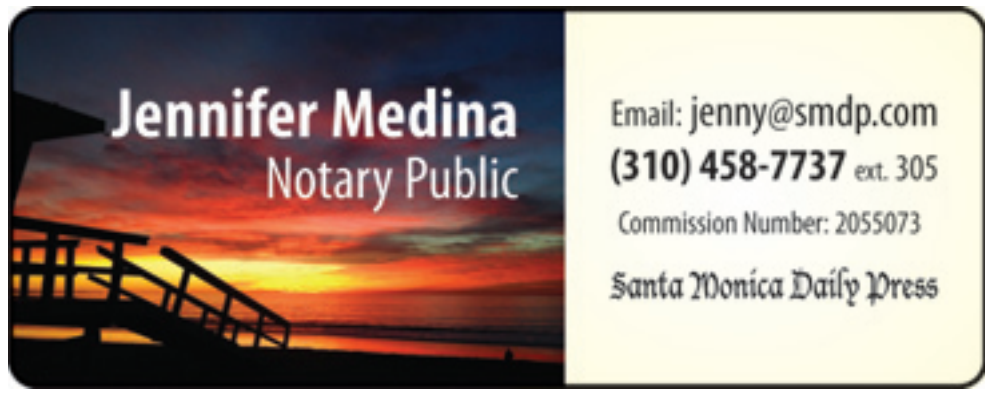

Dow member Caterpillar fell $3.34 to $105.04, making it the biggest decliner among the 30 companies that make up the average. The equipment maker's quarterly revenue fell short of forecasts.

Homebuilder stocks slid after the government reported that new home sales sagged 8.1 percent last month. The report also revised down the May sales rate. Shares of Pulte Homes and KB Home fell 3 percent while Toll Brothers fell 4 percent. D.R. Horton quarterly results also dragged down homebuilders. Its profit dropped, and the stock price fell $2.86, or 12 percent, to $21.94.

Another industry that got a lot of attention was autos. Ford rose 6 cents, or 0.3 percent, to $17.84 after reporting a 6 percent increase in second-quarter profit. The automaker was helped by increased sales in Europe. General Motors fell $1.67, or 4.5 percent, to $35.74 after announcing an 85-percent drop in quarterly earnings. The company is in the midst of the worst recall crisis in its history.

Investors got some good news about jobs. The Labor Department reported weekly applications for unemployment aid dropped 19,000 to a seasonally adjusted 284,000 claims. That's the lowest reading since February 2006, nearly two years before the Great Recession began.

In other markets, the yield on the 10-year Treasury note nudged up to 2.51 percent from 2.47 percent late Wednesday. Bond yields rise when prices fall. U.S. crude oil fell $1.05, or 1 percent, to $102.07 a barrel in New York.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card℠ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A-F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Heal the Bay is a nonprofit environmental organization making Southern California coastal waters and watersheds, including Santa Monica Bay, safe, healthy and clean. We use science, education, community action and advocacy to pursue our mission.

Smith plans to meet soon with Commissioner Goodell

Associated Press

SANTA CLARA San Francisco 49ers linebacker Aldon Smith expects to sit down with NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell "in the near future" to discuss any potential suspension for his off-field issues.

Smith was sentenced last Friday to serve three years of probation and to spend 11 days with a work crew after he pleaded no contest to drunken driving and weapons charges. Smith said he hasn't had time to begin the work yet, and will do so as his time permits.

Of the ruling, Smith said he is "glad how it worked out." He didn't want to guess whether he would face a suspension from the league, and said he is unsure whether Ravens running back Ray Rice's two-game penalty Thursday for his off-season arrest for domestic violence provides any indication.

"I'm glad it's behind me. I'm ready to move on ... I've never been in this situation so I'm not going to speculate," Smith said of possible punishment. "I know I'm meeting with him in the near future - as soon as possible. We don't have a solid date, so I'm not sure."

Smith said he has been sober since entering rehab last year following his Sept. 20 DUI arrest. He underwent treatment at an in-patient facility and missed five games. Coach Jim Harbaugh was asked Thursday whether he thought the NFL might take the rehab stint into account as time served.

"Going through a process, which is, there's accountability for some mistakes made. And also he's been given the opportunity to do what he says he's going to do. So far he's doing that," Harbaugh said. "That's in their hands. They will discipline if they warrant it."

Tight end Vernon Davis said before the team's first practice that his desire for a new contract is no longer a focus and he will leave that to the team and his agent to discuss.

"That's in the past, I'm not really worried about the contract," he said. "That's between the team and my agent. That's not my focus right now. My focus is out here, trying to get better."

For Smith, he hopes 2014 is a fresh start - and he insists he is in the best shape ever entering his fourth NFL season.

In his latest run-in with the law, Smith was arrested April 13 at Los Angeles International Airport. Police said the 24-year-old Smith was randomly selected for a secondary screening and became uncooperative with the process, telling a TSA agent that he had a bomb.

In November, he pleaded not guilty to three felony counts of illegal possession of an assault weapon, stemming from a June 2012 party at his home. Investigators said several shots were fired, two partygoers were injured and Smith was stabbed. In the subsequent investigation, prosecutors say detectives found five unregistered, illegal weapons in Smith's house.

Yet, what Smith brings on the field makes him one of the NFL's best at pressuring quarterbacks.

Smith emerged as one of the league's most-feared pass rushers in 2012. He had a franchise-record 19 1/2 sacks that year, but failed to record a sack in his final six games including the team's postseason Super Bowl run.

Smith finished with 8 1/2 sacks and 34 tackles in 11 games last season, making eight starts. His 42 sacks are second-most in the NFL since he entered the league.

Harbaugh, for one, is only thinking about another year and another opportunity for success after three straight seasons coming oh so close.

"It's like it's your own birthday. It's a family reunion. It's like a rebirth, feel like you come out of the womb and reborn into football," Harbaugh said in his first news conference at new Levi's Stadium. "And definitely having Vernon there added to that."

SEIZE THE MOMENT, PISCES

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ You'll veer in a different direction and surprise others. You also will relate directly to each person you need to speak to. Don't allow someone else to convey your message for you. Tonight: A discussion could become a bit too animated.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ You might feel antsy. Do some yoga exercises or take a brisk walk at lunchtime. Communication between you and others will be clear. You won't have to question what message was intended. Tonight: Walk away from a friend who is set on having an argument.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Your high energy could be difficult to tame, even for you. If you continue on your present path, your fatigue will eventually catch up with you. Use care in a conversation with someone in your daily life. Tonight: Invite a pal to join you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You smile, and others come toward you. You might feel as if you are in a safe space. Still, you could receive a jolt through a call. Wait until tomorrow to act, when your tune will be totally different. Tonight: A new flirtation could be touchy and difficult.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ You might want to continue maintaining a low-profile for one more day. By saying little, you are forcing someone else's hand. Choose to evaluate your thoughts later. A domestic matter or repair to your home cannot be postponed any longer. Tonight: With a favorite person.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ A loved one suddenly might seem offkilter. How you deal with this person could make him or her more open to sharing in the future. There has been some rigidity between you for a while. Make time to get together with friends in the late evening. Tonight: Where the fun is.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Today you'll end a cycle that began in December 2013, which ultimately had to do with your self-expression; however, you still might feel a bit reserved about a money matter. Tonight: You have a reason to celebrate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ If you have been holding back and trying not to get into a volatile situation, you might not be able to cork your anger much longer. Mars -- the planet that rules energy, anger and sex -- enters your sign today. Clearing the air will be important. Tonight: Try not to be sarcastic!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You seem to have the magic touch when it comes to relating to certain individuals right now. A loved one could continue acting somewhat eccentric. Maintain a sense of humor. Tonight: Start with TGIF.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You might be giving a lot of thought to what you want. Sometimes people find you to be rather taciturn. You have seen multiple reactions like this, and you tend to see them as humorous. Tonight: A friend clearly lets you know what he or she wants.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ A discussion could occur with someone you hardly speak to. You might find this person's thoughts to be very interesting, especially when the topic is a project you both have in common. Make a point of visiting him or her more often. Tonight: Avoid a difficult loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You'll be on top of a situation, but others might not realize it. Someone could start lecturing, as if he or she were a professor. Maintain your sense of humor when dealing with this person. A loved one might share what he or she feels is a great idea. Tonight: Seize the moment.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS
The stars show the kind of day you'll have:
★★★★★Dynamic ★★ So-So
★★★★ Positive ★ Difficult
★★★ Average

This year you discover that you have a muse that often inspires you. You come up with unusually creative ideas that, for the most part, prove to be rewarding. You are prone to having sudden insights that open up new opportunities. If you are single, someone could stroll into your life who might be worth getting to know. Maintain a sense of humor, and you will be OK. If you are attached, the two of you have a shared desire to take a special trip or do something quite unique together. This year would be perfect for such an adventure. SCORPIO often goes from being reserved to being feisty. Strap on your seat belt.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ (1) Until the New York governor and legislature addressed the problem recently, it was legal in the state for narcissistic animal owners to force their dogs and cats to endure permanent, decorative tattoos and piercings. At press time, Gov. Andrew Cuomo was poised to sign legislation abolishing the tattooing. (2) Kayla Oxenham, 23, was arrested in Port Charlotte, Florida, in June and charged with using a stick to burn "brands" into the skin of her two children, ages 5 and 7. Among her explanations to police: so she could identify them as being hers and because she "forgot how much she loved fire."

■ A 60-year-old man with a blood clot has recovered, but no thanks to the driver for the South Western Ambulance Service who was ferrying him on a long trip to the emergency room of Derriford Hospital in Plymouth, England, on April 6. The patient's family later reported that the driver had stopped en route to pick up two hitchhikers -- one a young woman in a "skimpy skirt" -- and take them to an on-the-way town. The patient, in pain with his toes starting to blacken, eventually had his blood flow restored and did not lose the leg. He reported that the two riders were friendly and wanted to chat about his condition (though he was in no mood).
