Pico-based barber keeps the business in the family for three generations

SCOTT SNOWDEN
SMDP Staff Writer

As Brian Trujillo, current and second generation owner of Tel's Barber Shop on Pico Blvd says, "It's like the theme to the old TV show Cheers, everyone here knows your name."

The shop, located at 2210 Pico Blvd has been staffed by three generations of the Trujillo family. Brain explains that the very first incarnation was opened in 1935 on Olympic Blvd and then they moved over to this site on Pico 20 years later.

"Then, my father started working here in '62, when the original owner retired and he [Brian's father, Tel] took it over in '74. My older brother used to work and he kind of retired after the pandemic. I started here in '88 and now my kid works here and he's been here for 15 years. And my younger kid works here now and he's been here for about 12 years," Brian says.

As we speak, customers who are already sitting in the old-school leather barbershop chairs, seem to be enjoying the education in local history. New customers arrive and are instantly greeted with a smile and a warm welcome, as though everyone here knows each other really well, which of course they all do.

"A lot of original customers have moved away, but we also have new ones with a lot of people moving into the area," Brian says, adding,

New pop-up Pickletown proves popularity in the playful pastime is patently still peaking

SCOTT SNOWDEN
SMDP Staff Writer

There's no denying that pickleball has hit fever pitch. Where once there were only a few public places where one could partake in this particular pastime, new venues are popping up all around the city, the latest of which is called Pickletown.

From the outside, looking at the front of the site from Lincoln Blvd, it really doesn't look like much. In fact, it doesn't look like there's anything there at all. Once upon a time, it was home to Hi De Ho Comics (now at 1803 Lincoln Blvd) followed by one or two different

City prevails in transfer tax lawsuit

MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

Santa Monica's voter approved measure targeting the sale of luxury properties has passed muster following a court ruling last week.

A statewide business group filed the lawsuit claiming the fees were unconstitutional but a judge disagreed.

In November 2022, Measure GS was approved by Santa Monica voters to raise funds from the sale of large properties. The measure imposes a $5,600 per $100,000 charge on real property sales or transfers exceeding $8 million. The generated revenue will be used to support homelessness prevention, housing projects, and schools. Measure GS was sponsored by former mayor Sue Himmelrich and won over Measure DT, sponsored by Councilmember Phil Brock.

However, a lawsuit was filed challenging the validity of Measure GS, arguing that it violated the "single-subject" rule in the California Constitution. This rule prohibits ballot measures from addressing more than one subject. Measure GS proposed splitting the funds between funding schools and affordable housing, which the lawsuit contended was in violation of this rule.

The measure's intended use of funds was to provide ongoing or emergency income assistance, acquire and rehabilitate rental properties as affordable housing, create new affordable housing, and support programs for improving

Wildest Dreams of a Birthday in the Garden

CAMILLE KESTERMAN
Special to the Daily Press

Martha Bardach, a former bureau photo editor for Time magazine, has been a dedicated volunteer from the earliest days of the Ishihara Park Learning Garden. The Ishihara Park Learning Garden opened in 2017 and was the first shared communal garden of the City of Santa Monica Community Gardens. Working closely with Teague Weybright, the Community Gardens Program Coordinator and a cadre of volunteers, Martha has helped to grow and share at least three thousand pounds of produce each year with the people of Santa Monica and those served by the Venice Family Clinic. (Yes, the Ishihara team documents its garden's harvest and donations every working day and has good stats).

In early July, I interviewed Martha, in advance of her 80th birthday celebration at the Ishihara Park Communal Garden with her fellow gardeners. It was my pleasure to speak with Martha, who began her journey to becoming a more experienced food and vegetable gardener only very recently.

Martha's reflections are invigorating:

The garden has been a very valuable experience for me. And, I'd like to show other older people how good it is to view gardening as great exercise. It's wonderful; I feel incredibly young and I feel stronger than I've ever been.

My volunteer work at Ishihara has completely changed my thinking about how to live a long, good life: It really takes being part of a community that provides many things like friendship and healthy exercise. Growing older and in retirement, it's so important to stay connected to people. I've found that a diverse, caring community is vital in aging well.

I have had a "community" with my family, at school, then in my work life. I retired from my professional life in 2009. At that time, I had younger grandchildren, and I was able to help out in their lives. When Ishihara Park opened in February 2017, I had time to jump right in to volunteering at the Learning Garden from its first opening week. Now I

Santa Monica Secures $4.8M Grant for Safety Infrastructure Along Wilshire Boulevard

Last month, the City of Santa Monica was awarded a $4.8 million state grant to support Phase 2 of the City's Wilshire Boulevard Safety Enhancement Project. The funds are part of the State of California's Active Transportation Program. Coupled with the previously awarded $2.1 million grant from the Los Angeles Metro Multi-Year Subregional Program, a total of $6.9 million has been awarded to enhance pedestrian safety, encourage active transportation, and contribute to the City's Vision Zero goal of eliminating traffic-related fatalities and serious injuries along Wilshire Boulevard.

Phase 2 will begin immediately with the engineering design for six intersections located along Wilshire – at 18th Street, 21st Street, 22nd Street, Chelsea Avenue, 25th Street, and Harvard Street – with anticipated construction beginning Summer 2025. All of the intersections will receive curb extensions and upgraded lighting, while at Chelsea Avenue a traffic signal will also be constructed. Construction at a seventh priority intersection, Wilshire at 16th Street, will begin in Summer of 2024 as part of Phase 2, with implementation of a new traffic signal, curb extensions, and lighting.

Phase 1 is expected to be completed by the end of Summer 2023, and significant progress has been made, including the repaving of the Wilshire corridor, traffic lane markings, and the relocation of four bus stops. Phase 1 emphasizes pedestrian crossing improvements and will incorporate highly visible flashing beacons at five intersections and restricting side streets at fourteen unsignalized intersections to right-turn only, including at 9th Street, 10th Street, 12th Street, 18th Street, 19th Street, 21st Street, 22nd Street, 24th Street, Chelsea Avenue, 25th Street, Princeton Street, Stanford Street, and Franklin Street. A right-turn only pilot was established at Harvard Street in 2019. Phase 1 transit enhancements include marked bus stops with red pavement, loading zones, and improvements specific to bus routes, effectively preparing for increased ridership with the upcoming Metro Purple subway extension.

The Wilshire Safety Study—a community engagement process involving many residents, businesses, and visitors in Santa Monica undertaken from 2019 to 2020—informed the enhancements and changes as part of the Wilshire Boulevard Safety Enhancement Project.

CMS Awards 5 Stars to Providence Saint John's and Providence Holy Cross Rating System Helps Consumers Choose Quality Care, Close to Home

Two Providence hospitals in Southern California – Providence Saint John's Health Center in Santa Monica and Providence Holy Cross Medical Center in Mission Hills – earned 5-star ratings from the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, the federal agency announced today.

The two Providence hospitals are among 483 (10.4%) of U.S. hospitals that received this year's top designation for quality and safe care.

Four stars were awarded to Providence Little Company of Mary Medical Center, Torrance; Providence Mission Hospital, Mission Viejo; Providence Saint Joseph Medical Center, Burbank; and Providence St. Jude Medical Center, Fullerton. Nationwide, 803 hospitals earned four stars, 17.3% of those rated.

"The CMS star rating system is the gold standard for measuring quality and safety," said Teresa Frey, chief quality officer for Providence in California. "Providence is committed to advancing both by sharing expertise across our system, and having many of our hospitals earn 4 and 5 stars is evidence this practice is improving care for our patients."

The star ratings are a key source of information for consumers to choose quality hospitals in their communities. CMS cautions consumers that ratings alone are not the only criteria in deciding where to get care. Physician guidance, other quality assessments and results of patient experience surveys also should be considered.

The overall star ratings for hospitals address readmissions to hospitals and deaths after heart attacks or pneumonia. The ratings, from one to five stars, summarize a variety of quality measures across five areas: mortality, safety of care, readmission, patient experience and timely and effective care.

"For more than 80 years, Providence Saint John's Health Center has been driven by quality, research, innovation and deep compassion for our patients and their families," said Michael Ricks, the hospital's chief executive. "My profound gratitude goes to all our physicians and caregivers whose commitment to excellence earned this top honor for our health center."

All six of the 4- and 5-Star Providence hospitals have received numerous accolades over the past year. In U.S. News & World Report 2022 quality ratings, Providence Saint John's and Providence Holy Cross tied for No. 9 in the Los Angeles Metro Area and No. 17 in California.

Providence Saint John's earned a spot on Newsweek's World's Best Hospitals the past two years and Healthgrades' 2023 America's 50 Best Hospitals for Surgical Care and America's 100 Best Hospitals for Joint Replacement. It also was named among U.S. New & World Report's Best Maternity Hospitals.

Providence Holy Cross was named among Healthgrades America's Top 50 Hospitals for the past four years, earned Healthgrades Patient Safety Excellence Award the past two years and was included recently among the nation's top 170 hospitals for cardiac intervention. In 2022, U.S. News ranked No. 35 for orthopedics and No. 36 for obstetrics/gynecology nationally.

pop-ups, but for the majority of the time since then, it's been vacant.

Enter Ilene Feldman and Mary Pat Faley. The former is a sportswear marketing specialist with decades of experience and the latter is a former US Professional Tennis Association pro, host on the Tennis Channel, author and keynote speaker on any subject as long as it's tennis.

In a similar vein to Picklepop, that's opening up soon at 1231 Third Street, Feldman and Faley don't know for sure how long they will be at this venue, so specially-designed Professional Pickleball Association and Major League Pickleball approved court flooring is set to be delivered and installed any day now. That way, if they do have to move, they can take everything with them with relative ease.

"We're not a secret," laughs Feldman. "I mean I know we don't have much signage and we didn't want to have the front doors opening up on Lincoln Blvd [because of the dust and noise from the construction sites] so everyone comes in from around the back."

But the pair are constantly on the lookout for larger spaces to take their concept to the next level. "We found a couple of places, but permitting in Santa Monica is a nightmare. Hopefully they'll loosen up a little bit just because of the desire for pickleball in Santa Monica as well as all of West Los Angeles, you know people are clamoring to play and there's not many places to go," Feldman says.

She says that they have their eye on another location in West Los Angeles that is a lot bigger, 20,000 square feet in total that could probably house 14 indoor courts. "I'm not saying where that is, because I don't want to jinx it," she said.

"There are a lot of advantages to playing indoors," Feldman says. "Take today, it's crazy hot, but we also have to deal with wind and of course the noise. With the right amount of soundproofing we won't be annoying the neighbors. We can't do that outdoors.

One of the unique selling points of Pickletown is that given Faley's extensive history with tennis and the fact that she's a certified pro-level coach in pickleball, she's readily available to give lessons, instruct and teach, in addition to being able to simply rent the court space to play and practice.

"It's truly a sport for all ages," Faley says. "I envision Pickletown as a place that grandparents can come and play with their children and their grandchildren. There's no other sport where you can get three generations having a great time playing on one court."

The space offers fully equipped bathrooms and showers, but there won't be much of a social area or a bar, so they won't be applying for a liquor license. Instead, Faley says, they plan to have select food trucks gather from time to time in the back space, next to the outdoor court.

There is some space on the second floor, mezzanine-style area that Kristen Anderson, the former competitive figure skater who was key in popularizing pilates, is going to use for a small studio.

A full listing of the service on offer together with details of upcoming pickleball kids camp, training sessions, events and court rental are available on the website, pickletownla.com.

affordable housing for lower-income households. The first $10 million annually was allocated for public schools, the next $40 million for homelessness and housing, and any amount over $50 million was to be split 80/20 between housing and schools.

This lawsuit brought attention to the "single-subject" rule, which is present in more than half of states, and has been the subject of other legal disputes, such as the case of Measure R in the City of Malibu in 2014.

Last week, Los Angeles Superior Court Judge H. Jay Ford, III, ruled in favor of the defendants City of Santa Monica, Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District, and Measure GS's official proponents, Sue Himmelrich and Michael Soloff, in a case brought by Plaintiff California Business Roundtable to challenge Measure GS.

According to the city, Judge Ford found that Measure GS's findings support the view that the programs supported by the School Fund and the Homelessness Prevention and Affordable Housing Fund are reasonably connected to the common theme of addressing the City's rent burden problem. As such, Judge Ford found that Measure GS is valid and does not violate the single-subject rule.

The ruling directs the parties to prepare a proposed judgment consistent with the Court's decision.

Rob Lapsley, president of the California Business Roundtable, said he was disappointed.

"There is no doubt that the proponents of Measure GS violated the single-subject rule by claiming revenue from the measure would go to two unrelated services," he said. "The claim the revenue would fund both schools and affordable housing was a dishonest and deliberately deceptive move on the part of the proponents to garner more support for Measure GS. We are currently reviewing our legal options in this matter."

A similar measure in Los Angeles has also been challenged in court. Los Angeles voters approved a transfer tax proposal, Measure ULA, to support affordable housing and homeless programs. That measure has also been challenged based on the specificity of the proposal. According to the plaintiffs (The Howard Jarvis Tax and the Apartment Association of Greater Los Angeles), the City can't pass a "special" measure that earmarks funds for only one cause. Rather, measures must be general in nature and fund the general fund.

BARBERS

"But we also have customers who have been coming here for years, their parents come in and I say 'I remember cutting your dad's hair when he was a kid' so it's like generations of people coming in."

The site isn't particularly big and to be perfectly honest, it really doesn't look like it's changed very much over the last six decades or so, which of course is not a bad thing. At a time when cookie-cutter strip malls are carbon-copied across just about Everytown, USA, small family run businesses are the last refuge for community spirit and all that entails.

The unassuming shop is clean and well maintained, despite much of the furniture looking like it would sell for a small fortune in an antiques store. Every one of the three Trujillo boys, sons Jimmy and Andrew and dad Brian, are enjoying a laugh and a joke with the customers whose hair they're trimming.

So, how does this line of work appeal to so many members of the Trujillo family? "We kind of just fell into it. I mean, I was just going to try it out for a little while," laughs Brian. "My dad said 'you're going to school — but go to barber school, get your license first and work here — while you're going to school.'

"Then I had my kid," he laughs. "I had him [Jimmy] start cleaning me up when he was a little kid and by the time he was 14 he was already doing full haircuts. By the time he went to barber school he already knew a lot. He had more interest than me and my other kid."

Both of his children have attended a popular barber school in the city, which is part of the Santa Monica College. "My brother and I both went to the same school and we focused purely on cutting men's hair. A lot of other places focus on guys and girls, but we only do guys here. And I've already been here for 11 years and my brother's been here for 15 years," Andrew said.

> "My brother and I both went to the same school and we focused purely on cutting men's hair. A lot of other places focus on guys and girls, but we only do guys here. And I've already been here for 11 years and my brother's been here for 15 years
> - Andrew Trujillo

Photographs adorn the walls with one or two of the Trujillo family grouped together and smiling that also include Brain's father, Tel. Councilmember Oscar de la Torre is a regular here and so is former NASA astronaut and Santa Monica native Randy Bresnik.

Altogether proving, beyond any doubt, that sometimes not everything is better with change.

Bludso's BBQ

I love BBQ. I grew up in a big family in Freeport Illinois that got together for outside BBQs in the summer, presided over by our cook, Ida Mae. Ida Mae was from Mississippi and boy did she know how to barbeque. For me, as it was for Ida Mae, BBQ is a culture, not just a product. This is why I sometimes say that the typical BBQ baby back ribs in local LA restaurants are not real BBQ. For one thing, they are not smoked. For another, they don't come with the right side dishes. Not to mention that usually the sauce is too bland and not properly applied to the meat. There is an art form involved that can easily escape the untrained BBQ expert.

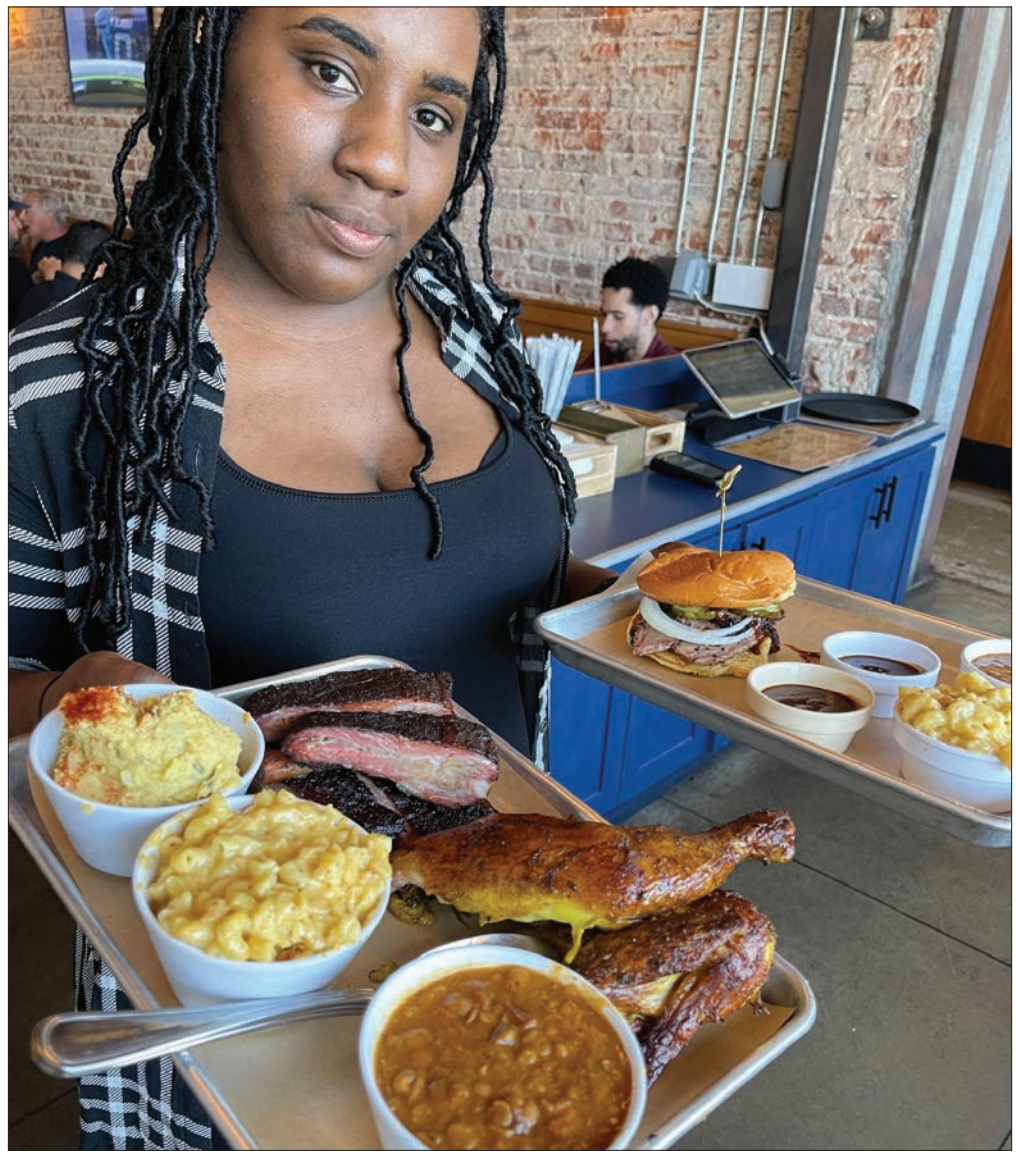

There are few authentic BBQ restaurants on the Westside. There is Holy Cow on 26th Street, but it's become more of a take-out place and doesn't have the culture that really makes a BBQ place shine. It wasn't even mentioned in the big review of BBQ restaurants in a June edition of the LA Times. The only really authentic BBQ on the Westside to my mind is Maple Block on Sepulveda in Culver City. Now, that's a good BBQ joint.

Many people felt very excited when Bludso's opened in Santa Monica. In fact, it's been packed with customers since it opened. I love their La Brea restaurant. Contrary to what I preach, I went there right after it opened instead of waiting for it to mature a few weeks. What a mistake that was! It was way too crowded, and they were out of beans, okra, and — can you believe it? — BBQ sauce! Nevertheless, I had a pretty good dinner, including their famous dinosaur beef bone.

I went back after a couple of weeks for lunch. This time I got everything (sadly, they don't serve the dinosaur bone at lunch), but it took about 45 minutes for the food to arrive, apparently they were experiencing "a computer glitch." That happens, and the wait was worth it. The food was delicious despite these minor glitches.

In time, I think this will become the best BBQ around town even if it's not quite there yet. The pork ribs were good, but the ratio of meat to fat is not exactly fine-tuned the way I like it yet. The brisket — their specialty — while moist, smoky, and tender, also has a very high ratio of fat to meat so the actual cost, since they charge by the pound, is high. Still, I have to admit, it is the best BBQ brisket that I've had in a long time. I trimmed the fat off and put the tender meat on a bun and thoroughly

Verdi Chorus auditions to be held Aug. 19

Celebrating its 40th Anniversary Season, The Verdi Chorus (Anne Marie Ketchum, Founding Artistic Director) has announced auditions will be held on Saturday, August 19, 2023, at the First Presbyterian Church in Santa Monica for The Verdi Chorus Fall 2023 Concerts.

Founding Artistic Director Anne Marie Ketchum says, " Our upcoming 40th Anniversary concert is going to be such a landmark event, not only for the chorus and audience members who have been with us from the very beginning, but for new opera enthusiasts we are welcoming for the first time on both sides of the concert stage. The Verdi Chorus is a group of passionate amateur and professional music lovers from many walks of life who love to sing and are devoted to performing opera choruses in concert. If you are an opera lover and want to get more inside the music and all that great operatic drama, if you want to learn more about the art form, or if you just love to sing and are looking for a good musical family to harmonize with one night a week, there couldn't be a better time to come and join us!"

These performances are made possible, in part, through the generous support of the Sahm Family Foundation and the Green Foundation, and by grant funding from the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors through the Los Angeles County Department of Arts and Culture, and the City of Santa Monica through the Santa Monica Arts Commission.

The Verdi Chorus prepares for concerts with rehearsals every Monday night. There, an amazing thing happens as over 55 singers gather from every walk of life to become the Verdi Chorus. This wide swath of people includes singers from 18 to 80 who come from a variety of professions, and yet have one thing in common: the desire to sing side by side each week and delve into the rich, dramatic world of opera. They in turn are joined by up-and-coming opera singers at the beginning of their careers, and college students who have just begun to realize their operatic gifts, as all of them become one under the direction of Founding Artistic Director Anne Marie Ketchum. Each rehearsal is like a vocal master class.

Positions are open for all voice types. To request an audition for Saturday, August 19 please visit www.verdichorus.org/audition-for-chorus/schedule three mornings a week and the 3rd Saturday of the month to my Ishihara Learning Garden commitment.

I have had a lot of experience gardening in my landscaped home garden. I've gardened with family and friends in their gardens. But at Ishihara I am doing something new and important for me that benefits a neighborhood community, edible food production. Ishihara Learning Garden has been remarkably productive. These past 6-plus years have been such a perfect time! In so many ways, Ishihara is a "learning" garden. I am acquiring a whole new skill set; yes, it's vital to learn new things. I've always loved gardens and gardening, but now I am finding out how to produce vegetables in an organic, sustainable way. Along with all my great, dedicated Ishihara volunteer friends and the knowledgeable leadership and guidance of Teague Weybright, I am now gardening with a purpose.

I was 74 when the garden opened in 2017. For my 75th birthday in the garden, I baked zucchini bread from our summer crop for my Ishihara friends to celebrate my birthday. As my 80th birthday has neared, I realized there was no more important place or group - outside my family - that I wanted to celebrate it with. At 80 years old, I want to honor this special place that I get to be a part of: Ishihara Learning Garden is a space to learn and grow with a great A-Team of volunteers. Together we "feed and nourish" each other and grow food for others. How great is that!

So much love is shared by everyone for me and for each other. What a wonderful Ishihara family we have. We can be proud of how a community garden can bring "community" to a community. My 80th birthday celebration was beyond my wildest dreams.

enjoyed the full cultural experience.

I will also mention that their baked beans are excellent, and while they have fried okra, there was too much breading over the pieces of okra for my taste. The two sauces they served were also delicious and flavorful.

Even though they don't have a smoker on the premises, causing them to rely on getting the meats from their La Brea location, I will have to call this place a "real BBQ restaurant" with plenty of good dishes to choose from and you'll probably see me there on a regular basis.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Aug. 7)

The year is divided into three journeys: one for the heart, one for livelihood and one for legacy. As intrepid as your approach may be, levity and fun are around every corner. More highlights: It will take several months to get on the inside of a group, and from there you can realize key goals. You'll be shown appreciation in one of your favorite ways — with money. Libra and Pisces adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 13, 4, 44 and 7.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Negative examples and suboptimal circumstances help you see and appreciate your resources. Don't be afraid of a shadow — everything substantial casts one. Shadows provide the contrast that enables one to see the vision.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Think ahead to avoid social traps and obligations. You're at your best when you feel free to come and go as you please. As the adage goes, it's easier to love your neighbor when you can choose where you live.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). If you're accused of being distant, it's only because you're working something out in the world of your mind. You'll do your best thinking while executing a task that's very easy and repetitive, like walking or a long drive.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Relationships that were complicated become quite simple. The laws of cause and effect are so straightforward at the moment, it's like you're dealing in science instead of art. The best relationships have elements of both.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Oscar Wilde said, "Morality is simply the attitude we adopt toward people we personally dislike." All the more reason to focus your attention on people you enjoy and admire, freeing yourself from the tiresome responsibilities of judgment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Feeling comfortable is the first step to gaining the confidence you need to handle a situation. For now, get to know the lay of the land. As you learn more, you'll ease into a state of self-assurance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Someone is trying to get to know you. Since you hate to be put on the spot, think about what you might be asked ahead of time and craft your response. This is more about hitting the right tone than delivering information.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Friendships give you a peek into different kinds of lives and you'll adopt some behaviors as your own. It hits home the importance of surrounding yourself with people who possess the qualities you admire.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). To move forward, keep stepping, no hesitation. Don't stop to worry whether you are picking the exact right position, answer, direction or offering. Whatever you try, it will help you develop your potential.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Someone from your past figures in. It will stir up feelings — events representing the passage of time have a way of doing that. You'll notice how you think of yourself differently these days.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Just because you make the first call or more calls than the other person, it doesn't mean you're less loved. Some find it difficult to initiate social interaction, which is indicative of a personality type more than a level of interest.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You'll get more attention than you expect. Diffuse the energy and it will feel less awkward to you. Give credit to your team. Turn compliments around on the giver, acknowledging their kindness and keen powers of observation.

SURF REPORT

WATER TEMP: 72.0

MONDAY POOR TO FAIR	SURF: 2-3ft+ Thigh to stomach	Could be a few playful waves for the summer focal points as the tide fills in — most spots are sluggish around the early low tide. New S/SSE swell creeps up a little further as NW windswell tapers down.
TUESDAY FAIR	SURF: 2-3ft Thigh to waist	Watching tropics but lots of uncertainty at this point. Longer period S/SSE swell makes sure we have some surf but there is potential for a bit more if the tropics pick up. NW windswell is down a peg but levels out, still helping shape.

WEATHER

Monday: Patchy fog before 11am. Otherwise, partly sunny, with a high near 79.
