Trio of waterfront restaurants open shop at Marina Boardwalk

FOOD: OUVO, HiHo Cheeseburger, and KazuNori all opened at the Boardwalk Marina Shops.

Be it handmade pasta straight out of Italy, hand rolls prepared with the freshest fish, or a good old comforting cheeseburger, there's something for everyone at the new Boardwalk Marina restaurants.

The trio of restaurants-UOVO, HiHo Cheeseburger and KazuNori-come from the same extended family of owners and each opened doors this month at the dining and retail complex by Pier 44 on the 4600 block of Admiralty Way.

OUVO made a name for itself when it opened in Santa Monica in 2017 with a claim to be the only place outside of Italy that serves fresh pasta made in Italy. Four years later, the company is still holding true to its promise and serves pasta handmade in Bologna and shipped overnight to Los Angeles.

In addition to the waterfront views, guests also have the options to watch their pasta being made at the indoor pasta bar. The chef prepares each dish separately and serves it directly to diners.

"Whether it's a part of one of our five course tasting menus or a single plate of pasta, we make each

Several Santa Monica beaches are under a warning from the County Department of Public Health for elevated bacteria levels but experts said the concerns are probably unrelated to a recent sewage discharge.

The Los Angeles County Department of Public Health is cautioning residents who are planning to visit several Los Angeles County beaches near Dockweiler and El Segundo to be careful of swimming, surfing, and playing in ocean waters around discharging storm drains, creeks, and rivers.

Car-to-car shooting ends in fatal crash in Venice

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

Authorities have identified the man who was killed in a shooting in Venice on Tuesday morning.

Lucas Zamora, 20, of Fresno was shot about 10:45 a.m. Tuesday at Brooks and Pacific avenues, according to the Los Angeles Police Department.

After nearby neighbors heard the shooting, Zamora drove a short distance away and crashed into the Westminster Senior Center, police said. He was pronounced dead at the scene, the Los Angeles County coroner's office reported.

Police found Zamora's crashed vehicle riddled with bullet holes from a car-to-car shooting.

No arrests have been made and LAPD is continuing to investigate the incident.

City originally estimated to owe IRS over $3 million, settles for $116,416

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

As a result of the City's failure to issue tax forms to attorneys for certain settlement payments, an IRS audit sought over $3 million from the City, but is now resolving the issue with a $116,416 payment.

The Internal Revenue Service's audit focused on the City's settlement payments for years 2017 to 2019.

According to Interim City Attorney George Cardona, the vast majority of claims were for personal injury and therefore not taxable to the plaintiff. However, it was often the City's practice to issue joint payment to plaintiffs and their attorneys, which requires the issuing of form 1099 to attorneys for their tax filings. The city generally did not issue this form.

As a result, the IRS audit sought to charge the City for the missing taxes from attorney settlements.

"The IRS initially sought to impose backup withholding taxes penalties and interest on all of the

US economy surpasses pre-pandemic size with 6.5% Q2 growth

MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

Fueled by vaccinations and government aid, the U.S. economy grew at a solid 6.5% annual rate last quarter in another sign that the nation has achieved a sustained recovery from the pandemic recession. The total size of the economy has now surpassed its pre-pandemic level.

Thursday's report from the Commerce Department estimated that the nation's gross domestic product — its total output of goods and services — accelerated in the April-June quarter from an already robust 6.3% annual growth rate in the first quarter of the year.

The latest figure fell well below the 8%-plus annual growth rate that many economists had predicted for the second quarter. But the miss was due mainly to clogged supply chains related to the rapid reopening of the economy. Those bottlenecks exerted a larger-than-expected drag on companies' efforts to restock their shelves. The resulting slowdown in inventory rebuilding, in fact, subtracted 1.1 percentage points from last quarter's annual growth.

By contrast, consumer spending — the main fuel of the U.S. economy — surged for a second straight quarter, advancing at an 11.8% annual rate. Spending on goods grew at an 11.6% rate, and spending on services, from restaurant meals to airline tickets, expanded at a 12% pace as vaccinations encouraged more Americans to shop, travel and eat out.

Companies, too, spent with confidence last quarter. Business investment surged at an 8% annual rate in the April-June quarter, adding 1.1 percentage point to GDP.

With consumers and businesses expected to keep spending, many analysts expect the economy to grow at a robust pace of around 6.5% for all of 2021, despite the supply shortages and the possibility of a resurgent coronavirus in the form of the highly contagious delta variant. That would amount to the strongest calendar-year growth since 1984.

Growth that strong would far exceed the 2% to 3% average annual rates of recent decades. And it would represent a striking bounce-back from the economy's 3.4% contraction last year in the midst of the pandemic, the worst decline since the 1940s.

Underpinning the rapid recovery have been trillions in federal rescue money, ranging from stimulus checks to expanded unemployment benefits to small business aid to just-distributed child tax credit payments. And millions of affluent households have benefited from a vast increase in their wealth resulting from surging home equity and stock market gains.

"Consumers are going to continue to drive the economic train," said Mark Zandi, chief economist at Moody's Analytics. "There is a lot of excess savings, a lot of cash in people's checking accounts."

Jen Psaki, the White House press secretary, hailed the GDP report and called on Congress to go further by passing the administration's proposals to vastly expand the nation's infrastructure.

Overhanging the bright economic forecasts is the threat posed by the delta variant. The U.S. is now averaging more than 60,000 confirmed new cases a day, up from only about 12,000 a month ago. Should a surge in viral infections cause many consumers to hunker down again and pull back on spending, it would weaken the recovery.

For now, the economy is showing sustained strength. Last month, America's employers added 850,000 jobs, well above the average of the previous three months. And average hourly pay rose a solid 3.6% compared with a year earlier, faster than the pre-pandemic annual pace.

Consumer confidence has reached its highest level since the pandemic struck in March 2020, a key reason why retail sales remain solid as Americans shift their spending back to services — from restaurant meals and airline trips to entertainment events and shopping sprees.

The economy is also receiving substantial support from the Federal Reserve. On Wednesday, the Fed reaffirmed that it will maintain its key short-term interest rate at a record low near zero to keep short-term borrowing costs low. It will also continue to buy government-backed bonds to put downward pressure on long-term loan rates to encourage borrowing and spending.

The recovery, in fact, has been so rapid, with pent-up demand from consumers driving growth after a year of lockdowns, that one looming risk is a potential spike in inflation

Biden to allow eviction moratorium to expire Saturday

MICHAEL CASEY
Associated Press

The Biden administration announced Thursday it will allow a nationwide ban on evictions to expire Saturday, arguing that its hands are tied after the Supreme Court signaled the moratorium would only be extended until the end of the month.

The White House said President Joe Biden would have liked to extend the federal eviction moratorium due to spread of the highly contagious delta variant of the coronavirus. Instead, Biden called on "Congress to extend the eviction moratorium to protect such vulnerable renters and their families without delay."

Aides to Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer and Sen. Sherrod Brown, the chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, said the two are working on legislation to extend the moratorium. Democrats will try to pass a bill as soon as possible and are urging Republicans not to block it.

The moratorium was put in place last September by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

"Given the recent spread of the delta variant, including among those Americans both most likely to face evictions and lacking vaccinations, President Biden would have strongly supported a decision by the CDC to further extend this eviction moratorium to protect renters at this moment of heightened vulnerability," the White House said in a statement. "Unfortunately, the Supreme Court has made clear that this option is no longer available."

The court mustered a bare 5-4 majority last month, to allow the eviction ban to continue through the end of July. One of those in the majority, Justice Brett Kavanaugh, made clear he would block any additional extensions unless there was "clear and specific congressional authorization."

By the end of March, 6.4 million American households were behind on their rent, according to the Department of Housing and Urban Development. As of July 5, roughly 3.6 million people in the U.S. said they faced eviction in the next two months, according to the U.S. Census Bureau's Household Pulse Survey.

Dr. Rochelle Walensky, director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, said in June this would be the last time the moratorium would be extended when she set the deadline for July 31. It was initially put in place to prevent further spread of COVID-19 by people put out on the streets and into shelters.

Housing advocates and some lawmakers have called for the moratorium to be extended due to the increase in coronavirus cases and the fact so little rental assistance has been distributed.

Congress has allocated nearly $47 billion in assistance that is supposed to go to help tenants pay off months of back rent. But so far, only about $3 billion of the first tranche of $25 billion has been distributed through June by states and localities. Some states like New York have distributed almost nothing, while several have only approved a few million dollars.

"The confluence of the surging delta variant with 6.5 million families behind on rent and at risk of eviction when the moratorium expires demands immediate action," said Diane Yentel, executive director of the National Low Income Housing Coalition.

"The public health necessity of extended protections for renters is obvious. If federal court cases made a broad extension impossible, the Biden administration should implement all possible alternatives, including a more limited moratorium on federally backed properties."

Gene Sperling, who is charged with overseeing implementation of Biden's $1.9 trillion coronavirus rescue package, said it was key that states and local authorities speed up the rental assistance distribution.

"The message is that there are no excuses," he told The Associated Press.

"States and cities across the country have shown these programs can work, that they can get money out the door effectively and efficiently," he continued. "The fact that some states and cities are showing they can do this efficiently and effectively makes clear that there is no reason that every state and city shouldn't be accelerating their funds to landlords and tenants, particularly in light of the end of the CDC eviction moratorium."

The trouble getting rental assistance to those who need it has prompted the Biden administration to hold several events in the past month aimed at pressuring states and cities to increase their distribution, coax landlords to participate and make it easier for tenants to get money directly.

Associate Attorney General Vanita Gupta also has released an open letter to state courts around the country encouraging them to pursue measures that would keep eviction cases out of the courts. On Wednesday, the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau unveiled a tool that allows tenants to find information about rental assistance in their area.

Despite these efforts, some Democratic lawmakers had demanded the administration extend the moratorium.

"This pandemic is not behind us, and our federal housing policies should reflect that stark reality. With the United States facing the most severe eviction crisis in its history, our local and state governments still need more time to distribute critical rental assistance to help keep a roof over the heads of our constituents," Democratic

Stafford makes quick connections during first Rams practice

JOE REEDY
AP Sports Writer

Matthew Stafford said he felt like a rookie at the end of his first training camp practice with the Los Angeles Rams. But the quarterback still made some throws Wednesday that show he is entering his 13th season in the league.

Even though Stafford is still getting up to speed with the offense, he hit DeSean Jackson on a deep ball up the left sideline during 11-on-11 drills that drew large applause from the crowd.

"I think it was good play design. It also helps to have a guy like DeSean who can still run like that," Stafford said. "It's fun to be able to try to set guys up for success."

Stafford — who was acquired in a blockbuster trade with the Detroit Lions on March 18 — and Jackson connected often, including once on a 20-yard pass to the near sideline as the pocket around Stafford was breaking down. Jackson, a Long Beach native, is also in his first season in Los Angeles after signing as a free agent during the offseason.

He also got the other receivers involved, including a nice completion to Cooper Kupp up the far sideline.

The next two weeks though for Stafford will continue to be a learning process as he continues to get on the same page with coach Sean McVay and the receivers.

"That just comes with experience and reps. I can sit in the classroom with Sean and all those guys and just talk about it. I'm just trying to soak it all in and trying to get as comfortable as I possibly can as quickly as I can," Stafford said.

Even though Stafford has tried to preach patience, McVay thinks that Stafford is already ahead of the learning curve.

"He has very seamlessly acclimated himself very well up to this point and, and he'll continue to do that just by being himself," McVay said. "On the field it seems like he feels very comfortable out here. There's a lot of little nuances but he definitely has great command."

McVay and the rest of the Rams also seemed to be invigorated being back at UC Irvine after last year's camp was held at the team's complex in Thousand Oaks due to the coronavirus pandemic. The Rams are practicing at the Orange County campus until prior to the first preseason game against the Chargers on Aug. 14.

Offensive line coach Kevin Carberry was not on the field after testing positive for COVID-19. McVay said Carberry is fully vaccinated and is hopeful he can return soon. Carberry is running meetings virtually and needs two negative tests within a 24-hour period to return.

Critical Race Theory: What Is It and Why It Matters

The Committee For Racial Justice (CRJ) August 1 workshop from 6:30 to 8 p.m. will focus on Critical Race Theory - a widely misunderstood concept which the conservatives in the US are attempting to demonize in an effort to scare folks into supporting their political goals.

Southern California school districts (like others around our country) already have started to experience pushback on curriculum that gets students talking about social justice issues and equity concerns.

A panel of experts will help us understand this controversy and how we can help by talking with others more clearly about Critical Race Theory and the importance of understanding the systemic nature of the racism which still surrounds us.

This discussion will be moderated by Dr. Richard Tahvildaran-Jesswein, SMC Professor of Government & Race & Ethnicity and member of the school board for the Santa Monica/Malibu United School District.

Our panelists will be Dr. Ben Drati, District Superintendent of SMMUSD; Dr. John Pascarella, Chief Academic Officer of K12 Professional Learning at the USC Race and Equity Center; Dr. Angela Clark-Louque, Professor of Educational Leadership at California State University, San Bernardino; and Dr. Satinder Hawkins, District Director of American Culture & Ethnic Studies in Santa Monica/Malibu.

Come to see why Critical Race Theory is important, to learn what is at stake, and to take part in the discussion.

Interested folks not already on the CRJ email list can go the Committee For Racial Justice Facebook page for updates.

For more information, call Joanne at 310-422-5431.

Biden orders tough new vaccination rules for federal workers

ALEXANDRA JAFFE, RICARDO ALONSO-ZALDIVAR AND JONATHAN LEMIRE
Associated Press

President Joe Biden on Thursday announced sweeping new pandemic requirements aimed at boosting vaccination rates for millions of federal workers and contractors as he lamented the "American tragedy" of rising-yet-preventable deaths among the unvaccinated.

Federal workers will be required to sign forms attesting they've been vaccinated against the coronavirus or else comply with new rules on mandatory masking, weekly testing, distancing and more. The strict new guidelines are aimed at increasing sluggish vaccination rates among the huge number of Americans who draw federal paychecks — and to set an example for private employers around the country.

"Right now, too many people are dying or watching someone they love die and say, 'If I'd just got the vaccine,'" Biden said in a somber address from the East Room of the White House. "This is an American tragedy. People are dying who don't have to die."

However, pushback is certain to Biden's action. It puts him squarely in the center of a fierce political debate surrounding the government's ability to compel Americans to follow public health guidelines.

The federal government directly employs about 4 million people, but Biden's action could affect many more when federal contractors are factored in. New York University professor of public service Paul Light estimates there are nearly 7 million more employees who could potentially be included, combining those who work for companies that contract with the government and those working under federal grants.

Biden, seemingly fed up with persistent vaccine resistance among many Americans, delivered a sharp rebuke to those who have yet to get shots, saying "they get sick and fill up our hospitals," taking beds away from others who need them.

"If in fact you are unvaccinated, you present a problem to yourself, to your family and those with whom you work," he said bluntly."

At the same time, he expressed sympathy for people who have received their shots and are "frustrated with the consequences of the minority that fail to get vaccinated." And he again emphasized that the fight against the virus is far from over, girding Americans to remain strong in the face of setbacks in the pandemic.

"I know this is hard to hear. I know it's frustrating. I know it's exhausting to think we're still in this fight. I know we hoped this would be a simple straightforward line, without problems or new challenges. But that isn't real life," he said.

His comments came as some 60% of American adults have been fully vaccinated. He had set a July 4 goal to get at least one shot in 70% of adults, and is still not quite there. The latest figure is 69.3%. And there remains significant resistance from many Republicans and some unions to vaccine mandates for employers.

Reflecting an awareness of the political landmines surrounding mandates, administration officials emphasize that their plan does not require workers to receive the vaccine but aims to make life more difficult for those who are unvaccinated to encourage them to comply. Biden directed his team to take steps to apply similar requirements to all federal contractors.

He also directed the Defense Department to look into adding the COVID-19 shot to its list of required vaccinations for members of the military. Service members already are required to get as many as 17 vaccines, depending on where they are based around the world.

Over and over, the president repeated that the vast majority of those falling ill and dying in the new wave of the delta virus are unvaccinated, putting others at risk and endangering the nation's fragile economic recovery and return to normalcy.

"It's an American blessing that we have vaccines for each and every American. It's such a shame to squander that blessing," said Biden.

He praised the recent increase in Republican lawmakers urging those who are not vaccinated — many of whom, polling suggests, identify as conservatives — to get their shots. And seeking to push back against skepticism among some Republicans over the safety of the vaccine, he gave a nod to predecessor Donald Trump, noting that it was "developed and authorized under a Republican administration."

"This is not about red states and blue states," he said. "It's literally about life and death, life and death."

Biden renewed his calls for schools to fully open this fall, although children under 12 are not yet eligible to receive the vaccine. And he said that public health officials do not yet believe Americans need a booster vaccine despite the highly contagious delta variant fueling the surge.

The new pressure on workers to get vaccinated could work because evidence shows people would rather get the vaccine than deal with burdens they consider onerous at work, said Lawrence Gostin, a professor of global health law at Georgetown University Law School.

"People would much rather roll up their sleeves and get a jab, than undergo weekly testing and universal masking," he said. "In many ways, this is really not a mandate, it's giving workers a choice."

Thursday's move is not just about federal workers.

EVICTION

U.S. Reps. Cori Bush of Missouri, Jimmy Gomez of California and Ayanna Pressley of Massachusetts said in a joint statement.

But landlords, who have opposed the moratorium and challenged it repeatedly in court, were against any extension. They have argued the focus should be on speeding up the distribution of rental assistance.

This week, the National Apartment Association and several others this week filed a federal lawsuit asking for $26 billion in damages due to the impact of the moratorium.

"Any extension of the eviction moratorium equates to an unfunded government mandate that forces housing providers to deliver a costly service without compensation and saddles renters with insurmountable debt," association president and CEO Bob Pinnegar said, adding that the current crisis highlights the need for more affordable housing.

"Our nation faces an alarming housing affordability disaster on the horizon — it's past time for the government to enact responsible and sustainable solutions that ultimately prioritize making both renters and housing providers whole," he added.

Associated Press Supreme Court reporter Mark Sherman and Congressional reporter Kevin Freking contributed from Washington.

ECONOMY

that could get out of control. Consumer prices jumped 5.4% in June from a year ago, the sharpest spike in 13 years and the fourth straight month of sizable price jumps.

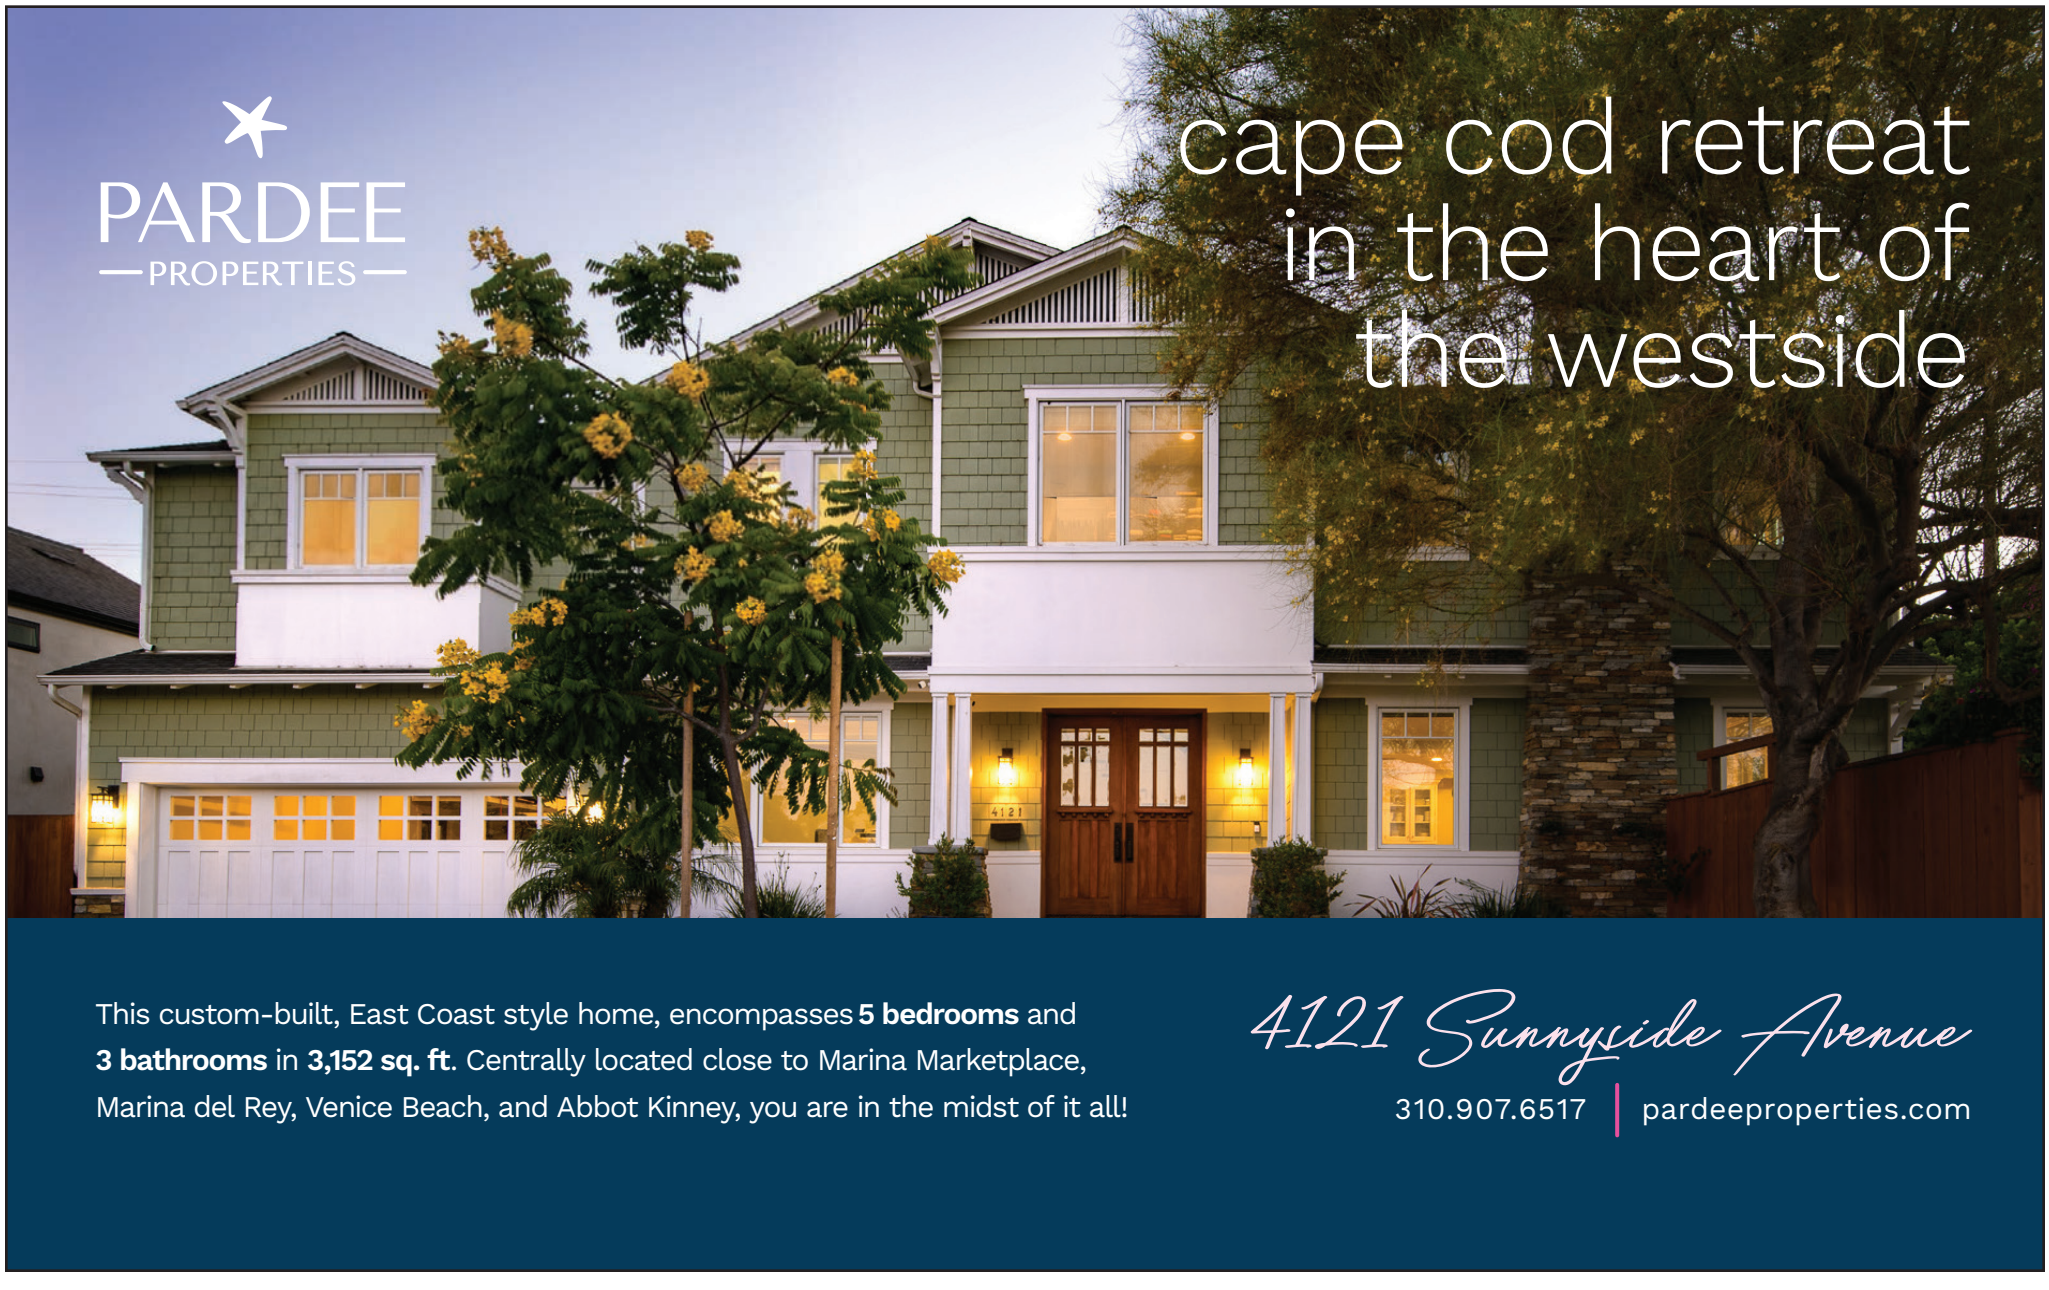

The measure of consumer inflation in the second-quarter GDP report showed an annual rise of 3.4% for core inflation, which excludes food and energy. It was the fastest such jump since 1991.

In addition to the drag on GDP from weak inventory restocking, reflecting the supply chain problems, housing construction fell at a 9.8% annual rate last quarter. This decline reflected, in part, the troubles home builders have had in obtaining lumber and other supplies.

Some economists have warned that by choosing not to begin withdrawing its extraordinary support for the economy, the Fed may end up responding too late and too aggressively to high inflation by quickly jacking up rates and perhaps causing another recession.

But at a news conference Wednesday, Fed Chair Jerome Powell underscored his belief that recent inflation readings reflect price spikes in a narrow range of categories — from used cars and airline tickets to hotel rooms and auto rentals — that have been distorted by temporary supply shortages related to the economy's swift reopening. Those shortages involve items like furniture, appliances, clothing and computer chips, among others.

RESTAURANT

dish individually, literally one at a time," said co-founder Carolo Massimini, adding that this is nearly unheard of at any restaurant.

Massimini and fellow co-founder Jerry Greenberg first had the idea to ship pasta from Italy after coming to the conclusion that it never tastes quite as good when it's made in the US. From their perspective the traditional Italian pasta making methods, such as sheeting and cutting, and the Italian ingredients, such as red egg yolks, will always make for a superior product.

KazuNori also places an emphasis on traditional cooking methods and ingredients, but applies this to sushi and not spaghetti. The restaurant specializes in hand rolls and is named after the celebrated sushi chef Kazunori Nozawa who introduced the cylindrical-style hand roll to the United States over 40 years ago.

In the new Marina location guests can sit at the counter and watch the rolls being prepared in front of them. KazuNori comes from the team behind SUGARFISH, and brings the same authentic Japanese style and simplicity at a more affordable price point.

"Marina del Rey is home to the first SUGARFISH that opened in 2008, so for us it's exciting to bring KazuNori to our same audience who has been so great to us over the years," said co-founder Lele Massimini. "We look forward to seeing our guests enjoying Nozawa style hand rolls with a great view of the water."

The final restaurant opening at the Boardwalk offers food from a little closer to home, but shares a similar commitment to honing in top quality ingredients.

HiHo, which like OUVO previously launched in Santa Monica, is now open on the Marina Boardwalk. HiHo specializes in cheeseburgers and makes each patty with 100 percent grass-fed Wagyu beef imported from a farming cooperative in New Zealand. The beef is sustainably raised, certified humane and both antibiotic and GMO free.

There is also a vegetarian burger on the menu, a fried chicken sandwich, and a series of classic American desserts including banana cream pie, key lime pie and cheesecake.

"We're excited to open the doors of our new waterfront location," said HiHo co-founder Matt Levin. "We're grateful for the support we've received from our guests on the Westside since opening HiHo in Santa Monica and we look forward to serving the Marina community at Pier 44."

IRS

City's settlement payments from 2017 to 2019, a total amount conservatively estimated to be in excess of $3 million," said Interim City Attorney George Cardona in a July 27 City Council meeting.

However, just because the City failed to issue the forms, does not mean that all attorneys failed to pay taxes due on the settlement fees they received from the City.

According to Cardona, the City corrected its procedures and underwent an evidence gathering process that demonstrated the "overwhelming majority" of attorneys did pay their taxes. This information was presented to the IRS to correct the fee the City was liable to pay.

"The IRS has offered to resolve the audit with a proposed assessment to the City of $116,468, relating to 11 particular settlements," said Cardona, recommending that Council approve the settlement, which members did unanimously.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (JULY 30)

A gorgeous harmonizing of disparate elements takes place as you answer the solar return invitation to less thinking, more feeling. You'll fall into a more natural rhythm in regard to work and health. You'll be an essential part of a small group and accomplish big things there. Upgrades will add ease and style to your daily life. Cancer and Libra adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 19, 1, 4, 44 and 15.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). As the warrior of the zodiac, you observe the rules of battle, aware of the advance and the retreat. What matters is honor in both scenarios -- to be brave and never to desert the others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Falling in love with a person is different from falling in love with the way you feel when you're around that person. The distinction will be worth noting. Healthy relationships are thoroughly considered.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You'll disagree, but you won't disrespect. For this reason, you're just the person who can help everyone work together for a common aim. Good leaders unify the group.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). When the apple cart of expectation overturns, it's a surprise, but it doesn't have to be an upset or an obstacle. This is a chance to question and update your premise to match reality.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Even though you love to learn, you'd rather figure things out yourself than listen to someone serve up what they think you ought to know. Others share your preference. Instead of preaching, you'll offer an opportunity for discovery.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). It's like you're on a hike, striving to get up to the elevation that will allow you a better view of the situation. The miles you travel today will help you get the past into proper perspective and glimpse the future, too.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). If you wouldn't say something in front of the smartest person you know, don't say it. Also, consider whether you're hanging out in the right places. Your company should elevate you, not cause you to dip your standards.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Which has a higher value, appropriateness or humor? Honesty or creativity? Which is more useful to cultivate, abundance or safety? There are no absolute right answers. You'll notice your value system is changing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You've told your story many times and in different ways, smartly catering to the themes on the table. What you add to today's themes will really help the others, especially if you keep your contribution brief.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). People from other backgrounds may have vastly different notions of what's appropriate. Most will be able to adjust to the expectations of the moment, as long as those are clearly communicated in a way they can understand.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). The successful timing of the day can be summed up in one word: early. It will pay to get a jump on everything from traffic to investments to the day itself, arriving on the scene before the others.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). There's no question you've been gifted with talent. But what is more valuable is your other gift -- the difficulty you were handed. Overcoming this has made you capable and ready to turn today's opportunity into gold.

BEACHES

discharged from the Hyperion plant into the ocean and ocean waters but the plant experienced an emergency discharge earlier this month. The discharge and failure to notify residents has triggered calls for more transparency around water quality in the area.

"This catastrophic accident not only did great damage to our local beaches and water, but also undermined the public's trust in their government's ability to serve them and keep them safe," said Los Angeles Controller Galperin. "Residents have the right to know exactly why the sewage spill happened, its impact on the area, the cost to taxpayers and what steps will be taken to prevent another similar incident in the future."

Bacterial levels often fluctuate from day to day and can be impacted by recent rain events. Los Angeles experienced some monsoonal rain on Monday with about .12 inches falling in Downtown Los Angeles.

Recent special ocean water sampling conducted by the Department of Public Health on Tuesday, July 27 determined that several beach areas near the Hyperion plant exceeded state standards for bacteria in water. These areas are under a watch until Friday.

Affected beach areas include: El Segundo Beach, Grand Avenue storm drain (Near Dockweiler Tower 60), Dockweiler State Beach, Ballona Creek (Near Dockweiler Tower 40), Culver Blvd storm drain, Hyperion Plant outfall, Imperial Highway storm drain (Dockweiler Tower 56), Westchester storm drain and World Way extension.

Other beaches also under advisory include: Santa Monica Pier in Santa Monica, Montana Ave. storm drain at Santa Monica Beach (Santa Monica North Tower 8), Wilshire Bl. storm drain at Santa Monica Beach (Santa Monica North Tower 12), Temescal Canyon storm drain at Will Rogers State Beach and Avalon Beach at Catalina Island (50 feet east of the pier).

These advisories are very likely due to day-to-day fluctuations in ocean water bacteria levels. At this time, there is no reason to suspect these increases in beach water bacteria are due to the recent sewage discharge at Hyperion.

"When rain falls, it drains off the streets, sidewalks, lawns, and parking lots into the storm drain system," said Luke Ginger, a water quality scientist with Heal The Bay. "These storm drains discharge the rain water directly into the ocean untreated. It is a huge source of pollution at our beaches, and it's why we advocate for storm water capture & reuse."

While not on any of the warning lists, the area near the Pico-Kenter Storm Drain experienced flooding on Monday following the rain.

"During the winter months, the county usually digs a channel from the storm drains out to the ocean with a backhoe, but those channels get filled in at the beginning of summer," said Ginger. "That's probably why they are pooling up. These pools in front of the storm drains are heavily polluted and people should stay away from them. We advise everyone going in the water to do so at least 100 yards upcoast or downcoast from the storm drain pools (even if they aren't flowing into the ocean yet). Personally, I have seen a lot of parents let their kids play near these pools not knowing that they are dangerous. I think most people assume we have a better system for handling storm water – they don't anticipate there being polluted ponds on the beach."

Recorded information on beach conditions is available 24- hours a day on the County's beach closure hotline: 1-800- 525-5662. Information is also available online at our website: PublicHealth.LACounty.gov/Beach/.

VACCINE

The administration hopes it will nudge private companies push their workers harder to get vaccines that, while widely recognized as safe and effective, have yet to receive full approval from the Food and Drug Administration.

"I think we've reached this tipping point, and Biden's announcement will provide a lot of air cover for companies and boards of directors who have difficult decisions facing them," said Jeff Hyman, a Chicago-based business author and recruiter for start-up companies.

Some of the nation's biggest corporations have moved to require vaccinations for their workers. Tech giants Facebook and Google announced this week their employees would have to show proof they've been fully vaccinated before returning to work.

Delta and United airlines are requiring new employees to show proof of vaccination. Goldman Sachs and Morgan Stanley are requiring workers to disclose their vaccination status though not requiring them to be vaccinated.

But fewer than 10% of employers have said they intend to require all employees to be vaccinated, based on periodic surveys by the research firm Gartner.

Still, there is opposition.

State lawmakers across the U.S. have introduced more than 100 bills aiming to prohibit employers from requiring vaccination as a condition of employment, according to the National Academy for State Health Policy. At least six states have approved such bills.

The Justice Department and the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission have both said no federal laws prevent businesses from requiring vaccinations as a condition of employment and the federal policy would take precedent. But the "medical freedom" bills underscore the resistance such guidance may encounter at the state level.

Government actions in New York City and California have faced resistance from local unions. And prior to Biden's announcement, some national unions were speaking out against it.

Larry Cosme, President of the Federal Law Enforcement Officers Association, which represents 30,000 federal officers and agents, said in a statement while the organization supports the vaccine it opposes compelling it.

"Forcing people to undertake a medical procedure is not the American way and is a clear civil rights violation no matter how proponents may seek to justify it," he said.

Lemire reported from New York.
