AIRBNB: A listing for a home on Adelaide says it can hold up to 36 people at $49 a night.

A historic, five-bedroom house near Pacific Palisades has been converted into an Airbnb housing up to 36 people.

The 1924 Pueblo Revival home at 710 Adelaide Place has been listed on Airbnb since March, when it was sold for about $2.9 million, according to the Multiple Listing Service. Neighbors say the home, a local landmark known as the Zuni House, is being operated as a de facto hostel and disturbing nearby residents.

"There are people coming and going at all hours of the day and night, scooters blocking the sidewalk and cigarette butts and beer cans left on the street and sidewalk," said George Preonas, who lives down the street.

The Airbnb listing claims the home can hold three dozen people.

"The maximum of 36 people in total can stay at the same time combining all rooms," the listing says. "This almost never happens, but expect the bathrooms and the common areas get a bit busy

Gunman posted online minutes before killing 3 at festival

BY KATHLEEN RONAYNE AND JULIE WATSON
Associated Press

Before a 19-year-old gunman opened fire on a famed garlic festival in his California hometown, he urged his Instagram followers to read a 19th century book popular with white supremacists on extremist websites, but his motives for killing two children and another young man were still a mystery Monday.

Santino William Legan posted the caption about the book "Might is Right" with a photo of Smokey the Bear in front of a "fire danger" sign. He posted another photo from the Gilroy Garlic Festival minutes before he shot into the crowd Sunday with an "AK-47-type" weapon, killing a 6-year-old boy, a 13-year-old girl and a recent college graduate.

Under it, he wrote: "Ayyy garlic festival time" and "Come get wasted on overpriced" items. Legan's since-deleted Instagram account says he is Italian and Iranian.

The postings are among the first details that have emerged about Legan since the shooting injured 12 others and sent people running and diving under tables. Police patrolling the event responded within a minute and killed Legan as he turned the weapon on them.

He legally purchased the gun this month in Nevada, where his last address is listed. He would have been barred from buying it in California, which restricts firearms purchases to people over 21. In Nevada, the limit is 18.

Legan grew up less than a mile from the park where the city known as the "Garlic Capital of the World" has held its three-day festival for four decades, attracting more than 100,000 people with music, food booths and cooking classes.

Authorities were searching for clues as to what caused the son of a prominent local family to go on such a rampage. His father was a competitive runner and coach, a brother was an accomplished young boxer and his grandfather had been a supervisor in Santa Clara County.

Police searched the two-story Legan family home and a dusty car parked out front, leaving with paper bags. Authorities also searched an apartment they believed Legan used this month in remote northern Nevada. Officials didn't say what they found or were looking for in either place.

A law enforcement official said investigators believe the gunman used a WASR-10, a variant of an AK-47, that he bought from Big Mikes Gun and Ammo in Nevada earlier this month. The official was not authorized to discuss an ongoing investigation and spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

Big Mike's Guns and Ammo, which appears to be a home-based internet gun shop in Fallon, posted on its Facebook page that "we are heartbroken this could ever happen" and that Legan "was acting happy and showed no reasons for concern" when the store owner met him.

Police had just completed training in how to respond to an active shooter. While they had prepared for the worst, they never expected to put their skills to use in Gilroy, a city of about 50,000 about 80 miles (176 kilometers) southeast of San Francisco known for the pungent smell of the prize flowering crop grown in the surrounding fields — garlic.

The city had put in place security for the festival, one of the largest food fairs in the country. It required people to pass through metal detectors and have their bags searched. Police, paramedics and firefighters were stationed throughout the event.

But Legan didn't go through the front entrance. He cut through a fence that borders a parking lot next to a creek, Gilroy Police Chief Scot Smithee said. Some witnesses reported a second suspect, and a manhunt

Uber lays off 400 employees from global marketing team

Uber is laying off 400 employees in marketing, about a quarter of the marketing team's global workforce of 1,200 people.

The move, announced Monday, follows a leadership shake-up in June when CEO Dara Khosrowshahi combined the company's marketing, communications and policy teams.

The ride-hailing company has struggled to prove it can become profitable and its stock has traded mostly below its IPO price since its debut in May. Uber has blamed its losses partly on its costly promotions to attract riders and drivers. Those promotions are crafted by its marketing department.

Khosrowshahi installed Jill Hazelbaker to lead up marketing and public affairs in June. On Monday they announced a more centralized structure for marketing and said they want to build a consistent brand narrative across audiences, products and regions.

Goodell, title game officials to face questions on 'no-call'

A Louisiana judge ordered that NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell and three officials from January's NFC title game be questioned under oath in September about the infamous "no-call" that helped the Los Angeles Rams beat the New Orleans Saints in January's NFC title game, a lawyer said Monday.

Attorney Antonio LeMon, who filed a lawsuit over the game that advanced the Rams to the Super Bowl, said he and league attorneys will pick a mutually agreeable date for depositions in New Orleans – barring any league appeals that might delay or cancel the questioning.

A league spokesman declined comment.

LeMon's lawsuit seeks $75,000 in damages – to be donated to charity – over the failure to flag a pass interference or roughness penalty against Rams cornerback Nickell Robey-Coleman for his helmet-to-helmet hit on receiver Tommylee Lewis well before a pass arrived. The no-call came at a crucial point in the game against the New Orleans Saints. The Rams won and advanced to the Super Bowl.

State Civil District Court Judge Nicole Sheppard of New Orleans ruled earlier this month that LeMon's lawsuit could proceed. She also ruled then that LeMon can request documents and ask questions of NFL officials. She said Monday that depositions should take place in September. She also set Aug. 22 for the next hearing in the lawsuit, according to LeMon.

Other suits dealing with the blown call have wound up in federal court, where they have failed. They included one long-shot effort to have the game or a crucial part of it played over before the Rams met the New England Patriots in the Super Bowl, which the Patriots won.

LeMon, whose lawsuit alleges fraud by NFL officials, has crafted his lawsuit to avoid having it taken over by a federal court, in part by keeping the damages sought low. He said Monday that he intends for any money won to go to former Saints star Steve Gleason's charity to aid people with neuromuscular diseases. Gleason was diagnosed with ALS in 2011.

Should The President's Free Speech Have Limits?

I'm disgusted with the comments by the President. Truthfully, that's probably a weekly opinion of mine. As an American who clearly supports the 1st Amendment and the concept of pushing Free Speech to its outer limits, I'm not one seeking to shut down someone's speech. The President is allowed to shout, tweet, bellow, bluster, berate, malign and insult anyone to the same extent that the rest of us are.

However.

He is also supposed to set a course for our country. The office of the President goes beyond any single person who occupies the Oval Office. And this is where the limits of the individual's free speech meet the boundaries of the duties of the office, at least in my book.

I've have lived through nine Presidencies at this point and am midway through the 10th. I did not like some of them, I thought others were okay and one was fantastic. At no time, in the previous 52, (53 next month) years have I felt the occupier of the White House was as contemptuous, dismissive and intolerant of the country they were leading.

For those who are not aware, over the weekend, the President tweeted out a rather insulting set of tweets about the conditions in Baltimore. Calling it a 'rat and rodent infested' city. To think that a President was attacking and demeaning the living conditions in a city that is a mere 30ish miles from the White House is appalling to me.

Rather than shedding light on a condition that probably does need attention, he chose to throw insults. Rather than provide solutions, as leaders should, he chose to insult those with whom he should be working to make a better future.

I know we can't expect more from this President. He is after only one thing – chaos. It's how he runs his companies, his White House and Press Relations. He wants the 30% of the population that would vote for him to live in a state of perpetual frothy anger. The point of his tweets and comments is not to teach, educate, lift up, or inspire anything but hate, anger and to act as bait to get people talking about him. Not about the subjects that need to be addressed, but about him.

He doesn't provide solutions for the infrastructure that would fix problems for the people of Flint, Michigan. He's not offering Federal Assistance with vermin problems in Baltimore, Maryland. He just wants attention.

It's sad, disgusting and disheartening. I was told by many a fan of the President that he would be fine. That the bureaucracy would temper him. That nothing was going to change that much.

It's been 2 years and 6 months, and we have accomplished little besides changing the course of the Supreme Court for the next 30 years. Which is what the Pro-Life lobby and the Conservative Fundamentalist Christians wanted. It was a backlash against President Obama and the leap forward in race relations and representation.

In theory we may have only 18 months to go with this current President. I hope that is the future. I would like to see us return to a Presidency that respects our citizens, engages in meaningful conversation that brings two opposing sides to a more moderate middle ground that would provide solutions and a better way of life for all of country.

On the other hand. We may have 5 years and 6 months of this. It's not inconceivable, but it is distasteful. I'm not a fan of this constant attacking. I live with it in my law practice, I see the damage it does to families who are fighting all the time. The trauma that is caused, the loss of money, love and time all so someone can continue to feed a fight that will never make them whole.

One of the major lessons learned after 20 years of fighting in family court with countless divorces and child custody battles is that emotionally damaged people don't get better without a tremendous amount of will and work. You can judge how damaged a person is by the amount of damage they are willing to perpetuate. With this President, I think someone clearly damaged him greatly – unfortunately the country is paying the price.

The Phase II Master Plan establishes the basic parameters and vested rights guiding development of the Phase II Project including, without limitation: (a) building placement, (b) vested heights, vested uses, and vested floor areas for all buildings, (c) minimum setbacks for all buildings, (d) minimum stepbacks for all buildings, (e) subterranean parking, (f) location of uses, (g) vehicular and pedestrian circulation, (h) open space and (i) a Phase II Phasing Plan that includes phasing and timing for filing development review permit applications, obtaining building permits, and constructing Phase II buildings, and implementing improvements such as public open space, infrastructure improvements, and community and Project benefits.

The Phase II Master Plan allows for ten (10) Phase II Project buildings and associated infrastructure and open space improvements. The existing buildings/improvements proposed to be demolished/removed as part of the Phase II Master Plan consist of (i) the existing Child and Family Development Center, (ii) the existing MRI Facility, (iii) the existing Saint John's Health Center Foundation building ("SJF"), (iv) the existing John Wayne Cancer Institute ("JWCI"), and (v) a vacant 10-unit residential building. The Phase II Master Plan includes the following uses to be located in ten new buildings: Hospital/Health Care, Medical Research Facilities (including a new facility for the John Wayne Cancer Institute), new Child & Family Development Center, Day Care, Health & Wellness Center, Education & Conference Center, Visitor Housing, 10 replacement residential apartment units, as well as opportunities for Health-Related Services, Neighborhood Commercial Uses and Restaurants/Cafés.

Circulation improvements include two new driveways on the South Campus from Santa Monica Boulevard and one new driveway from Broadway. The Phase II Master Plan also includes a short new north-south street, tentatively called 20th Place, and a new east-west street between 21st Street and 20th Place, tentatively called Saint John's Way. Subterranean parking is proposed beneath the new uses. In addition, Phase II Master Plan includes above-grade connections for pedestrians (including an enclosed pedestrian walkway above Santa Monica Boulevard for use by patients and caregivers), and below-grade connections for vehicle circulation between various subterranean garages (including under Santa Monica Boulevard) and the transfer of materials/supplies between buildings.

stretched into Monday, but it was unclear whether that person was armed or just helped in some way.

Smithee praised officers for stopping Legan with their handguns in a small area without injuring anyone else.

"It could've gotten so much worse, so fast," he said.

The gunfire sent people in sunhats and flip-flops running away screaming and crying in terror. Some dove for cover under the decorated food booth tables. Others crawled under a concert stage, where a local band had started playing its last song.

The youngest victim, Stephen Romero, described by his grandmother as a kind, happy and playful kid, had just celebrated his sixth birthday in June at Legoland in Southern California.

"My son had his whole life to live and he was only six," his father, Alberto Romero, told San Francisco Bay Area news station KNTV after the shooting. "That's all I can say."

Also killed was a 13-year-old girl, whose name was not released, and Trevor Irby, a biology major who graduated in 2017 from Keuka College in upstate New York.

The wounded were taken to multiple hospitals. Their conditions ranged from fair to critical, with some undergoing surgery. At least five have been released.

Trevor Towner said his sister was at the festival selling garlic and habanero honey for her business, the Honey Ladies, when she saw a man with a gun climb over the fence. She yelled at him "no, you can't do that!"

The gunman turned to her and her husband and opened fire. She was shot in the leg and her husband was shot three times, while a 10-year-old girl dragged their 3-year-old son under a table, Towner wrote on a fundraising page he set up for his sister.

Legan then approached the couple as they lay motionless on the ground and asked "are you alright?" They didn't move, fearing he would finish them off, Towner wrote.

He then turned and shot the 6-year-old boy, the page says. Towner said his sister underwent surgery and was expected to have long-term nerve damage, while her husband faces many surgeries.

The band TinMan was starting an encore Sunday when the shooting started. Singer Jack van Breen said he saw a man wearing a green shirt and grayish handkerchief around his neck fire into the food area.

Van Breen, from nearby Santa Clara, said he heard someone shout: "Why are you doing this?" The reply: "Because I'm really angry."

Jan Dickson, a neighbor across the street from the Legan family home, described them as "a nice, normal family." She said Santino Legan had not lived there for at least a year.

"How do you cope with this? They have to deal with the fact that their son did this terrible thing and that he died," Dickson said.

Watson reported from San Diego. Associated Press reporter Mike Balsamo in Washington, Scott Sonner in Hawthorne, Nevada, Ken Ritter in Las Vegas and Martha Mendoza in Gilroy contributed to this report.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 30)

You eliminate confusion around you. The way you act, dress, think, present yourself... you'll shape it so that people understand who you are, what you want and what you're doing about it. Because you communicate this so clearly, relationships support the best of you and take you where you want to go. Libra and Scorpio adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 7, 44, 30, 8 and 44.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). In days of old, honor was defended and superiority was proven with a duel. Some much milder version of that will go on today. It's best declined, and definitely unworthy of your attention.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Observe human nature keenly and reap rewards. People will speak their thoughts until either the thought-spring runs dry or the thoughts are not of the variety they believe you want to hear. Which is it?

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). What you do, you do for your own self-respect and not to acquire any reward or avoid any punishment that the world provides for such an action. Your confidence will grow with every right move.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You'll make good choices by way of scientific deduction, intuition, common sense and luck. You'll do your part and destiny will lean in to shoulder some of the weight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You care about the other person's experience of you. This care extends to the groups you represent. You take partial responsibility for how people experience any social group, company or country to which you belong.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Your discerning mind has kept you out of trouble, just don't let it also keep you out of the good stuff. The beginning of things is no time to judge. Rather, it's a time to observe while keeping the spirit of possibility alive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Success looks different to different people. Make no assumptions about this except maybe that your definition of success is unique to you. When you match your own expectation, it will bring deep personal satisfaction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). People fear what they don't know. Because you strive for clarity in all communication, you make it easy for people to find you and learn about what you do. Today, it's good for business and relationships of all kinds.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You'll give your enthusiasm and care to one who revels in the attention. This is an ideal match of energies, as you need to give and they need to receive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The fire of your mind needs tending. You don't want it to blaze out of control, nor do you want it to smolder and go cold. Give yourself fuel spaced over time – inspiration to burn warm and long.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You don't understand the ones who just show up to get a paycheck. That's not you. Enthusiasm makes all of the difference. You really want to make something beautiful happen, and you will.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Creativity multiplies when it hits the air. Get it out. Talk or write or move. Ideas breed ideas. When you're sharing them, others answer with their own ideas and they proliferate even further.

Mercury Warns Against Over-Identification

Some thoughts and emotions are more persistent than others. Even so, this last day of the Mercury retrograde is a fine time to reiterate: You are not your thoughts. You are not your feelings. Maybe you're not even their originator. Thoughts come from everywhere. You can catch feelings like you can catch a cold. You are the witness.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTION

"I am having a very difficult time with growing older. I feel like I've lost my looks entirely and I'm not even 40 yet. What can I do to raise my self-esteem? I'm considering a surgical overhaul, though I don't know how I'll pay for it. Would it be worth the money and risk if I did get an "extreme makeover?" Signed, Vain Virgo

Your sign really does have a knack for staying healthy and young at every age. Among Virgos are such timeless beauties as Sophia Loren and Raquel Welch and Mother Teresa, whose inner beauty knew no bounds. Virgo men such as Keanu Reeves, Richard Gere and Bill Murray seem to have even better camera appeal as they get older. Perhaps you are defining beauty for yourself in terms that are too narrow. Each age has its particular kind of beauty, though it is sometimes difficult to see this if you are too focused on the limited perspective perpetuated by Hollywood-based media. Your self-esteem depends on you valuing yourself for reasons other than the physical. Before you go into debt over this crisis in confidence, consider spending some time developing and valuing nonphysical aspects of yourself.

CELEBRITY PROFILES

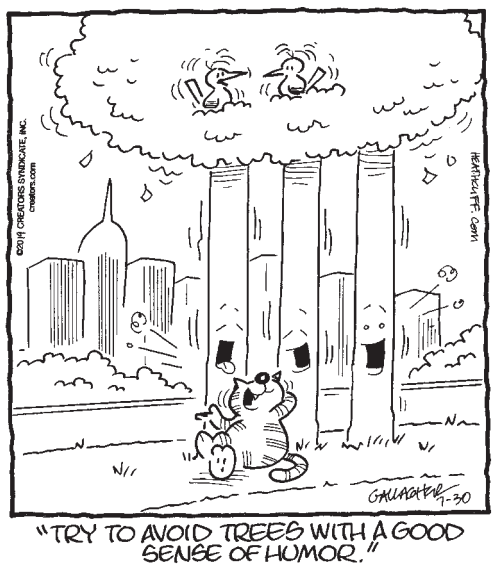

In the new comedy "Booksmart," Lisa Kudrow stays true to a lucky formula as she co-stars with fellow Leo, Jessica Williams. Historically, Kudrow has terrific luck working with other Leos. The cast of "Friends" always had at least three, depending on the guest stars of the episode. Kudrow was born when the sun and Mercury were in the realm of the entertaining lion and the moon was in sophisticated, open-minded and worldly Sagittarius. Write Holiday Mathis at HolidayMathis.com.

especially on weekends and also DO NOT EXPECT you will share this house with the small number of people when you book. There are three bathrooms in the house and it's all shared."

The city of Santa Monica enacted a home-sharing ordinance in 2015 that is meant to prevent permanent housing from being converted to vacation rentals. It allows residents to host guests in their home for 30 days or less while living on-site throughout the guests' stay but does not set a limit on the number of guests allowed.

The Airbnb's operator, Ryusei "Ryan" Shimizu, has an active business license registered to 710 Adelaide Place and states on the property's Airbnb listing that he is present in the home during guests' stays.

Neighbors say the owners of the house live in Texas. The house rents for $16,000 a month, according to the Multiple Listing Service.

Shimizu hosts another home in Santa Monica through Airbnb and states that he is also present there during guests' stays. The home at 2002 20th Street contains a private bedroom and a bedroom with bunk beds. The property's business license is registered to Chisato Tanabe.

Both properties are also listed on another website, relaxtay.com. The website also lists several apartments in Los Angeles as short-term rentals.

Preonas said he and other neighbors have reached out to the city of Santa Monica to shut down the short-term rental at 710 Adelaide Place on the basis that Shimizu is violating the home-sharing ordinance by renting out two properties.

They have also argued that Shimizu is operating a business in a residential area and violating building and fire codes by sleeping up to 36 people in the five-bedroom house.

"What's frustrating to me is that you have an ordinance that has no limit on the number of people who can home-share," Preonas said. "This guy has set up a hotel in our neighborhood."

City spokesperson Constance Farrell said the city approved a home-sharing application for 710 Adelaide Place that indicated the property could host a maximum of 16 overnight guests. The Code Enforcement Division is investigating multiple complaints that neighbors have made regarding the use of the property, she said.

"City staff will continue to investigate this situation and consider any appropriate enforcement or legislative responses," Farrell said.

Shimizu said he is operating a legal and licensed business at 710 Adelaide Place. A city inspector did not find any issues at the property, he added.

"I'm doing it in a good manner," he said. "I'm not doing anything wrong to the neighborhood."

"That seemed radical at the time," Sanders told the crowd at Samohi over and over again Friday evening as he discussed many of his signature policies.

The 77-year-old presidential candidate addressed an energized crowd at Samohi's Memorial Greek Amphitheater, pledging to take on the health insurance, pharmaceutical and fossil fuel industries, break up Wall Street and guarantee Medicare and free college for all. He also spoke in support of immigration reform, ending mass incarceration and a federal $15 minimum wage.

While he denounced President Donald Trump several times, earning cheers from the crowd, Sanders mainly focused on his usual policy proposals and how to combat income inequality, racism and xenophobia.

"This country is moving toward an oligarchic form of society," he said. "And I'll tell you what oligarchy is about, and you won't see it on CBS, or NBC or ABC tonight, but what oligarchy is about is three people in America owning more wealth than the bottom half of the American people, and tonight, half a million people will be sleeping out on the streets."

The Vermont senator touched on the affordable housing crisis in California, saying that part of his $1 trillion infrastructure plan includes building millions of affordable housing units. But he also delved into local politics by endorsing a "Hotel Housekeepers' Bill of Rights" the Santa Monica City Council will vote on next month.

Susan Minato of the union UNITE HERE Local 11 told the rally before Sanders came onstage that he endorsed the proposed law, which would require non-unionized hotels to provide housekeepers with panic buttons and other protections from sexual assault, fair compensation for heavy workloads, job security and training.

Other organizations that have endorsed the ordinance include the Santa Monica Democratic Club, Democratic Socialists of America – Los Angeles and several UCLA School of Law groups.

Local hotels are organizing against the measure before it goes before the city council in late August, however. In May, the Hotel Association of Los Angeles released a report claiming the law would be duplicative of state laws on sexual harassment training and cut into hotel profits.

Sanders said Friday that his campaign is about redefining the basic economic rights of human beings.

"In this country, it must be a human right for all of our people to have access to a decent paying job," he said. "It is a human right to have healthcare and be able to go to the doctor when you need to. It is a human right to have quality education and be able to get all the education that you need, regardless of your income."

Many people who attended the rally said they had supported Sanders since his first presidential campaign in 2016 and believe he is the only candidate in a crowded Democratic field who can beat Trump in the general election.

Reina Quintanilla of Van Nuys, Calif. said she supports Sanders because he has remained politically consistent during his decades in office as a mayor, congressman and senator.

"He's the only one that's been consistent over the decades," Quintanilla said. "Clearly, he's the strongest candidate against Trump."

Jonathan Ponce, Victorville, Calif. said he thinks Sanders has gained momentum since his first presidential run, despite the fact that he has fallen behind former Vice President Joe Biden in the polls and has fallen behind several rivals in recent fundraising.

"Bernie has the strongest grassroots organization out there, and he has the best chance of defeating Donald Trump," Ponce said.
