Local swimmer seizes Olympic bid

RUSSIA Jordan Wilimovsky said last month that it would be "cool" to compete on the world's biggest athletic stage, making him a champion of the understatement.

It's a descriptor he still owns, although this week there's a more fitting title for him: Olympic qualifier.

The standout Team Santa Monica swim club member secured a bid to compete at the 2016 Olympic Games in Rio de Janeiro by taking first place in the men's 10-kilometer open-water race at the FINA World Championships in Kazan, Russia.

Wilimovsky completed the course in 1hour 49 minutes and 48.2 seconds, finishing about 12 seconds ahead of Dutch runner-up Ferry Weertman.

He became the first American since 2005 to win gold in the event at the elite international competition.

Wilimovsky lingered towards the back of the front pack for the first half of the grueling race, then surged to the front with about 3 kilometers left and held off his opponents the rest of the way.

"My strategy was to hang back for the first five kilometers, build up at the last five kilometers and have enough at the end to hopefully finish fast," Wilimovsky told the Associated

Behind the scenes of a local's 'Jeopardy' victory

Editor's note: This is the second installment about a Santa Monica man's experience on the game show 'Jeopardy!'

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

CITYWIDE Although Scott Richard Lord's journey to winning five consecutive shows on "Jeopardy!" was aired over the course of a week, in real life it happened all in one day.

The popular TV quiz show hosted by Alex Trebek is taped well in advance, and five episodes of the show are shot each day.

Lord, a Santa Monica resident, was called to a contestant podium on the first episode of the shooting day and proceeded to win five games.

As his success continued, Lord hardly had time to process what was happening. Only after taping finished for the day at about 3:30 p.m. was he able to let his accomplishments sink in.

"It's a high-energy thing," he said. "I had so much energy and adrenaline running. But at the end of the day I was ripped."

Lord knew members of his family, including his wife, kids, brothers and nephews, would be in attendance to cheer for him, and he didn't want to disappoint them.

So he prepared for the show as much as he could.

But he didn't focus on learning new factoids. Instead, he closely watched "Jeopardy" on television and browsed a website that main-

Business profile: Mark Verge

BY MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

CITYWIDE Mark Verge wants you to eat well and live well. As the founder of Westside Rentals, he has helped thousands of residents find a place to live and as a partner in four local restaurants (O.P. Café, Ox & Son, Ashland Hill and Arts Table) his crew has fed a significant portion of Santa Monicans.

He graduated from St. Monica's High School and UCLA. He is raising is two children in Santa Monica and is a regular contributor to local education and non-profit causes. He spoke to the Daily Press about his business ventures and philosophy on local entrepreneurism.

SMDP: Why start a restaurant group?

Verge: This is a passion play for me. Just growing up around here, we all have families still living here and we see so many neighborhood people. This business is so hands on, whether it's just seeing people, sponsoring local teams … it's so involved you feel like you're really making a difference.

SMDP: Why keep your businesses in Santa Monica?

Verge: I'm a neighborhood guy and that's a source of pride for me. This town is so welcoming. Once you're here you're just as welcome as if you grew up here for 60 years. There's a big benefit to being in Santa Monica, especially right now. People come, they spend money and the City made a great ruling with Airbnb, the hotels are happy … we're definitely progressing in the right direction and I think everyone kind of wants the same thing.

City Attorney's office wins false advertising case

As would-be lawyers begin taking the three-day state bar examination in California today, one local bar preparation company has agreed to a court judgment in the wake of allegations that it advertised grossly inflated pass rates.

Barwinners, a Santa Monica-based company that, since 1999, has sold bar exam prep courses, has paid $130,000 in fines and restitution and agreed to a permanent court injunction following a joint investigation by the Santa Monica City Attorney's Office and the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office.

Prosecutors from those offices have obtained a final court judgment in the Santa Monica Superior Court against Barwinners and its parent company, Legal Education Unlimited, Inc. as part of their agreement with the company.

The case arose from consumer complaints alleging that Barwinners falsely advertised inflated pass rates for its students taking the California bar exam.

For years, Barwinners had advertised a 94 percent pass rate for first time bar-takers, and an 86 percent rate for repeat takers.

But prosecutors alleged Barwinners' actual pass rates were 49 percent for first time takers and 30 percent for repeat takers during the 2011-2013 period.

According to the State Bar, average pass rates in California for the July 2014 exam were 61 percent for first time takers and 14 percent for repeat takers.

Barwinners sells an online bar exam prep course for $6,649 and individual tutoring programs ranging between $10,000 and $12,000.

Under the agreed final court judgment:

1. Barwinners will pay a total of $130,000: $110,000 in restitution to former customers who took the bar exam but did not pass and $20,000 in fines.

2. Barwinners is required to provide a total of eight full scholarships for its online review courses to in-need students over the next two years.

3. Barwinners will be under a permanent injunction prohibiting it from any future false or misleading advertising. Any advertised pass rates must be based on data from the company's most recent bar exam takers' results.

The State Bar of California requires all attorneys to pass the bar examination before being admitted to practice law in this state.

"Whether you are hoping one day to be a lawyer or just trying to find a good deal and stretch your paycheck, consumers of all types have every right to be treated honestly. Businesses can brag but they cannot make up facts," said Santa Monica prosecutor Eda Suh.

"We will continue to crack down on all marketing claims that are false or misleading," Suh added. "Anyone who has studied for the bar exam will tell you that it is one of the most stressful events in life. That makes consumers especially vulnerable to claims that sound too good to be true."

Hockey and honky tonks is what we need

SAVE THE CIVIC - PLAY HOCKEY!

Yeah, it sounded kind of crazy to me too, when this guy took the microphone at one of the public input meetings of the Santa Monica Civic Working Group, the "panel of nine" appointed to find solutions for reopening our historic auditorium, and uses for the area surrounding it. He introduced himself as Daryl Evans and said he was with the LA Kings.

So we're there talking about soccer fields and no-hotels-thank you, here at the beach in Santa Monica (jogging, swimming, walking, tennis, basketball, beach volleyball), it's warm outside, as usual, and this guy's talking about ice rinks?

But before long quizzical expressions in the audience turned into some affirmative nodding. The notion: build the athletic field so many were there to support, but perched on top of a ground-level ice rink.

Evans said it was definitely doable, that blah blah blah people in Southern California love to skate (they do, I guess, just not me), and it would generate some healthy revenue.

Well! There you go, the magic words, Daryl, because our very expensive consultants have been pushing from Day One for us to choose which options we "need" to pay for the renovations: large, medium or small hotel, how many office buildings, mixed use retail, how many restaurants? Giving short shrift to the overwhelming consensus of the public at each meeting I attended (all but one) that rejected such "solutions" and wanted more options and information on alternative ways to fund.

A hockey rink? That sounds pretty alternative.

Evans, it turns out, was a King player from 1981-85, and later coached the UCLA Bruins for two years, taking them to the national finals. He's now the Kings' Power Skating Consultant (what a job title!) and has announced their games on radio for 16 years. So, not just some guy who took the mic. He did plant a seed.

After a few weeks of missed connections he finally got hold of Group member Phil Brock, chair of our Recreation and Parks Commission and charged with Santa Monica's green space, and told him a meeting was available Monday with Luc Robitaille, NHL Hall of Famer and record holder and, more importantly, a top gun with the Kings, their President of Business Operations. Brock invited Group member Jodi Summers and yours truly (that's so cornball but I've always wanted to write it) to the meeting at the Kings' El Segundo training facility (shared by the Lakers).

So finally, after all these years of starving and enduring abuse, my journalism degree pays off: I get to stand on the same floor that Kobe Bryant practices on (gets there at 4:30 a.m. many mornings, a staff member told me). Seriously, even in the midst of Laker Armageddon, it made me very happy. I picked up a basketball that almost certainly Kobe dribbled and shot, but clever fellow though I am, I could not figure out a way to steal it. Rats.

The tour we got of the three rinks (all with many skaters, from kids to Kings) and one basketball court, all the training and video viewing and locker rooms, was fun, but I was interested in the conversation between Luc and Jodi and Phil.

Robitaille impressed me with his thoughtful discussion. He seemed neither to be pushing something, nor playing for advantage.

I've learned that ice-skating does have a long history in Santa Monica. Ice Capades Chalet operated from 1966 until 1983, when Fred Segal turned it into their store. Dorothy Hamil trained there, Tai and Randy, many other stars and champions. The "Rockford Files" filmed there, and "Rocky" and Adrian had their first date there. We've all seen how popular our seasonal rink Downtown became. Now with the Culver City rink closed, there's nothing for miles.

"We're definitely looking to build rinks, and we think Santa Monica's a home run," said Robitaille, a resident here for 13 years. "Very intriguing, because it's already a high-end sports training center. We started our first high school league last year," he told us, "eight teams, which we plan to expand to 30."

The Kings' master plan, he said, relies on fostering talent at the local level, and that requires rinks. "LA has very few. Indoors, year around - only Pasadena and Van Nuys.

"We are looking at building in Sylmar, and Reseda, and the space you would have available there [at the Civic] would work perfectly," he said.

"Roller hockey on the beach in Santa Monica goes way back, and in the early '90s the NHL ran a tournament there," Robitaille related. "But right now, in the world of hockey," he said, "California is the top state."

This is early stages of discussion and I'm not even positive I'm completely sold on the idea, but it sure is worth pursuing. Sports and the arts together equal entertainment, so they're in the same ballpark philosophically, and perhaps should be literally. The benefits of athletic participation, by all ages, are overwhelmingly positive. Real community benefits.

We'll have to see what kind of deal the Kings might offer, but I hope they are as interested as Robitaille seemed to indicate. Two other big advantages to that partnership: the Kings own the Galaxy, LA's very popular pro soccer team - what a great tie-in for the athletic field. And they're all owned by AEG, one of the biggest entertainment conglomerates in the world. Who knows what the mutual benefits might be, with the Civic reopened, and the Greek Theater and Barnum Hall just across the street at Samohi? OK, now I'm getting excited.

WHAT DO I KNOW ABOUT MUSICALS?

Enough to know that the Ruskin Group Theater has a hit on their hands in "Sneaky Ole Time," their new production opening Saturday. I went to a dress rehearsal, admittedly with low expectations, and was knocked out. Built around the hit songs of Paul Overstreet, it takes the clichés about commitment and marriage and turns them every which way in a Tennessee honky tonk Twilight Zone setting that keeps your wondering and smiling. Great cast, terrific live band, clever, funny book, perfect direction. Yeah, I liked it.

Homeless voices fall on deaf ears regarding development

Editor:

Us homeless, we do not get much of a chance to speak up about the things Daily Press writers write about but now that some old blabbering woman by the name of Brennan made her racism known to everyone I want to bring up that there are other types of racism here in Santa Monica that everyone should pay attention to but don't.

The Daily Press prints stuff from a group of writers called SMART who yap on and on about heights and depths and landmarking and shadows and open space of buildings being built in Santa Monica. While I don't got no education like your SMART writers that don't mean I got no set of brains to figure out what they be talking about. I think that SMART writers are using code words to make sure that there are no buildings being built for the homeless, the poor, the peoples of color and the new immigrants to live in here where I be in Santa Monica.

First of all, I got a lot of experience about "open space" because I'm in it a lot more often than not. If the SMART writers are hankering for "open space" leave the move to Wyoming and befriend buffaloes. Buffaloes like "open space." Us homeless don't like "open space" because it means that we got no roofs over our heads.

Also the SMART Writers write about not wanting to live in the shadows. Boo hoo! Boo hoo! The rich who live in the rich peoples city that is Santa Monica don't want to live in shadows! What about the homeless, the poor, the peoples of color and the new immigrants? All of us have been living in the shadows for years and years and years! There might be one hundred million people living in them shadows in this country and maybe some groundhogs too. The SMART writers worry about living in shadows. What nerve!

And then the SMART writers talk about landmarking. Have you seen the broken down dump they want to landmark? There's some auditorium building down at Main and Pico that looks too ugly even to be a warehouse. They got these apartment buildings on San Vincente that look ready to be torn down but they want to save them. I don't need to know anything about architecture to know that when you landmark dumps then you can't build something larger and better to fill the real housing needs of people and landmarking is just a racist way of blocking people they don't want living in Santa Monica from living here.

Now what the SMART Writers don't tell you is that President Obama, the USA Attorney General and HUD plan to bust open rich people's cities like Santa Monica with their schemes and code words to keep the homeless, the poor, the peoples of color and the new immigrants from living here. In New York City, Mayor De Blassio is putting housing for the poor and the homeless right next door to rich peoples homes. I hear in Brooklyn Heights where a lot of Wall Street Crooks live, housing is going up right next to building with $5-10 million condos and $10-20 million dollar town homes. Us homeless got equal rights to live where it's best to live and Mayor De Blassio would never put up with the ways the SMART Writers are trying to block the homeless, the poor, the peoples of color and the new immigrants from living in Santa Monica.

How do we get lots of housing built quickly in Santa Monica? New York City got its own income tax and Santa Monica should have its own city income tax. I am suggesting a 20 percent income tax on people making between $50,000 and $100,000 and a 40 percent income tax on people making more than $100,000 and a 60 percent income tax on people making more than $250,000. Also, Santa Monica sits on land that was once Indian tribal land. Once the City of Santa Monica makes its peace with Native Americans lots of money can be raised for housing with the building of a bunch of Indian casinos. All that Wasted open space in Santa Monica, parks for lawn bowling, parks with tennis courts, the decrepit auditorium warehouse building at Pico and Main, the parking lots at 5th Street and Arizona — can all be turned into housing faster than fast. There should be no height limit on housing for the poor and the homeless and buildings 20 -25 stores high would be fair shadows be damned.

I think City Manager Rick Cole said that he wants Santa Monica to be a City of Social Justice. We can do it. Let's get it done.

After his victory, Wilimovsky lifted his right arm out of the water and extended his index finger in celebration.

The Olympic berth signals another landmark accomplishment for Wilimovsky, who qualified for the world championships with a first place finish in the 10k at the USA Swimming Open Water National Championships in April.

The son of Rolf and Wendy Wilimovsky didn't start swimming until he was about 9-years-old, but he's made eye-popping improvements in the sport since trying out for an area lifeguard team more than a decade ago.

He took second place in the 10-kilometer at the open-water nationals in 2014 to qualify for the Pan Pacific Championships in Australia, where he finished 16th in the same event.

Less than a year later, he's a legitimate contender in the event won by Tunisia native Oussama Mellouli in the 2012 Olympics in London. Indeed, just a year separates Wilimovsky from the opening ceremonies next August at the Summer Games in Brazil.

Qualifying for the Olympics alongside Wilimovsky was fellow American Sean Ryan, who took fourth place with a time of 1:50:03.3. Their competition field in Russia also included Greece's Spyridon Gianniotis, a two-time10-kilometer world champion, who claimed the bronze medal with a time of 1:50:00.7.

An alumnus of Malibu High, Wilimovsky is taking a year off from Northwestern University to train for the Olympics under Team Santa Monica coach Dave Kelsheimer and focus on his budding swimming career. Kelsheimer accompanied Wilimovsky to the world championships, serving as an assistant coach on the USA Swimming staff.

Wilimovsky will spend many hours at Santa Monica Swim Center in the coming months as he prepares for the athletic journey of a lifetime. Pretty "cool" indeed.

rant experience for you?

Verge: We've always said we're just going to 'out-nice' the other guys. When Ashland Hill came along, it was great because I love Main Street. We think it's going to be the best concept of all the restaurants I've done.

SMDP: How far do you want to take the restaurant empire?

Verge: It's a fun opportunity but I have two young kids and they take a lot of time. The restaurants are like having four young kids so we're not Starbucks, and we're never going to be.

SMDP: What are the similarities between the restaurant and rental businesses?

Verge: I'm adding value to whatever I'm doing and it was a nice choice doing Westside Rentals. It's always been phenomenal and I'm proud that a lot of kids' first jobs are with Westside Rentals.

SMDP: What does the future hold?

Verge: The 10-year plan is to keep enjoying this crazy life and providing opportunities. I have a great team from the top job down and that starts from the top of the group. We've got to provide and try to get better every day, that's what we do, that's what we're going for. We have a couple of restaurant concepts we want in Santa Monica so we will definitely do two or three more.

Netflix wants 'Arrested', not Cosby

BY SEAN DALY
TheTVPage.com

Netflix is working to bring back ARRESTED DEVELOPMENT, but not Bill Cosby.

Negotiations for a fifth season of the Mitch Hurwitz comedy are "plugging along," Ted Sarandos, the network's Chief Content Officer said Tuesday.

"It is a really complex deal."

"The talent are very busy and working on other shows, but also because the show is owned by Fox. So we have to make our deal with Fox. And all the talent has to make their deals with Fox. It is our intent to make our intent to have a new season of Arrested Development and all the negotiations are underway."

Sarandos also said there are still no plans to broadcast a Bill Cosby stand-up comedy special, which had been scheduled to air last November.

"I don't think it is appropriate to release that," he told reporters, acknowledging that THE COSBY SHOW continues to be available through the company's DVD-by-mail service.

"The Cosby Show is produced by NBC and owned by Carsey Werner."

"The [cancelled] projects before were produced by Netflix and branded Netflix shows. We think we acted - and will continue to act appropriately - when it comes to Mr. Cosby."

tains encyclopedic records of previous clues and answers.

"I would just look through to see the types of questions," Lord said. "Because it's partly what you know, but a lot of it is getting a little bit used to the way they phrase things. They often give clues in the answer. Sometimes you do know the answer, but what they're looking for is a little different than what you'd think."

Although pure knowledge and familiarity with the show format are crucial to success, getting accustomed to the contestant buzzer is arguably even more important.

When Lord went in for an audition after passing the online test, he got to practice with a pen that resembles the show's electronic response clicker.

"You'll see people who obviously know the answer," he said. "Sometimes all three people know the answer. But it's all about ringing in the quickest."

Lord recalled several instances in which he tried to ring in but an opponent was faster and produced a correct response, making Lord glad he wasn't the quickest clicker.

The skill of ringing in was seemingly mastered by Ken Jennings, who won 74 games in a row in 2004.

"As he played game after game, he got better and better at timing the buzzer," Lord said of the record-holding champion.

Before taping began, Lord said, show coordinators allowed him and his fellow contestants to practice using the clicker to make sure they were able to ring in successfully.

FROM BETTOR TO BEST

In his first game, which aired July 20, the opening round doesn't start off well for Lord. He falls behind early, going $200 in the hole after missing his first answer attempt on a question about river names.

But he doesn't stay down for long. He makes it "back on the plus side," as Trebek likes to say, on a $600 question about the umbilical cord and keeps the momentum going in a category about medical knowledge.

Then, in his introductory interview, he tells Trebek about the time Placido Domingo sang at his Santa Monica home.

"It sounds like a joke, but yes," he says. "A few years ago my mother's wife passed away from Alzheimer's and since then we've hosted an event at our house to try to raise money to fight the disease. Through some people I knew we were able to ask Placido if he would come and sing, and to our surprise and delight he said yes."

When play resumes, Lord looks at ease. He trails defending two-day champion Jennifer Morrow by $4,300 late in the first round, but goes on an impressive roll and earns a narrow edge.

"Scott did some fast catching up in that first round," Trebek said.

Early in the second round, when Lord comes across a Daily Double in a category about the Bill of Rights, he doesn't hesitate. He bets all of his $6,600 and offers the correct response to a clue about the Fourth Amendment, doubling his sum.

In the final round, with Lord holding a $3,100 lead over Morrow, the contestants are asked to name the American-born poet who quotes from Richard Wagner. Third-place contestant Mary Ciconte incorrectly guesses Walt Whitman and coughs up her entire sum. Morrow also writes Whitman but bets conservatively, retaining $12,500. It all comes down to Lord, and his response is the correct one: T.S. Eliot.

"I bet enough to make sure that even if the next-highest person wins and bets everything, you still have enough to beat them," Lord said. "I was fortunate to get an answer I knew."

He adds $11,401 to his total, finishing his first game with $29,001 and the right to keep playing. He's just getting started.

WET -- grades for days of recorded rainfall and the following 3 days
ns -- no sample taken

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card™ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A-F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

Heal the Bay is a nonprofit environmental organization making Southern California coastal waters and watersheds, including Santa Monica Bay, safe, healthy and clean. We use science, education, community action and advocacy to pursue our mission.

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON JULY 15, AT ABOUT 10:11 A.M.

Officers patrolling in the downtown area received a call of a robbery that just occurred on the Santa Monica Pier. The victim told dispatchers that a male, Black wearing a blue shirt had grabbed his cell phone from his hand, threatened him, threw the cell phone into the bushes, and then left the area eastbound up the Pier ramp toward Ocean Avenue. The officers located a male matching that description sitting on a bench in the 1500 block of Palisades Park. The officers contacted the male, later identified as Jonathan Atwood, 27 of Santa Monica, and detained him. Before they began questioning Atwood, he told the officers he took the phone from the victim. Atwood was upset with the victim, who he did not know and had never seen before, because Atwood thought the victim was taking pictures of girls. The victim identified Atwood as the man who stole his phone. The damaged phone was eventually recovered by the officers. Atwood was arrested for robbery and vandalism and transported to the Santa Monica Jail for booking. Bail was set at $50,000.

Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from (easiest) to (hardest).

Difficulty Level ★★★

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ (1) The mayor of Whitesboro, New York, defending to a Village Voice reporter in July the 19th-century-based town seal that features a white settler appearing to push down an American Indian man, denied any racism and said the image is "actually" a typical "friendly wrestling (match) that took place back in those days." (According to Whitesboro's website, the Native American supposedly uttered, after the "match," "UGH. You good fellow too much.") (2) In April, the U.S. Office of Special Counsel ordered the Federal Bureau of Prisons to stop relocating whistleblowing employees to "offices" that were abandoned jail cells. The bureau had insisted that the transfers were not punishment for reporting agency misconduct -- even though one of the "offices" had no desk, computer or phone and required the employee to walk past prisoners' cells to get to work.

■ The Washington Post's running tally counts more than 400 people shot to death in the United States by law enforcement already this year with five months to go, but 2014 figures from Norway reveal that officers there shot at people only twice all year. Proportionally (64 times as many people live in the U.S.), American police would still have fired only 128 rounds last year if they showed Norway's restraint. (Bonus fact: Norway's cops missed their targets both times.)

Bringing his ax to the Hammer

By Colin Newton

There's something to be said about playlists. You can do whatever you want with them, stuff them with any kind of music for every kind of mood. Guitarist Ross Hammond's career has been a bit like a personal playlist he's built over the years, and on Thursday, Aug. 6, he's bringing it to the Hammer Museum in West L.A.

"Being in Sacramento, this will be my first really big gig there (Los Angeles)," Hammond told Giive (a bleep). "I'm really looking forward to it."

Hammond's playlist utilizes jazz, Americana, world music and more. He started filling it out when he was just a high school hopeful, playing in soul, funk and rock gigs.

Hammond's private guitar teacher in college introduced him to the greats of jazz guitar, and Hammond took off.

"I would never call myself a jazz player," he said. "This new music can be anything from modern classical to classic jazz. It's basically turned into something that's not pop."

Hammond's performance at the Hammer is a great opportunity to go down that rabbit hole live. Hammond at the Hammer is an obvious combination, as the Hammer is all about providing a platform for new art and ideas. Expect a great gig, featuring an explosive lineup of improvisers, including multifaceted woodwind whodunnit Vinny Golia.

Hammond takes the stage at 8 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 6. Hammer programs are always free.

Schedule an overdue meeting, Virgo

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You'll wake up with many ideas, so start jotting them down. You might be privy to a conflict involving a higher-up and a friend. Just be glad it's not you. Your unpredictability will be an advantage to most and a detriment to others; try to rein it in. Tonight: Out late.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Keep pushing beyond your normal limits, and relax when hearing new information. You might not feel as sure of yourself as you did a little a while ago. Detach, and you will see the validity of what you believe to be true. Tonight: Reach out for more information.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Keeping conversations on a one-on-one level allows great understanding. You might not feel as if you have enough control to follow through in the way you'd like to. An element of the unexpected could emerge when in a meeting. Tonight: Let it all hang out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ You could be more in touch with a partner than he or she is with him- or herself. As you attempt to communicate with this person, you are likely to encounter some resistance. Focus on something else, where you can be more productive or appreciated. Tonight: A must appearance.

LEO (July 23-Aug.22)
★★★★ Defer to others with the knowledge that everything will work out. Your ability to smile and remain diplomatic even after being met with resistance is important. Pressure in a key area of your life might be worrisome. Tonight: Relax, and let someone else call the shots.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Zero in on a problem. An adjustment or a creative solution could help resolve the issue. Know that change is most effective when people can process their feelings on their own terms. Understand that you can't push anyone. Tonight: Schedule a long-overdue meeting.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Your ability to move past a problem emerges. You might feel as if you're going to hit an obstacle no matter which way you turn. You could be treading water right now, but this, too, will pass. Don't cause more of a problem by being challenging. Tonight: Maintain a sense of humor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Say what you think, but know that not everyone will agree with you. How you project yourself to others could make a big difference in the outcome. Your sense of humor emerges and allows you to become more versatile and flexible. Tonight: Hang out with a pal or two.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ You could be so focused on a money matter that you might not be aware of what a loved one is up to. Take a step back and become more of an observer. Avoid a knee-jerk reaction. Be optimistic about a potential visit in the near future. Tonight: Let it all hang out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You might want to rethink a personal situation. You'll feel as if you are right, so any flak you receive likely will automatically be received negatively. You know what you want and why. Slow down and listen to the other side of an argument. Tonight: Let the party begin.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Too much seems to be going on around you. Before you know it, you could see a problem arise from out of the blue. Say little and observe more. You have a way of catching others' attention and forcing their hand. Be as upbeat as possible. Tonight: Vanish quickly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You might want to take charge in a meeting and handle various issues. You are on top of your game, and you understand what is happening. Express your upbeat attitude and your innate confidence. Others can't help but follow your suggestion. Tonight: Where people are.

Wednesday, July 29, 2015

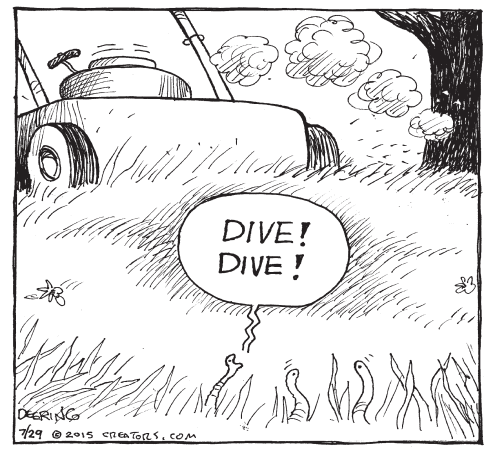

This year you encounter many sudden changes. You might not want to accept each one, but you still should be aware of what is being offered. You will be surprised by all the twists and turns your life takes by your next birthday. If you are single, you could meet someone special in the next few weeks. Don't commit until you have met someone who understands and appreciates you. If you are attached, you might want to readjust your hours to better accommodate your partner. Efforts made by you will be returned in kind, but not always immediately. Be flexible. CAPRICORN enjoys your company!
