At Thursdays Twilight Concert Series, Daily Press Publisher Rob Schwenker proposed during intermission to girlfriend, Lisa Gumenick. She said yes.

Council approves new subsidy for senior renters

MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

City Hall has approved a new program to help some of the city's most at need renters stay in their homes.

The Preserving Our Diversity program will provide financial aid to low-income, long-term residents, aged 62 and older, who live in rent controlled apartments said the staff report.

The POD program would set aside $200,000 to help seniors pay rent and another $100,000 to pay for administrative costs. To identify the eventual recipients, City Hall sent a survey to about 27,500 rent controlled households. Officials received 814 responses and of those, 433 did not already receive a government benefit (a prerequisite for the Santa Monica program).

After applying additional criteria, the program identified 26 individuals for the program. The proposal calls for providing 12 months of rental assistance while the study is conducted with funding for an additional two months to conclude or transition the program. While it's being called a "pilot" program, staff said they have an expectation the 26 individuals chosen for the first year will continue to receive city aid beyond the conclusion of the 12-14 month study.

According to staff, the amount of the subsidy will vary per household and is based on providing tenants with a minimum quality of life after paying for housing costs. Staff said in order to meet basic needs, a one-person household needs to have $740 available after rent while a two-person household needs $1,293. Staff said the average subsidy for the first 26 applicants will be $460 for one person and $720 for two.

Multi family units are composting

MARINA ANDALON
Daily Press Staff Writer

Residents in Santa Monica are collecting their food scraps and saving them to create a natural soil.

Recently Global Green, Santa Monica based non-profit has educated over 650 households on the benefits of composting food scraps and provided valuable training and resources. This action has led to nearly 85,000 pounds of organic waste being composted.

Composting is the natural recycling of organic materials like food scraps and yard waste. Through the natural process where bacteria and other living organisms break down the scraps and yard waste are formed into a more basic building block of soil.

The end product of the process is something that you can add to soil to give it greater nutritional value, for the plants, and aid in its ability to retain water.

Global Green is an advocate for sustainable living and launched the food scrap pilot project in 2014 with the goal being to divert food scraps from landfills and find the best practice in effective tenant outreach engagement.

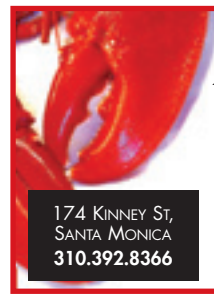

They wanted to see what could guide a large-scale program. It gained a lot of support in 2016, and financial support from the Walmart Foundation.

It wasn't long until Global Green expanded to 17 new and mostly low to middle income multifamily dwellings.

Global Green is consistently working in collaboration with municipalities, housing associa-

LA 2024 celebrates LA84 Games volunteers on 33rd Anniversary of Opening Ceremony

LA 2024 recently held a celebratory reunion for volunteers of the Los Angeles 1984 Olympic Games at the iconic LA Memorial Coliseum, honoring the 33rd anniversary of the Games' Opening Ceremony. Bid leaders applauded the volunteers for making the LA 1984 Games a success, pointing to their contributions as a key factor driving Angelenos' overwhelming support for bringing the Games back to the City of Angels for a third time.

LA 2024 bid leaders pledged to build on LA 1984's powerful legacy of Olympic volunteerism. In February, the bid committee established a first-of-its-kind Volunteer Service Program that spotlights opportunities in 2017 for Angelenos to make a difference in their communities through volunteer work and community service, providing tangible benefits to the region during the bid phase. Since the program's inception LA 2024 has attracted more than 12,000 volunteers and has provided support for the Angel City Games, Discover LA, Friends of the LA River, Heal the Bay, LA Marathon, Special Olympics Southern California, the United Way of Greater LA, and more.

LA 2024 CEO Gene Sykes said: "It's a thrill to be at the LA Coliseum celebrating the men and women who volunteered to make the 1984 Olympic Games such a resounding success. The more than 30,000 volunteers of the LA 1984 Games set a tremendous and inspiring example for our bid committee.

"The power of the Games and Angelenos' enthusiasm to help each other is such that LA 2024 has already been able to attract more than 10,000 volunteers who are ready to serve our city today. We relish the opportunity to continue the Volunteer Program in the event that LA is awarded a Games, so that Games-time visitors are not only welcomed by a dedicated and experienced team of volunteers with detailed knowledge of the LA Games Plans, but also are provided world-class service as a result of volunteers that have been deeply involved with the bid and organizing committees in the years leading up to the Games."

More than 200 LA 1984 volunteers were joined at the reunion by Olympic champions and LA 2024 Athletes' Advisory Commission members Bart Conner and Nadia Comaneci. Conner, who won two gymnastics golds at LA 1984, delivered the keynote speech thanking the volunteers for their contributions, and presided over the lighting of the Coliseum's cauldron.

Two-time Olympic champion and LA 2024 Athletes' Advisory Commission Member Bart Conner said: "Simply put, the Games cannot happen without the help of volunteers. They are the soul of the Games. Volunteers are essential to ensuring athletes have everything they need to perform at their very best come competition day. The volunteers at the '84 Games were unparalleled in their enthusiasm, work ethic and passion. It's an honor to be here today to celebrate their contributions to the '84 Games and the Olympic Movement."

In addition to interacting with Olympians, posing for pictures with torches from the 1984 Games, and perusing a wide variety of Olympic memorabilia, volunteers were asked to share their favorite memories of the 1984 Games.

Daryn Benton, who volunteered at the Main Press Center, said: "I was a young kid and I loved meeting all the people from around the world and trading pins with them. It was so exciting to interact with the international community and learn about their countries. That probably started me on my travel quest. I've been to over 40 countries now and visited several past Olympic villages."

Ted Mergenthaler, a volunteer at the Olympic Village at UCLA, said: "[I have] so many memories, but watching athletes return in triumph to the UCLA Village with their medals was special."

Helen Yoon, who volunteered at both the Opening and the Closing Ceremony, said: "It was an amazing experience, helping with the Opening and Closing Ceremonies. It made me so proud to be an American, meeting and hosting athletes from all over the world. Also, the lack of traffic made it so easy to drive around."

Sam Wildman, who served as a hostess and greeter at Los Angeles International Airport, said: "Every day was memorable. The warm feeling of camaraderie among the volunteers was extraordinary - we felt like family. It was exciting to greet the athletes daily as they arrived at LAX, and to make them feel so comfortable to be here in LA for the 1984 Summer Olympics."

Metro Launches New Workforce Development Program

The Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (Metro) today launched Workforce Initiative Now-LA (WIN-LA), a groundbreaking workforce development program focused on creating career pathways in the transportation industry.

The event in downtown Los Angeles introduced WIN-LA to prime contractors, small businesses and other potential partners to encourage their participation in the new program that is designed to benefit the entire region.

"The expansion of our transportation system is going to create hundreds of thousands of new jobs, and we have a responsibility to make sure the people in our own communities have the skills to fill them," said Los Angeles Mayor and Metro Board Chair Eric Garcetti. "Workforce Initiative Now-Los Angeles will offer training resources to people across L.A. County, and prepare them for tomorrow's good-paying Metro jobs."

Career pathways include construction, non-construction opportunities in operations/maintenance, administration and professional services. Unique to the program, WIN-LA will provide support for participants in areas such as life skills development, skill set enhancement and educational attainment services through a collaboration of program partners. It also will increase the resources needed for training and placement of hard-to-fill positions within Metro and the transportation industry.

Approximately 39 percent of Metro's workforce will be eligible for retirement over the next three years with 69 percent of Metro employees currently over the age of 40. Succession planning is crucial to maintaining a viable agency and Metro needs a workforce to deliver its aggressive Measure M program over the next 40 years and beyond.

"Metro's WIN-LA program reinforces to the community our commitment as a teaching organization that attracts, develops, motivates and retains a world-class workforce," said L.A. County Supervisor and Metro Board Member Mark Ridley-Thomas. "Metro is in the midst of building the largest infrastructure program in the nation and substantial job opportunities in the transportation arena are available to those who are committed. We believe that WIN-LA will make it easier for people to train and apply and that is a win-win."

WIN-LA is designed to be a collaborative partnership between Metro and those institutions and organizations interested in helping job seekers, companies and local communities through demand-driven workforce services. The goal is to create career pathway opportunities in the transportation and construction industries.

"From employment training, assessment and placement to ongoing outreach, WIN-LA will give people the tools they need to build better lives and sustainable communities across Metro's service area," said Metro CEO Phillip A. Washington. "The program's first priority is putting people to work. To that end, it will provide potential employees with skills training, placement assistance and resources to help them secure industry positions with competitive wages and career possibilities and to keep those positions throughout their careers."

Measure M, a half-cent sales tax initiative approved by the voters in 2016, will provide $860 million annually to build 40 highway and transit projects throughout L.A. County over the next 40 years. It is expected to generate an additional 778,000 jobs.

The Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (Metro) is unique among the nation's transportation agencies. Created in 1993, Metro is a multimodal transportation agency that transports about 1.3 million passengers daily on a fleet of 2,200 clean air buses and six rail lines. The agency also oversees bus, rail, highway and other mobility-related building projects and leads transportation planning and programming for Los Angeles County.

New Program Enlists Cities In Homelessness Fight

A new front in Los Angeles County's battle against homelessness was launched recently with an innovative program aimed at encouraging cities across the region to join forces more strongly in confronting this escalating humanitarian crisis.

The county and the Home for Good Funders Collaborative — a joint initiative of United Way of Greater Los Angeles — are calling on cities to submit plans that would serve as a blueprint to combat homelessness both locally and regionally. If approved by the collaborative, the cities would be given planning grants ranging from $30,000 to $70,000, depending on the number of homeless individuals within their jurisdictions.

The grants will be underwritten by a $2-million allocation from the Board of Supervisors as part of the county's wide-ranging Homeless Initiative, which, in March, led to passage of Measure H. The voter-approved sales tax is expected to generate $355 million a year to fund crucial services and programs to prevent and combat homelessness.

These multifaceted efforts come at a time of intensely critical need. The recent 2017 Greater Los Angeles Homeless Count revealed a 23% increase in homelessness over the previous year—a total of 58,000 homeless people across the county.

"Homelessness honors no municipal boundaries and neither should we in our fight against it," said Board Chairman Mark Ridley-Thomas. "This crisis demands keen focus by all 88 cities in the county working collaboratively."

The county's homeless action plan is built on the premise that only a regional approach to the problem can reverse the rising numbers. Individual cities, as well as service providers and other stakeholders, played an essential role in helping the County craft 47 strategies approved by the Board of Supervisors last year to prevent and combat homelessness.

"Ninety-percent of our homeless neighbors live outside of Skid Row, which means that all cities in Los Angeles County are on the front lines in ending homelessness," said Chris Ko, director of Homeless Initiatives at United Way of Greater Los Angeles. "The status quo isn't working, and this is an exciting opportunity for cities to plan for a different future."

All cities within the Los Angeles Continuum of Care are eligible to submit proposals. For more information, please visit www.homeforgoodla.org/grantseekers. And for more on Los Angeles County's Homeless Initiative, please visit www.homeless.lacounty.gov.

Environmentalists use social media

Dear EarthTalk:
How are environmentalists using Instagram to further their causes?

Jason McNeil
Akron, OH

Instagram, the photo-based social network which Facebook bought in 2012 for a cool $1 billion, continues to rack up new users, doubling its base to 700 million monthly active users over the last two years. Environmental groups, activists and photographers have realized that they can get their messages out more effectively by embracing this newfangled communications medium that uses imagery to connect with the world's increasingly attention-deficit oriented population of Internet users.

At the heart of the Instagram experience is hashtags, which are essentially keywords that Instagram users append to their posts so others can find them through simple text-based search. When someone searches for a particular keyword on the Instagram smartphone app or website, a list of imagery bearing the corresponding hashtag will pop up as results. Users can then choose to "follow" (i.e. subscribe to) any of the Instagram accounts that show up and will then see every new post by that "publisher" accordingly.

Several well-known green groups have active Instagram accounts, so eco-conscious users have many choices for getting their pictorial information. The Sierra Club (@SierraClub), the Center for Biological Diversity (@centerforbiodiv), Inherit the Earth (@inherittheearthorg), The Nature Conservancy (@nature_org), Conservation International (@conservationorg) and Clean Energy Advocates (@netzero.global) are among the better curated non-profit accounts to follow. And the International League of Conservation Photographers (@ilcp_photographers) features some of the best conservation-oriented imagery on Instagram from its network of hundreds of the world's leading nature photographers.

Meanwhile, there are plenty of Instagram-only "feature" accounts devoted to environmental issues that are worth following. These curated Instagram account select posts from other users to feature on their accounts. Photographers and other users simply append corresponding hashtags to their posts and then these curated accounts can choose to pick them up and feature them for their own followers to see. Some excellent examples include #everydayclimatechange which features compelling imagery highlighting the challenges we face due to global warming. #climatechange is another hashtag sure to satisfy the urge to stay connected with climate activism. Wildlife lovers should be sure to check out @bbcearth from the BBC and its landmark Planet Earth series as well as @WildlifePlanet, which curates some of the best wildlife photography on the web. @Waterlust seeks to inspire scientific curiosity and sustainable products to support marine science research and education.

Likewise, several conservation-oriented photographers have embraced Instagram as a primary means for showcasing their work and inspiring environmental concerns and activism. Camille Seaman (@camilleseaman), Paul Nicklen (@paulnicklen), Sean Gallagher (@sean_gallagher_photo), Brian Skerry (@brianskerry), Mattias Klum (@mattiasklumofficial), James Whitlow Delano (@jameswhitlowdelano), and Arrati Kumarrao (@aratikumarrao) each post jaw-dropping and inspiring photos regularly and are well-worth following if you need inspiration to do the right thing by the planet.

Every day new Instagram accounts with an ecological focus pop up. The best way to stay current is to locate existing feature accounts and then "follow" new photographers as they appear into these feeds. And unlike other forms of media, it doesn't take much effort to learn about our world from Instagram.

CRIME WATCH
BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON JULY 19, 2017, AT ABOUT 12:46 P.M.,

Santa Monica patrol officers responded to a radio call of a fare dispute on a Big Blue Bus. The reporting party, the bus driver, told officers that while he was driving his route southbound on 4th Street, he stopped to pick up a passenger at Pico Boulevard. The individual boarded the bus and he attempted to pay his fare with a Metro Bus token. When the driver told the man the token would not work and that he had to pay the $1.25 fare in cash, the individual became angry and told the driver, "I ain't paying. Call the police." The driver did not want to hold up the other passengers on the bus, so he kept driving his route and the individual remained on the bus. At the next stop, the driver pulled up behind another Big Blue Bus that was on the same route. The driver started moving his four passengers to the second bus, and told the other driver not to let individual aboard. The man heard the bus driver say this and became angry, throwing an open can of Arizona Green Tea at the driver, missing him and hitting the right side front window of the bus. The contents of the can splattered on the front window and some of the beverage landed on the driver's shirt. Responding officers took the individual into custody after a brief struggle and transported him to the Santa Monica jail.
Marlon Humberto Siguenza, 26, homeless was arrested for assault, fare evasion and resisting arrest. Bail was set at $30,000.

SUBSIDY

"Of the 26 potential 'pilot cohort' households, there are 22 one-person households and 4 two-person households," said the staff report. "The average head of household age is 72 years. Average annual income is $13,763 for a one-person household and $19,281 for a twoperson household. All 26 households experience 'rent burden' at more than 30 percent of income paid toward rent, with 22 households 'severely rent burdened' at more than 50 percent of income paid toward rent."

The proposal passed with a unanimous vote of the council but wasn't without debate.

Councilmembers questioned staff's decision to call it a "pilot" program while also recommending ongoing subsidies for the 26 applicants and some questioned the mechanics of paying the subsidies directly to landlords or directly to tenants depending on the specific situation.

Director of Housing and Economic Development, Andy Agle said his office is confident the individuals in the program will know how to make best use of the money.

"All 26 of these people have lived here for a long time and while they might only be eating every other day, they've figured out how to survive here," he said.

Councilwoman Davis asked how staff will track the money without stigmatizing residents or creating new problems for them with potentially unfriendly landlords.

"We want to keep people in housing and still allow them to maintain their dignity," she said.

Housing Commission Chair Michael Soloff said the Commission had spent significant time debating the same issues. He said the city money is the subsidizer of last resort and part of the requirement for the pilot program was that tenants were not receiving other kinds of aid.

Soloff said the purpose of the 12-month study will be to evaluate how the program works and refine the criteria if it is continued but said it will never cover everyone who could need it.

"Any reasonable expectation of what we could scale this program up to is not going to cover the entire need," he said.

Councilmember Kevin McKeown said the dire need of some residents required immediate action, even if the program were not perfect.

"We're in a situation now where many of our neighbors, if they're not living on cat food, they're pretty close and I don't' feel we can responsibly ignore that, can we help everybody? No, but we can help some and I think we should," he said.

City Manager Rick Cole said he has previously cautioned the council against establishing new entitlement programs but in this case, it is impossible to know how the program will shape up in the future until staff have had a chance to study it in action.

"If we do this and half the people are evicted then clearly, it's not a good way to use our money," he said. "If we are successful and compare it to a different group of 26 people in a similar situation and half of that group are evicted and none of these are evicted then you have to make some hard choices."

The program will be funded with money from the voter approved GSH sales tax and it comes as the County is also preparing to rollout new services following the voter approved Measure H. Mayor Ted Winterer said City Hall will have to wait and see if the local program works in concert with or opposition to new County efforts but the end goal is the same.

"Let's see if we can't, with city money or other money, make their lives better and more dignified," he said.

COMPOST

tion, haulers, and property managers throughout this initiative, including the City of Santa Monica, including the Community Corporation of Santa Monica.

Community Corporation of Santa Monica Project Manager, John Mimms said, "We are taking on this initiative to try and help our residents in their buildings. Many municipalities already require organic composting in single-family homes and often in commercial establishments. Multifamily housing has been overlooked often because of a number of barriers to implementation."

Mimms using the example of a single family home or business generates the trash and tasked with paying for its removal and dealing with it. In a multifamily property, those who generate the trash do not have to pay for its removal nor are responsible for its removal. Instead it's a 3rd party, the property manager, who is responsible. That gap between generation and responsibility is one of the challenges in a successful program.

Community Corporation of Santa Monica believes the partnership will bring positive actions to the City and will educate and engage residents to be responsible and aware of their trash production.

The reaction to this program has been positive as many tenants felt the program was and is important and viewed it favorably, despite the extra work.

"The idea is to create a culture within our resident community's and also with our partners and management agencies to develop ways to improve the resident experience by including things like composting," said Les McCabe, President and CEO of Global Green in a recent press release.

Mimms explains Community Corporation of Santa Monica is assisting residents with resources to make composting as easy as possible.

"Through Global Green we provided each participating property individuals small composting pails for them to collect food scraps. There were outreach events to educate residents on what types of things could go into the organic bin," said Mimms.

More recently Community Corporation has installed dispensers and are providing compostable liner bags to help encourage participation and perhaps reduce the unpleasant byproducts of the process.

All of the participating properties are located in Santa Monica, from the Pico neighborhood to Mid City to Ocean Park.

For residents who want to learn more and participate, the City of Santa Monica has community gardens, master gardeners, and compost give away. They also sell more contained composting systems like a tumbler bin or even a worm bin where people, even in apartments and limited space, can divert their organic waste and create high quality compost they can use in their own houseplants, outdoor plantings, and raised bed gardens.

"While we're taking on the initiative to try to help our residents at our buildings, people don't need to wait for someone else to take the first step," said Mimms.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 31)

Romance will be the star pursuit at the top of this solar return. Also (perhaps inspired by love), you'll succeed in creating new habits and lifestyle transformations over the next three months. Early 2018 presents fresh financial options. You won't be sorry if you choose the stable, steady climb instead of the flashy, trendy path. Pisces and Libra adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 40, 14, 28 and 13.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Moods are like weather. They are not contained inside our body; rather, they radiate out and affect anyone nearby. The angry find irritation in every object. The amorous find love in every eye.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Though there are instances when a little competition makes things interesting, in your current cosmic position it is not advised. In fact, competition may very well be the killer of romance and friendship.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
What you feel with your heart and soul may be impractical, illogical and whimsical beyond your comfort level. Regardless, your heart and soul have the wheel. They'll steer you there whether or not it makes any sense.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)
You have a strong point of view but will not be inclined to argue it. After all, it's not that important to you that others think you're right or do it your way. What's important to you is finding a way to work together.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Embrace the entirety of who you are -- your strengths and vulnerabilities, the parts that align with the popular morals and rules, the parts that don't, the refined and the rough. There is an awesome power in deep self-acceptance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Mastery tempered with humility -- this is the balance to strike. When you are knowledgeable and skilled yet wisely humble, you'll be able to rein in, harness and direct the power within you toward a challenging aim.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Every dalliance demands a tribute. The costs are usually not upfront and clearly marked on the menu. You learn them by weighing carefully each interaction. Let one question guide you: What's in it for them?

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
A sincere desire to learn -- this is all that the teacher will ask of you. So don't worry about whether you are prepared or have the prerequisites to absorb the lesson. For the willing student, education is inevitable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
You'll be the first to suggest a smart, loving compromise to the problem that plagues your relationship. But it doesn't end there. This is just the start of the conversation. This is something you can handle together.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
It's a principle of advertisement: More exposure equals more response. The best ad in the world won't work if no one sees it. Get your message out there as many times and to as many people as possible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
You'll be the winner. That doesn't necessarily mean you'll take home the top prize. The winner isn't always the victor with the trophy. The real winner is the one who extracts the most value from the experience.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
Special things are only truly special if they happen very infrequently. The rare thing is precious because it's rare. Be choosy about when and to whom you offer the special thing you give, or it will become ordinary and expected.

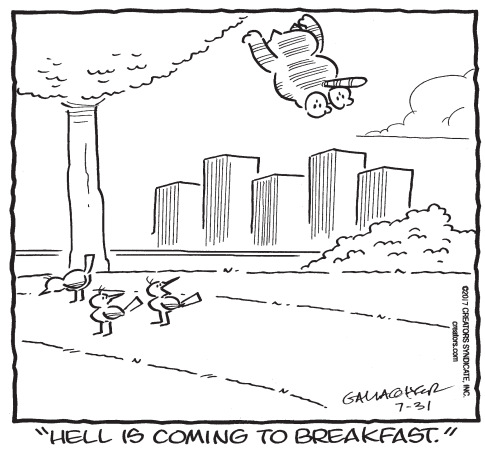

Venus Opening Gambit

The Venus transit into Cancer will start with a wave of intuition that may focus itself better with strangers than with close loved ones. It's because with strangers, one is less influenced by expectation, history and what there is to personally gain from the deal. Pure and actionable info is available now from sources unknown and unknowable.

WELL NEWS BY SCOTT LAFEE

Ninety

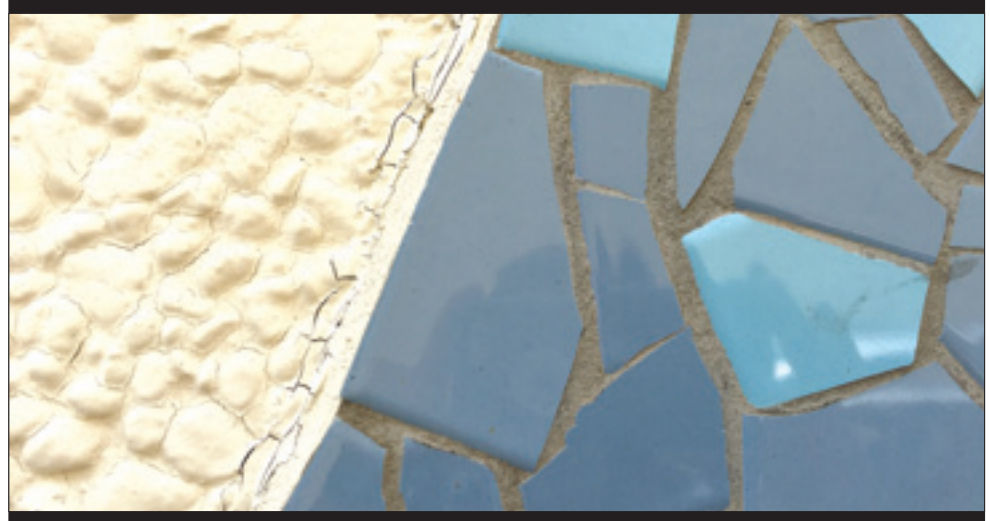

■ U.S. public health researchers have laid out an ambitious agenda toward ending the AIDS epidemic. By 2020, they want 90 percent of people living with HIV to know their status; 90 percent of those diagnosed to be receiving quality care and 90 percent of those on antiretroviral treatment would have their virus in check.

Squeeze Out The Juice

■ If you have a child under age 1, don't give him or her fruit juice. That's the recommendation of the American Academy of Pediatrics, which says new research shows fruit juice provides no nutritional benefit to kids that young and packs excessive sugar and calories. The AAP recommendation was partly driven by rising rates of youthful obesity and declining dental health.
