LESSON: A local man has created an app to help get medical aid to people who are in need of CPR.

ANGEL CARRERAS
Daily Press Staff Writer

There's an app for everything these days, ranging from rideshares to food deliveries and even anonymous social networking. Now, a Santa Monica resident will build, in his words, the Uber of CPR.

Matt Wolf, the founder and owner of the CPR SAVE app, wants to crowdsource certified CPR professionals and have them on call via the app to save people's lives faster. Wolf started the app after several incidents in his own life that involved a cardiac arrest, making the creation of the app personal.

At age nine, Wolf's father died from a cardiac arrest. Two decades later, his stepfather also died from cardiac arrest. The incident that eventually spurred the app's creation occurred three years ago. During a basketball game at memorial park, one of Wolf's friends suddenly collapsed facedown.

"We thought he passed out from the heat or had a seizure," Wolf said. "We discovered he was in cardiac arrest. He was unresponsive so we took him to the hospital. He was in a coma for three days and ended

RATES: Water and wastewater rates have increased over the past 10 years.

MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

Water bills in Santa Monica could rise by up to $36 for single family homes, $48 for multi-unit housing and $87 for commercial buildings based on new rate structures up for discussion at City Council this week.

City Hall will debate the next five-year rate structure on Tuesday and Council will hear two options. The first maximizes rate increases to pay for infrastructure improvement projects while the second delays repair work for at least three years.

"Water and wastewater enterprise funds are evaluated every five years to ensure proper funds are in place to carry out routine operation and maintenance activities, implement capital improvement programs for system resiliency, and achieve strategic sustainability goals such

Earth Talk

Dear EarthTalk: If the world is running out of fresh water, why aren't we desalinating more ocean water? — H. Smith, Providence, RI

The protagonist of Samuel Taylor Coleridge's 1798 lyrical ballad The Rime of the Ancient Mariner proclaims: "Water water everywhere / nor any drop to drink" as his ship drifts through Antarctic seas with no land or fresh water in sight and the crew slowly dying of thirst. A fitting allegory for our modern age.

Indeed, we're in that same boat today given that salty oceans cover 70 percent of the Earth's surface while freshwater becomes increasingly scarcer due to human overpopulation and climate change. Globally some 700 million people lack access to clean water while droughts are the norm in many regions.

Stepping up desalination—that is, filtering salt out of seawater to make it potable—seems like an obvious solution. But the two most common techniques, reverse osmosis, pushing seawater through membranes to separate the salt; and distillation, boiling seawater and collecting the resulting salt-free water vapor, both require costly amounts of energy and infrastructure. They also create a lot of potentially toxic "brine" as waste that can kill crops and other vegetation and render groundwater too saline to drink, not to mention negatively alter the chemistry of the ocean. Currently the world's 18,000+ desalination plants pump 140 billion liters of brine into terrestrial holding pits or back into the ocean every day.

Ngai Yin Yip and his team of environmental engineers at Columbia University think their alternative method—"temperature swing solvent extraction" (TSSE)—can fix the problems of leftover brine, in turn making the desalination process cleaner and more efficient. TSSE uses a solvent that reacts to inexpensive low-grade heat to extract freshwater as efficiently as RO or distillation at a fraction of the cost.

Another promising alternative as pioneered by Penn State engineer Bruce Logan and colleagues is called battery electrode deionization (BDI), in which salty water is routed into channels with electrodes designed to capture salt ions and divert freshwater and salt accordingly. BDI is still in the R&D phase, but researchers hope it can eventually become a useful alternative to reverse osmosis or distillation.

But even these alternatives may be less desirable than leaving ocean water alone and focusing instead on conservation and recycling of existing fresh water supplies. The non-profit Pacific Institute reports that stepping up conservation and efficiency measures already in place in water-wise regions like California could reduce annual water use in urban areas by as much as 57 percent. Meanwhile, recycling (and treating) freshwater and making a bigger effort to capture stormwater run-off could produce enough drinking water to quench Los Angeles' thirst two times over.

Given the magnitude of the problem, we need to embrace all forms of increasing our supplies of freshwater, whether they involve old-school methods like recycling or new-fangled approaches like technology-enabled desalination.

Santa Monica Mountains Fund Receives Grant for Nursery

Metabolic Studio has awarded a grant to the Santa Monica Mountains Fund to support the native plant nursery run by the National Park Service in the Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area.

The grant will be used to buy equipment for the nursery to bring it up to current industry standards. This will include nursery supplies such as portable steel benches, a modern irrigations system and an all-terrain field mower. In addition, the grant supports the hire of a manager to run the nursery for two years.

The new supplies will bring the nursery up to current sanitation standards. By raising plants off the ground, it will be easier to keep fungal diseases at bay.

As well as running the nursery, the new manager will be tasked with further developing volunteer opportunities for individuals and corporate organizations so that they can get involved in helping with native plant restoration in the Santa Monica Mountains.

"We're so grateful to Metabolic Studio for supporting this project and delighted to be able to hire a nursery manager and purchase supplies that will bring the nursery up to current standards", said Charlotte Parry, Executive Director Santa Monica Mountains Fund.

Supt. David Szymanski added, "This grant will allow us to develop plans that allow even more local residents to take part in the stewardship of their mountains."

Joey Algiers, Restoration Ecologist at the Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area, said, "With this grant we also hope to develop and grow the nursery's native seed bank and ultimately the park's restoration program. With outreach focused on volunteers from Los Angeles and surrounding communities, we can tilt the balance in large natural areas from non-native dominated vegetation to high quality native habitat.

The Santa Monica Mountains Fund works to protect and encourage appreciation and understanding of the Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area. The Fund achieves this by supporting National Park Service efforts in education, science, research, improved facilities, citizen engagement, stewardship and philanthropy. Malibu's Next Free CERT Training Course

As part of National Preparedness Month and in anticipation of peak fire season, the City will offer a free Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) training course starting on Thursday, September 5 at City Hall. Those who complete the seven-class course will receive a free backpack with emergency gear.

"I have completed the CERT training myself, and I urge everyone in Malibu to take the course as well because it is up to all of us to ensure that our community is ready for wildfires, earthquakes and other emergencies," said Mayor Jefferson "Zuma Jay" Wagner. "There could not be a better time than National Preparedness Month to sign up for the CERT course."

CERT is a highly-acclaimed program of free courses administered by the City of Malibu that empowers citizens to help during disasters. Through hands-on training, participants learn the most up-to-date information in basic disaster preparedness, the use of a fire extinguisher, disaster medical care, first aid, search and rescue techniques, disaster psychology and neighborhood team building.

CERT volunteers are a crucial part of the City's ability to prepare and respond to disasters. Participants must complete all seven classes to receive a certificate of completion. Any participant who misses a class may make it up during a future course series.

In 2017, the City Council adopted the CERT Program Guidelines, an important step in formally incorporating the program and the trained, dedicated CERT volunteers into the City's Emergency Management System. The guidelines outline the requirements to become an active member of the official Malibu CERT Team, as well as the organizational structure, team responsibilities, ongoing participation requirements, and activation procedures. Malibu CERT Team members are registered Disaster Service Workers. In addition to completing the CERT training course, they have to complete Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) trainings, serve at least 30 hours per year and attend regular meetings and drills.

CERT Class Schedule:
Thursday, September 5, 6 p.m.
Thursday, September 12, 6 p.m.

to expand the program from its initial 22 participants to up to 400 struggling seniors.

"The Preserving Our Diversity (POD) pilot program was launched to help seniors live with dignity by meeting their basic needs, in order to preserve the affordability of existing housing resources and sustain Santa Monica's economic diversity by helping low-income seniors remain in the community," housing program manager Jim Kemper wrote in a report.

More than half of seniors in California don't have enough income to afford basic expenses and the Los Angeles area is seeing a spike in homelessness among people older than 65. Santa Monica launched the POD program after a survey of elderly residents revealed that many were forgoing meals and medical care to afford rent.

The program allows the city to keep vulnerable residents housed at a fraction of what it costs to build affordable housing. It takes $450,000 and $650,000 for the Community Corporation of Santa Monica, the city's largest provider of affordable housing, to build a single new unit.

The pilot program began in November 2017 and concluded in January, although 17 remaining participants still receive cash assistance. Five seniors exited the program since 2017. Three started receiving housing vouchers, one moved to another city and another died.

Participants in the pilot program get cash assistance based on how much of their income goes toward rent and how much they need to afford basic necessities, which is calculated as about $750 per month for one person and $1,300 for a two-person household.

For example, a senior with a fixed income of $1,400 per month who pays about $950 in rent would get a $300 POD allowance to supplement the $450 they have left after paying rent.

The new phase of POD would provide different amounts of cash assistance to three groups of seniors and raise the eligibility age from 62 to 65, which would align with federal entitlements like Medicare.

Out of a $2 million total budget, the program would allocate $700,000 to renters who only need up to $250 in subsidies, $1 million to those who need between $250 and $500, and $30,000 to those who need between $500 and $700.

"The ... allocation formula (would allow) the program to serve more households than would be served if only households with the highest financial need were served," Kemper wrote.

An additional $160,000 would fund a limited-term housing specialist position and as-needed staff assistant hours. The pilot program included an extra $100,000 for administrative costs.

The Housing Commission recommended that the city roll out the program over six months. Kemper said expanding the program will take one year because of its complexity, but added that city staff recognizes the sense of urgency and will enroll participants in the program as soon as possible.

"Expanding the POD program to several hundred participants will involve outreach, waitlist administration, application processing, eligibility determination and coordination with participants," Kemper wrote.

Staff will also be working to resolve the issue of program participants enrolled in CalFresh, otherwise known as food stamps, seeing their benefits reduced when they receive POD assistance.

up recovering. The same guy, maybe seven months later, went into cardiac arrest again. I gave him CPR and he recovered. We just celebrated his 60th birthday, but that incident is what gave me the idea."

Much like Uber, the app would connect riders to drivers, the twist being these drivers are CPR certified.

"You push the button, press 'help' and you crowdsource anyone in our network," Wolf said. "The nearest person gets a call—let's say, there are three people nearby—all these people get a call, text and link to mapping software that would open up and route them to a victim's location."

The app is currently in beta with a target launch date of August 24. Wolf has had a positive relationship with the city and his app, noting he's working with the city's Community Emergency Response Team. Roughly 400 from this team will assist in cardiac arrest calls.

As of now, there's no cost for the app. Wolf says when commercialization eventually comes knocking that the prices will be covered by insurance companies.

Wolf hopes that once the app is launched that the city will integrate the app with 911, sending a ping to people within the CPR SAVE app network. This would give people suffering from a cardiac arrest a two-prong method of survival; the ambulance would be on its way and nearby CPR trained citizens will be heading the same direction.

"Why can we get a pizza or Uber when we need it but not CPR," Wolf said. "315,000 Americans every year from cardiac failure. Hopefully, this will save some of those lives."

as water self-sufficiency," said the staff report.

Staff are proposing two options for the water fund. Both fund routine operations and move the city toward water self-sufficiency but they take different approaches to funding new projects.

The first scenario has a tiered increase schedule, raising rates by 20 percent year one, 18 percent year two and 14 percent for the remaining three years. According to staff, this structure fully funds all Capital Improvement Programs.

The second scenario raises rates by 10 percent a year for five years but delays water main replacement for three years pending the achievement of self-sufficiency in 2023.

The wastewater adjustments also have two versions.

The first option would increase rates by 10 percent for four years and 3 percent for one year to fully fund capital improvement programs. The second option would increase rates by 9 percent for three years with a three percent increase in years four and five but would defer replacing the wastewater main/collection system until at least 2023.

According to the staff report, rate increases are necessary to: reach water self-sufficiency by 2023, increase local water resources to reduce water imports, fund conservation efforts to reduce demand, maintain necessary reserves and comply with state regulations.

In the past five years, the water Fund spent about $25.7 million per year and brought in $24.5 million per year.

"Revenues have been lower than originally projected and declining, attributable primarily to lower water demand from customers but also subject to climate change impacts, such as increased wet or cooler weather periods as experienced in the first half of 2019," said the staff report.

Excluding one-time capital improvement projects, costs are expected to increase to an average of $35.3 million over the next five years.

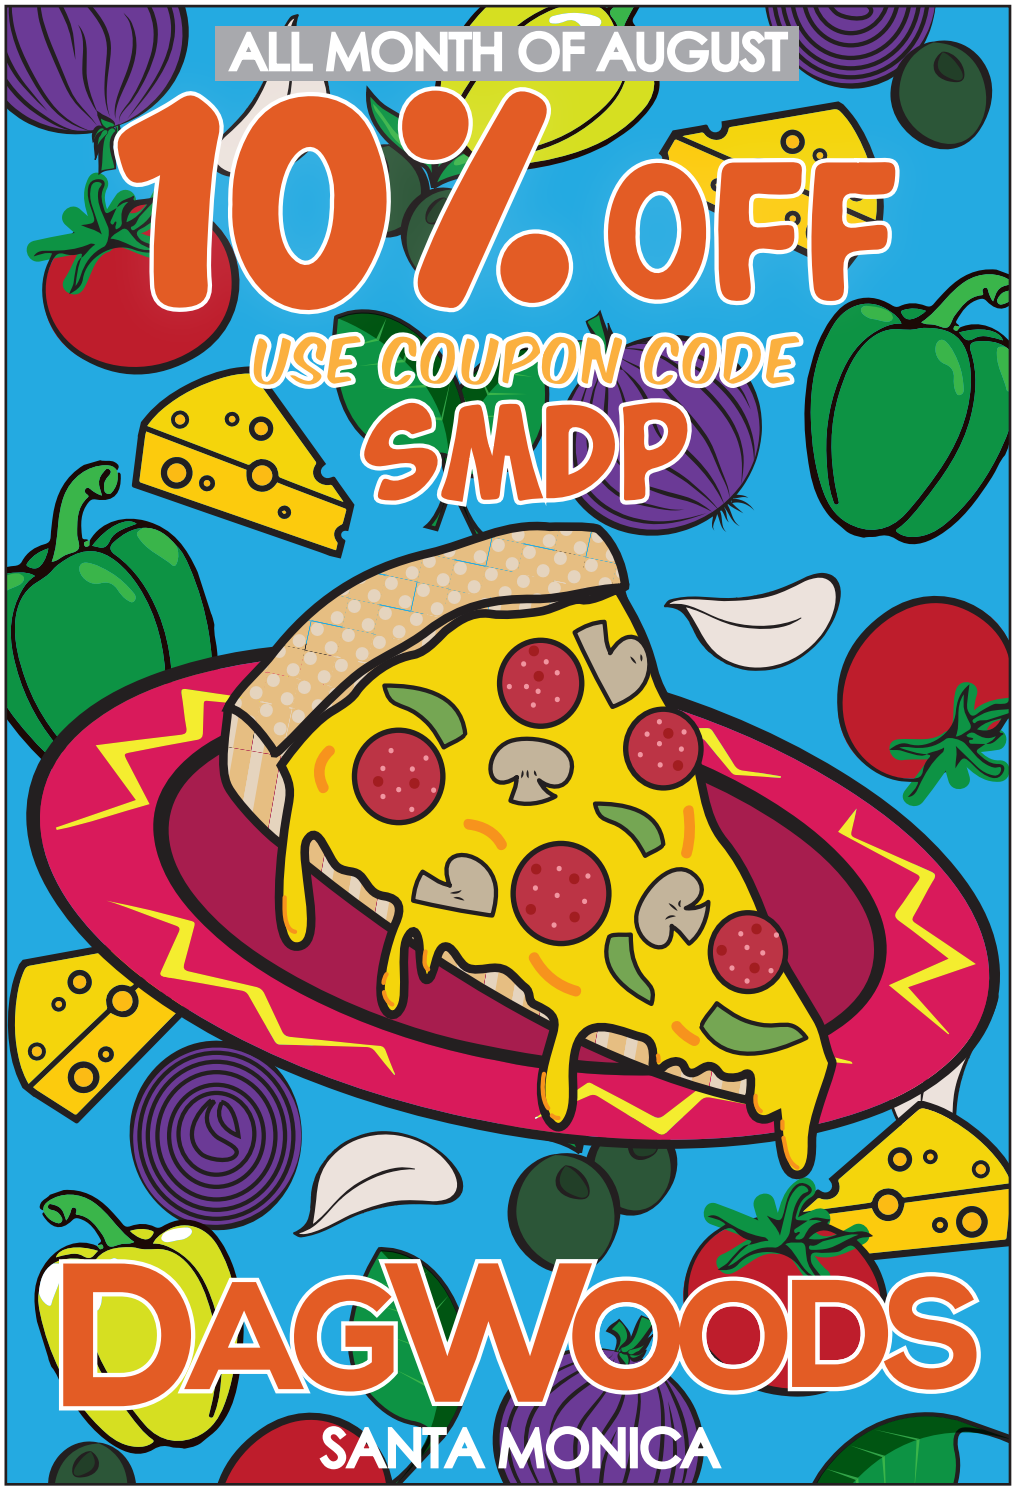

Expenses for the Wastewater Fund have averaged $25.4 million per year for the past five year with revenues of $20.8 million.

"Wastewater rates have remained relatively flat for the past five years, with the last rate increase of 0.4% approved for the calendar year 2014. This was achieved due to healthy fund balance," said the staff report.

Wastewater expenses for the next five years are projected at $27.8 million. According to the report, a rate increase will fund routine operations, onetime capital projects, cover increased costs associated with water sent to Los Angeles and bring reserve levels up to a necessary standard.

Council will meet on Tuesday, August 13 in City Hall, 1685 Main Street. Closed session begins at 5:30 and open session will not begin before 6:30 p.m.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (AUGUST 12)

People have told you what to do and you did your own thing instead. It's this rebel spirit, backed up with a passionate work ethic, that will bring you meaningful wins. Progress over the next six months is largely financial. A stellar alliance is featured in 2020, as is travel that furthers personal goals. Capricorn and Cancer adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 30, 1, 33 and 17.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). It's one of those days when moving is more important than knowing how or where to move. Action will win over strategy. And until you try the door, you won't know if it's locked.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Just as there are no isolated points on a circle, in the holistic realm of being, mind, body and spirit are circular. Everything connects with elegant clarity today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Do you know when you're bored? Because boredom is impolite, you're quite adept at acting interested when you're not. To be honest about what's really interesting to you will bring about a realization, and then a change.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). What the pictures don't show is what happens between "before" and "after." There are in fact hundreds of decisions that make any "after" possible, and thousands for the really good results.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Love is wanting a person to be as fully and happily themselves as they can possibly be, knowing that sometimes that means they'll be exploring without you. Ultimately, it's what's best for the relationship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). In many ways, you've already purchased your ticket to discover the uncharted world. The inevitable voyage will begin soon enough. So enjoy this part. Take a few pictures. Be here now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). When you were a child, you didn't have much of a choice about who you let into your life. Now you get to choose the terms of your relationships and who you let close to you, and you'll choose well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Yesterday was like a deep inhale of life. Now it's time to let go. Release the tension, purge resentments and unravel the attachments and strong emotions at the base of your being.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Because a large number of people are involved in a project, there's a diffusion of responsibility. Some won't be inclined to try as hard as others. Help everyone see how much they count, and together you'll move mountains.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Rise above the situation any way you can. From the drone view, you'll understand that you have many more options than you currently see on the ground.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You're aware that there are power dynamics at play, but you still don't know what exactly they are. Light testing is favored. Stay flexible because you'll have to change your approach to accommodate the egos involved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). A mind that believes it already knows is not absorbent. To learn anything new, it must be shaken from its state of certainty. To be a curious person is to stride ever-forward in ignorance.

Cosmic Capitalism

A person who can't see past his or her own needs and wants is limited indeed. This kind of tunnel-vision will be crippling today, as everything worth having is gotten by means of exchange. Without knowledge of what others need and want, it's hard to come up with the correct currency. This message comes via a capitalistic Capricorn moon.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTION

"I'm a 45-year-old Taurus who is having no fun at all getting older. Maybe it's because I'm ruled by Venus, but I'm really afraid of losing my looks and attractiveness. I'm afraid of being alone and unhappy. I went to a plastic surgeon, but I'm not sure I can afford all that he wants to do. What do you think?"Before you schedule your surgery, consider that you could very well be on your way to the happiest and most beautiful stage of your life, no cutting necessary. In collecting figures on the emotional well-being of British citizens, the U.K. government has statistics to suggest that after middle age, people get happier as they get older. Similar studies have been performed in China, Japan, Africa and the United States that point to the same conclusion. After age 46, people get happier. Earth signs Taurus, Virgo and Capricorn have particularly tenacious personalities and this manifests in their physicality as well. These signs not only get happier but more beautiful, as they gain a stately presence, grow into their own style and let their inner beauty dictate choices instead of merely following along with society.

CRIME WATCH BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON JULY 31, AT 12:50 P.M.

Officers responded to Structure 8 located at 1555 2nd Street to handle a suspicious person loitering in the parking structure and looking into cars. Officers found the suspicious person. As they made contact with him, he immediately became argumentative and uncooperative. He could not justify his reasons for being in the parking structure. He had no vehicle in the structure and could not account for why he was looking into car windows or walking in between vehicles. There were witnesses who reported to officers seeing the male appearing into car windows. He was placed under arrest for loitering in the parking structure. He was found to be in possession of burglary tools associated with breaking into vehicles. Dewain Williams-Dailey, 19, from Los Angeles, was arrested for possession of burglary tools and loitering in a parking structure. Bail was set at $500.

Art Exhibit and Sale Supporting the Santa Monica Mountains

Join the Allied Artists of the Santa Monica Mountains and Seashore in supporting the Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area and local conservation efforts on Sunday September 8, from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Rosenthal Wine Bar and Patio, 18471 Pacific Coast Highway, Malibu.

The group will present an art exhibit and sale featuring many local artists displaying original representational landscapes and seascape paintings of the Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area. Fine wine tasting, music, snacks and a food truck will be onsite to make the art viewing a special event in the beautiful outdoor garden patio. Rosenthal Wine Bar & Patio provides enthusiasts with wines of uncommon breeding that delight the senses and connect them to our unique local Malibu location in Newton Canyon.

The Allied Artists of the Santa Monica Mountains was founded over 20 years ago to paint and preserve the unique natural beauty of the Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area (SMMNRA). The 156,000-acre recreation area stretches from Runyon and Franklin Canyons in Hollywood to Point Mugu State Park in Ventura County and contains over 500 miles of trails including the 67-mile long backbone trail that follows the crest of the coastal mountains from Will Rogers State Historic Park to Point Mugu State Park.

The AASMS provides information, environmental education and conservation through art and public service. The members of Allied Artists organize exhibitions of their paintings in order to raise money and increase public awareness of the endangered land that they depict in their paintings. They collaborate with local, state and national agencies to present several art shows a year in local and natural settings in and around the recreation area.

The Allied Artists group also sponsors free monthly paint-outs on the second Saturday of the month at various locations throughout the recreation area. The free paint outs provide a unique opportunity for any painter to enjoy a sense of camaraderie and are a great way to see the beauty of the natural environment. A painting demonstration and friendly critique are usually held at the paint-outs. The free paint-outs are from 9AM to 1PM and are open to any artist and any media and at any skill level. Contact the allied artists at http://allied-artists.com for more information about membership, paint outs and upcoming art shows.
