A warrior attitude, a giving spirit

LOCAL CANCER PATIENT'S CAMPAIGN TO BENEFIT UCLA CENTER

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

CITYWIDE It's the start of a beautiful Sunday in Santa Monica and Aaron Atkins stops to take stock of the world around him. The sun is shining as he sits at a coffee shop. A man is playing a keyboard nearby. The beaches are still quiet, but soon they'll be filled with surfers, sunbathers and castle builders.

"Today will be a pretty Southern California day," he wrote in a recent blog post, and he's not going to take it for granted, even if he can only appreciate it out of his right eye.

It's been a strenuous journey for Atkins, 30, a local resident who returns to work this week as a recruiter for a consulting firm. He's taken the last 3 months off to rest and recuperate, the latest chapter in a bout with cancer that began three and a half years ago.

Atkins has lost 20 pounds of muscle. He has scars all over his body and has gone through numerous rounds of radiation and chemotherapy. He sometimes loses his train of thought. He tires easily.

"Despite all of this I'm still here," he wrote.

And Atkins is determined to help other cancer patients find the same outcome. In the hopes of achieving this goal he and his friends launched an online campaign selling T-shirts with the words "Live like a warrior," a mantra he adopted from a Matisyahu song. The T-shirt drive, which had generated more than $18,000 as of last week, wrapped up on Aug. 1.

Half of the drive's proceeds will go toward Atkins' medical expenses. The other half will be donated to the Simms/Mann UCLA Center for Integrative Oncology, which has supported Atkins throughout his battle with neurotropic melanoma.

The center, which depends heavily on philanthropy, offers many of its services at no cost to patients.

"For a young person like Aaron, it's shocking to hear you have cancer," said Anne Coscarelli, director of the Simms/Mann center. "When you get older, you know people who have cancer and maybe it's a little more expected. When you're a young person, it alters your world."

"They have very unique needs. They're thrown back into needing help from parents just when they've gotten out on their own. There are issues of independence. They're not necessarily married yet, and their relationships can be very fragile. They tend to get more aggressive cancers. They're at the peak of their development in terms of career and sexuality, and all of those things just get blasted by a cancer diagnosis."

Raised outside Portland, Atkins attended the University of Oregon and lived in Seattle for four years after college. In early 2012, about a week before moving to Southern California for a job, he was told he had cancer above his left eye.

Heal the Bay celebrates 30th anniversary with digital campaign

BY JENNIFER MAAS

CITYWIDE Heal the Bay decided to ring in their 30th anniversary this July with a little bit of soul, some critters and a lot of time on Facebook.

The environmental group launched a digital campaign on July 3 comprised of a series of short videos that "give a voice to the sea and to the animals that live in its depths," a press release stated. And according to Heal the Bay's communication manager, Nick Colin, that voice comes through clearest on social media.

SMMUSD hosts welcome events for incoming kindergarten and transitional kindergarten parents

In an effort to replace first-day jitters with confidence and enthusiasm, SMMUSD, together with the Santa Monica-Malibu PTA Council, Santa Monica-Malibu Education Foundation (SMMEF) and the City of Santa Monica, will host welcome events for parents whose four- and five-year- olds are entering kindergarten or transitional kindergarten (TK) this school year.

Each of the three events, held on August 10, 11 and 13, will offer parents of students new to SMMUSD a big picture view of the district, while also giving them the opportunity to meet their elementary school principals. PTA, SMMEF and City of Santa Monica leaders will present information on the value of parent involvement and the roles each organization plays as partners to support SMMUSD students.

"Our goal is to welcome all of our incoming TK and kindergarten parents," Superintendent Sandra Lyon said. "And provide information about what an average kindergarten day looks like, how their child will progress through the grade levels, and what opportunities our district provides for all of our students."

Earlier this year the City, SMMUSD and early childhood education providers developed a handbook for families as part of Santa Monica's Cradle to Career (smC2C) Initiative Building Blocks for Kindergarten Readiness campaign. "Entering kindergarten is a big milestone for students and their families," said Karen Ginsberg, Director of the City of Santa Monica's Community and Cultural Services Department. "The smC2C Youth Wellbeing Report Cards underscore the need for all of us to do more to prepare our incoming kindergarten students and families. We hope the campaign, and events like these, help to calm some first-day anxiety by providing concrete advice parents can implement at home right away, like setting an early bedtime routine in the days leading up to the first day of school," Ginsberg noted.

Monday, Aug. 10 for parents of kinder/TK students enrolled in Edison Language Academy, Grant Elementary School, John Muir Elementary School, Will Rogers Learning Community and SMASH (a K-8 school) at Will Rogers Learning Community cafeteria (2401 14th St., Santa Monica).

Tuesday, Aug. 11 for parents of kinder/TK students enrolled in Franklin Elementary School, McKinley Elementary School and Roosevelt Elementary School at Lincoln Middle School cafeteria (1501 California Ave., Santa Monica).

Thursday, Aug. 13 for parents of kinder/TK students enrolled in Juan Cabrillo Elementary School, Point Dume Marine Science School and Webster Elementary School at Juan Cabrillo Elementary School cafeteria (30237 Morning View Dr., Malibu).

All three events will be held from 6 to 7:30 p.m., with light refreshments served.

These parent events are the first of their kind hosted by the district, and are planned to complement kindergarten family events hosted by many elementary school sites before the start of school each year.

"We are looking forward to engaging with our community partners to provide all students with learning and enrichment opportunities," said Linda Greenberg, Executive Director of SMMEF, the non-profit organization that supports key academic and enrichment programs at each of the district's 16 schools. "We are excited to welcome our new parents to that partnership."

As a way to underscore the importance of reading in the home, the Santa Monica-Malibu PTA Council is providing a children's book about the first day of kindergarten as a gift to parents who attend. "The PTA hopes these events help new parents to understand how valuable their involvement is to their children's education and to feel part of the entire community that is SMMUSD," added Rochelle Fanali, PTA Council President.

A flyer listing the dates and times can be found on the district's homepage (www.smmusd.org) under the event section. For more information on the Cradle to Career initiative visit: www.santamonicacradletocareer.org.

School starts on Aug. 20.

Is Santa Monica going to pot?

LAST TUESDAY, CITY COUNCIL VOTED TO have staff come back with recommendations for selecting the best operators to open and run two privately owned medical marijuana dispensaries that were permitted when the Land Use and Circulation Element (LUCE) zoning and building codes were recently updated, and to ensure that they operate in the best interests of the community.

The LUCE code updates permit a maximum of two pot dispensaries within the city limits along sections of Santa Monica and Wilshire Boulevards east of Lincoln Boulevard, generally near the city's major medical centers. Code requires that the dispensaries must be less than 2,500 square feet in floor space, located at least 600 feet from childcare facilities, parks, schools, libraries, social service centers and other dispensaries and obtain a Conditional Use Permit (CUP) similar to the one required for businesses that dispense alcohol.

So far, so good. But, did you really think that council's social engineering agenda wouldn't enter this picture?

In an effort to insure that the dispensaries "encourage the greatest community compatibility and benefits," council micromanagers requested that staff look at a requirement that they offer, "free or discounted services for low income patients." Maybe that concept should be expanded to require that dispensaries offer a "senior or student discounts" like the city's Big Blue Bus? Just kidding.

It strikes me as being the same as requiring city restaurants to offer free or discounted meals for low-income individuals. Or, that retail stores along the Third Street Promenade and in Santa Monica Place be required to offer free or discounted merchandise to customers based on their income. Drug stores in the city are not required to offer free medication, prescription or over-the-counter, to certain classes of people, why should medical marijuana shops be?

I'm also bothered by the fact that an unregulated, privately owned entity would be collecting sensitive financial data on its customers. And, who's going to insure that the data will be secure? Non-Santa Monica dispensaries don't collect financial information on their customers because they're not required to.

How is staff going to determine income levels or other parameters that would trigger a discounted or even free marijuana product? This is not the same as big drug companies offering financial grants or aid to critically ill, low-income patients so they can afford access to expensive medications for the treatment of their cancer, for example.

Because Santa Monica's dispensaries will be most likely privately owned, for-profit businesses. They'll make up losses incurred by giving away or discounting cannabis product by charging their regular customers more. Depending on the number of "low-income" customers a shop has, this could result in a huge disparity in price of goods and business failure if a dispensary is inundated with "low-income" folks demanding discounts or freebies.

I can see it now … every limited income pothead in Southern California with a $40 medical marijuana prescription will be heading to Wilshire or Santa Monica Boulevard pot shops to take advantage of the benefits that this council wants to bestow. How compatible is that going to be with the neighborhood?

Bottom line: council needs to stop micromanaging (good luck on that) and approve zoning guidelines to insure these dispensaries are an asset to the community, operate competitively and are successful enough to generate good tax revenues for the city.

GOODBYE DENNY'S, HELLO FIVE-FLOOR APARTMENT BUILDING

In a few months, one of Santa Monica's last remaining coffee shops, Denny's on Lincoln and Colorado Avenue, will close its doors forever to be replaced by yet another multi-story apartment building.

Last week the planning commission, with historical preservationist Nina Fresco and architect Mario Fonda Bonardi now aboard, approved two new downtown apartment buildings. Prolific developer NMS Properties is behind the project, replacing Denny's and another proposed development at 1415 5th St. Both projects have to go before City Council for approval of their development agreements before construction can begin.

The Lincoln/Colorado site will be a 60 foot (five story), 102,500 total square foot building with 100 apartments, 13,800 square feet of ground floor commercial space and a 232 space, three level, subterranean parking garage. NMS's 5th Street project will replace single floor retail shops with an 84 foot (six story) building of approximately 52,545 total square feet, 64 apartments, 6,345 square feet of street level retail space and a 105 vehicle three level subterranean parking garage.

Both projects require a development agreement because they exceed the height and density required by current building codes. For example, the current height code at 1415 5th Street is 35 feet. By the way, only Fonda-Bonardi requested a reduction of ten, then four feet, in the 5th Street development's height. Predictably, he received no support from his fellow commissioners, including newbie Nina Fresco.

NMS agreed to certain "community benefits," such as 13 or 14 low-income apartments (with half of them suitable for disabled tenants) and $600,000 for parks, early childhood programs, local hiring and transportation initiatives, to bypass current codes and build bigger and bulkier.

NATIONAL NIGHT OUT TOMORROW EVENING.

Don't forget National Night Out tomorrow night. The annual event will be held on the Civic Center parking lot (next to the Civic Auditorium) again this year from 6 to 8 p.m.

Come and show your support for our Santa Monica Police. You'll see police vehicles and equipment first hand, meet police personnel, enjoy live music, participate in raffles, sample food and enjoy family-friendly activities including a rock climbing wall, bicycle safety demonstrations and more. You'll have a great time and it's free, too.

Eager to work out a solution for subletting

Editor:

Every morning when my husband and I take a walk, we always pick up the Santa Monica Daily Press. You do an amazing job of keeping us informed on what is happening in our community.

Today I read in 'Your Column Here' the comments from Cara Brown and here is our reply.

The column on 'Right to Sublet' expressed our views exactly. We are 80-year-old seniors living on just our social security checks. We travel to see children and grandchildren several times a year. We live in a single home and when we started renting our house out while we were traveling, we were so excited that we had found a way to supplement our fixed income. Now the city council, trying to solve the lack of rentable housing problem in Santa Monica, has taken that ability away from us.

We would be happy to get a business license and pay any necessary "hotel tax," and that would mean additional revenue for Santa Monica. The families who rent our house could not afford to come to Santa Monica if it were not for places like ours. And most of these families spend more in the week they are vacationing in Santa Monica than we spend in six months or more. So the merchants, as well as the city, is benefiting.

People like us are: 1) not taking rental units off the market. 2) are long-time responsible Santa Monica residents. 3) are eager to find a way to work out this situation so the legislation can be amended to allow persons who are not taking rentable units off the market, are able to rent their homes or apartments for any period of time without having to physically be on the property themselves.

SyncFab

Jeremy Goodwin is a leader in the community of executive business development and financial leadership with capital raising expertise and a record of success identifying growth opportunities for corporations expanding internationally. He founded SyncFab in an effort to maintain constant awareness of the external and internal competitive landscape, opportunities for expansion, customers, markets, new industry developments and standards.

Erik Huberman: What made you want to become an entrepreneur?

J: I have realized over the years, in order to achieve a certain goal, you have to start your own venture at some point in life. The great part about that is you are able to create a mission and value for the goal that you are pursuing. Selecting a team with value and heart built into their positions also becomes a high priority that goes a long way. It is truly an exhilarating experience.

E: Tell me about SyncFab

J: I came back from working overseas for about 15-20 years. My original mission was to figure out how to do onshore manufacturing. We are an online product design and local manufacturing marketplace providing work for designers, engineers, entrepreneurs, manufacturers, 3D printers and material experts. We aim to improve price transparency and improve communication while raising visibility to the richness of local manufacturing and fabrication resources.

E: How are you changing the world?

J: Accelerating reshoring through communal best practice sharing of advanced manufacturing processes along with encouraging environmentally responsible efficient design for manufacture and materials.

E: Why Santa Monica?

J: Santa Monica has a rich design community with close proximity to Southern California's vast manufacturing resources representing the highest concentration in the nation. Santa Monica is also my native home, my father works for the city and I love our community.

E: Do you have one piece of advice for an entrepreneur starting his or her own business?

J: Before you dive straight into something, do a lot of soul-searching for a mission you can be passionate about and conduct through field research when putting together your business plan to come up with a needed service model that matches your mission statement.

E: Is there anything you'd like to share with the Santa Monica community?

J: SyncFab aims to empower designers to better source local manufacturing also helping inventors and small business to source more local design, all in support of the local community. We want to empower designers, encourage environmentally responsible processes and material usage, bring visibility to local manufacturers and increase output by leveraging idle regional capacity.

strong social media presence on Facebook Instagram and Twitter, and Pinterest now, has eclipsed our homepage traffic, which is an interesting and new thing," Colin said. "So we thought the best way to reach the most people, knowing that, is to send our message out on Facebook, which is our platform with the highest levels of engagement."

Colin explained that the idea to have a digital campaign, "rather than say put up a bunch of billboards or print ads or a snazzy new design scheme for [the] website," came about organically once they knew the platform they were going to utilize.

And McGann/Zhang, a new advertising agency based in both Los Angeles and Beijing, came on board to create just what Heal the Bay was looking for in the creative campaign elements.

"They came up with and produced all of the creative assets," Colin said of the agency, who he commended for their interest in non-profit organizations. "They did everything with the videos, from shooting the 'Soul' segments to the dramatically different 'Critter' spots to the cinemagraphs."

Colin said the two companies had several round table meetings where they reviewed their goals and market research and brainstormed about the vibe they wanted the campaign to convey. "McGann made us a menu of options and the final product is fabulous."

The product consists of a dozen 15-second and 30-second videos separated into two series. The first series of videos "Soul," combine poetry and slow-motion images of the bay, while the second series, "Critters," which launches in August, uses prop-humor and live-action animation to engage audiences.

The campaign also includes ocean-related "Soul" cinemagraphs, "still photographs in which minor and repeated movement occurs subtly so as to simulate video," a press release stated.

As far as the goal of the campaign goes, it is a numbers game to a certain extent. "We'd like to get 1,000 donations. So we would like to reach 1,000 new people," Colin said. "That will tell us that our message is reaching a wider audience. So we're trying to not preach to the choir basically. And we'll see that by whose chosen to support us and if they have done so before. So we'll consider it a success if we see some new faces in our mix." The current requested donation, and promotional membership rate, is $30 to correspond with the 30th anniversary celebration.

"Since the campaign began on July 3, we've seen a 25 percent increase in online donations compared to this period last year," Colin said. The campaign videos have also received over 131,000 views and Heal the Bay's Facebook engagement is up 37 percent since the campaign began.

A new video is posted every Friday, with the campaign scheduled to run through the end of August.

Heal the Bay is a nonprofit environmental organization making Southern California coastal waters and watersheds, including Santa Monica Bay, safe, healthy and clean. We use science, education, community action and advocacy to pursue our mission.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A-F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Proof of Trump's charity giving elusive

JEFF HORWITZ
Associated Press

WASHINGTON Donald Trump, widely believed to the be the wealthiest American ever to run for president, is nowhere among the ranks of the country's most generous citizens, according to an Associated Press review of his financial records and other government filings.

Trump has said he donated $102 million worth of cash and land to philanthropic and conservation organizations over the past five years. But his campaign has provided little documentation for most of these contributions, and tax filings of the Donald J. Trump foundation show Trump has made no charitable contributions to his own namesake nonprofit since 2008. Without an endowment, the fund has continued to give grants only as a result of contributions from others.

Even the $102 million would not impress the wealthy elite whom Trump counts as his peers. Billionaires like Michael Bloomberg, George Lucas and Warren Buffett have both given far more and pledged to donate most of their wealth to charity during their lifetimes.

It is possible that Trump has been donating money anonymously through avenues other than his foundation, whose tax records the AP reviewed. But pressed by the AP on the details of his contributions, Trump campaign spokeswoman Hope Hicks provided a partial list of donations that appeared to correspond with the foundation's gifts — indicating that Trump may be counting other people's charitable giving as his own.

"I give to hundreds of charities and people in need of help," Trump said in an emailed response to questions from the AP about how he tallied his own philanthropy. "It is one of the things I most like doing and one of the great reasons to have made a lot of money."

The Trump campaign did not respond to a request that it identify donations that Trump himself gave. Trump has not released his own tax records even though some other presidential candidates have disclosed theirs. Such documents would likely provide a clearer picture of his giving.

Actual cash donations account for only around a tenth of the $102 million Trump says he has given in the last five years. Most of the total comes from land-related transactions. One major land donation from Trump earlier this year may result in a significant tax deduction for Trump for continuing to operate a commercial golf driving range.

Trump announced in January he was providing a land conservancy in Rancho Palos Verdes, California, with a legal promise never to develop 16 luxury homes on what is now the driving range of the Trump National Golf Course Los Angeles. But city planning documents indicate Trump had no plans to use the land for anything other but a driving range — which he will continue to do under the terms of the easement.

A possible multimillion dollar beneficiary of Trump's gift: Donald Trump. Easements — contractual limitations which formally devalue the land, even if they require no changes in its use or ownership — provide an avenue for federal tax write-offs.

By committing to use his driving range as a driving range, Trump is likely entitled to a sizable tax deduction, said Dean Zerbe, a tax attorney for Alliant Group of Houston and who previously headed an investigation into easement write-offs for the Senate Finance Committee.

"It's shocking how much you see in the way of golf easements," he said. "Are we comfortable that this is something we want to subsidize with tax policy?

Trump's foundation began in 1987 and exists to donate money to other charities. It has no staff, and its annual IRS filings have regularly listed Trump's average time spent on it as "minimal" or zero hours a week. The foundation has given out $3.6 million between 2011 and 2013, the most recent year in which its finances are available.

The overwhelming majority of its recent gifts have been made with other people's money. NBC Universal, World Wrestling Entertainment and high-end, sporting and entertainment event ticket-reseller Richard Ebers are among the largest donors; Trump made his last significant donation, of $30,000, in 2008.

Until late last year, Trump was described as an "ardent philanthropist" in a biography posted to the Trump Organization's website. That language has since been removed.

As with Trump's politics, his donations do not fit neatly within traditional ideological lines: In 2012, he donated to the Gay Men's Health Crisis — founded by gay rights activist Larry Kramer — and the Billy Graham Evangelical Association, which decries the influence of the "gay lobby" and offers support to people pushing loved ones to "seek freedom from homosexuality."

A sizable portion of Trump's giving appears to be geared toward charities prominently affiliated with celebrities or politicians. Trump has given to the Ronald Reagan Foundation and the Clinton Foundation, and has made donations to charities associated with former major league baseball manager Joe Torre, television personality Larry King and professional golf legend Arnold Palmer.

Some celebrity-backed charities have pitched controversial causes. In 2010, Trump's foundation gave $10,000 to Generation Rescue, a nonprofit run by Jenny McCarthy to champion the widely discredited theory that vaccines cause autism. Trump also gave $1,000 to the New York Rescue Workers Detoxification Project, an organization confounded by Tom Cruise that offered free Scientology-based cleansing to rescue workers after the 2001 terror attacks.

Trump's tax returns would provide clearer information about any philanthropy he listed as deductible. In 2011, he indicated he might release his own tax returns when President Barack Obama released his birth certificate, something the president subsequently did. Trump took credit for pressuring Obama to release the document but did not release his tax records, promising he would do so at an appropriate time.

Such returns could potentially shed light on the nature of some of Trump's noncash gifts, such as his donation of the easement on his Rancho Palos Verdes golf course. Trump's gift is to the local land conservancy, which maintains green space and undeveloped coastline owned by city of Rancho Palos Verdes.

Trump's relationship with the city itself has been rocky. After years of battling with local government over a 70-foot flagpole erected without approval, and Trump's thwarted effort to have a prominent street renamed after himself, Trump sued the town of 46,000 for $100 million in 2008. He alleged it was wrongfully preventing him from building homes on land adjacent to his golf course.

The city — which has a budget of roughly one-quarter the size of Trump's legal claim — settled with Trump in 2012 on confidential terms. But Trump's plan for the driving range on which he is donating an easement has been far less contentious.

Though the land was still approved for the construction of 16 homes, Trump turned it into a driving range when he bought the property more than a decade ago, according to city planning documents. In the years since, Trump did not apply to build homes on the property, and he sought approval from the California Coastal Commission to permanently approve plans that left the land as a driving range.

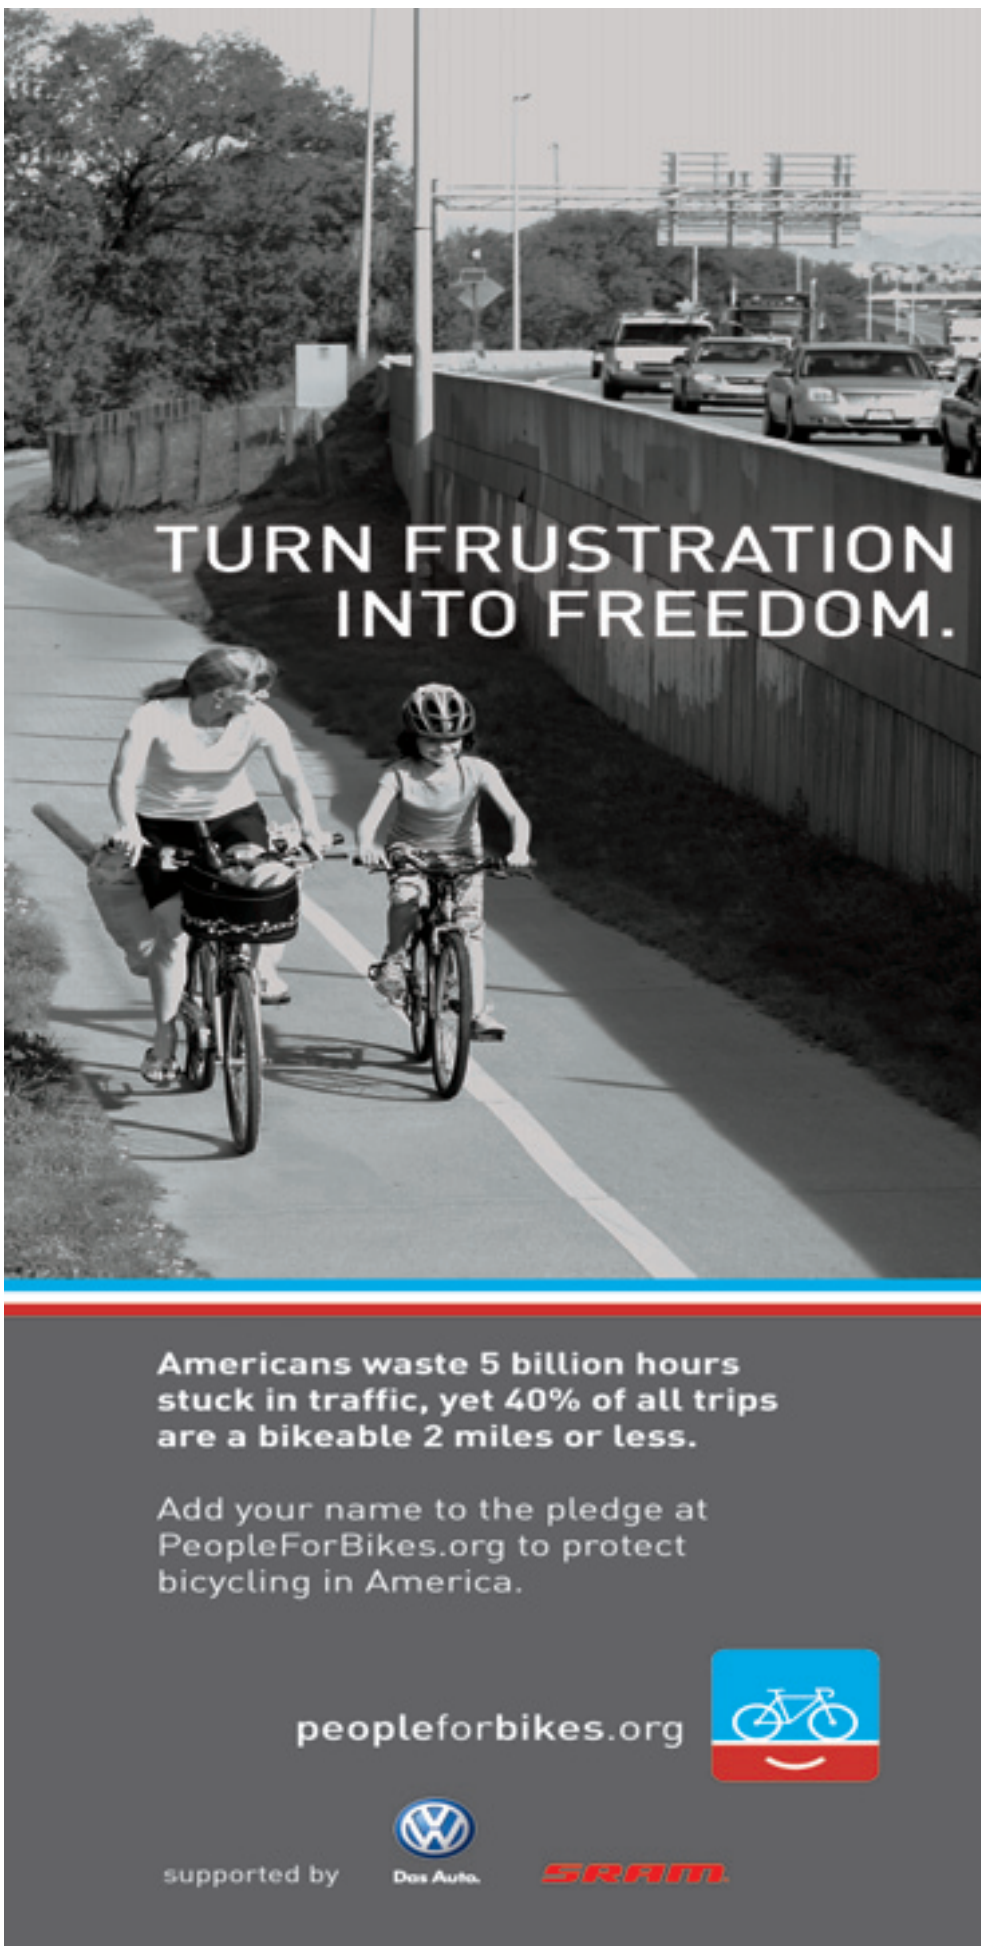

"Sometimes he'd make statements, saying, 'Well, maybe I'd put homes there instead of the driving range,'" said Joel Rojas, the city's community development director. But there were never any concrete plans to build.

Trump received that approval last year, Rojas said, which prevents him even from applying to build homes on the driving range.

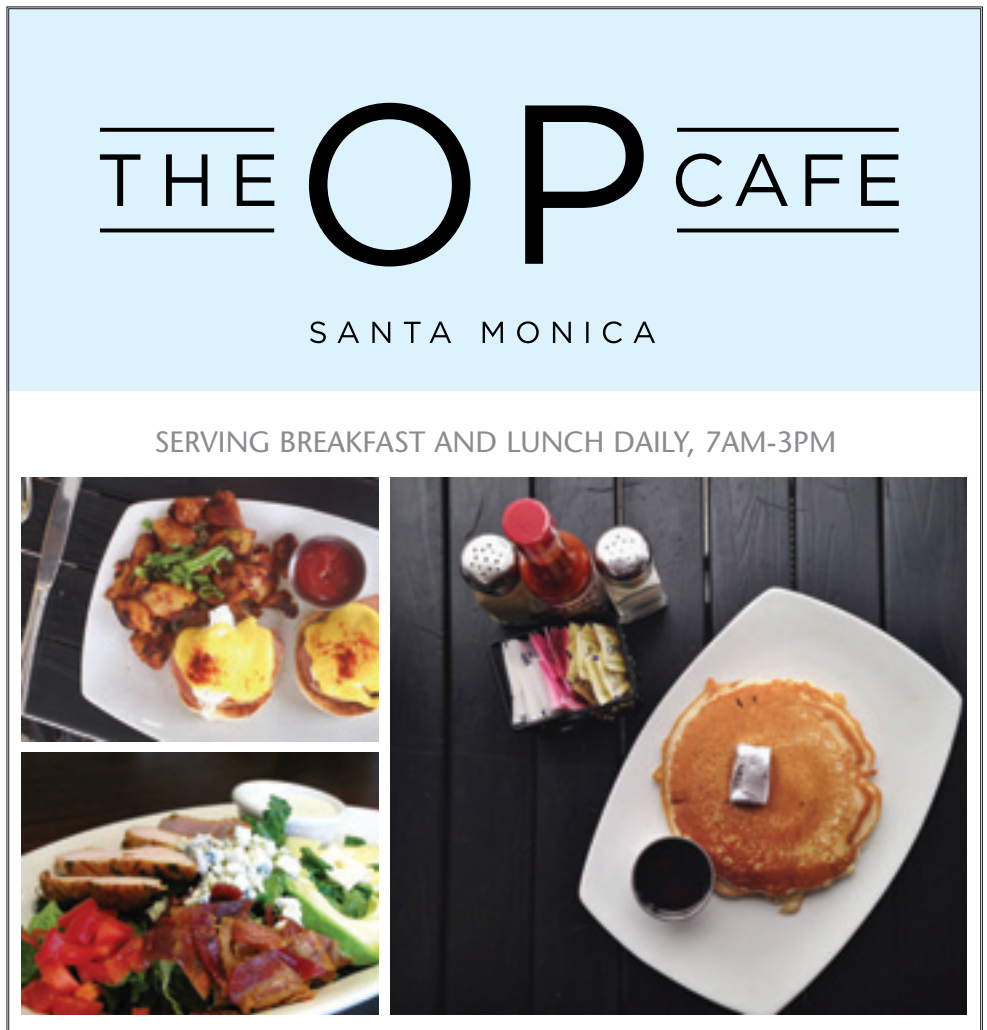

When Trump announced four months later that he will permanently forgo building on the range, he said the land was worth more than $25 million.

Zerbe, the former Senate lawyer, said tax deductions for such projects are unquestionably legal but noted that building homes there instead would have complicated Trump's golf plans.

"You're not going to have a golf course without a driving range," he said.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Among the health and fitness apps for computers and smartphones are sex-tracking programs to document the variety of acts and positions, degrees of frenzy and lengths of sessions (via an on-bed motion detector) -- and menstrual trackers aimed at males (to help judge their partner's fertility but also her predicted friskiness and likelihood of orgasm). Several have chart- and graph-making potential for data (noise level, average thrust frequency, duration, etc.), and of course, the highlight of many of the apps is their ability to create a "score" to rank performance -- even encouraging comparisons across a range of populations and geography. (Sociologist Deborah Lupton's app research was summarized in the July Harper's Magazine.)

■ (1) Scientists from Australia's James Cook University told reporters in June that they had spotted an aggressive fish that can walk on land making its way toward the country from Papua New Guinea. The native freshwater "climbing perch" can live out of water for days and has survived short saltwater treks from PNG toward Australia's Queensland. (2) In July, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department posted a warning photo of a so-far-rare Texas Redhead -- an 8-inch-long centipede with gangly white legs tipped with venom-delivering fangs and which eats lizards and toads.

Happiness ... it happens

By Katharine Romefelt

Our brains are wired to focus on the negative. Before civilization, it was more important to know if a lion was chasing you than to notice a beautiful sunset. Thankfully, life-or-death matters are less common these days, so why dwell on aspects of your life that bring you down?

Saturday is Happiness Happens Day! Retrain your brain by seeking out the positive things in life.

"I think you can really find happiness in the moments," said Veronica Newlin, as she blissfully savored her pizza at Abrosia Café on Sunset. "Happiness is a conscious choice if you try hard enough."

Remind yourself to notice the uplifting parts of life if it's a struggle. Unhappiness is for the lazy.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Today, you'll have an edge over others. How you see a situation could change radically because of a conversation and an interaction. Be aware of your influence, but don't run someone over just to get your way. Tonight: Your treat.

Monday, August 3, 2015

This year you become much more verbal, but others often don't get the gist of what you're saying. Learn to clarify your ideas in terms that suit the person to whom you are speaking. You will relate best on a one-on-one level. Travel, education and/or a foreigner could play a significant role in your year. If you are single, you are likely to attract someone from a very different background from yours. If you are attached, you might be surprised by how much the relationship flourishes. PISCES loves romance as much as you do.
