THE WATER CUTS ISSUE

Council candidate cash race under way

BY DAVID MARK SIMPSON
Daily Press Staff Writer

CITYWIDE Several candidates for City Council are already stacking dollars for their campaign run this year.

Seven candidates have filed campaign finance disclosure statements, allowing them to raise cash in advance of the November election.

There are three contested council seats this year, one of which is open. Longtime Councilmember Bob Holbrook told the Daily Press last week that he would not seek reelection.

Planning Commissioner Sue Himmelrich has loaned herself $30,000, of which $7,550 was spent on campaign manager Denny Zane, the co-founder of the city's largest political party Santa Monicans for Renters' Rights (SMRR).

Former Mayor Michael Feinstein loaned himself $24,495 of the $26,450 that he's raised, according to the most recent campaign disclosure statements. He's spent more than $5,000.

Planning Commissioner Richard McKinnon has raised $24,637, which includes a $15,000 loan to himself. He's spent more than $11,000, largely on consulting and campaign literature.

Recreation and Parks Commissioner Phil Brock raised $8,340, which includes a loan to himself, and has spent just under $3,000.

Council agrees to mandatory water caps

BY DAVID MARK SIMPSON
Daily Press Staff Writer

CITY HALL Residents, businesses, and even City Hall will have to cut back on water usage this fall.

City Council voted unanimously on Tuesday night to declare a Stage 2 Water Supply Shortage, requiring mandatory water conservation throughout the city starting as early as October.

California is in the midst of a serious drought and 2013 was one of the state's driest on record.

Back In January, City Hall requested a 20 percent reduction but water usage has since gone up 3 percent.

Council is making conservation mandatory through penalties to high volume users.

Residents of single family homes, which use about a quarter of the city's water, and multi-family homes, which use about 42 percent, will be allotted 68 gallons per person per day plus an additional allowance that fluctuates depending on the time of year.

Non-residential users, including businesses and City Hall, which drain about a third of the city's water, will be required to reduce usage by 10 percent over their 2013 totals.

Certain organizations, like hospitals, are exempt, and landscape-only water accounts will be required to cut usage by 20 percent.

Penalties begin at $4 for every hundred

School starts Aug. 19

BY MATTHEW HALL
Editor-in-Chief

CITYWIDE Santa Monica students return to school starting Aug. 19 and many students will find a few changes at their school sites.

Some sites have new staff, some have new construction and there are new programs at the district level applicable to all students.

Superintendent Sandra Lyon said district-wide programs are aimed at building community.

"We are instituting School Smarts at all of our Elementary Schools in partnership with PTA. This is a PTA program designed to encourage more involvement in our schools and create leaders from stakeholders who may not have participated before," she said. "The Intercultural Equity and Excellence District Advisory Committee will be holding Community Conversations with representatives from each of our schools to continue to address how we better engage all community members and ensure that all of our students have the same opportunities and access."

Lyon also said several new teachers and administrators join SMMUSD this year.

Police receive $48,000 grant

The Santa Monica Police Department has been awarded a $48,000 federal grant from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services. No matching of funds by the City of Santa Monica or the Police Department is required.

The grant is aimed at the development of sustainable, community-based solutions to the problem of underage and binge drinking in youth. SMPD has been selected for its experience in effectively implementing the education, deterrence and enforcement component of the Strategic Prevention Framework, State Incentive Grant Program.

The police department will immediately roll out a multi-pronged approach that consists of:

Retail awareness campaign emphasizing responsible practices in the sales of alcoholic beverages by licensees to limit underage access and reduce substance abuse.

Deployment of underage decoys and undercover investigations to target chronic complaints and violations.

Messaging and high patrol visibility to enhance deterrence by reaching student age populations to change behavior of party hosts and their guests.

Chief Jacqueline Seabrooks expressed her gratitude to the California Department of Alcohol and Drug Program, the County of Los Angeles-Department of Public Health, the Westside Impact Project and the Institute for Public Strategies for their continued support and commitment in promoting the health and safety of our community.

Don't fight the FAA

Editor:

Most likely I will vote for the pilot initiative. There is no justification to authorize unlimited millions of our hard earned tax dollars to go towards fighting the FAA, without a specific plan approved by the voters; even though a super majority might be required.

If we had not lost in court so many times already and the language of the airport transfer deed wasn't so hard and fast, I might have a different opinion. Had the city not fallen for Frank Gruber and Mike Feinstein's short sighted idea, we would not have sued the FAA this year which then prompted the Pilot's to go all out for a ballot initiative. This caused the council to attempt to, try to, come up with a reasonable counter initiative, as a defense. It became a mess because people took advantage of other people's serious problems with noise and emissions. Being landlords we should never have put ourselves in this box.

As it stands Airport2Park has stepped on the foot of the residents by pushing for irresponsible action. The only thing left to do is to manage the airport using the proposed leases plan that the city is, only now, considering. And, use this plan as best we can. At the same time, we need to devise language for a codified specific airport plan.

I say initiate new airport leases at market rate and vote for the pilots plan to save money and at the same time allow for the installation of great mitigation measures to drastically relieve the neighborhood from noise and emission pollution. Then go from there.

Walking tall

Editor:

Sec. 3.12.372 of the SM Muni. Code states that it is illegal to "block or obstruct any public sidewalk so that less than a four-foot contiguous sidewalk width is kept clear for pedestrian passage at all times." I suggest that the appropriate city personnel enforce this provision against building owners whose shrubbery encroaches onto sidewalks. When I walk along residential streets, I regularly have to duck out of the way of bushes that look like they have never been trimmed. If I am walking with a companion, forget side-by-side; it's "single file and duck." Not the most momentous infringement on the quality of civic life, I admit. But I've never seen this problem mentioned, and the issuance of warnings to property owners would produce safer and more enjoyable walking routes.

LARGE CAST: The opening night cast of Without Annette

Where's Annette?

TWENTY-THREE INSANELY INVENTIVE actors. A hilarious script. And a world-class guitarist to strum them through the scene changes. And they do it all without Annette!

It's Hope Juber and Jeff Doucette's ad lib extravaganza Without Annette, now having its World Premiere at the Whitefire Theatre in Sherman Oaks.

The play works on a simple, uncluttered premise: an improv class run by Sam Wasserman (Jeff Doucette, alternating every other week with Mark Beltzman), an old-time actor who serves as guru for a varied group of eccentric thespians. (In fact, the role mirrors the real life of both men, who are actors, writers, and directors as well as veterans of Chicago's Second City.)

The audience members, who are cast as "auditors" of the class, are also called upon to shout out from time to time objects or places that the actors must weave into their improvised routines. The results are invariably witty, zany, and hysterical.

As a director, Sam is described as "completely adequate" by one of the students as he launches them into a "self-discovery" exercise. Whereupon a tiny Chinese girl, Libby, (Julia Morizawa, alternating with Corinne Dekker) wails that everything about her is considered average, but yet "there is nobody who is like me."

She also bemoans the fact that older women in films are only cast as "grandmas or real estate agents," and complains "It's not my fault I'm not sexy-I'm ASIAN!"

Then there is C.J. Carter (Gary Robinson/Shea Scullin), a mountain of an ex-football player who now sells insurance and is seeking to improve his people skills. He is awkward, shy, and skeptical and it's fun to watch him gradually come into his own.

And Hogan Connely (Charlie Mount/Bill Chott) who talks about time spent selling a script and calls it his "fantasy weekend." (Mount, in addition to acting and directing, served for eight years as Artistic Director of the Chestnut Theatre Program at Theatre West, where his hit play Against The Wall ran this spring and summer.)

Kyle Klein and his twin brother Jeremy, and Matthew Shane take turns playing Kyle, a morose teenager. Tara Ciabattoni and Christina Engelhardt alternate as Jeanette Parker, a successful actress and femme fatale, and Timothy Walker and Adam Ball play Michael Gaines, who, because he is moderately successful professionally and an egotist personally, takes on the role of unsolicited leader and bosses everyone around.

In one of the last exercises, the "class" is directed to do a complete advertising campaign for a new product. The product, suggested by an audience member is "bleach." Working spontaneously, the group describes the product, writes a slogan and a jingle, and writes and acts an entire commercial-all within the five-minute limit specified by Director Sam. None of it makes any sense, but it's hilarious.

Hope Juber, the co-playwright, is best known for her smash hit musicals It's the Housewives! and A Very Brady Musical. Her husband is Laurence Juber, an amazing guitarist and veteran of Paul McCartney's Wings. He presents a mini-concert before the show, replete with his own songs, and plays delicious riffs between scenes.

Without Annette has a dynamic that is comparable to big band jazz," he says. "A tight ensemble performs structured arrangements with room for improvised riffs."

Says co-writer Doucette, "You could see this show many times, and since the casts change each week and there's a lot of improv in it, you would never see the same show twice."

I can't think of a better way to spend your Thursday nights from now through Oct. 2!

Without Annette will run on Thursdays at 8 p.m. through Oct. 2 at the Whitefire Theatre, 13500 Ventura Blvd., Sherman Oaks. Call (323) 960-5773 or visit www.plays411.com for tickets.

Join the artists on Aug. 14 from 6 - 8 p.m. for the opening of afterGlow, a new exhibit featuring photographs from the City of Santa Monica's three GLOW festivals. Light refreshments offered.

Born in Managua, Nicaragua, Jenny Donaire migrated to Los Angeles at the age of 7. She received her B.Arch. from Woodbury University and her MFA from California State University, Northridge. Her work investigates the relationship between architecture and fragility. Using typical construction materials, wood, concrete, plaster, large-scale photographs, and found objects, there is an interplay between the physicality of the objects and materials and the ephemeral nature of the seemingly permanent built world.

Ashley Hagen was born and raised in Ames, IA. She received her BFA from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago, and her MFA from California State University Northridge. Play is important in her process of uncovering metaphors of home and self, fantasy and reality. Her work delves into the underlying resonance of childhood: limitlessness, inventiveness, mystery, imagination, adventure and possibility. Her work has been exhibited throughout the U.S. and Europe, including shows at Western Project, Andrew Shire, The Prospectus, University Art Museum in Long Beach, Art Platform, Juried by Ali Subotnick of the Hammer Museum for Boom, The Irvine Fine Arts Center, Deborah Martin gallery, Galerie dei Barri, Cerritos College Art Gallery, and Palais Ferstel in Vienna, Austria. She lives and works in Los Angeles.

Emily Sudd lives and works in Los Angeles, CA. She holds an MA in ceramics from California State University, Northridge (CSUN); and is currently an MFA student in ceramics at University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA). Her sculptures combine ceramic objects such as collectible figurines and functional ware in structures that engage in conversation with still life, narrative, and abstract painting; postminimalist sculpture; hierarchies of materials; and the life of the kitsch object.

Elizabeth Tinglof, a native Californian, lives and works in Los Angeles. She received her BFA from Otis College of Art and Design and her MFA from California State University, Northridge. Exhibiting locally for many years, including Berman/Turner Projects Gallery and Robert Berman Gallery. Elizabeth is interested in the exploration of materiality and process. She creates an alchemist fusion of painting and sculpture resulting in richly layered abstract objects that function, first, as a deconstructive conversation and evolve to one of reconstruction. Along with her studio practice Elizabeth volunteers as a photojournalists for non-profit organizations documenting the after effects of such disasters as, the Gulf oil spill in 2010 and the after math of the 2010 Haiti earthquake of which she still documents for the UCLA-HGD Project.

Water panel coming to Santa Monica

BY MATTHEW HALL
Editor-in-Chief

DOWNTOWN Public radio station KPCC (89.3) will partner with the Milken Institute to host a panel discussion on the future of water in Southern California on Aug. 21.

The event will bring together representatives from the spheres of agriculture, urban water use, environmentalism, water agencies and consultants to address some of the tough questions facing the state.

KPCC Environment and Science Editor Steve Gregory said each speaker will face some tough questions about the future of water.

"We're trying to break down some of the fundamental dynamics of the water situation in California and we wanted to get a panel that represented the various stakeholder," he said.

Gregory said the Milken Institute and KPCC shared a mutual interest in covering the drought and the pair had successfully collaborated on past events. Organizers said the discussion will feature a big picture overview of the situation and also discuss some of the specific conservation efforts being undertaken.

"Wildfires and brown lawns may be increasingly common symptoms of the drought, but unless rains return to the Golden State, Southern Californians can also expect to see food and water prices rise, battles over water rights intensify, and, possibly, water use restricted. Gov. Jerry Brown has declared a state of emergency and requested a 20 percent reduction in use, but some cities have gone even further," says the events official description.

"At this forum, co-hosted by the Milken Institute and KPCC, representatives from utilities, advocacy groups, and the private sector will discuss the drought's impact on towns and cities in the region. Beyond examining the scope of the problem, these experts will debate the best municipal and statewide strategies to ensure our continued access to H2O."

Panelists include Patrick Cavanaugh - California Ag TODAY, Sanjay Gaur - Raftelis Financial Consultants, Jeffrey Kightlinger - The Metropolitan Water District of Southern California, Jim McDaniel - Los Angeles Department of Water and Power and Kate Poole - Natural Resources Defense Council. It will be moderated by Larry Mantle, Host of AirTalk.

Organizers said they would have a video simulcast of the event if the venue sells out and that the discussion will also be broadcast on air.

The Milken Institute is located at 1250 Fourth Street. Doors open at 7 p.m. and the program begins at 7:30 p.m.

Admission is free, but RSVPs are required at www.scpr.org/events/2014/08/21/1504/the-future-of-water-in-southern-california.

WATER

cubic feet of water a customer goes over their limit. One hundred cubic feet is equivalent to about 750 gallons.

Penalty rates rise incrementally so that if a customer violates their limit by more than 1,700 cubic feet, they'll have to pay $40 for each hundred cubic feet.

In recent months, usage among multi-family customers has dropped while commercial and single-family usage has gone up. This is largely due to increased lawn-watering among single family residents and non-residential users, according to City Hall.

City officials need time organize the implementation and enforcement of the water usage caps, so they likely won't be going into effect until October.

The caps aim to produce a 20 percent reduction in water usage for the city as whole.

"Perhaps the useful analogy is that say we have to cap gasoline consumption, and say I was already driving a plug-in hybrid, these new conditions we're going to be putting on in the fall would not impact me dramatically," said Councilmember Ted Winterer. "But if I was driving Suburban, I'd probably have to think about driving less or paying the surcharge."

City Manager Rod Gould noted that while these changes come as a result of the current drought, they are likely going to be necessary in the long-term. Therefore, he said, City Hall will form a water conservation unit.

"It's our sense that water shortages are not a short-term problem in California or many of the western states," he said. "This will be an ongoing crisis in the area of our country and we believe that we need to assist our residents and businesses in ongoing behavioral change."

Water reduction makes sense, said Stephen Youngerman, speaking for Northeast Neighbors during the public portion of the meeting, but he questioned what he views as City Hall's prerogative to increase density in the city, which will increase the need for water.

Former Mayor Mike Feinstein pointed out that on a state level, agricultural businesses, particularly those that produce meats and dairies, are significant users of water. He suggested that city officials look into educating the public on how their dietary choices impact water usage.

Mayor Pam O'Connor and Mayor Pro Tempore Terry O'Day were absent from the meeting but all remaining council members voted to move forward with the water caps.

"Hopefully," said Councilmember Bob Holbrook, "by the time we get all these things in place it will start raining."

CASH

Mayor Pam O'Connor comes into this year's race with nearly $4,000 on hand and an outstanding balance of $5,000 in campaign consulting fees.

Councilmember Kevin McKeown has filed his campaign finance paperwork but has yet to raise or spend money, according to the most recent documents.

The same is true of Planning Commission Chair Jennifer Kennedy.

In the past two council elections, winners have spent anywhere from about $30,000 to $65,000 on their own races with larger sums of money coming into the race through independent expenditures.

Both Himmelrich and Kennedy are using SMRR Steering Committee member Roger Thornton as their campaign treasurer, according to the documents. Thornton did not recuse himself when the SMRR committee recently voted to support Kennedy and McKeown.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

Only three candidates for the Santa Monica-Malibu Board of Education have filed campaign finance paperwork thus far and only one has raised money, according to the most recent documents.

Boardmember Laurie Lieberman has raised just over $1,500 and spent about $500.

Boardmember Ralph Mechur and Santa Monicans for Renters' Rights co-Chair Richard Tahvildaran-Jesswein are also open for business.

SMC BOARD

Four candidates for the Santa Monica College Board of Trustees have filed paperwork to raise money thus far. Incumbents Barry Snell and Andrew Walzer have not yet spent or received money, according to the latest filing, nor has challenger Maria Loya.

Challenger Dennis Frisch has raised $22,400, with most of that ($20,000) coming from the Santa Monica College Faculty Association Political Action Committee.

He's spent $12,000 of that with most of it going toward campaign consulting.

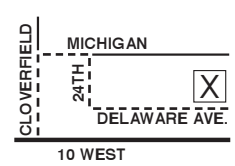

None of the Rent Control Board candidates have filed campaign finance paperwork and no independent expenditures have been filed.

In previous campaigns, this outside spending starts rolling in about a month before the election.

Heal the Bay is a nonprofit environmental organization making Southern California coastal waters and watersheds, including Santa Monica Bay, safe, healthy and clean. We use science, education, community action and advocacy to pursue our mission.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card™ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A-F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

UNC and Cal have never met in football.

North Carolina also announced games with North Carolina A&T and Delaware in 2015, and Eastern Michigan in 2017. UNC had previously announced a game with South Carolina in Charlotte in 2015, and a series with Illinois for 2015 and 2016.

California also announced games with TCU for 2020 and 2021. The Bears have series with Texas and San Diego State for 2015 and 2016, and host Grambling State in 2015.

WHEN: Tuesday, August 26, 2014
6:30 P.M.

WHERE: Santa Monica City Hall, Council Chambers, Room #213

PROJECT DESCRIPTION

The City Council will conduct a public hearing regarding the proposed adoption of a resolution which would automatically adjust the Affordable Housing Unit Development Cost that developers of multi-family projects may pay to the City pursuant to Section 9.56.070(c) of the City's Affordable Housing Production Program. The existing Affordable Housing Unit Development Cost of $291,613 would be increased by $20,996. Effective November 1, 2014, the adjusted Affordable Housing Unit Development Cost would be $312,609.

The adjustments to the Affordable Housing Unit Development Cost reflect changes in land and construction costs based on a methodology adopted by the City Council on June 13, 2006. An explanation of this methodology and the resulting adjustment to the fee are set forth in a letter prepared for the City by Hamilton, Rabinovitz & Alschuler, Inc. (HR&A). A copy of this letter is now available at the City Clerk's Office in Room 102 of City Hall, 1685 Main Street, Santa Monica, California or the Housing Division Office at 2121 Cloverfield Boulevard, Suite 100, Santa Monica, California. This information is also available on the City's web site (Housing section).

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ The surveillance video in evidence in England's Wolverhampton Crown Court in July captured the entire caper of two young men comically failing to open a parking lot's automated cash machine five months earlier. Wearing hoods, they tried to batter the secure machine open, then tried to pull it away (but learned that it was rooted to an underground cable). Plan C involved getting in their Peugeot and ramming the machine, which did knock loose the money-dispensing part -- but also shredded part of the car's body. The dispenser (with the equivalent of $1,500 in coins) fit in the front seat only after some exhaustive pushing and cramming, but finally the men drove off -- with sparks flying as the weight of the coins made the crippled car scrape the pavement. Police arrived on the scene, and a brief chase ended when the car crashed into a wall. Final score: car totaled, money recovered and Wesley Bristow, 25, sentenced to two years in prison.
