Commission considers Ross for public art

BY KEVIN HERRERA
Editor in Chief

DOWNTOWN An American sculptor known for large-scale public art projects is the front-runner for a City Hall contract to beautify a rebuilt Parking Structure 6 on Second Street.

Mike Ross, best known for his work "Big Rig Jig," consisting of two modified tanker trucks attached to each other vertically in an "S" shape to represent the precariousness and danger of an addiction to oil, is the Cultural Affairs Division's pick for the public art project and he is expected to be approved by the Arts Commission tonight.

"We're very excited and think he is a rising star," said Jessica Cusick, Cultural Affairs manager for City Hall with more than 20 years of experience working in the arts for governmental agencies, the private sector and nonprofits.

The budget for the public art component of the parking structure rebuild is $150,000, which includes payment to the artist as well as materials, insurance and other costs, Cusick said.

Construction on the structure is anticipated to begin in spring 2012 and completed at the end of 2013, according to a city staff report presented to the City Council on July 26.

Preliminary design plans consist of three subterranean levels and eight above-ground parking levels for a total of 750 spaces, a net increase of approximately 400 spaces. That would include 30 electric vehicle charging stations, storage area for the Farmers' Market, 7,000 square feet of retail space facing Second Street and bike racks to accommodate up to 90 bicyles. There will also be solar panels on the roof, according to preliminary designs.

Parkers would cascade up and down an exterior, diagonal staircase that weaves in and out of the structure's Second Street facade. This is expected to improve safety with its high visibility and offer people views of the ocean, according to the staff report.

The back of the structure, which faces the

Lawmakers debate pensions after summer recess ends

ADAM WEINTRAUB
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO Five months after Gov. Jerry Brown released a 12-point plan to reform public pensions, there has been a lot of talk but little action on the issue at the Capitol.

That could change this week when lawmakers return from their summer recess. Legislative leaders are considering several ways to address pension abuses and long-term financial health in the systems that pay for government worker retirement benefits. Among them:

■ Limiting some abuses that anger the public and increase costs, such as pension spiking, which artificially inflates retirement benefits by boosting pay at the end of an employee's career.

■ Creating a broader package of pension reforms for this year to fix abuses and address longer-term financial concerns, possibly including limits on state

COMMUNITY PROFILES | DR. MICHAEL FARZAM

FARZAM

Making house calls popular again

BY SERLI POLATOGLU
Special to the Daily Press

DOWNTOWN In an era when more people are feeling pressured to use their cell phones for business as much as pleasure, Dr. Michael Farzam, a local house call doctor, has no other choice — and he likes it that way.

Farzam grew up knowing he wanted to dedicate his life to healing others.

"At the end of the day, I enjoy working with people," he said. "It's never been a chore or seemed like work — it's a genuine pleasure."

Yet, he was also perpetually unsatisfied with the state of the medical profession. Cursory meetings with patients who spent hours upon hours in waiting rooms did not sit well with Farzam.

That's when his "concierge" approach to doctor-patient relations began taking shape.

A native Santa Monican, Farzam's family owns and operates several hotels in the city. It is there he began answering personal calls to treat tourists and individuals renting out rooms. These people either did not know the ins and outs of the city, or did not wish to waste their valuable vacation time in a hospital waiting room.

Thus, his house call business venture became more defined. Though Farzam is continually faced with people who think house calls were a thing of the past, he finds that patients who are too busy or too uncomfortable to visit the hospital request his service.

Through referrals, Farzam's business began booming, eventually morphing into the full-time house call doctor service it is today.

"All my patients have my cell phone number; I have no office phone," he said, adding that, this way, he can take calls at any hour, addressing issues that arise in a "personalized, informal atmosphere."

The only downside, he added, is that he works 24/7. He has pledged to be present at all his kids' games, school events and family dinners but admits his concierge-style practice "creates more difficulty" when it comes to planning time with his family.

A typical day for Farzam consists of five to 10 house calls. He can usually be at a patient's home within an hour, and spends upwards of an hour with them, he said.

Dr. Patrick Dowling, professor and chairman of UCLA Family Medicine, admits that he spends 10 to 15 minutes with his patients, at most.

Dowling characterizes a patient visit as a "hectic time." Contrarily, if he were to go to someone's home, he imagines he would have time to "sit down, talk to someone,

'Apes' win again with big take

DAVID GERMAIN
AP Movie Writer

LOS ANGELES Rebellious apes have held off Southern maids for a narrow win at the weekend box office.

Studio estimates Sunday pegged "Rise of the Planet of the Apes" at $27.5 million, good enough for its second-straight No. 1 finish. The 20th Century Fox release raised its 10-day domestic total to $104.9 million.

The "Planet of the Apes" prequel came in just ahead of "The Help," a drama about Mississippi maids during the civil-rights movement that debuted at No. 2 with $25.5 million. "The Help," a DreamWorks release distributed by Disney, has taken in $35.4 million domestically since opening Wednesday.

The Warner Bros. horror sequel "Final Destination 5," the latest in the franchise where death stalks victims who had been fated to die earlier, opened at No. 3 with $18.4 million.

The weekend's other two new wide releases had soft openings. Sony's action comedy "30 Minutes or Less," starring Jesse Eisenberg as a pizza deliveryman forced to help rob a bank, was No. 5 with $13 million, just behind Sony's surprise animated smash "The Smurfs," which slipped to fourth-place with $13.5 million and lifted its three-week total to $101.5 million.

The singers from TV's "Glee" failed to find a big-screen audience as 20th Century Fox's "Glee: The 3D Concert Movie" opened outside the top-10, finishing at No. 11 with just $5.7 million. The concert film was shot during the cast's recent North American tour.

"Rise of the Planet of the Apes" and "The Help" have exceeded their studios' early box-office expectations. Both received strong reviews, "Apes" for surprising drama amid dazzling visual effects to create the simians, "The Help" for great performances from Viola Davis, Emma Stone, Octavia Spencer and their co-stars in the adaptation of the best-seller about black maids who go public with stories about working for often racist white employers.

Ditch chocolate milk

Editor:

The SMMUSD Board of Education has a no-cost opportunity to improve the odds that our children will escape the American pandemic of child obesity and possibly improve their preparedness to learn. I refer to the decision it will make Aug. 24 about whether to remove chocolate milk from the menu offerings in SMMUSD school cafeterias.

Rapidly expanding evidence is consistently showing that sugar sweetened beverages are disproportionately responsible for causing unwanted weight gain, in infants, school children and adults. The evidence has become so overwhelming that the U.S. government, when it unveiled the replacement for the food pyramid with myplate.gov, explicitly called for Americans to replace sugar-sweetened beverages with water. The evidence that liquid sugars contribute to unhealthy levels of triglycerides caused the American Heart Association to recommend in 2010 that Americans limit their intake of sugar-sweetened beverages to no more than three 12-ounce servings a week. The typical American child is consuming many times that limit. Low-income children, ironically, consume even more liquid sugar than children from high-income families, helping to explain why obesity risk paradoxically increases in those children at greater risk of experiencing hunger.

Chocolate milk increases the natural sugar content of white milk by over 50 percent without offering any nutritional benefit. When it was still legal for our schools to sell soft drinks to students there was some rationale for offering chocolate milk as a healthier alternative to sugar-sweetened soft drinks. Now that it is illegal for California schools to sell soft drinks to students, there is growing evidence from school districts across the country and in California that students will replace their chocolate milk with white milk if chocolate milk is no longer offered in their school cafeteria. For example, the Rio School District in Ventura County eliminated chocolate milk from all of its elementary schools despite the fact that 80 percent of the milk consumed by students in the previous year was in the form of chocolate milk. With the help of a marketing campaign, the dropping of chocolate milk did not adversely affect total milk consumption; in fact, total milk consumption actually increased 8 percent.

Even if the school board has no interest in reducing our children's risk of obesity-related diseases, they should be concerned about the negative impact that obesity and consequent reduced fitness have on standardized test scores. Children demographically similar to the students in our district were recently shown to have lower math and reading scores on the annual California standards test if their California Fitnessgram measures showed them to be overfat and physically unfit.

Safety for bike riders

Editor:

As a frequent bicycle rider in our city, I am ecstatic that Santa Monica plans to improve the bicycle infrastructure for our community, allocating considerable planning and money to this endeavor.

While I applaud the vision our city is proposing to increase bicycle riding – more bike racks, wider bike lanes, better signage, and bike sharing among the ideas – I would love to see changes that make biking safer for all of us ... mainly dedicated bike lanes with physical barriers to protect bikers from cars.

I just returned from a trip to Mexico City where I saw first hand how a city with the will to create a safe biking experience has implemented this idea. The entire downtown area has dedicated bike lanes separated from traffic by cement barriers. Throughout the city you see racks of "ride share" bikes that one can "rent" for a point to point journey.

Santa Monica! We, too, can have this. If you share this dream of "safe" bike paths for your trips around our "progressive" city, join me in letting the powers that be know how you feel. While a few parking spots may have to be sacrificed to achieve safe biking, isn't the trade off worth it?

Transparency concerns linger

RACISTS ACTS ALLEGEDLY COMMITTED by members of the Santa Monica High School wrestling team in May are still generating heat.

While details are still being disputed, word is a prank was concocted by a couple of Samohi wrestlers that involved a black team member being chained to a locker while his white teammates allegedly chanted, "slave for sale." Nearby, a noose was draped over a wrestling dummy, according to some accounts.

The incident itself and charges that the district failed to report an alleged hate crime to authorities as required by law are currently under investigation by law enforcement agencies.

Outraged members of the community addressed the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District Board of Education on June 16 after news about the incident was leaked to the local media. Administrators and board members alike vowed to accelerate efforts to bring about racial harmony through education, training and public awareness.

Victoria Gray, the mother of the prank victim, wisely suggested "… a form go in the (fall, 2011) Samohi registration packets regarding racial intolerance/bigotry… ." But, it seems there is no mention of race or hate issues in some — if not all — mailed packets. A policy statement on "hate-motivated behavior" is included in online registration packets.

The district has badly stumbled on its pledge to encourage racial understanding and harmony by not addressing the issue in registration materials sent to incoming SMMUSD students. It appears that school supporters have also tripped up in their efforts to resolve racial differences and "hate-motivated" issues on campuses.

Three months after the incident, two different community groups have scheduled meetings dealing with racism and its effects. The first was hosted by the PTA Council on Aug. 4. The "invitation only" gathering was attended by over 40 people. The local press was barred.

Former school board member Barry Snell, now vice president of the PTA's Committee for Community Concerns, told the media that the PTA Council hoped participants would become part of a collaborative steering committee, develop an action plan and determine goals and (district) policies for change so that racial incidents could be avoided in the future.

PTA Council President Kelly Pye (another former school board member) defended banning the press. She e-mailed me: "It was important for people to feel this meeting would be a safe place to be completely candid about their feelings and without fear in the effort to promote understanding, and that's what we were hoping to establish. Some people are very intimidated by the presence of reporters."

And apparently by non-invitees, too.

I've been informed this was a select meeting, conducted behind closed doors. Attendees were hand-picked by insiders whose motivations are not clear. Thus, it seems that school supporters still haven't learned that transparency and openness are paramount.

The Community Concerns Committee is off to a bad start. Its credibility is already down the crapper.

The other entity wrestling with the district's handling of this moral crisis met Sunday. The Church in Ocean Park (COP) held a "Community Anti-Racism" Workshop, open to everyone.

The church has always been involved in "social justice" issues. Many political leaders from Santa Monicans for Renters' Rights (SMRR) have been or are members of its congregation. It played a key roll in the birth of the rent control movement and local "living wage" efforts.

Despite the church's "activist" reputation, the "workshop" has added fuel to a controversy surrounding The Rev. Janet McKeithen, who feels it's important to take part in a healing process fostering racial harmony and understanding. Her roll isn't sitting well with at least one, recently re-elected school board member and an influential, SMRR big shot/former mayor — among others.

McKeithen confirmed to me that she has been criticized for telling the school board that school administrators didn't respond appropriately to the incident including failing to promptly inform the victim's mother. She said, "But, it would be unconscionable for the church to not be involved in this issue."

Amen.

RENT CONTROL REVISITED

Stephen Lewis, the public information manager for Santa Monica's Rent Control Administration, found fault with my column about the annual rent control adjustment. ("Rent Control response," Letters to the Editor, Aug. 9,)

The reason for Action Apartment Association's suit against City Hall, Lewis wrote in a letter, is because they "claimed that the Rent Control Board violated the City Charter by failing to consider certain taxes when calculating the general adjustment (GA)." True, because the old GA formula denied the owners a fair return on their investment. If property owners were making more money under the old formula, would they have sued? Naww.

Lewis continues to parse words and split hairs when he says that rent control "staff is non-political and answers not to SMRR … ." Lewis apparently forgets that SMRR has ruled local governance for 32 years. All of the Rent Control Board commissioners, including those currently seated (except for one non-SMRR landlord who isn't allowed by the state to vote on adjustments) along with the majority of City Council persons are or were SMRR members.

SMRR proclaims itself "protector and defender of renters' rights." It created rent control and strongly influenced current rent regulations. If SMRR wanted to revise current law including annual adjustment formulation, it has the power to float a ballot initiative, convince the largest block of voters (renters) to approve its measure and those changes would become law.

Scientists try to restore Atlantic water meadows

JAY LINDSAY
Associated Press

DURHAM, N.H. Swaying underwater meadows of eelgrass once lined the New England shoreline, filtering the water, buffering storm surges and providing a nursery for a mix of commercially valuable sea life.

Then, this critical coastal habitat was nearly obliterated.

Nature has yet to replace the losses from a mysterious disease that attacked in the 1930s and wiped out 80 percent of the eelgrass population from Maine to North Carolina.

Attempts to bring eelgrass back have largely failed, but scientists are hoping a revival is coming soon. Ongoing genetic analysis and restoration work, including in New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Massachusetts, aims to help the eelgrass take hold once again.

Some are skeptical of all the attention for an obscure, submerged plant. A $500,000 federal grant for research on eelgrass was listed as a wasteful "pork-barrel" project by Citizens Against Government Waste in 2009.

But advocates say restoring the eelgrass would profoundly improve the local ecology and even the commercial fishery. One scientist compared the loss of the eelgrass to the death of a vast, productive forest.

"It would be the equivalent of just clear-cutting and then thinking that's not a problem," said Jon Kachmar of The Nature Conservancy, an environmental group leading eelgrass restoration efforts.

Eelgrass is actually not a grass at all. It's a flowering plant that produces leaves that look like long grass blades and lives in waters where adequate sunlight can reach it.

The eelgrass was so common that it was often considered a nuisance. In the early 20th century, it was stuffed into walls as a lightweight insulation and wrapped around ice to keep it from melting during train transport. The thick beds of vegetation also acted as a natural defense during rough weather, helping quiet the waters pounding the shoreline, Kachmar said.

But the eelgrass was devastated by a parasitic slime mold that remains common to the plant. For unknown reasons, the mold suddenly and ferociously attacked the plants.

"It a natural balance that somehow got out of balance," said University of New Hampshire professor Fred Short, who's leading genetic studies related to eelgrass restoration.

Most of the damage from the disease was done in the early 1930s, when it quickly spread through leaf-to-leaf contact. The disease wound down in the 1940s, with remaining eelgrass surviving then, as today, in smaller and scattered patches.

and usually get something to drink or eat — that sort of thing."

Farzam appreciates the added time he gets to spend with his patients, and points out the financial benefits of the house call business as well. Patients often pay $1,000 for a trip to the emergency room when he can provide the same care during a visit for $350.

Dowling acknowledges the positive patient response to the practice, and believes that the house call is making a comeback.

"Studies have shown that (house call practices) result in higher patient satisfaction, fewer emergency room visits, lower health care costs and a healthier population," Dowling said.

But there are drawbacks.

Visiting patients in their personal homes or workplaces is time consuming. The drive, compounded with the time of the actual visit, could amount to over two hours. Reimbursement for such services is minimal, Dowling said.

Nonetheless, Dowling believes that this is the direction in which medical practices are heading. He added that his department is hoping to be much more involved in house call services come September.

The house call's preventative approach and focus on personalized care and overall wellness ultimately sends less people to the emergency room. This means lower costs for patients and hospitals alike, Dowling said.

Tara Margolin, a loyal house call patient, certainly enjoys receiving premium medical care at a fraction of the cost. Margolin has been Farzam's patient since April, when a cuticle infection had her fingertip "swelling up like a tomato." As her local urgent care center had shut down, Margolin took to the Internet and found Farzam through "good Google placement."

Farzam arrived at her doorstep 45 minutes after she called him and quickly eradicated the problem.

Margolin has been calling and texting Farzam with any medical issues, concerns or questions she's had since their first meeting.

"I might become a hypochondriac with this kind of medical care," she said, laughing.

LOW LIFE: Perhaps the most infamous U.S. dead zone is an 8,500 square mile swath of the Gulf of Mexico, not far from where the nutrient-laden Mississippi River lets out.

Not-so-friendly waters

Dear EarthTalk:

What is a "dead zone" in an ocean or other body of water?

Victor Paine
Tallahassee, FL

SO-CALLED DEAD ZONES ARE AREAS OF large bodies of water-typically in the ocean but also occasionally in lakes and even rivers-that do not have enough oxygen to support marine life. The cause of such "hypoxic" (lacking oxygen) conditions is usually eutrophication, an increase in chemical nutrients in the water, leading to excessive blooms of algae that deplete underwater oxygen levels. Nitrogen and phosphorous from agricultural runoff are the primary culprits, but sewage, vehicular and industrial emissions and even natural factors also play a role in the development of dead zones.

Dead zones occur around the world, but primarily near areas where heavy agricultural and industrial activity spill nutrients into the water and compromise its quality accordingly. Some dead zones do occur naturally, but the prevalence of them since the 1970s — when dead zones were detected in Chesapeake Bay off Maryland as well as in Scandinavia's Kattegat Strait, the mouth of the Baltic Sea, the Black Sea and the northern Adriatic-hints at mankind's impact. A 2008 study found more than 400 dead zones worldwide, including in South America, China, Japan, southeast Australia and elsewhere.

Perhaps the most infamous U.S. dead zone is an 8,500 square mile swath (about the size of New Jersey) of the Gulf of Mexico, not far from where the nutrient-laden Mississippi River, which drains farms up and down the Midwest, lets out. Besides decimating the region's once teeming shrimp industry, low oxygen levels in the water there have led to reproductive problems for fish, leading to lack of spawning and low egg counts. Other notable U.S. dead zones today occur off the coasts of Oregon and Virginia.

Fortunately, dead zones are reversible if their causes are reduced or eliminated. For example, a huge dead zone in the Black Sea largely disappeared in the 1990s following the fall of the Soviet Union, after which there was a huge spike in the cost of chemical fertilizers throughout the region. And while this situation was largely unintentional, the lessons learned have not been lost on scientists, policymakers and the United Nations, which has been pushing to reduce industrial emissions in other areas around the globe where dead zones are a problem. To wit, efforts by countries along the Rhine River to reduce sewage and industrial emissions have reduced nitrogen levels in the North Sea's dead zone by upwards of 35 percent.

In the U.S., dead zones have also been reduced in the Hudson River and San Francisco Bay following clean-up efforts. Hypoxic conditions continue to plague the Gulf of Mexico, however, with matters made worse by pollution unleashed by Hurricane Katrina and the BP oil spill, as well as by a federal push to increase Midwest corn production, which effectively loads even more algae-inducing nutrients into the already overloaded system. The Mississippi Basin/Gulf of Mexico Water Nutrient Task Force, a coalition of federal, state and tribal agencies, has been busy monitoring the dead zone and recommending ways to reduce it since its formation in 1997. But with industrial and agricultural activity throughout Gulf and Midwestern states only increasing-and Mother Nature not making the job any easier-the task force has an uphill battle on its hands to say the least.

Expo Light Rail Line Project

Follow daily construction updates on Twitter at twitter.com/EXPOinSM. Exploratory excavation and sewer inspection will occur for this project in order to plan the initial layout of upcoming construction activities. Primarily, work will be on Colorado Avenue between Fourth and 11th streets. Aug. 8-31: Road work on Colorado between Fourth Street and Lincoln Boulevard and at the intersection of Stewart Street and Exposition Boulevard. Only one lane will be open in each direction. Where necessary for work zones, left-turns may be prohibited from/to Colorado Avenue. Camera inspection work on sewer mains will occur after-hours from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. Night work will occur at the following intersections: Colorado Avenue and Fifth, Sixth and Seventh streets, Lincoln and 11th Street. Temporary lane closures may be necessary on Fourth through 11th streets. but one lane in each direction will remain open at all times. Parking meters on Colorado Avenue will be taken out of service only when work is ongoing in a specific area. Detour Information: Use alternate east-west routes such as Broadway, Santa Monica Boulevard, Olympic Boulevard, or Arizona Avenue to avoid traffic backups on Colorado. For questions regarding this project contact Expo Light Rail Line Community Relations at (213) 922-EXPO or www.BuildExpo.org.

Alley Resurfacing Project

The alley in the 100 block of Vicente Place North will be resurfaced. Please be advised that resurfacing operations will generate noise and dust. There will be certain times when the alley will not be accessible during construction, but the city will minimize these times of closure during the day.

Borderline Neighborhood Improvement Project

New water main installation, new various street pavement finishes, new landscaped areas, trees, and pedestrian lighting. Street lights will be installed along Longfellow and near Longfellow on Marine, Navy and Ozone. Please observe posted detour signs.

Street & Park Lighting Project

The work consists of modifying existing high-voltage series streetlight circuits to low-voltage multiple circuits on 26th Street from Montana Avenue to San Vicente Boulevard. Partial roadway closures or detours are expected but impact to traffic should be minimal.

Transit Priority Systems Project

Installation of the Transit Priority System (TPS) at 80 traffic signals along major corridors within the City of Santa Monica. Work requires installation of wireless detectors to sense the approach of buses on routes on Wilshire Boulevard between 14th and Berkeley streets. Partial roadway closures or detours are expected but impact to traffic should be minimal.

Utility Undergrounding

Various alleys will be temporarily closed for underground work on utilities in the following locations: 18th Court between Pearl Street and Pico Boulevard; 20th Street between Pearl Street and Ocean Park Boulevard; 18th Street between Ocean Park Boulevard and Ashland Place North; Ashland Place North between 18th and 16th streets.

Water Main Installation

In order to improve water service in the City of Santa Monica, the Water Division is installing a new, larger water main on Princeton Street from Wilshire Boulevard to Washington Avenue Place south.

basis for the commission's decision to deny their permits in June was not legal.

The property owners say they are five separate owners each building a single home on separate lots, an argument that would have made it more difficult for the commission to reject their proposal.

The commission, however, determined there was enough evidence to show the project was under common ownership, coordinated and led by U2 guitarist The Edge, whose real name is David Evans.

The proposal called for five multilevel homes of up to 12,785 square feet to be built on 156 acres in the Santa Monica Mountains. Project designs said the homes would have the top green building certifications and the guitarist himself said the mansions would be some of the most environmentally sensitive in the world.

"When we buy property zoned for residential use, we expect to be able to build a home," said Fiona Hutton, spokeswoman for the property owners. "But in this case, after years of working cooperatively with the Coastal Commission and planning the most environmentally sensitive homes possible, government changed the rules and is now denying these families right to use their land."

Expungements: Burying Those Skeletons In Your Closet

Have you ever applied for a job, professional license, and/or school application where they asked if you have ever been convicted of a crime? If so, did you get nervous and distraught at the thought of having to circle "yes" and then explaining the circumstances of what happened years and years ago with your minor run in with the law? If this is a likely scenario for you or someone you know, help make those skeletons in the closet disappear by filing an expungement/dismissal motion. California Penal Code Sections 1203.3 and 1203.4 set forth the basic rules for expungements. This article focuses on some need to know legal rules and consequences with regard to expunging your record in California. Please note that this article examines the basic elements and procedures of expungements. If you or someone you know is filling out an application or reporting a past conviction to anyone in an official capacity it is advisable to speak with a criminal attorney about whether you must report the past conviction, even after the expungement process.

In terms of filing an expungement and clearing up your record, there are a couple preliminary questions that must be answered. First, was your past conviction for a felony or misdemeanor crime? Second, was probation granted and if so have you successfully completed probation? And lastly, once you have determined that you are eligible for expungement, what do you do?

If the answer to the first question is a misdemeanor, then you're on the right path! If the answer to the first question is felony, then there is another step that must be completed prior to filing an expungement. In order to expunge a felony conviction or have it dismissed from your record, a motion must be made pursuant to Penal Code Section 17(b) to first have the conviction reduced to a misdemeanor. Certain felony crimes, however, are never capable of being reduced to a misdemeanor and can never be expunged. Convictions that cannot be expunged or dismissed by law include any misdemeanor listed in Vehicle Code section 42001(b), any violation of P.C. 286(c), 288, 288a(c), 288.5, or 289(j), a felony under P.C. 261.5(d), and any infraction. Moreover, if you were never granted probation and instead went to State Prison, although there are options for clearing your record, the basics of expungements as explained in this article will not apply to your given scenario.

Once you have determined that your past conviction was a misdemeanor or capable of being reduced to a misdemeanor, move on to question number two: Was probation granted and have you successfully completed all the terms and orders of your probation? Typically, in misdemeanor cases, courts order that a defendant be placed on 1-3 years of probation and to follow all rules and regulations. If the court does not order probation, you're ready to file the motion! If probation was granted, the time period is over and done with, and you have fulfilled all the terms of the probation (including completing any classes, service work, and/or paid all fines) then you are also ready to file the motion! If probation is still open and has not been completed, a separate motion for early termination of probation must first be filed. If granted, and probation terminated early, then you are ready to file the motion! In sum, before a motion for expungement/dismissal is filed, probation must typically be successfully completed either by the passage of time or by early termination from the court.

Now that the motion is ready for filing, what do you do and how do you do it? California courts vary in terms of requirements for expungement/dismissal motions. For instance, some courts require a filing fee (usually around $60) and attached declaration (preferably by an attorney). All courts, however, require that a P.C. 1203.4/1203.4(a) Petition For Dismissal be completed and filed. In order to fill out this form correctly, a petitioner needs to obtain the case number, date of conviction, conviction charges, date of birth, driver's license number, last four digits of social security, and if possible the Criminal Identification and Information (CII) number. After entering the requisite information simply check the applicable boxes and sign/date the form. Additionally, along with the Petition, you should also attach a Court Order. The same information must be filled out on the Court Order; however, this form is for the judge to review and then sign/date. The signed Court Order is then stamped and recorded by the clerk certifying that a judge has ordered the case dismissed/expunged. Expungement/Dismissal Petitions typically take anywhere from one to three months for the court to review and complete.

Avoid the headaches and problems associated with explaining away your past minor run-ins with the law and get rid of skeletons in your closet today by filing an expungement! Call the Legal Grind to schedule an appointment to meet with a skilled and experienced attorney to help you navigate through this tricky process and answer any questions that you might have.

alley east of Second Street with portions visible from the bustling Third Street Promenade, concerned commissioners and members of the City Council, who felt it needed something more aesthetically appealing than a blank wall.

City officials and merchants have said the Downtown structures need to be functional but also attractive and clean since they are often the first thing visitors to Santa Monica come in contact with when they arrive.

Arts Commission Chair Michael Myers, associated director of the Ruskin Group Theatre on Airport Avenue, said adding art elements to the structures and adjacent public alleys is an important component of Santa Monica's Cultural Master Plan.

"The alleys have a lot of foot traffic and I think it is a great place for [public art]," he said.

City Hall's public art program was recently recognized by Americans for the Arts, the leading national professional arts service organization, for all three projects submitted for the 2011 "Year in Review." Those works include "Cradle," by Ball Nogues Studio, and "Wheels" by Anne Marie Karlsen; both works can be found on the facades of the parking structures attached to Santa Monica Place.

"We have some pretty cool projects already in place," Myers said. "I think [Ross] is a really talented artist and he will do a great job with the parking structure."

Ross, 35, is a graduate of Stanford University with a degree in symbolic systems. After college he traveled to New York where he made a living working on artificial intelligence research projects, he said. While there he fully embraced the arts scene and his career began to flourish.

Since he has been commissioned by Key West, Fla. twice to create public art projects, including "Colorfield" with Nicole Whelan, an interactive sculpture made from simple construction materials that allows people to use ropes and pulleys to control the movements of colored panels in the air and their hued shadows on the ground.

TOPSY TURVY WORK OF ART: Mike Ross is best known for his work 'Big Rig Jig.'

Ross has also been commissioned by the Abington Art Center in Pennsylvania, and is currently working on two projects, "Jet Kiss" in Seattle's Capitol Hill Light Rail Station, and another public arts project in Sacramento. Budgets for those projects have ranged from $8,000 to $560,000, according to Ross' resume online.

"I really enjoy bringing art to the people," Ross said.

He has spent hours hanging out at Parking Structure 6 soaking in the surroundings. While he cannot divulge any details since the Arts Commission hasn't officially selected him yet, Ross said he believes it will be "something spectacular, something fantastic."

"What is very interesting about [the structure and alley space] is that even though you have all this hustle and bustle, the alley itself is a very clam environment," Ross said. "So I want to play off that and off this interesting structure that has this very Cartesian element. That combined with this tranquility of the space is really interesting to me."

The Arts Commission is scheduled to meet at 6:30 p.m. at the Ken Edwards Center, 1527 Fourth St.

contributions or a hybrid system that combines elements of traditional pensions and investment accounts that do not guarantee benefits.

■ Tackling a broad pension package next year or in a special session, with a full series of legislative hearings.

The Democratic governor is saying little about his plan or how it might line up with what legislators have in mind. Members of his staff have met in recent weeks with lawmakers, public employee union representatives and pension-reform advocates.

A spokesman for the governor's office said Friday that Brown is still "fine tuning" the framework developed during budget negotiations with Republican lawmakers this spring. Those talks broke down without a deal, but Brown said in March that he intended to push ahead without Republican backing, even on tough pension changes such as capping benefits and changing how teacher pensions are financed.

"When those negotiations collapsed, the governor made it clear that pension reform would remain a priority," said spokesman Evan Westrup.

Legislative staffers and union representatives who were familiar with talks on the issue said Brown's stance will be important, but that some Democratic legislators want to move forward with or without him.

Aides said Senate President Pro Tem Darrell Steinberg, D-Sacramento, and Assembly Speaker John Perez, D-Los Angeles, were scheduled to talk about the agenda during the Legislature's final month, including pension strategy. Neither would comment Friday.

"The speaker's office considers pension reform a serious issue, and it's a priority (Perez) intends to work on with other legislators," said Robin Swanson, spokeswoman for the speaker's office.

Public pensions have become a political issue across the nation as the economic downturn has squeezed state and local government budgets. The latest wave of criticism arose last week after another big drop in the stock market that wiped billions of dollars temporarily from pension fund assets.

Some of the arguments focus on whether the plans that guarantee benefits to government retirees are financially sustainable. Brown's May budget proposal estimated that California owes $181 billion more for retiree pensions and health care than it can pay. Critics say the number is even higher.

Pension officials note their long-term record of hitting or exceeding financial projections and warn against short-term decisions that will affect workers for decades into the future.

Other opponents say unionized public employees have padded their pensions, pointing to big payments and early retirement perks. They highlight six-figure pensions for workers who retire at 55 and loopholes that boost payments every month from retirement until death.

Public employee unions say California's state workers pay their fair share and increased that share by hundreds of millions of dollars a year in recent labor negotiations. They also argue that most state retirees receive relatively modest pensions, and that teachers are not covered by Social Security.

California's politics complicate the issue. Brown and Democratic lawmakers, who control both houses of the Legislature, received substantial financial and campaign support from labor groups and want it again if they ask voters to approve increased taxes at the polls in 2012. The unions have said they are open to curbing pension abuses such as spiking, but also pushed to weaken legislation that would limit it.

Republican lawmakers have accused Brown and the Democrats of caving in to labor demands during the budget talks. Some were wary this week about talk of a Democratic-backed pension package.

> "ALL OF THEM WERE WATERED DOWN, AND NONE OF THEM WOULD DO WHAT WE WANT."
> Marcia Fritz,
> President of the California Foundation for Fiscal Responsibility

They have been advocating pension reform all year, but Democrats have killed most GOP-backed pension bills, said Sabrina Lockhart, spokeswoman for Assembly Minority Leader Connie Conway, R-Tulare. Republicans want reforms, she said, but believe they would have to be made as constitutional amendments rather than simple changes to state law to keep them from being watered down later.

"The Legislature is not going to do anything that will address substantial change," said Dan Pellissier, president of California Pension Reform, a group that plans a ballot initiative next year that would cap government payments for worker retirement benefits.

He said reforms to end double-dipping (returning to work after retirement while still collecting a pension) or pension spiking would be "moral victories" but would not save taxpayers much money. Pellissier is an 18-year state employee who himself will begin receiving a $5,000-a-month pension in 2015.

Reforms such as SB27, an anti-spiking measure by Sen. Joseph Simitian, D-Palo Alto, have been weakened and do not go far enough to protect taxpayers from pension costs, said Marcia Fritz, president of the California Foundation for Fiscal Responsibility. Her group is conducting research, largely financed by a Texas hedge fund manager, into pension alternatives and contends they could save billions of dollars for taxpayers.

"All of them were watered down, and none of them would do what we want," Fritz said.

SAN BERNARDINO A team of youngsters from Orange County is headed to the Little League World Series after beating an all-star squad from Northern California.

The Ocean View Little League All-Stars from Huntington Beach advanced with a 2-1 victory over Red Bluff in the West Region Tournament championship game Saturday in San Bernardino.

Ocean View right-hander Hagen Danner pitched a three-hitter, retiring the final 18 batters he faced and not walking anyone.

City News Service reports the victory came before a crowd 13,870 at Al Houghton Stadium and an ESPN television audience.

Ocean View will travel to South Williamsport, Pa. for a matchup against the all-stars from the Cumberland American Little League in Rhode Island, the New England Region.

LEGEND

DRY -- each location is graded on an A – F scale based on bacterial pollution levels present in the surf zone
WET -- grades for days of recorded rainfall and the following 3 days
ns -- no sample taken

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

Continue the weekend spirit, Taurus

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Take your time internalizing what many people think is obvious. Your way of dealing with information might be challenged, but it works for you. Take your time and don't feel pressured to express your thoughts and feelings. Tonight: Get some much-needed rest.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Lady Luck decides to ride on your shoulder, should you be interested. Listen to your inner voice, and you could move past a roadblock without any effort. A meeting opens up a world of alternatives and opportunities. Tonight: Continuing the weekend spirit.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ A boss, parent or some other authority figure has very strong feelings. You might question where this person is coming from, but remember where the power is. Your instincts could cut through a situation. Tonight: Up late.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Take an overview of a situation instead of being a player. Realize what you need to do, and resolve this issue within. Then you might want to step back into that arena. Be aware of the financial implications. Tonight: Join a friend. Make sure there is music.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Rethink a situation more carefully, especially if it could impact your community image or professional status. In all likelihood, you will gain. But this development could be presented in perhaps a far too favorable light. Tonight: Get a key loved one's or friend's feedback.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ Keep reaching out to someone more knowledgeable if you're trying to make a decision. Once you understand that you have been locked in the parameters of your thinking, you'll try many different ways of looking at an issue. Tonight: How about a movie?

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ One person or several people demand your complete attention. There are no shortcuts. Though you might not have been prepared to lose this much time, in the long run, this type of attention and thought is key. Tonight: Continue the trend. Dinner for two.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Many people want to tap into your energy and share more of what is on their mind. On some level, others are delightful and can be amusing. Tonight: Say "yes" to the right invitation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You could be a lot more uptight than you realize. Let go and make what you want happen. Tension will build if you're not careful. Stay focused on one project at a time. You will be far less stressed if you do. Tonight: Take care of yourself right now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Keep reaching out for someone you care about. This person could be your sweetie or child. Communication can be full of surprises. Tune in to your psychic ability, and you might gain even more insight. Tonight: Visit with friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Curb a tendency to overdo it or be extravagant -- emotionally, physically, you name it. You have your share of temptresses or seducers in your life. Excess could hit in many ways. Use a little self-discipline, and you will be happier. Tonight: Treat a friend to munchies.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ You could be overwhelmed by everything that is happening. Certainly, you feel in demand, but can you handle so many people around you, sometimes needing you? Fortunately, you seem to say the right thing at the right time. Tonight: Everyone will take their cues from you.

Happy birthday

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS
The stars show the kind of day you'll have:
★★★★★Dynamic ★★ So-So
★★★★ Positive ★ Difficult
★★★ Average

This year, you work well with others, especially individually. You often take the lead at meetings or in groups. Others easily go along with your ideas. Other people need to take the lead more often as well. Build a stronger financial situation. If you are single, the person you choose to be with might want to commit faster than you do. If you are attached, the two of you become more visible as a couple than in the past. PISCES understands you well.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ For years, many traditional funerals in Taiwan -- especially in rural areas or among working classes -- have included pop singers and bikinied dancers, supposedly to entertain the ghosts that will protect the deceased in the afterlife. According to a recent documentary by anthropologist Marc Moskowitz, some of the dancers until 20 years ago were strippers who did lap dances with funeral guests, until the government made such behavior illegal. Contemporary song-and-dance shows, like the traveling Electric Flower Car, supposedly appeal to "lower" gods who help cleanse the deceased of the more mundane vices such as gambling and prostitution (compared to the "higher" gods who focus on morality and righteousness).

■ California's state and local governments are rarely discussed these days without the pall of budget cuts looming, but apparently the Los Angeles County Museum of Art is safe because it is spending a reported $1.5 million to move a big rock in from Riverside, about 60 miles away. It's a 340-ton boulder that the museum intends to display above a sidewalk ("Levitated Mass"). The move will require a 200-foot-long trailer with 200 tires, with one semi-tractor pulling and one pushing, at night, maximum speed 8 mph.

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURER AND TAX COLLECTOR

Notice of Divided Publication

NOTICE OF DIVIDED PUBLICATION OF THE PROPERTY TAX DEFAULT
(DELINQUENT) LIST

Made pursuant to Section 3371, Revenue and Taxation Code

Pursuant to Sections 3381 through 3385, Revenue and Taxation Code, the Notice of Power to Sell Tax Defaulted Property in and for Los Angeles County, State of California, has been divided and distributed to various newspapers of general circulation published in the County. A portion of the list appears in each of such newspapers.

I, Mark J. Saladino, County of Los Angeles Tax Collector, State of California, certify that:

Notice is hereby given that the real properties listed below were declared to be in tax default at 12:01 a.m. on July 1, 2009, by operation of law. The declaration of default was due to non-payment of the total amount due for the taxes, assessments, and other charges levied in 2008-09 tax year that were a lien on the listed real property. Property upon which a nuisance abatement lien has been recorded and non-residential commercial property shall be subject to sale if the taxes remain unpaid after three years. If the 2008-2009 taxes remain unpaid after June 30, 2012, the property will be subject to sale at public auction in 2013. All other property that remains unpaid after June 30, 2014, will be subject to sale at public auction in 2015. The name of the assessee and the total tax, which was due on June 30, 2009, for the 2008-09 tax years, is shown opposite the parcel number. Tax defaulted real property may be redeemed by payment of all unpaid taxes and assessments, together with the additional penalties and fees as prescribed by law, or it may be paid under an installment plan of redemption.

All information concerning redemption of tax-defaulted property will be furnished, upon request, by Mark J. Saladino, Treasurer and Tax Collector, 225 North Hill Street, Los Angeles, California 90012, 1(888) 807-2111 or 1(213) 974-2111.

I certify under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed at Los Angeles, California on August 8, 2011.

MARK J. SALADINO
TREASURER AND TAX COLLECTOR
COUNTY OF LOS ANGELES
STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Assessees/taxpayers, who have disposed of real property since January 1, 2008, may find their names listed for the reason that a change in ownership has not been reflected on the assessment roll.

ASSESSOR'S IDENTIFICATION NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's Identification Number (AIN), when used to describe property in this list, refers to the Assessor's map book, the map page, the block on the map (if applicable), and the individual parcel on the map page or in the block. The Assessor's maps and further explanation of the parcel numbering system are available in the Assessor's Office.

The following property tax defaulted on July 1, 2009, for the taxes, assessments, and other charges for the fiscal year 2008-09:

LISTED BELOW ARE PROPERTIES THAT DEFAULTED IN 2009 FOR TAXES, ASSESSMENTS AND OTHER CHARGES FOR THE FISCAL YEAR 2008-2009. AMOUNT OF DELINQUENCY AS OF THIS PUBLICATION IS LISTED BELOW.
