SMRR puts slate into place

BY KEVIN HERRERA
Daily Press Staff Writer

OLYMPIC HIGH SCHOOL — Nearly 200 members of Santa Monica's ruling political party packed the auditorium here Sunday to select their crop of candidates for the municipal election in November.

While a democratic process complete with campaign speeches and secret ballots, the nearly four-hour-meeting of Santa Monicans for Renters Rights (SMRR) lacked suspense, playing more like a political rally as members enthusiastically threw their support behind experienced veterans and a handful of promising rookies with strong ties to SMRR.

Most of the endorsements were uncontested, including those for the City Council and the Rent Control Board. However, some competition arose when members were asked to vote for the school board and the Santa Monica College board of

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have:

★★★★★ DYNAMIC ★★★★★ POSITIVE ★★★ AVERAGE ★★ SO-SO ★ DIFFICULT

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ You might be weighed down by what is going on. But still, you are on top of your game and need to help others work within a certain framework. You might not be comfortable with what comes down your path. Tonight: In the limelight and enjoying it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★★ Read between the lines with communication. A matter involving family and/or property might weigh you down. As you explore your options, you might be surprised at what becomes possible. Tonight: Put the pieces of a life puzzle together.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ Work with one person directly. Whether your tone or your attitude is heavy, others respond to your stern demeanor. Confusion could break loose, causing you to question your financial involvements. Tonight: Work with a partner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★★ Let others put in their two cents, but realize that financial decisions are yours and yours alone. Act accordingly, and you'll get good results. Relax and allow events to unfurl. Claiming your power doesn't mean you are controlling. Tonight: Sort through possible plans.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ You might want to be clear about where you are coming from professionally. Observe a tendency to be overly serious and perhaps difficult. If you lighten up some, you might find making your point a lot easier. Tonight: Easy does it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★ Your playfulness makes a difference. Take your time with a matter that seems difficult. This issue revolves around a risk, loved one and/or potential creative enterprise. Confusion surrounds a key matter. Tonight: Be more playful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ You are coming from an anchored position. Listen to what is going on around you. Focus on what you want and what is important to you. Priorities remain critical and take you in a new direction. Tonight: Anchor in at home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★★ You might want to go ahead; still, check in with the many people around you. You take charge and handle a situation with a great deal of decorum. Confusion surrounds communication and feelings. Tonight: Hang out with a friend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ Your finances take a higher priority than usual. You could be limiting yourself by not seeing the big picture. If you loosen up, you will understand others better. Take time to listen to a different point of view. Tonight: Your treat.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★★ You are on top of the world and ready to make a change. A partner has mixed feelings that come from his or her unwillingness to have a conversation. Don't try to make a dent in this brick wall. Tonight: Do your thing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★ Step back instead of trying to work with a difficult person and a close-to-impossible situation — which is how you see it now. In the next few days, you'll discover that a different approach will work. Give yourself the space to understand. Tonight: Get some extra R and R.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★★ Knowing what you want might be one issue; getting there will take energy and insight. The good news is, you have what it takes to get to where you would like to be. Aim for more of what you want. Tonight: Follow your friends.

Drive-In revs up

By Daily Press staff

A crowd of 2,500 kicked off the Santa Monica Drive-In at the Pier on Aug. 1, and the movies over the waves and under the stars will continue on Tuesday, Aug. 8, with "The Muppet Movie."

The first of the live-action musicals featuring Jim Henson's Muppets also stars a cast of A-listers, including Steve Martin, Mel Brooks, Dom DeLuise, Bob Hope, Madeline Kahn, Richard Pryor, Elliott Gould, Milton Berle, Telly Savalas and Orson Welles.

All movies take place Tuesday evenings in the Santa Monica Pier west parking deck on a huge screen under the stars. Admission is free but tickets are required and are available at Santa Monica visitors centers at 1920 Main St.; the kiosk at 1400 Ocean Ave., and the cart on the Third Street Promenade. Tickets also are available at Vidiots at the corner of Pico Boulevard and Fourth Street, and at the KIIS Beach Shack every Saturday and Sunday on the Santa Monica Pier. Check www.smff.com for more information.

The Santa Monica Drive-In has become a must-go event on the Westside.

Moviegoers are asked to bring a jacket or blanket to keep warm after sunset. They don't even need to worry about lugging the lawn chairs since folding chairs are available to rent for $5. Proceeds from chair rentals, raffle tickets, food, sponsorship and donations support The Cancer Relief Fund of Arts Fighting Cancer, a non-profit organization

The Q-Line

Barking up the wrong tree ...
Local resident Valerie Hiss' efforts to provide "doggie houses" filled with plastic bags for owners to properly dispose of pet waste have been thwarted by City Hall. A city ordinance prohibits objects from being placed on trees, and removal of the houses has been ordered. While many residents have applauded Hiss' efforts to keep the city free of pet debris, City Hall claims good intentions are no reason to make exceptions to laws.
So this week, Q-Line wants to know:
Do you agree with the city's demands that the "doggie houses" be removed from public trees in Santa Monica? Should City Hall provide an alternative solution? Look the other way?
Call (310) 285-8106 or type your responses at smdp.com/forum and we'll print your responses.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

City Councilman's agenda questionable

Editor:

I read the recent article (SMDP, July 28, page 1) announcing Kevin McKeown's candidacy for re-election as Santa Monica City Councilman. Santa Monica has been the home of my family for more than 20 years. I am a local business owner, local home owner and am genuinely invested in making this city the best it can be. I will be voting for city councilmembers who have integrity and will work hard correcting the problems in Santa Monica such as with the transients, violence in the Pico area, rent control abuse and traffic and parking. There seems to be a conflict of interest with Kevin McKeown's candidacy.

Many of us in Santa Monica believe that the good intentions of this city's original rent control organizers have gone astray. It is the rent control board that is directly responsible for the lack of apartments in the city, the high-market rental rates, the poor condition of apartment buildings and the friction between the rent-control renters and the landlords/market rate renters. According to the Rent Control Charter Amendment, "A growing shortage of housing units resulting in a low-vacancy rate and rapidly-rising rents exploiting this shortage constitute a serious housing problem. These conditions endanger the public health and welfare of Santa Monica tenants, especially the poor, minorities, students, young families, and senior citizens." This is true, however the problem is that there is no means in place for testing a tenant's status to determine who benefits from below-market rent. All of us are aware of disgusting situations where a renter is abusing this rule such as living mostly in their primary home elsewhere. Many of the individuals still benefiting from rent control just happened to be in those apartments when the ordinance was founded.

In the article, Mr. McKeown says he is "a 30-year renter, former member of the Santa Monica for Renter's Rights (SMRR) steering committee and has been a lead force on tenant harassment protections and affordable housing issues." Mr. McKeown's agenda seems to be that of keeping his below-market rent apartment, as well as those of the group that support him. It is not surprising that he will pursue an endorsement from SMRR, which includes other rent control abusers.

How is it that a city councilman who benefits from the privilege of a rent control apartment, endorsed by and voted by renters, can hold a position of decision-making regarding affordable housing?

Art Korvel
Santa Monica

Incumbents don't deserve another term

Editor:

So Bob Holbrook, Kevin McKeown and Pam O'Connor think they deserve to be re-elected to the City Council. Why? During their tenures, homelessness has skyrocketed in Santa Monica and all they do is mouth their concern for "quality of life." New York City, with 8 million people has 3,800 homeless. Santa Monica, with 85,000 people has more than 2,000. Under mayors Giuliani and Bloomberg, NYC has diligently whittled down its numbers by a variety of approaches. Santa Monica throws millions at the problem with no results. The homeless court is a step in the right direction, but won't solve the problem.

The homeless won't pay fines and will recycle out into Santa Monica's parks, streets and alleys. Instead, there should be community service sentences. Pay them minimum wage and assign the able-bodied to clean up the garbage in city parks and streets. Also, do a census of the homeless. For those who truly want homes, have them contribute their resources: welfare, veterans benefits, disability income or personal assets towards rent. Subsidize that rent with money saved by eliminating the ineffective city programs for the homeless, start with the budget for homeless czar Ed Edelman. Send the homeless who say they prefer the "freedom" of living on the streets to the professionals for mental evaluation and/or placement.

City still pays dearly

People get worked up when I write about Santa Monica's homeless problems.

My e-mail inbox had a couple of communications from "homeless" persons who told me I didn't know what I was talking about. On the other end of the social and economic spectrum, north of Montana Avenue homeowner Jean Sedillos agreed with them in her letter to the editor (SMPD, July 25, page 4).

Sedillos was right about some of the $1.2 million allocated by the city for the new homeless court and housing for chronically homeless and chronically homeless inebriates as coming from a $948,907 federal HUD grant awarded late in 2005. However, I still say city funding for services is dramatically increasing.

This year, more than $2 million has been allocated for direct services to nine city-subsidized agencies. An extra $200,000 was recently approved for the St. Joseph Center and for a public opinion survey on the effectiveness of homeless services. An additional $5,670,895 was approved by City Council on May 9 to build a new access center for OPCC, a city-subsidized provider of homeless services.

I've been volunteering for seven years for the Santa Monica Police Department's Homeless Liaison Program (HLP) and have gone on numerous ride-alongs with HLP team officers. My experiences provide a realistic perspective of what really happens street level and on what seems to work and what doesn't.

While I speak for myself, and not for the SMPD in any way, it's been my observation that many programs seem to be counterproductive because they either ignore or reward destructive behavior mainly because there is no mechanism for recourse if people who are directed to social services don't stop abusing alcohol and drugs or give up a "street" lifestyle. Helping is an honorable thing to do, but ultimately, I believe that people must take some responsibility for their own actions.

Excuse my cynicism but it appears that the "housing first" models have the potential to reward and sustain destructive habits because in spite of "swamping them with casework," there is no downside of losing the housing benefit. I feel that special homeless courts are special treatment. Everyone has to travel to the Airport Courthouse near LAX for court except vagrants and transients whose cases will be heard in Santa Monica.

Then, there's the almost automatic dismissal of citations for most misdemeanors such as public intoxication, stolen property (shopping carts), public urination and defecation, etc. If the system were to give the same extraordinary courtesy to celebrities instead of vagrants, liberals like Sedillos would probably scream bloody murder. Maybe I'm wrong, but this sure doesn't seem like "equal treatment under the law" to me.

Sedillos claims that "housing first," homeless courts and similar programs work. I pray that Sedillos, who is a member of City Councilman Bobby Shriver's "kitchen cabinet," is right.

As for Sedillos' claim that I "haven't ever suggested one course of action that will be effective (in reducing homelessness)," I can only respond that all that Reddi-wip she'd been eating gave her brain freeze.

Prior to the 2004 election, we talked for hours about homelessness and other issues in her living room. Over the years, I've written dozens of columns suggesting ways services could be more efficient while not making it easy for persons to live on the street.

I've written two recent columns supporting housing homeless veterans at the West LA Veteran's Administration. Those who really want and need services must get them.

City Hall must change its desire to solve the region's homeless problems and concentrate on long-range goals of reducing the number of transients on Santa Monica streets by, say, 25 percent over the next three years. Programs must be result-driven. They're not, which is why it took 20 years to evaluate the effectiveness of the "continuum of misery" as the homeless themselves call it.

I don't want to close down all services, just ones that enable transients and vagrants to exist in misery on our streets for decades. Part of the equation must be to adopt a zero tolerance for malingerers, scammers, free-loaders, drunks and addicts who abuse the system, and lawbreakers who thumb their nose at programs, the law and civility.

I think Jean and I are on the same page. We all bring something to the table. Wouldn't everyone's time be better spent solving problems than criticizing other persons for their opinions on the best way to get people back into productive society?

BUZZ'IN SANTA MONICA

Buzz (b'z) v. buzzed, buzz-ing, buzz-es

1. confusion of activity and gossip, 2. to be noisy with activity, 3. to talk, often excitedly, in low tones.

Slang

1. Excited interest or attention. 2. To move quickly and busily; bustle.

No stranger to the local scene, "Buzz," as he likes to be called by friends and foes alike, is the newest member of the Daily Press news team. A keen observer of all things Santa Monican, an eavesdropper of preposterous proportions, "Buzz" is literally everywhere. He knows where we live, what we do and who we do it with. The news staff looks to take advantage of this in-town player's unique skills by allowing him to serve up his slant on the "city by the sea" each week just the way he likes it — fresh, raw and a might bit spicy. As always, he has a few things to share.

Ladies and gentlemen, we give you the "Buzz" and what was recently in Santa Monica.

... Santa Monica is a happy place for happy people, so the city charter says. As a result, the guy in Border Books the other week should feel right at home. Clearly on some "higher" plane, the slim man walked around the bookstore LAUGHING HYSTERICALLY TO HIMSELF, at randomly selected magazines. Scenes like that make Buzz chuckle a bit too, mostly at the absurdness of this town. It adds character. Nothing like being buzzed in Santa Monica. Hey bro, got any? ...

... One recent afternoon, Buzz's female companion had ventured into the women's bathroom at Santa Monica Beach when she heard the confused pleasure cries of a seemingly retarded woman: "Give me my cornbread! GIVE ME MY CORNBREAD!" Spotting some men's feet facing hers, it was evident she was getting a good rogering amid the romance of urine-stenched porcelain and baking defecation. The moment was bigger than the both of 'em, but it makes Buzz wonder if those new bathroom attendants the city has placed about town provides a choice of prophylactics. Buzz will never look at cornbread in quite the same way ...

... Here's one for the record (but really off the record.) Buzz was milling around one Saturday morning at Memorial Park WAITING FOR A KICKBALL TOURNAMENT to begin when he asked the park ranger if the bathrooms were open yet. The park ranger said they were, but advised against using them. "The homeless sleep in there and they are not very clean." Nice. Brand-spanking-new bathrooms just for the residentially-challenged. What a pisser! Buzz is glad to see his tax dollars at work. Thanks for the heads up, Mr. park ranger ...

... Back in the DP newsroom, Buzz overheard another off-the-record conversation (they are the best kind for a gossipmonger), this one related to a certain city councilman who LIKES TO ENJOY A SMOKE from time to time. Just days before the smoking ban proposal hit the city council chambers, a friendly conversation was struck up between the elected official and fellow addicts outside of a Mexican restaurant on Pico. Not knowing they were among the high-ranking decision-maker, the average Joe Blows expressed their discontent with the city ban, to which the councilmember replied something to the effect of, "Can you believe the gall of them?" The next week, he voted for the ban. Nothing like blowing smoke where the sun don't shine ...

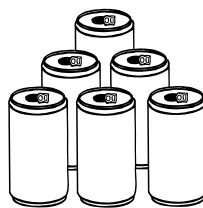

... While he doesn't do it often, Buzz ventured east of Lincoln to take in a bit of culture, finding himself sitting in Hollywood's Pantages Theater for A MANLY PRODUCTION OF "LITTLE WOMEN." At intermission, he and his date ran out of there and out of the hills. But before exiting the parking lot off of Hollywood and Vine, Buzz felt like he already was home in Santa Monica again: There before his eyes was a woman squatting in the street, peeing. Upon her completion, she gave a little ass shake in substitute for toilet paper. It was a scene that had all the drama and despair that made the trip to Hollywood etched in Buzz's mind. She was no "little woman," but she had all the raw talent needed to make that act the most memorable of the evening ...

... The world of politics in Santa Monica is always a form of entertainment for Buzz, especially in an election year. This week's fodder comes from those who call themselves "Santa Monicans For Sensible Priorities." They STUFFED A "NEWS UPDATE" into thousands of residents' mailboxes recently, with one of the "news" items being that one of their members has an opinion column in the SMDP. They said it was refreshing to see a new perspective in the paper, which had its logo plastered on the back page. The editor didn't see that coming, but admitted any exposure is good. Buzz isn't so sure how "sensible" it was for them to use the SMDP that way without a heads up to the paper's editor but hey, anything goes three months before an election! Seeing that the columnist is running for City Council, the SMDP editor used her sense and discontinued the candidate's editorial perspective ...

... In the "PERPETUATING STEREOTYPES" ITEM OF THE WEEK, Buzz was making his way north on 16th Street over the weekend, approaching Montana Avenue, when he

On the record

The nature of the job, as with any law enforcement post, can be both thankless and deeply rewarding, in turns, a circumstance that allows him the opportunity to seek answers and quell fears among his charges.

As another brilliant afternoon sunshine spilled in through the reinforced, plate-glass windows, a reflective chief went about his duties on Friday, even as his retirement in two weeks fast approaches. From his somewhat serene office perch, the police chief seems somewhat removed from the bustle and minutiae of the city beyond his windows, enabling him to keep his eyes on the bigger picture, “that bad things happen in this world,” but that overall, it’s hard to argue with a record that includes the city’s lowest crime rate in half a century.

Following a rapid rise through the ranks in Inglewood, Butts dug in when he came to Santa Monica. When he retires on Aug. 29 and takes over a newly-created position to head up security and law enforcement for each of Los Angeles’ four airports, including LAX, he will be the longest-serving police chief in the city’s history.

“I saw a community that cared,” Butts said of Santa Monica upon his arrival. “But one with great, overwhelming public safety needs that could be improved upon, a profile that could be improved upon. I thought that I could accomplish that.”

Only time can determine the legacy of Chief Butts, but a record that includes turning the tide of crime increases that occurred under each of his five predecessors should go a long way, not to mention cast a considerable shadow for which his successor will have to emerge.

Butts, who received his bachelor’s degree from California State University, Los Angeles, and his master’s degree at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, has served in law enforcement for 32 years; 34 if one takes into account his civil service duties. He has three grown children with his wife, who he lives with in Ladeira Heights.

On Friday, the chief went on the record with the Daily Press to discuss everything from his deep respect for his father to thwarting gang violence, from a love of muscle cars to shooting hoops in the city’s parks.

TELL US ABOUT YOUR UPBRINGING.

“My parents met in Portland, Ore. My father was in the Air Force, and when he completed his service, they migrated to Los Angeles to raise a family. My father was born and raised in North Carolina back in the ’30s, and that was a very different place than Los Angeles in the ’50s, when I was born. That was by design. He didn’t want to raise a family in an area that was so oppressive to civil rights. Most everybody in East Arcadia County, the biggest aspiration anybody could have would be to go to a nearby city and work in the salt mines, either that or you would be a sharecropper with the hope that one day you would have your own farm. Of all his brothers and sisters, I think there were 10, he was the only one to go to college, and then he joined the service because his intent was to leave the South.

“In the Air Force, his M.O.S. (Military Occupation Specialty) was electronics and communications, and when he left the Air Force he obtained a degree in electronics engineering and he went to work for Rockwell International, which later became North American Aviation. He worked on the guidance system for the X-15, which was the first plane to breach that barrier between the stratosphere and outer space. I used to take the photographs and the information about that aircraft to show-and-tell after school. As you can tell, I was very proud of my father. He was a very smart man.”

WHY DID YOU WANT TO BECOME A POLICE OFFICER?

“I actually went to college with the intent of becoming an attorney. I was pursuing a degree in business administration and I was playing basketball as well. I received a stipend for playing on the basketball team that I used to buy a car, because my academics were taken care of as well, and when I had to have knee surgery and had to pay for my car, I took a position as a community service officer in the city of Inglewood in 1972, as a non-hazardous police duty position, like a police cadet here nowadays. When I turned 20 and a half, they offered me a position as a police officer, and I took it to save up money for law school. One thing turned into another and it was time for me to take a promotional exam. The first exam that I took I received an outside oral in the 90s and a written score in the 80s, which was very exceptional for this exam, but the inside score they gave me was ‘mediocre,’ but I still finished fourth and there were six vacancies for sergeant. They hired just three sergeants and said there were budgetary problems and didn’t promote me. There had never been a black sergeant in Inglewood at that time. The next year, I took the exam again and I got an 89 on the written and another score in the 90s, and the inside components had been removed because of abuses. I was promoted to sergeant, and two and half years later to lieutenant, and two and a half years later to captain, and four years after that to deputy chief of police. After a year and half as deputy chief, I competed and was appointed chief of police here in Santa Monica. So after a little sticking point in the beginning ...”

DID THE OBSTACLES PUT BEFORE YOU MAKE YOU MORE MOTIVATED?

“I always was motivated, whether there were obstacles or not. I’m a very driven person. It was whatever came in the course of business. I never give up.”

WHEN DID YOU BEGIN TO SEE YOURSELF IN A MORE ADMINISTRATIVE ROLE?

“Along the way, actually, I’ve had a very diverse police career. I’ve worked robbery/homicide, narcotics, metro, 12 years in S.W.A.T., been a motor officer, worked in internal affairs. I started a transit safety program similar to what we instituted here in Santa Monica, only on a broader scale in Inglewood. I headed up narcotics and special operations in Inglewood and as lieutenant, ran a narcotics task force in 1986, where we arrested around 900 people over the summer for sale, use and possession of crack cocaine, dropped the crime rate about 19 percent for the last half of the year. I didn’t really become a sole administrator until I became a captain. I think of myself as more of a street police officer.”

TELL US ABOUT YOUR UPCOMING JOB AND THE CHALLENGES YOU EXPECT TO FACE.

“It’s a new position — Deputy Executive Director of the Los Angeles airports. It was created as a result of a study that was done for law enforcement and security of the airports. They did a study on structure and they were looking at the totality of the organizational structure of the airports. It was to improve the command control of the law enforcement and protect the assets of the airport.

“I’m in command of all the policing, security and traffic control functions at the four airports — LAX, Ontario, Van Nuys, which is a general aviation airport, and Palmdale. In addition, the functional coordination position responsible for the FBI, DEA, PSA, personnel that are assigned to the airport. I’m at top level security clearance for sensitive information from the federal government.”

THAT’S A PRETTY LARGE ASSIGNMENT. HOW MANY PEOPLE DO YOU SUPERVISE?

“Twelve-hundred that are on my payroll, with a total of 4,000, including all the agencies that operate under the umbrella of the airport. Right now, we have a city that has about a 90,000-person bedroom population, with maybe 5 to 6 million tourist visitors a year, as opposed to the airport that handles 68 million passengers a year in a smaller footprint.”

LOOKING BACK ON YOUR 15 YEARS HERE AS CHIEF, WHAT ARE YOUR PROUDEST ACCOMPLISHMENTS?

“I’d say, first and foremost, the caliber of people and supervisors — the executives we’ve managed to develop in that time, that’s resulted in this strong collaboration we have with the community. The implementation of probably the most advanced information technology in a policing function of any department, at least here in California that we know of. The development of neighborhood policing as a vehicle to give people in neighborhoods direct contact with police executives in the department so that we can more rapidly respond to their concerns, not just about crime, but quality of life issues. Take those things together — the reduction in crime that’s occurred — 63 percent in the last 13 years — the lowest crime rate in the last 50 years, and we’re working on another 9 percent reduction in the year-to-date. I’m the only chief since we started keeping crime statistics in the mid-’50s that will finish his tenure with a net reduction in crime. Under my tenure, all of the increases from the past five chiefs have been eradicated.”

HOW HAS SANTA MONICA CHANGED IN THE PAST 15 YEARS?

“Property values have risen dramatically. The general fund has tripled, if not quadrupled. Santa Monica’s general population has become younger, it would appear. With the exception of what is going to be an ongoing concern — gang violence — crime does not make the top 10 in any surveys about issues that Santa Monicans have on their minds, and that’s a tribute to the police department.

“There’s something else that needs to be noted, during that same period of time that crime has fallen to record levels, citizen complaints have dropped by 60 percent. Police liability the first year that I came here was over $3 million paid out for police issues, and this past fiscal year our total for the police department was $2,288 — $1,900 of that was attributed to a tree that fell on a house, the other incidents were a $150 payout because we gave one set of property to the wrong prisoner, $75 to clean the carpet where print dust stained the carpet and another $100 for leaving a cell phone on the top of a cruiser and driving off and having it break. The point I’m making is, most of the police liability such as false arrests, it’s unheard of in a police department (not to have any claims). And we have some people who say ‘you control what complaints are taken, so that’s not a true barometer.’ The reality is, in a city as rich as Santa Monica, there’s no reluctance of an attorney to take any case that seems viable. We’re not even paying out nuisance money. I believe that validates the point in dropped complaints, because if someone doesn’t want to come in to make a complaint, they sure will contact an attorney.”

I’M SURE YOU’VE HIRED A LARGE NUMBER OF OFFICERS OVER THE YEARS. WHAT DO YOU LOOK FOR IN AN OFFICER?

“I’ve hired over two-thirds of the people who work in the Santa Monica Police Department, including civilians, and that’s 450 people that work here. I look for people that are independent thinkers, that are articulate and have good analytical skills, but I’m also looking for those independent thinkers who care about people.”

WHAT THINGS WOULD YOU CHANGE ABOUT SANTA MONICA?

“I think everything about Santa Monica, including the challenges, has made me into the kind of person that I’ve grown into, but if there was any one thing I could change with the snap of my fingers it would be to eradicate the gang culture that is predominant among less than 100 people in the city.”

IS GANG CULTURE THE BIGGEST CHALLENGE FACING THE CITY AND YOUR SUCCESSOR?

“The biggest challenge, in terms of potential for violence would be the linkages and the interaction between Santa Monica gang members and the gangs that surround the city in a semi-circle because these members tend to antagonize those members out there. We spend a disproportionate amount of police time and resources, based upon population, to discourage people outside of Santa Monica. But when you look at it in terms of whole numbers of things that happened, the worst year in Santa Monica doesn’t touch a bad weekend in numerous jurisdictions in the city of Los Angeles. That’s just the reality. I’m glad that we take it to heart and so seriously in this community rather than become callous about the loss of life or any injury, but the reality is that bad things happen in this world. If you take it in the context of Los Angeles County, we do very well in protecting all of our children and all of our residents.”

HOW WOULD YOU ANSWER YOUR CRITICS IN RELATION TO GANG VIOLENCE?

“I would compare our record in controlling gang-related activities to any city in the county. If you look in terms of whole numbers of people that are injured or killed, the numbers are dwarfed by our surrounding jurisdictions. So if the criticism is that we haven’t perfectly prevented something that’s a problem across the United States of America, I plead guilty. Any reasonable person would look at where we are in the context of our surrounding geography and there’s no comparison.”

WHAT ADVICE WOULD YOU GIVE YOUR SUCCESSOR?

“Don’t be pressured into doing things that might seem expedient to quiet squeaky wheels at the cost of compromising the reputation of the department for doing things legally and ethically and morally.”

WHAT HAVE BEEN THE HIGH POINTS? LOW POINTS?

“The low point was definitely (the death of SMPD officer) Rick Crocker, who was killed in Iraq. Because you work in a contained space, and rely on each other so much there’s such bonding within the organization. It’s like losing members of your own family when people pass, particularly when they’re young.

“The high points, there have been so many that I really couldn’t tell, because it’s just an excellent career.”

Was it a challenging position? Could it also be thankless?

“People tend to focus on what’s in front of them right now, and people perceive the police and the chief to be power and authority figures, and for the things that are intractable you tend to become the target of

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

"Know before you Go" is a weekly update on construction projects throughout Santa Monica. Here is a run-down of this week's construction projects initiated by City Hall

Airport Park and Airport Avenue improvements

Site grading, constructing new artificial turf soccer fields, constructing new playground, restrooms and dog park area, and reconstructing a portion of Airport Avenue. On-site detour possible during street reconstruction.

Civic Center parking structure

Construction continues on a new 900-space Civic Center public parking structure, located on Fourth Street next to the Public Safety Facility. Construction will require the closure of Avenida Mazatlan and the Fourth Street sidewalk. One lane on southbound Fourth Street is subject to closure while work is occurring. There also may be delays entering the Civic Center parking lot from Fourth Street. Use the Main Street entrance.

Fire serve installation

The Santa Monica Water Resources Division is in the process of construction work on Main Street, between Pico Boulevard and Bay Street. Work conducted is for the purpose of supplying water for fire protection to the 150 Pico Blvd. property that is located at the southwest corner of Main Street and Pico Boulevard.

Gas main installation

The Gas Company will install a new 2-inch gas main on the east side of 23rd Street from Carlyle to Georgina avenues. Detours and lane closures may occur, and will be posted at various sites during construction. Work hours will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Los Angeles County Department of Public Works
Storm Drain Repair

Installation of a low-flow diversion unit on Ashland Avenue, between Main Street and Neilson Way. There will be detour signs posted around the work area.

Marine Street utility undergrounding

Relocation and undergrounding of electric, phone and cable facilities on Marine Street, between Lincoln Boulevard and Prospect Court. Parking limitations will be posted daily and detours may be announced as necessary.

Street/park lighting retrofit program

Installation of a new light standard and circuit conversion from series to multiple and all other apparatus to provide a complete and operational street and park lighting system. Occasional traffic slowdown at the following locations Wilshire Boulevard and Yale Street Virginia Avenue and 21st Street; and Delaware and 22nd Street.

Street and parking lot resurfacing

Street and parking lot resurfacing: Street and park parking lot resurfacing, sidewalk, driveway, curb and gutter repairs. Repairs are scheduled through October 2006. Sidewalk, driveway, curb and gutter repairs begin on Oak Street, from 14th Street to Lincoln Boulevard; Hill Street from 14th Street to Lincoln Boulevard; Ashland Avenue from Lincoln Boulevard to 16th Street; and Pier Avenue from Lincoln Boulevard to 11th Street. Lane closures around work posted as necessary.

Water fluoridation system project

Installation of a fluoridation system at 19th Street at San Vicente Boulevard. Street closures will occur on 19th Street and on San Vicente, traffic will narrow to one lane in each direction.

Water main replacement

Installation of new water main complete with service connections throughout the city. Detours and lane closures may occur, and will be posted at various sites during construction.

New water main installation

Installation of new water main complete with service connections at 17th Street between Pico Boulevard and the 10 Freeway. Detours and lane closures may occur, and will be posted at various sites during construction.

Emergency Southern California Edison Vault Repair

Edison and city crews are working to mediate an emergency vault explosion in the downtown area. On Second Street, the lane is re-closed so Edison crews can remove steel plates. On Broadway, between Second and Fourth streets is closed at all times to complete repairs. Further work is anticipated so the steel plates will remain in place for that purpose. On Santa Monica Boulevard between Second and Fourth streets, one lane will be open to traffic at all times. Parking is prohibited on the north side of the 200-300 blocks for traffic. Alley court 2 is closed between Santa Monica Boulevard and Broadway to all traffic, vehicular and pedestrians until further notice. Updates and changes will be posted as improvements continue on the city's Web site at santa-monica.org.

Montana/Wilshire Storm Water Diversion Structures

Installation of a Storm Water Diversion debris removal and diversion facility will begin Aug. 7 at Ocean Avenue at Montana Avenue and Wilshire Boulevard. Traffic will narrow to one lane in each direction on Ocean Avenue at Montana Avenue.

trustees, where candidates seeking endorsements outnumbered the seats available, pitting members against each other.

In the end, disappointed candidates who failed to secure an endorsement put the defeat behind them and joined their rent-control brethren in speaking with a singular voice. Their message was clear: Get out the vote on Nov. 7 and place a SMRR majority on every dais in the city.

SMRR has the power to do just that, boasting a membership of roughly 5,000 residents, each with the ability to donate $250 to the cause and go door-to-door in search of more support for the organization's slate of candidates. A SMRR endorsement also includes placement on a slate mailer, which can often cost $17,000 to print and deliver to an estimated 35,000 households.

SMRR will need to run an aggressive campaign as the hospitality industry and business community looks to challenge the organization's dominance. Formed in 1978 in support of the city's rent control law, SMRR has secured a majority on the City Council for most of the last three decades.

"I don't know of any grass-roots organization in America that can replicate your passion ... dedication year after year after year," said Denny Zane, a co-founder of SMRR who helped facilitate the convention, SMRR's 15th in nearly 30 years.

The importance of securing a SMRR endorsement in a city with strict limits on campaign fundraising was evident before the start of the convention, as candidates were seen lobbying members for votes while their supporters passed out colorful campaign stickers.

Inside the stuffy auditorium, members were seen using campaign literature to fan themselves as they held up their ballots, anxiously awaiting volunteers to come by and collect them. Once all the ballots were in, members milled about waiting for the results. Some worked the room chatting up old friends, while others chose to snag water bottles and snacks.

Those successful include many familiar names to voters. Incumbents Kevin McKeown and his colleague Pam O'Connor were selected as SMRR candidates for the City Council. As was newcomer Gleam Davis, an education advocate with the backing of Community for Excellent Public Schools (CEPS), an influential community group that pressured City Hall into spending roughly $6 million a year on local schools.

With only three council seats open and 16 people pulling papers to run, it is expected to be a highly contested race. SMRR is trying to unseat Mayor Bob Holbrook, a pharmacist with many years in public service.

O'Connor fought off a late charge to have her kicked off the SMRR slate. That effort was lead by another community group, Santa Monicans for a Livable City, which pointed to campaign contributions O'Connor received from Macerich Co. executives during the time when the operator of Santa Monica Place presented a radical renovation of the property, which would have included three high-rise buildings.

"I want to make it clear that my vote on the Macerich proposal was 'no,'" O'Connor told fellow SMRR members.

O'Connor said she should gain the SMRR vote not only because of her strong record of protecting renters' rights and affordable housing, but also because she has a strong chance of becoming the chair of the MTA board during a time when the public transportation agency is considering extending a light-rail line to Santa Monica from downtown Los Angeles.

O'Connor received 109 votes of the 166 cast for City Council candidates. McKeown received 154 votes, and Davis 139.

For the Rent Control Board, in which there are three open seats, members saw no need for ballots, instead offering a voice vote for incumbent Jennifer Kennedy, who is seeking a second term; Zelia Mollica, a Santa Monica resident for 37 years and founder of the Renters Empowerment Zone, which seeks to survey renters and advocate for repairs; and Marilyn Korade Wilson, a 23-year renter in Santa Monica and SMRR hotline volunteer.

"I've seen good people leave Santa Monica solely because of economic reasons," Mollica said. "They simply couldn't afford to live here anymore, and that's a shame. I am a strong believer in social justice and diversity in our city."

In the race for the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School Board, where there are four open seats, incumbents Oscar de la Torre and Emily Bloomfield secured SMRR's backing, albeit without receiving the highest vote totals.

That distinction belonged to Kelly Pye and Barry Snell, who earned 127 and 126 votes, respectively. The two fresh faces seem to represent the future of SMRR, particularly Snell, a new member of the organization who is known in the education community for his work on closing the achievement gap for students of color. When Snell's name was read during the vote tally, his supporters, including many family members, screamed with joy.

"I understand what it means to be separate but equal," Snell said, referring to the landmark U.S. Supreme Court decision Brown v. Board of Education, in which segregation in public schools was ruled unconstitutional. "I will fight for equality in our schools and make sure that every child has an equal opportunity to learn."

As for SMC and the four available trustee seats, incumbent Nancy Greenstein was joined by three strong contenders with respect in the education community. They included Louise Jaffe, an education advocate endorsed by state legislators from Santa Monica as well as outgoing trustee Dorothy Morrison; Andrew Walzer, a former faculty member at SMC; and David Finkel, an adjunct professor at SMC and former presiding judge of the Santa Monica Municipal Court.

spotted five teenagers playing in the driveway of a private home. Four teens — two black, all four of them with “hops” — played basketball on a lowered rim — slam-dunkin’, alley-oopin’ and chest-thumpin’. THE OUTCAST, ER, REMAINING LAD — a tad overweight, bespectacled and as white as washed-up Styrofoam — passed the time shooting a plastic hockey ball into a net by himself ... Maybe they’ll build that fiber-optic ice rink thing on the Santa Monica Pier this winter and give wannabe Gordie a goalie ...

... In the alley between Third and Fourth streets, heading south last week was a youth on a skateboard, wobbling and wary. To his forehead he held a balled-up T-shirt, apparently KEEPING THE BLOOD HE EXPECTED FROM FLOWING down his face like flotsam on the beach after a storm. Buzz is thinking the boy tried to get his grind on at the new Main Library but hit one of those anti-skateboard brackets ...

... Last Saturday, Buzz was BIKINI GAZING IN PALISADES PARK, just south of San Vicente Boulevard. There they were, lying about in their natural habitat, not a care in the world, sometimes face down and sans tops so as to soak up more of the sun than any one hardbody should be allowed. When Buzz reached the California Incline, the bikinis were gone with the Santa Anas. In their stead, homeless men and women grazed amid park-goers much too wary to shed their itchy-bitsy, teeny-weenies. Is there some kind of electric fence for homeless that abuts the intersection? No abuts about it, Buzz wants one for his carport! ...

... Just because: Overheard at the corner of Broadway and Sixth Street on Thursday — ONE TEENAGER CALLED ANOTHER A “GAYBIRD.” Now there’s a word Buzz hasn’t heard bandied about for a while. Buzz filed that one away long ago with “boondockers,” “whippersnapper” and “individual freedoms in Santa Monica ...”

Some fine tuning

From modest beginnings to radio force, K-Mozart's a hit

BY DAVID COLKER

Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — In 1958, atop Mount Wilson overlooking Los Angeles, Saul Levine built a radio station almost solely with his own hands.

He used a rented tractor to clear scrub brush from a patch of land so remote that the U.S. Forest Service leased it to him for $350 a year. With the help of a carpenter, he built a shack to house his broadcast equipment, mostly secondhand, and a bare-bones studio.

The antenna was placed atop a flagpole.

His station went on the air in February 1959, with selections from Franz Lehár's operetta "The Land of Smiles."

"It was just by chance the first album I grabbed," said Levine, a lawyer who had dreamed of having his own radio station since growing up in rural Michigan. "But it was how we felt."

Today that classical music station, now known as K-Mozart, or KMZT-FM, is worth at least $100 million and perhaps much more, according to analysts. But only if Levine would give it up. And he's not about to.

Levine, 80, still comes into the office a modern three-story building in West L.A. every day. It also houses his other station, KKGO-AM, which plays pop standards.

He oversees every aspect of the stations' operations, including advertising sales and on-air personalities.

In an industry that has gone corporate, Levine is one of the last of a breed: the independent radio station owner.

Other independent owners, particularly in classical music radio, which has a limited, aging audience, long ago accepted offers from industry giants that snapped up FM stations in lucrative markets.

"The amount of money he could get is insane," said Brenda Barnes, president of USC Radio, which operates the other classical music station in L.A., the not-for-profit KUSC-FM.

In fact, Los Angeles is the only city in the country that still has more than one full-time broadcast classical music station, according to research done for an upcoming National Endowment for the Arts report.

Analysts say the broadcast license for the station which Levine originally had acquired for about $25 is particularly valuable because of the station's range.

KMZT would be restricted under current Federal Communications Commission rules to a power output of 680 watts. But because it was founded before those rules went into effect in 1962, the station can operate at almost 18,000 watts.

"He has the rights to one of the most powerful signals in Southern California," said Mary Beth Garber, president of the Southern California Broadcasters Association.

But Levine refuses to bow to the economic pressures that have shut down most commercial classical music operations; there are only about a dozen left nationwide, fewer than half the number broadcasting 20 years ago.

"Whenever I get an offer," Levine said, "I call my wife and she tells me to tell them to go away. She doesn't want me hanging around the house, and I would go nuts."

Total advertising sales of stations in the Los Angeles radio market in general defined as Los Angeles and Orange counties last year amounted to nearly $1.1 billion, according to media advisory firm BIA Financial Network.

KMZT's part of that was estimated by BIA to be $7.3 million. By contrast, the station with the highest revenue, alternative rocker KROQ-FM, took in $67.6 million.

Station licenses, particularly for those on the FM dial, are so valuable in Southern California that beginning in the 1980s, many were purchased through leveraged buyouts, arts consultant Bob Goldfarb said.

"A station, after it was bought, had to not only earn a profit but also service the debt that eventually got into the nine-figures range," said Goldfarb, who conducted the survey of classical music radio stations for the National Endowment for the Arts report. "You can't service a debt like that on the income of a classical music station."

One by one, commercial classical music stations were sold and instantly changed format. The time came in 1989 for Los Angeles' KFAC-FM, which had been playing classical music for 58 years. It sold for $55 million and became KKBT-FM, with the motto "Rock With a Beat."

At that point, Levine's station was playing an all-jazz format, which he had switched to in the early 1960s because of competition from KFAC. The demise of that station cleared the way for Levine to return to classical music. His station finally began showing a steady profit, and the money made from the sale of a San Francisco AM station got him out of debt.

The newfound prosperity reinforced Levine's resolve not only to hold on to his original station but also to program it the way he wanted.

In 2000 Levine changed the call letters from KKGO-FM to KMZT-FM, after Mozart. "I thought about naming it for Beethoven," he said, "but I couldn't figure out how to get that into call letters."

That year the Los Angeles Philharmonic was hoping to broadcast its concerts on his station. But the orchestra had raised only half of the $200,000 the venture would cost.

"We were at a meeting where this was being discussed," said Vanessa Butler, then head of marketing for the orchestra. "And Saul just wrote a check for $100,000. I'll never forget it."

If there is a complaint against Levine, it comes from critics who say KMZT plays it too safe with its programming, sticking mostly to classical standards and light fare.

But KMZT's music mix is why longtime listener Virginia Bortin, who is marketing director for the Los Angeles County Department of Beaches and Harbors, chooses the station over the more adventurous KUSC.

"I prefer composers of the late 19th, early 20th centuries," Bortin said. "Debussy, Ravel, Rachmaninoff. KMZT plays a lot of their music."

In fact, KMZT is the more popular classical station. In a survey released Tuesday by Arbitron Inc., KMZT got a 1.4 share rating, meaning that on average, about 1.4 percent of adult listeners in the L.A. area tune to the station. It shared 25th place with two other stations in the market.

KUSC's share rating was 1.0, or an average of 1 percent of adult listeners. It tied for 31st place.

Despite his success and reputation for being genial, Levine does not shy away from a fight when he feels his turf is being threatened.

In 2004 he took on satellite radio, saying it should be subject to the same FCC indecency regulations as are broadcasters. The year before, he challenged a marketing alliance of industry giant Clear Channel Communications Inc. and KUSC, contending that the public radio station was tiptoeing into commercialism.

Levine lost both battles, but he got national publicity for his efforts.

Town hopes it's newest fiber source can attract business to Wyoming

BY BECKY BOHRER

Associated Press Writer

POWELL, Wyo. — Hay and beans have fueled this rural economy for years. But it's fiber of another kind that city leaders believe is key to Powell's future.

Plans are under way to build an ultrafast fiber optic network capable of delivering Internet, cable and phone service to virtually every household and business in this city of about 5,300 people. The goal is to create another selling point for a community where traditional quality of life issues — good schools and safe streets — are no longer enough to attract highly coveted new businesses.

"As a city administrator, I hear the term 'economic development' thrown around," said Zane Logan, the leading voice behind the CityNet project. "I can't think of anything more economic-development minded than a fiber optic network."

Powell is part of a growing phenomenon driven, in part, by dissatisfaction with Internet or cable service in what are often sparsely populated areas, according to market researcher Michael Render; at least 40 municipalities and public utility districts already offer local customers so-called "fiber to the home."

The rise of community backed projects has sparked debate about the role of government in private enterprise and whether broadband technology — from fiber optics to wireless — is a luxury or a virtual necessity that cities should provide, the way they do water or garbage service.

"Is it a commodity where you pay for what you use and leave it to the private sector? Or is it a utility, as important to today's lifestyle as water and electricity?" said John Anderson, a graduate student at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign who has studied and written about the debate.

"A lot of communities feel it's in their interest to step in and offer it," he said.

That was the case in Windom, Minn. Before the city announced plans to build its fiber optic network, Internet options were limited to frustratingly slow dial-up or finding a wireless hot spot some 20 miles away, said Dan Olsen, operations manager with WindomNet, the farming community's telecommunications office.

Now, more than a year after Windom built its nearly $11 million network, a major service provider also is in town offering competitive high-speed Internet, he said. About 1,700 customers subscribe to at least one of the three city services — Internet, phone or cable — and some take all three.

"If you're a small town out there and can't get a provider to provide services, what do you do? Give up or get the community involved?" Olsen asked. Windom's network isn't profitable yet, though Olsen said it wasn't expected to be this quickly. "We've been constantly hooking up and growing and monitoring."

There are challenges: According to Joe Savage, president of the Fiber to the Home Council North America, up to 30 percent of households in a given community must subscribe to a fiber network for the system to begin making money. And finding investors or otherwise securing the funds needed to build a network can be difficult.

However, Render, the market researcher, said he knows of no documented failures in what he considers a still-new phenomenon.

In Utah, the vitality of a network known as the UTOPIA project depends on its potential to grow and attract new customers, said Roger Black, deputy director and chief operating officer. Just six of the 14 communities behind the project are now being served by the superfast service, he said.

BASEBALL

Weaver has been dreamy

BY KEN PETERS

AP Sports Writer

ANAHEIM — Still learning and still unbeaten. Los Angeles Angels rookie Jered Weaver has the chance to put together a “monster of a year,” manager Mike Scioscia says.

After nine major league games, the lanky right-hander with a knack of tattooing the corners with a mixed bag of pitches is 7-0.

Weaver, 23, has had no-decisions his last two starts after he won his first seven. He allowed three runs in six innings Thursday night when the Angels rallied late to tie Texas only to lose 7-6 in 12 innings.

Although he gave up three runs in each of his last two starts, he still has a 1.81 ERA.

“His talent has emerged to a higher level,” Scioscia said before Weaver took the mound against the Rangers. “I think the real story is not so much his won-loss record, but some of those other numbers.

“He has a chance to put together just a monster of a year that could stack up with anybody.”

Left-handers are batting just .210 against Weaver, and right-handers are hitting a measly .175. The 6-foot-7, 205-pound right-hander has walked 14 and struck out 47 in his 59 2-3 innings.

His success aside, he fully realizes he still has a lot to learn. Following his latest outing, Weaver shook his head and analyzed what he might have done differently against the Rangers.

“I wish I could take the first two innings back. I threw too many pitches there. I was trying to be a little too fine around the plate, had to come back from some deep counts, and it cost me a couple of times,” said Weaver, who pitched out of trouble in the opening inning, gave up a run on a sacrifice fly in the second and two more in the sixth on consecutive triples and an RBI single.

“I was kicking myself over that last inning when I gave up those runs, but you realize with this team that we can come back. The offense picked me up.”

Colon's cuff cuts year short

Associated Press

ANAHEIM — The season could be over for Los Angeles Angels right-hander Bartolo Colon, who learned Friday he has a rotator cuff problem — the latest setback in an injury-plagued season for last year's AL Cy Young winner.

An MRI exam revealed a partial thickness tear of the rotator cuff, an injury that will require an aggressive rehab program by the 33-year-old.

General manager Bill Stoneman said surgery was not mentioned during his conversation with team doctor Lewis Yocum, who examined Colon at the Kerlan-Jobe Clinic in Los Angeles. Stoneman said there is no timetable regarding when he would be able to pitch.

Colon has made only 10 starts and is 1-5 with a 5.11 ERA. “It's tough news,” manager Mike Scioscia said. “Understandably, we know what Bart has meant to our club and to our rotation the last couple of years. It certainly explains a lot of the issues he's been having.”

The 10-year veteran, who was on the disabled list only once before this season, was on the DL from April 19-June 17 with inflammation in his right shoulder. He went on it again recently with tendinitis in his triceps.

Colon was 21-8 with a 3.48 ERA in 33 starts last year, helping the Angels win their second straight AL West title. His lone win this season was a four-hitter in a 4-0 decision at Seattle on July 5, when he recorded his eighth career shutout and 31st complete game without walking a batter.

Affleck tackles new roles: fatherhood and director

BEN AFFLECK finished shooting his film "Gone, Baby, Gone" and thanked residents for their support during the nearly three-month production in and around the city.

"This is a great place to shoot movies," Affleck, who is making his directorial debut, told reporters on Saturday.

"We've had an enormous amount of cooperation."

The Cambridge native, who won an Oscar for co-writing "Good Will Hunting" with hometown friend Matt Damon, shot his new film in Boston, Chelsea, and Quincy.

"There were a lot of people who had to find new parking spaces, who had to go around a lot of detours," he said.

Affleck, actress wife Jennifer Garner and baby Violet have been living near Harvard Square for the summer. He said it's been a nice break from Hollywood.

The film, expected in theaters next year, stars younger brother Casey Affleck, Michelle Monaghan, Ed Harris, and Morgan Freeman. It's based on a novel by Dennis Lehane, who also wrote novel-turned-film "Mystic River."

Boston is no longer an expensive and indifferent city in which to shoot, Affleck said. The state's new tax breaks decrease the cost.

"Companies thinking about coming here definitely should," he said. "They'll be met with enthusiasm, and they'll get to shoot in a place that is really unique and distinct... And I want to thank Boston for making that possible."

RICK JAMES

James' legacy is rock solid

RICK JAMES was hoisted into place last week, just in time for the second anniversary of his death Sunday. The Buffalo-born James lives on in his leather image from the 1981 hit album "Street Songs," etched into stone in tight pants, jacket and guitar.

"Tasteful. Simple. Nice,"

said Molly Amigone, who runs the monuments division of Amigone Funeral Home.

The album sold 3 million copies and made James a superstar.

His family chose the portrait and the words on the gravestone, lyrics to a song the "Superfreak" singer never released:

"I've had it all/I've done it all/I've seen it all/It's all about love/God is love."

When in Rome, a crowd follows

Hundreds of Italians have gathered in front of her hotel and rushed to Rome's most chic street in hopes of getting a glimpse of MADONNA, who was here to perform a concert Sunday at the Olympic stadium.

Fans started pouring in to the stadium since early afternoon. Some 70,000 people were expected at the concert — the only Italian date of her "Confessions" tour. The concert has drawn criticism in Roman Catholic Italy, especially for Madonna's plans to appear crucified on a mirrored cross.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Mark J. Saladino, Public Administrator in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

THE PETITION FOR PRO-BATE requests that Mark J. Saladino, Public Administrator be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on September 15, 2006 at 8:30 AM in Dept. No. 9 located at 111 N. Hill St., Los Angeles, CA 90012.

IF YOU OBJECT to the grant-ing of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.
