Downtown Target returns for second review at ARB in August

TARGET: Planners like the idea of a Target downtown but dislike some of the design elements such as the red highlight walls and some of the larger signage on the side of the building.

Daily Press Editor

A revised plan to open a Target store in Downtown will have a new hearing before the Architectural Review Board (ARB) in August.

At the August 19 meeting, Commissioners will see a revised plan from the company after its initial plans were criticized for using cheap looking materials and including too much store branding.

As originally proposed, the project will occupy the former Fred Segal building at the corner of 5th and Broadway with a goal of opening in 2020. The store will be a 24,000 square feet retail space in a building that retailer Fred Segal vacated in March 2016. Renderings of the location show a one-story building with wood paneling and windows facing the street.

While officials have praised the idea of a store at the location, the process has already encountered a few speedbumps. The initial hearing for the store was postponed in May of this year due to a clerical error and when the project did make it to a hearing, ARB Commissioners were not happy with the design.

The store would be Target's first foray into Santa

Cheaper camping options could be coming to the popular Dockweiler State Beach if Coastal Commission approves an application from Los Angeles County to add 19 spaces for tent-campers.

County Supervisors recently approved rate increases for a variety of services across County owned coastal property. The August discussion isn't directly related to those rate increases

T-Mobile's $26.5B Sprint deal OKed despite competition fears

TALI ARBEL AND MARCY GORDON
Associated Press

U.S. regulators have approved T-Mobile's $26.5 billion takeover of rival Sprint, despite fears of higher prices and job cuts, in a deal that would leave just three major cellphone companies in the country.

Friday's approval from the Justice Department and five state attorneys general comes after Sprint and T-Mobile agreed to conditions that would set up satellite-TV provider Dish as a smaller rival to Verizon, AT&T and the combined T-Mobile-Sprint company. The Justice Department's antitrust chief, Makan Delrahim, said the conditions set up Dish "as a disruptive force in wireless."

But attorneys general from other states and public-interest advocates say that Dish is hardly a replacement for Sprint as a stand-alone company and that the conditions fail to address the competitive harm the deal causes: higher prices, job losses and fewer choices for consumers.

"By signing off on this merger, the Justice Department has done nothing to remedy the short- and long-term harms the loss of an independent Sprint will create for U.S. wireless users," Free Press Research Director S. Derek Turner said.

A federal judge still must sign off on the approval, as the two companies' settlement with Justice includes conditions for them. The Federal Communications Commission is expected to also give the takeover its blessing.

Dish is paying $5 billion for Sprint's prepaid cellphone brands including Boost and Virgin Mobile — about 9 million customers — and some spectrum, or airwaves for wireless service, from the two companies. Dish will also be able to rent T-Mobile's network for seven years while it builds its own.

Dish on Friday promised the FCC that it would build a nationwide network using next-generation "5G" technology by June 2023. But Dish is promising speeds that are only slightly higher than what's typical today, even though 5G promises the potential for blazing speeds.

The Trump administration has not been consistent in its approach to media and telecom mergers. While the government went to court to block AT&T's acquisition of Time Warner and then lost, the Justice Department allowed Disney to buy much of 21st Century Fox, a direct competitor, with only minor asset sales to get the deal done. Mergers between direct competitors have historically had a higher bar to clear at the Justice Department.

Sprint and T-Mobile combined would now approach the size of Verizon and AT&T. The companies have argued that bulking up will mean a better next-generation "5G" wireless network than either could build on its own. Sprint and T-Mobile have argued for over a year that having one big company to challenge AT&T and Verizon, rather than two smaller companies, will be better for U.S. consumers.

The two companies tried to combine during the Obama administration but regulators rebuffed them. They resumed talks on combining once President Donald Trump took office, hoping for more industry-friendly regulators. The companies appealed to Trump's desire for the U.S. to "win" a global 5G race with China as this faster, more reliable wireless is rolled out and applications are built for it. They have been arguing their case for more than a year.

Meanwhile, the FCC agreed in May to back the deal after T-Mobile promised to build out rural broadband and 5G to nearly all the country, sell its Boost prepaid brand and keep prices on hold for three years.

But critics say that's not enough.

Attorneys general from 13 states and the District of Columbia have filed a lawsuit to block the deal . They say the promised benefits, such as better networks in rural areas and faster service overall, cannot be verified. They also worry that eliminating a major wireless company will immediately harm consumers by reducing competition and driving up prices for cellphone service.

None of the states involved in the suit were part of Friday's settlement. "We have serious concerns that cobbling together this new fourth mobile player, with the government picking winners and losers, will not address the merger's harm to consumers, workers, and innovation," New York Attorney General Letitia James said in a statement.

T-Mobile CEO John Legere said Friday that he believes the deal can close by the end

US cyberbullying is rising, and girls are bearing the brunt

SALLY HO
Associated Press

Rachel Whalen remembers feeling gutted in high school when a former friend would mock her online postings, threaten to unfollow or unfriend her on social media and post inside jokes about her to others online.

The cyberbullying was so distressing that Whalen said she contemplated suicide. Once she got help, she decided to limit her time on social media. It helps to take a break from it for perspective, said Whalen, now a 19-year-old college student in Utah.

There's a rise in cyberbullying nationwide, with three times as many girls reporting being harassed online or by text message than boys, according to the National Center for Education Statistics.

The U.S. Department of Education's research and data arm this month released its latest survey, which shows an uptick in online abuse, though the overall number of students who report being bullied stayed the same.

"There's just some pressure in that competitive atmosphere that is all about attention," Whalen said. "This social media acceptance — it just makes sense to me that it's more predominant amongst girls."

Many school systems that once had a hands-off approach to dealing with off-campus student behavior are now making cyberbullying rules, outlining punishments such as suspension or expulsion, according to Bryan Joffe, director of education and youth development at AASA, a national school superintendents association.

That change partly came along with broader cyberbullying laws, which have been adopted in states like Texas and California in recent years.

The survey showed about 20%, or one in five students, reported being bullied, ranging from rumors or being excluded to threats and physical attacks in the 2016-17 school year. That's unchanged from the previous survey done in 2014-15.

But in that two-year span, cyberbullying reports increased significantly, from 11.5% to 15.3%.

Broken down by gender, 21% of girls in middle and high school reported being bullied online or by text message in the 2016-17 school year, compared with less than 7% of boys.

That's up from the previous survey in 2014-15, the first time cyberbullying data was collected this specifically. Back then, about 16% of girls between 12 and 18 said they were bullied online, compared with 6% of boys.

The survey does not address who the aggressors are, though girls were more likely to note that their bullies were perceived to have the ability to influence others.

Lauren Paul, founder of the Kind Campaign, said 90% of the stories she hears while working in schools are of girls bullied by other girls. The California-based nonprofit launched a decade ago to focus on "girl against girl" bullying through free educational programming that reaches about 300 schools a year.

Paul recalls meeting one girl who was obsessive about her social media accounts because a group of girls excluded her if she did not get enough likes or follows in any given week. She went so far as to painstakingly create fake profiles just to meet her quota.

"Most of the time — if not almost all the time — it's about what's going on with other girls," Paul said. "It's this longing to be accepted by their female peers specifically and feeling broken if they don't."

Though Paul primarily hosts assemblies and workshop exercises at middle and high schools, she said there's been more demand to help younger and older students in recent years. The Kind Campaign has gotten more requests for elementary school presentations and now also regularly gets called to universities to work with sororities.

The latest national data may spark new conversations about "Mean Girls" behavior, Joffe said, referring to 2004 movie starring Lindsay Lohan.

"It's a school issue, but it's just a reflection of broader societal issues," Joffe said. "I'm not sure schools have any better answer than say, the Twitter company or Facebook. They're also trying to find answers to what to do about abuses online."

Some tech companies also are taking a stab at what seems like an intractable problem.

Instagram unveiled its latest feature this month that uses artificial intelligence to try to stop abuse. Users typing a potentially offensive comment on a photo or video will get a notification that reads: "Are you sure you want to post this?"

Many school districts, meanwhile, are beefing up social-emotional learning curriculum beyond just teaching children how to share and express their feelings in the early grades.

That's something Manuela Slye, a Seattle mother with three teenagers, says is a must to prevent cyberbullying. The president of the Seattle Council Parent Teacher Student Association called on her school district to expand its "soft skills" lessons through high school, as is done in a neighboring school district.

Seattle Public Schools is working to expand such offerings, though a district spokesman said there hasn't been a noted rise in cyberbullying among its students.

"There needs to be social-emotional development teaching before it goes to cyberbullying, before it goes to doing something online and anonymously, and before you have a problem with someone," Slye said.

Impeachment unsettled as Democrats enter post-Mueller moment

LISA MASCARO AND MARY CLARE JALONICK
Associated Press

Midway through the first year of their House majority, Democrats have yet to vote to impeach President Donald Trump. And maybe they never will.

The House recessed Friday for a six-week summer break without opening impeachment proceedings, the Democrats no closer to taking a vote than they were when they swept to power at the start of the year, a searing blow to liberals in the aftermath of former special counsel Robert Mueller's halting testimony on Capitol Hill.

Yet, the House Judiciary Committee filed a fresh lawsuit Friday, its lawyers arguing they need documents from the Trump administration as they pursue questions of impeachment. It mentions the word impeachment 76 times.

The committee chairman, Rep. Jerrold Nadler of New York, said his panel is pressing ahead with investigating the president, with or without a formal House vote.

"I think too much has been made of the phrase impeachment inquiry," Nadler said Friday.

"We are using our full Article I powers to investigate the conduct of the president and to consider what remedies there are," he said, referring to the Constitution. "Among other things we will consider are obviously recommending articles of impeachment."

The action underscores the tensions among a House majority that's trying to have it both ways, preserving the idea of impeachment while avoiding a potentially risky vote.

Speaker Nancy Pelosi brushed back criticism that she's "running out the clock," as about 100 Democrats in the 435-member House favor opening an impeachment inquiry, according to a tally by The Associated Press.

"We will proceed when we have what we need to proceed, not one day sooner," Pelosi said Friday during her weekly news conference.

"Everybody has the liberty and the luxury to espouse their own position," she said, "and to criticize me for trying to go down the path in the most determined positive way."

Pelosi said she has "no complaints" against those pushing for impeachment. Their advocacy, she said, "only gives me leverage."

With the House unable, or unwilling, to impeach Trump, it intensifies the pressure on the party to figure out how to defeat the president in the 2020 election.

House Democrats capped their 200th day in the majority with a long list of bills — on raising the minimum wage, strengthening immigration protections — that give voters a view of how their party would govern in the White House. An outside group started running ads, including on Fox News this week, to promote their agenda.

"These people are clowns," Trump said Friday in remarks at the White House. "The Democrats are clowns."

As if to shore up the left flank, Pelosi met earlier Friday with liberal firebrand Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez of New York in an apparent easing of tensions with the "squad" of newcomers as they pursue shared goals.

Ocasio-Cortez's spokesman called it a "very positive and productive meeting about progressive priorities."

Pelosi said, "What we're advocating for is a progressive agenda for our country."

Yet no sooner had Pelosi stepped away from the podium than members of the Judiciary Committee stepped up to declare they were essentially well on their way to impeachment proceedings.

"This is an impeachment investigation," said Rep. Eric Swalwell, D-Calif., "whether we should recommend articles of impeachment to our caucus."

Freshmen Rep. Veronica Escobar, D-Texas, said, "I think especially as folks go home, my hope is that, in addition to talking about all the important kitchen table things that we all came here to work on, that there is an honest discussion within our own communities about whether we can continue to tolerate a lawless president."

Asked whether he favored impeachment, Nadler took a long pause.

"We may decide to recommend articles of impeachment at some point, we may not, it remains to be seen," Nadler said.

The committee's court filing Friday was an effort to obtain secret grand jury material underlying Mueller's report.

The court petition is among a half-dozen legal actions the House is taking against the Trump administration as part of Pelosi's step-by-step strategy of building a case against the president. The Democrats contend that Trump is obstructing Congress's constitutional ability to conduct oversight of the executive branch by withholding documents and preventing witnesses from testifying.

Democrats, including Pelosi, often note that the third article of impeachment against Richard Nixon was his obstruction of Congress.

Next week, Nadler is expected to file a lawsuit to try to enforce a subpoena against Donald McGahn, the former White House counsel and a key Mueller witness. It challenges the administration's claim that its former employees have "absolute immunity" from testifying before Congress.

So in some ways the House is well on its way to impeachment without having to vote on it, as it conducts investigations and files lawsuits to build its case.

"Impeachment isn't a binary thing that you either are or you aren't," said Rep. Mary Gay Scanlon, D-Pa.

"What we've been saying and what we've been doing is starting a process where we're engaging in an investigation to see if we should recommend articles of impeachment," she said. "It's a process. We started it some months ago in some ways."

Catering to centrist Democrats, the dozens of lawmakers who helped secure the House majority, the strategy protects those who come from districts where Trump is popular and may not want to have to take a vote on impeachment. Yet it infuriates the liberal flank, the core of the party's activists.

After Mueller testified, Pelosi assembled Democrats behind closed doors and offered the path forward.

Pelosi told them that if they wanted to come out publicly in favor of impeachment, to do it in a way that did not make it a moral imperative. The next morning, she delivered a

Man killed father, brother, wounded mother in LA

BY STEFANIE DAZIO AND JOHN ANTCZAK
Associated Press

A man fatally shot his father, brother and two other people Thursday during a 12-hour rampage across Los Angeles' sprawling San Fernando Valley, eluding a manhunt until he was arrested after gunning down a bus passenger, authorities said.

Police said they did not know what motivated Gerry Dean Zaragoza to launch the attacks in neighborhoods dotting the vast, largely suburban valley that is home to nearly 2 million Los Angeles residents.

"It is obviously an individual that went on a violent spree," police Capt. William Hayes said. "We knew he was a danger to the community."

Police said Zaragoza, 26, killed his father and brother and wounded his mother at an apartment complex in Canoga Park, a modest neighborhood in a southwest section of the valley.

From there, he traveled several miles to North Hollywood, where he gunned down two people, police said. A woman believed to be an acquaintance of Zaragoza was killed and a man was critically wounded.

Hours later, police said, Zaragoza shot and killed a stranger on a bus in Van Nuys, in the center of the valley.

Michael Ramia said Zaragoza's father, Carlos Zaragoza, had worked for him for 12 years as a carpet cleaning technician.

He described the elder Zaragoza as "a guy with no enemies, very outgoing."

"The nicest guy you'd want to be around," he said.

Ramia said Carlos Zaragoza had confided in him that his son was battling drug problems, adding that the older man often tried to get his son to come to work with him but he seemed to have no motivation.

"He was a father just trying to protect his son," Ramia said. "He did it to his last day. He wouldn't give up on his son."

Neighbor Ruth Barcena told CBS Los Angeles that Zaragoza's mother was always friendly.

"Really hurt, about what happened," she said.

Zaragoza is also suspected of an attempted robbery outside a bank in Canoga Park. Police said no one was hurt and nothing was taken.

He was arrested in a commercial section of Canoga Park about 12 hours after the rampage began. Hayes said officers used what he called a small amount of force to subdue him.

Television footage showed the suspect sitting in a wheelchair and appearing alert as he was loaded into an ambulance.

Police said they recovered a firearm during the arrest.

similar message, telling lawmakers to say what they want about impeachment, but to do it in way that doesn't challenge other Democrats' views.

The comments were relayed by three people familiar with the private meetings. They were unauthorized to speak publicly and spoke on condition of anonymity.

Some Democrats grumbled that the investigations were becoming "endless," according to one of the people.

But others say Democrats were elected to the House in large part because voters want them to stand up to Trump. If they don't, they say their majority faces potential blowback in 2020.

"I think the ramifications are simply that we will have the ball and we fumbled it," said Rep. Steve Cohen, D-Tenn. "I think we need to do the appropriate thing regardless of the outcome."

Trump refuses to shield Apple's Mac Pros from China tariffs

ASSOCIATED PRESS

President Donald Trump has vowed to slap tariffs on Apple's Mac Pros if the company shifts production of the computer from Texas to China.

The pledge made in a Friday tweet rebuffs Apple's attempt to shield its products from taxes being imposed on goods made in China as part of Trump administration's trade war with the world's most populous country.

Apple recently sent a letter to the Trump administration warning that the U.S. economy and its ability to compete will hurt if its products are hit with the tariffs.

The Cupertino, California, company has been assembling its Mac Pros in Austin, Texas since 2013, but a report surfaced last month that Apple plans to shift production to a factory near Shanghai.

Apple is reportedly moving Mac Pro production because it is having trouble finding enough skilled labor to assemble the computer in Texas.

Apple didn't immediately respond to a request for comment Friday, but has previously said the Mac Pro will continue to be designed and engineered in California. The company hasn't said where the computer will be assembled in the future though. Trump demanded in his tweet that they continue to be made in the U.S if Apple doesn't want to be exposed to a 25% tariff on electronics made in China.

Just hours later, Trump once again asserted the U.S. should have first dibs over the companies headquartered here. In a tweet, he vowed to retaliate against France for the new digital tax the country is imposing on big tech companies that sell online advertising.

If anyone taxes the companies, Trump wrote in a tweet , it should be the U.S. He stuck in a dig about French wine, writing "I've always said American wine is better than French wine!"

Investors appeared unfazed by Trump's sparring with one of the world's biggest and most powerful companies. Apple's stock edged up $1.22 to $208.24 in Friday's midday trading.

The reaction probably would have been different had Trump made it clear that the tariffs will be applied to Apple's top-selling product, the iPhone, which has long been assembled in China. Mac computers, on the other hand, now represent a relatively small part of Apple's business, unlike the company's early years when the computers were its marquee products.

Mac computers held a 6% share of the worldwide personal computer market during the second quarter of this year, ranking well behind China's Lenovo as well as HP and Dell in the U.S., according to the research firm Gartner Inc.

Monica, although the company tried to open a large store at the corner of Santa Monica and 5th in 2001. That effort was abandoned in the face of heavy community opposition. Target has since opened stores nearby in Sawtelle, Culver City and Westwood.

Target's proposed reboot of the building involves painting the concrete block and stucco facade white and red, wrapping parts of the exterior in brown concrete panels and installing aluminum windows and doors. The design also includes six Target logos in various sizes and two signs with the company's name.

During the June hearing, Target's architect said the store will be in line with the smaller-format concept that has been rolled out across the country. A similar store recently opened on Santa Monica Blvd. just outside city limits.

Commissioners criticized the use of large Target logos on the building that include white circles on a red background. They also wanted an expanded lighting plan, better landscaping and asked the company to use higher-quality materials in the project.

girls' basketball team for polishing the VJAMM and sweeping up the sidewalk and curbside debris, more than once. YouthBuild, a program of Venice Community Housing, however, has been regularly maintaining the Venice Japanese American Memorial Monument since August 2018, and has returned to the northwest corner of Venice and Lincoln Boulevards to polish the black granite VJAMM obelisk, so far for a total of eight times through July 2019. They have already scheduled another maintenance for August 2019.

At the VJAMM Commemoration on April 18, 2019, Tijana Quilici of Venice Community Housing's YouthBuild program thanked the VJAMM for their partnership with the community service component of YouthBuild. YouthBuild offers diverse youth between 18 and 24 years of age choices in completing a high school diploma, job training and work experience in construction, and leadership development through community service projects. Both VJAMM and YouthBuild, said Quilici, share a common "purpose in standing up against injustice and ensuring we know our painful histories as a means of preventing future injustice."

Orlando Nava now serves as YouthBuild case manager, and has brought YouthBuild volunteers to the VJAMM for a history lesson and community service. The VJAMM Committee sincerely thanks not only the YouthBuild volunteers, but also expresses appreciation to the local restaurants who have donated lunches for the volunteers, including Baby Blues BBQ, The Great Western Steak and Hoagie Company, Rutt's Café, Marie Callender's, Feast from the East, Sakura Japanese Restaurant, James' Beach, and Hama Sushi in Venice.

If you would like your youth organization to help maintain the VJAMM, or if your restaurant would like to donate lunch for about ten volunteers, please contact Phyllis Hayashibara at phyllishayashibara@gmail.com. For more information about the VJAMM, please visit www.venicejamm.org or follow venicejamm.org on Facebook.

Individuals that have helped work on the memorial include Cesar Garcia, Juan Cabrera, Robert Funes, Teresa Lucas, Orlando Nava, Carmen Lopez, Juan Cabrera, Cesar Garcia, Rafael Cruz, Robert Garcia, Azjalize Facey, Melody Vasquez, Kaylyn Vasquez, Jorge Gonzales and Anthunie Reynoso.

CRIME WATCH BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON JULY 14 AT ABOUT 9:02 P.M.

Officers were dispatched to the 2400 block of 14th St regarding a prowling investigation. Officers detain a female leaving the location they were dispatched to. Consent search of her person revealed an access card belonging to a city employee. The female also displayed signs of intoxication. Officers discovered that the access card and other items located on the suspect were taken from vehicles parked in the employee parking lot. The female was subsequently arrested. Jennifer Almanza, 29, from Los Angeles was arrested for receiving stolen property and public intoxication. Bail was set at $1,000.

DEAL

of the year and that the company will engage with the state attorneys general who oppose the deal.

Dish is largely a company with a declining satellite-TV business. It has no wireless business, but over the past decade it has spent more than $21 billion accumulating a large stock of spectrum for wireless service. The wireless industry has long been skeptical of Dish's ambitions to actually build a wireless service, instead speculating that the company wanted to make money by selling its holdings to other companies.

Recon Analytics founder Roger Entner, a longtime telecom analyst, said the settlement was good for T-Mobile, AT&T and Verizon, as a weak competitor in Sprint is being replaced by an even weaker one in Dish.

Sprint, the current No. 4 wireless provider, has thousands of stores and other distribution points as well as a cellular network. Dish has none of that, although the settlement gives it the option of taking over some stores and cell sites that T-Mobile ditches over the next five years. Creating and maintaining a retail operation and network cost tens of billions of dollars, Entner said. He doubts that Dish could do that alone, as its core business is in deep decline, or that Dish could find a wealthier company to help it do so.

But New Street Research analysts say Dish could build a lower-cost network and provide cheaper plans for customers. Still, that could take years.

There are incentives built into the agreement that would keep Dish from sitting on spectrum assets rather than building them out into a network, Delrahim said. If the company doesn't live up to its promises, it will face billions of dollars in penalties.

George Slover, senior policy counsel for Consumer Reports, also said that the current structure of four competing providers works. He said it's not the same to diminish that while enabling a competitor that doesn't currently have the infrastructure. "Dish might become a competing network at some point but it's not there now."

Japanese tech conglomerate SoftBank owns Sprint, while Germany's Deutsche Telekom owns T-Mobile. SoftBank will continue to own 27 percent of the new, bigger T-Mobile and will keep some influence, but it will not control the company.

T-Mobile shares jumped 5% in afternoon trading Friday, while Sprint stock rose nearly 8%. Dish shares added less than 1%. Verizon and AT&T shares also climbed.

and the County will require Commission approval for increased parking rates at the existing RV parking spots.

In August, the County is applying for an expansion of the Dockweiler campsite. The property currently has 118 spaces with full electrical, water and sewer hookups. Fees for the existing spaces range from $55 - $65 per space, per day and the County will return to Coastal Commission in the future to discuss raising those prices by $10 per day.

At the August meeting, discussion will focus on 19 new campervan sites that will only have electrical hookups. The county is proposing a fee of $45 for the newly established spaces that will range from 220 – 300 square feet and will include a pad and barbecue.

New construction will include picnic tables on the sandy beach areas adjacent to each campervan site, two Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) accessible picnic tables, a 125-square-foot modular restroom building and new waste disposal area within the existing footprint of the RV Park, a space for food service (e.g. food truck), and an outdoor wash basin.

"The expansion includes removal of a volleyball court net and an approximately 110-square-foot enclosed dog run, and the construction of a new asphalt drive loop off the southern (downcoast) end of the existing RV Park," said the staff report. "In addition, the applicant proposes to enhance approximately 0.86-acre of southern foredune habitat area adjacent to and surrounding the camper van site, which will include: the removal of non-native vegetation on a regular basis to allow native vegetation to re-establish throughout the dunes; the removal of an old bicycle path to the south west (seaward) of the proposed camping area; the installation of an approximately four-foot tall wooden split-rail fence to protect the dune enhancement/restoration areas from pedestrian foot traffic; and educational signage to identify the dune areas and help inform the public of the sensitive habitat area."

Commission staff are supporting the proposal with conditions that protect the nearby ecosystem citing the need for low cost access to the beach.

"Commission staff has worked closely with the County, and after discussions and numerous revisions to the proposal, is supportive of the proposed project description and proposed fee structure," said the staff report. "The proposed project, as conditioned, will serve to provide important public recreational improvements as well as dune restoration in a location where both are critically needed."

The Commission will meet on August 7, 8 and 9 in Eureka. The Dockweiler proposal is scheduled for August 9 and will be available to watch online at www.coastal.ca.gov.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 27)

Your plans will be efficient, doable and more aligned with who you are than ever, and will come to life as though touched by magic. Even so, it's the unplanned events that change your path and bring cherished memories. Work hard and save your money for a November investment. It will pay handsomely. Scorpio and Capricorn adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 25, 3, 33 and 15.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). It's as though you're pulled in and out of a relationship by a tide that's too strong to successfully fight against. Still, the struggle is always an option. Or you could relax and wait for your opportunity.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). When you're no longer interested in what you were, try travel. It shakes everything up. You don't have to go far or be gone for very long to have a totally new appreciation of your current status quo.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Once you've made your mind up, you'll be unstoppable. But do take your time in getting to that point. Deciding on the right goal will be more important than anything that follows.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). To be likable, interesting and pleasant to be around is actually no small accomplishment. It requires thousands of micronegotiations between the ego and the id, which can take a good deal of energy to pull off on a day like today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). It doesn't matter how old you are, the result of this high-energy day will be the same for every generation – youthful folly, ill-advised fun, the silly temptations of innocence.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Because people feel so good around you, you'll end up in a group, even when you set out to explore the world on your own. If you need time to yourself, you'll have to carve it out and protect it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You'll be excellent at the art of summary today. Talk about what you know because it will save others the time of having to weed through the topic to find the relevant takeaways.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). While it's not possible to make a completely accurate assessment about people based strictly on their affiliations, it's a start. One exception is family ties, as no one can help that.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). As far as improvement tools go, integrity and respect are top of the line. "How could I bring more integrity and respect to this?" is the magic question that yields beautiful and instantaneous results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Words always mean so much more than their definition. They signal to culture, status, age and more. Plus, some words are just more fun to say. You'll note with interest the evolution of your own vocabulary.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). If you can bring a little levity to an otherwise serious or deadly boring discourse, you'll earn an admirer and possibly, if the feeling turns out to be mutual, a new friend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Along these lines, to agree with heroes doesn't make you one, but it's an attitude that leans inevitably toward doing the right thing should the opportunity arise.

Venus Takes a Leopard

Some mythologies suggest that Cleopatra, the mesmerizing ruler of ancient Egypt, had a leopard as a pet, appropriately adored with a golden collar, of course. This image of gilded power and dangerous, untamable strength is a fitting symbol for the turn love will take as Venus, the love goddess, slips into the realm of the cat.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS

"What is up with Aquarians and finding a partner, or, more to the point, NOT? I'm Aquarius and of all the people I know, I like myself best. What I am really asking is if is OK (i.e. not self-destructive) to be entirely happy on your own? I am now 38 and have little desire for a relationship or even many friends. I am happy, fine, but my family worries. Astrological feedback would be lovely."

People often apply their creative energy to relationships, but it's not the only way. Aquarius is the sign of eccentricity and genius. Yours is the road less traveled. Creative energy, which is a high vibration that invigorates the body and soul, can also be applied to work, play, art, sport or duty to humanity. And the well-rounded person who does this hums with a love of life itself. To be happy on your own is a gift that touches everyone, and there should be nothing worrying about it, as long as you make sure that in your self-love you are connecting with the world in a way that is meaningful to you, and not cutting yourself off to live like a self-satisfied and smug hermit. Look into your heart and ask yourself honestly if you are, in your own way, giving and receiving as much as you can.

CELEBRITY PROFILES

From "Saturday Night Live" to "Up All Night," Maya Rudolph is a muse of nocturnal laughter. Born into a show business family, Rudolph also has the stars for entertainment, with her natal sun, Mercury and Mars in Leo. Moon in Aquarius shows mad-cap creativity and a generous, philanthropic heart. Look for Rudolph in the Netflix comedy "Wine Country." Write Holiday Mathis at HolidayMathis.com.
